TO THE READER.

THE great desire which God hath bestowed upon me for the advancement of Publique good; the kind acceptance of my former Labors of this nature; and the clear conviction of my Judgment, that the effect will be answerable to my aim and intentions, have been the impulsive causes of my publishing this Methodical Abridgment of both the Laws, as well that called Common, as the Statute-Law (now in force.) Wherein I have at once perform'd two things, viz. My utmost ability in collecting the dispersed Cases and particular Conclusions of Law under the general Entitling words, whether they be of the first, or second intention. My commanded duty in faithfully rendering them into English, according to the prescription of the Act of Parliament in that case provided.

In pursuance whereof to say there are no faults, would be an arrogancie, and an unpardonable sin against that humility which I pretend to. Prolixity will be easily answered from the variety of the Subject which I have undertaken: And for the few mistakes which I my self, since the Impression, have discovered; I doubt not but the candor of an ingenious Reader will find me an excuse, from the perplexity which our Law (as it confusedly lay) did groan under. My labor herein is now grown old, having been the industrious search of thirty six years; though my intention for making them publique is of a much younger date; and not out of any peevish design of keeping the Law from the Vulgar, or irreligious hiding my talent in a napkin, but it had its reason from this, that I esteem'd my self the meanest of those of my Profession, and did modestly distrust my own sufficiencie for so great an undertaking, expecting still when some more able person would have befriended the World with so great a favor, as the orderly Deduction of our Laws from their Chaos into Methodical form. But weary with expectation, and not willing so great a good should be wholly neglected, I have attempted to manifest my good will to my Country by this following Tract; of which I dare say the Reader will find a requital of his pains; for that it will at once both facilitate and direct his Intention, whether it be to know, or to act what the Law requires. Besides, the difficulties of the Phrase and Terms are here explained, as they occasionally fall in under any Head; and Definitions of such things as are the Subject of the Laws, are here set down, and with as much certainty as the Nil lege difficilium, &c. will admit.

For all which I desire nothing of the Generality but good acceptance; and that those whom God, Nature and Industry have furnished with exemplary abilities in our Profession, would not wholly neglect the publike for their own private good; but either from my attempts contrive de novo something of their own, in order to that end whereto I have exposed mine, or that they would bring to perfection what I now offer; till when, I am sure, their carping at me will not be rational: And if perchance they shall either new-mould or amend, yet whether what I have here endeavoured be not in the mean time useful, I shall leave to the indifferent Readers to determine.

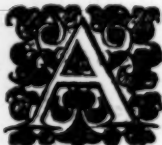

Farewell.

CHAP. I.

Of Acceptance.

ACCEPTANCE is the taking in good part Acceptance.
or agreement unto some Act done, or something given; which if he had not accepted of and received, he might have had and required some other thing, whereof he is now barred by Acceptance, or he might have avoided something done, which he hath now affirmed by this: And this is of The Kinds.
a Rent or other thing; and it is either express or implied: And it is sometimes of a Rent by an issue in tail after his ancestors death, or by the successor of a spiritual person after the death or departure of his predecessor, or by a wife after her husbands death, or by him in remainder, or by an Infant at his full age, or by an heir after his ancestors death, or it may be by the party himself that made the estate. And sometimes it is of a sum of money or other thing either of the same nature, or of another nature; and by the taking of the Rent in such cases, the party that accepteth it is barred for his time to take any advantage of the estate, or him of whom he took the rent that was before voidable, and might by him have been avoided before the acceptance of the rent, but is now by this means affirmed: And in other cases by such acceptance he is estopped to do or have something that before he might have done or had; as appeareth in the examples following. Terms Ley. Dyer 46.9.

Wheresoever the acceptance of a rent by any shall bar him that doth accept and affirm the estate of him from whom it is accepted, there must be these conditions and qualities in the case. 1. There must be a privity either in Deed or in Law between the party giving and the party taking: And therefore if a disseisin of any issue, &c. accept a rent, this shall not prejudice an issue. 2. There must continue in the taker a power of acceptance to, and at the time he must have the next estate: And therefore if the issue in tail before his acceptance have suffered a recovery of his Reversion, and after accept the rent, this will not affirm the Lease against the Recoverer. 3. The Lease on which the Rent accepted is reserved, must be a good Lease, and not void or determined by Re-entry; and therefore if a Lease be on condition for years that such an act be not done, the estate shall cease and become void, no acceptance of the Rent reserved upon that Lease after will affirm the Lease: 4. The Lease must begin in the life-time of him that made it. 5. If there be any precedent Lease, the acceptance must Affirmance

must be after the end of that Lease: And therefore if one seised in Fee make a Lease for ten years rendring rent, and after make him an Estate tail, or to him and his wife, and then make another Lease, or himself and his wife of her land to the same party, and the issue or wife after his death accept the Rent during the ten years, this doth not affirm the second Lease. 6. The acceptance of the Rent must be by one that hath right to the land at the time, and not before his right come: And therefore if the issue in tail before his ancestors death accept the Rent, this is no bar to him after. 7. The accepted thing must be a Rent, and not a sum in gros, or an Annuity newly created: And therefore if one make an Estate, and therein the Feoffee, Lessee, or Donee covenant to pay to the Feoffor, Donor, or Lessor a sum of money yearly, or grant to him a new Annuity or Rent out of the Land, and the issue successor &c. accept this, this is no bar nor affirmance of the Lease. 8. The Lease on which the Rent is reserved must be by Indenture. Broo. 166. Dyer 46 9. 11 H. 4. 15. 14 H. 8. 11. Dyer 27. Broo. 399. 879. Co. 3. 64. 26 H. 1. 2. Broo. Acceptance 2. Dyer 91. 13.

1. By issue in tail, or his Feoffee.

If a Tenant in tail make a Lease for years rendring Rent, and die, and his issue accept the Rent; this doth bar that issue that he cannot avoid the Lease, and doth affirm the Lease for his time: And if such a Lessee for years make a Lease of part of the land for all the term, and the issue accept the Rent of the Lessee or Assignee, this is an affirmance of the Lease for so much of the land as the Lessee or Assignee hath, and for the rest also. 21 H. 7. 38. Dyer 30. & 95. Broo. 166. Co. 3. on Walker's Case, 23.

If there be Tenant for life, the remainder in tail, and he in remainder make a Lease for years rendring rent, after the Tenant for life dyeth, and then the Tenant in tail dyeth, and after his death the issue in tail accept the Rent the next Rent-day; this doth not bar the issue and affirm the Lease. Dyer 279.

If Tenant in tail make a Lease for forty years to begin ten years after rendring rent, and dye, and after the issue in tail enter, and make a Feoffment before the ten years expire, and at the ten years end the Feoffee wave the possession, and the Lessee enter and pay the Rent at one of the days of payment, and the Feoffee accept it, this hath affirmed his Lease. Plow 437. Co. super Lis. 46. 6.

2. By the successor of a spiritual person.

If a Bishop, Abbot, Dean or Prebend by their common Seal had made a Lease for years rendring Rent, and die, and the successor accepted the Rent, this would affirm the Lease for his time. Dyer 46. 309. Co. 3. 65. 2 H. 7. 38. 37 H. 6. 3. 4. Broo. 380. 322.

3. By a wife after husband's death.

If a husband and wife make a Feoffment in fee, Gift in tail, or Lease for years or life of the land of his wife rendring Rent, and die, and after his death the wife take the Rent, this express acceptance doth affirm the estate, and bar the wife and her heirs of entry and action both for ever; and if she distrain and avow for the Rent, or bring an Action of Waste against such a Lessee; this is an implied acceptance, and will bar her and hers also. So if the husband and wife make a Lease by Indenture rendring Rent, and the husband before the Rent-day die, and the wife before day take another husband, who at the day doth accept the Rent, and then dies; this acceptance by her husband is her acceptance, and will bar her for ever. 26 H. 8. 2. 15 Ed. 4. 18. Dyer 46. FNB. 192. 3 H. 6. 53. Broo. lease 3. 11. Dyer 159.

4. Of a Lord of a Manor, or he in remainder or reversion.

If a Lord of a Manor grant a Copyhold estate for three lives, and after make a Lease for three lives rendring a Rent, and give Livery of Seisin, and so disseise the Copyholder, and after the Lord granteth the Fee to the Copyholder, and he accept the Rent of the Tenant for life, this doth affirm the Lease. Dyer 30. 107.

If a Disseisor make a Lease for life rendring Rent, and after grant by Fine the Reversion to the Disseisee, and he accept the Rent of the Lessee, it seems this is a bar. Dyer 30. 107.

If one make a Lease for years, (if the close of the Condition be not, That then the Estate for years shall cease or be void) rendring Rent, with clause of Re-entry for non-payment, and after non-payment and a legal demand made, the Lessor doth accept the Rent at another day of payment; this doth bar the Re-entry and affirm the Lease: And if it be an Estate for life, or any Freehold that is granted rendring Rent, let let the close of the Condition be how it will, until an actual entry, acceptance of the Rent will bar the Lessor, and affirm the Lease or Feoffment. Coo. 3. 64. Coo. super Eir. 211.

If a Tenant make a Feoffment by Collusion, and the Lord die, and his heir accept the services of the Tenant, by this he is barred to take advantage of the Collusion. FNB. 142. a.

If a man seised of land in the right of his wife make a Lease for years not warranted by the Statute of 32 H. 8. rendring Rent, and after their death the heir accept the Rent; now it seems by this he hath affirmed the Lease. Dyer 229.

If an Infant make a Lease for years rendring Rent, and at his full age accept the Rent, by this he hath affirmed the Lease and barred himself: And if it be a Lease for years, the remainder for years to a stranger, rendring Rent, and he accept the Rent of the first Lessee, this doth affirm it for the remainder also. So it seems if he accept the performance of other Covenants, this may affirm the Lease. And so it is of Copyhold land: If an Infant-Copyholder make a Lease for years rendring Rent, and at his full age accept the Rent, this shall bind him. Trin. 2 Car. B. R. Ashfield's Case. Plow. 545. 18 Ed. 4. 14 H. 8.

If lands be given to the husband and wife and the heirs of the body of the husband, and he lease for years rendring Rent and die, and the issue in tail accept the Rent during the life of the woman, this is no bar, nor affirmance of the Lease. Coo. 3. 64. Broo. Accept.

If the Tenant in tail make a Lease for twenty years rendring Rent, and the Lessee make a Lease of the land for ten years, and the Tenant in tail die, and his issue accept the Rent of the second Lessee; this is no bar to the issue, nor affirmance of the first or second Lease: but if the first Lessee pay it, it is good; so also if the second Lessee pay it as Bailiff to the first Lessee. Broo. 166.

If the Tenant in tail make a Lease for years not warranted by 32 H. 8. as if he make a Lease to begin after his death rendring Rent, and the issue accept the Rent, yet this doth not bar him. Dyer 279.

If a Parson, Vicar or Prebend make a Lease for years rendring Rent, and the successor accept the Rent, this is no bar to him, nor affirmance of the Lease: So if that a Bishop had made a Lease for Tythes or the like, or any other void Lease, and his successor accept the Rent, yet this would not bind. Coo. 3. 65. Dyer 46. 37 H. 6. 34. Broo. 38. 321.

If a Bishop had made a voidable Lease to one, and after made a good Lease confirmed by the Dean and Chapter to another, and the successor had accepted the Rent upon the first Lease, this would not affirm this first Lease. Dyer 46. 9.

If a Bishop had made a voidable Lease and die, and his successor had accepted the Rent only due to the King in the time of the vacation of the Bishoprick, it seems this is no affirmation of the Lease. Sed quare of this Case. Hil. 18 Jac. B. R.

If the husband alone make a Feoffment in fee, Gift in tail, or Lease for life or years rendring Rent, and die, and the wife accept the Rent, this doth not bar the wife nor her heirs, nor affirm the Lease: So if the husband alone make a Lease for life rendring Rent, with a Letter of Attorney to his wife to give Livery, and she doth so (as it seems she may) and after his decease she accept the Rent, this is no bar. 26 H. 8. 2. 15 Ed. 4. 18. Perk. sect. 199.

If husband and wife had at the Common-Law before the Statute of 32 H. 8. made a Lease for years by parol, rendring Rent to them, and the husband had dyed, and the wife had accepted the Rent, yet she might have avoided the Lease, unless it were by Indenture. Dyer 91. b.

If husband and wife by Indenture enfeoffs A. of the land of the wife, and A. in the same Indenture covenants and grants to pay to them yearly during their lives forty shillings, the husband dyeth, the wife accepts the Rent; this shall not bar the wife. 36 H. 8. 2. a.

If the husband and wife make a Lease by parol, rendring Rent, and she accept the Rent after his death, this will not bar her. Plow. 431. per Bromley.

5. By an Heir.

6. By an Infant at full age.

Self. 2. 11. Where and in what case it barreth not.

1. By issue in tail, or his Feoffee.

2. By the successor of a spiritual person.

3. By a woman after her husband's death.

4. By a Lord of a Manor, or by him in remainder or reversion.

If one have title to have a Writ of Escheat, and he after accept the Rent of the Tenant, he is not barred of this advantage: For if the Lord accept the Rent by the hands of the Heir or Feoffee of the Disseisor, that is in upon a Title of descent or feoffment after the Escheat accrued, this is no bar: but if he avow for the Rent in a Court of Record, or accept homage or fealty of the Tenant that is in by disseisin; by this he is barred. Coo. super Lit. 268.

If a Lease be made upon a Collateral Condition, or Condition to do some Collateral thing, as not to alien, or the like; and after the Condition broken, he in Reversion not having notice thereof doth accept the Rent; this is no bar nor affirmance of the Lease. Coo. 3. 64.

If a Tenant in tail be the Remainder in tail, and the first Tenant in tail make a Lease for years rendring Rent and die without issue, and he in Remainder accept the Rent; this is no bar. Cessante statu primitivo, cessat derivativum; (the primitive estate ceasing, the derivative alto ceaseth.) Broo. 370.

If a Copiholder makes waste, by which a forfeiture accrues to the Lord, and afterwards the Lord accepts the Rent, this shall not conclude him of his entry by book, because by the forfeiture the Estate was meerly void, H. 28. 9. And yet see the Case, if a Copiholder enfeoff a stranger to his own use by Livery in fee, and after pay the Rent to the Lord as before, this is a continuance of the Estate. Arden and Banmure's Case, in Crompton Jur. f. 214. b.

5. By an heir.

If one make a Lease at will and die, and after his death the heir accept the Rent, this doth not bar him nor affirm the estate: for Acceptance cannot make good a Lease determined by the Lessors death, no more then a Lease determined by Entry. 14 H. 8. 11.

If Lessee for life or Tenant in dower make a Lease for years rendring Rent, and die, and the heir accept the Rent, this is no bar to the heir. 2 H. 4. 3. 11 H. 4. 15.

See 3. III. Where and in what case the acceptance of another thing is a bar, and where not.

If the husband and wife make a partition of his wives land, and it be not equal, and he die, and after his death she doth enter into and agree to that unequal part; this will affirm the Partition, and bind her for ever. 2 Ed. 3. qui in vita 172. Coo. super Lit. 170.

If the husband be seised of three Manors of equal value, and chargeth one of them with a Rent and dyeth, and she accept this Manor charged for her dower; in this case she is barred, and must hold the Manor charged with the Rent; but if she had taken the provision the Law made by Writ of Dower, there she shall have a third part of all discharged. Coo. super Lit. 173. 18 H. 6. 27. 26 Ed. 3. Dower 133.

1. To a woman after her husbands death.

If a woman accept of a Rent or other land, or part of the same land whereof she is to be endowed, or a Jointure made to her after marriage, by these means she may be barred of her Dower; for which see more in Dower. Dyn 366. 317. Coo. 4. 35. 26. 7. 40.

2. To a Feoffor, Lessor, &c.

If one make a Feoffment or Lease on condition that the Feoffee or Lessee shall do some act, as make a Lease for life or the like to the Feoffor or Lessor, and he do some other thing, as make a Lease for years or the like, and the other accept it; now by this he is barred to take any advantage for the breach of the Condition; but if the Act to be done were to a stranger, and he accept another thing for it contra, it is otherwise. Coo. 3. 64.

3. To an Infant.

If an Infant that is a Parcedor make a division, and it be unequal, and at her full age she accept of it, and enter upon the part allotted her; by this she hath affirmed the partition and barred herself. Coo. super Lit. & Lit. 4. 171.

4. To the Lord of a Manor.

If there be Lord, and the Tenant enfeoff his heir within age, or a stranger, and the Lord receive homage of the heir, or accept the services of the Feoffee, and after the father die: Now in this case he is barred of the Wardship by his acceptance, and cannot aver the Collusion. FNR. 142. Fi Gard 33. Broo. 321.

5. To an Obligee.

If one be bound in an Obligation, with Condition that the Obliger or a stranger shall pay to the Obligee a sum of money at a day and place certain, and the Obliger or stranger pay, and the Obligee accept a less sum before the day at any place or at the time in any other place then the place appointed, or the Obliger or stranger give, and and Obligee accept any other thing, as a horse or the like in recompence, in satisfaction, be it before or at the day; by this he is barred to take any advantage upon the obligation; and this is held to be a good performance of the Condition: But the giving and taking of a less sum for a greater at the time and place of payment, nor the giving of a horse or the like, if it be by a stranger to the Condition; and the Acceptance by the Obligee in this case is no bar to the Obligee, nor performance of the Condition. So if a Condition be to make an Estate of Twenty pounds per annum, or to deliver twenty Quarters of Corn, and he make an Estate of Ten pounds per annum, or deliver ten Quarters of Corn, and the Obligee accept this at the time and place of delivery, it seems this is no bar; (but if the Obligee make a Deed of Receipt of less, this by way of Release may be a bar.) And if a Condition of an Obligation be to do any Collateral thing, as to account, make a Feoffment or Lease, or grant a Rent, or the like, the giving and taking of money or any other thing in recompence and satisfaction will not bar. And if the Condition of the Obligation be to pay money to a stranger, and the Obliger give, and the stranger accept a horse or other thing in recompence, yet this is no bar to the Obligee, nor good performance of the Condition: And if it be to pay money to the party himself, and he give, and the Obligee accept a horse or the like in satisfaction of part of the debt, and say not for what part, this is void for uncertainty. Park. Feff. 751. 753. Co. 3. 117. Dyer 1. Bro. Accept. Det. 43. Co. super Lit. 212, 213. Dyer 50. Perk 749, 752. Co. 9, 78. Co. 4, 3. The gift and acceptance of a horse or other thing in satisfaction of a Judgment, is no bar in a Scire facias upon the said Judgment. Trin. 9. Jac. See more in Obligation, numb. 8. Agreement, Accord.

Upon a Judgment.

Acceptance by a Witness of a less sum for his charge then is reasonable, will bind him. Mareh. 18. pl. 43:

CHAP. II.

Of Actions in general.

AN Action is nothing else but the right of prosecuting in Judgment of that which is due to one; or it is the lawfull demand of ones right; or (as others define it) the Form of a Suit given by Law to recover a thing. But this is sometimes taken also for the power or ability a man hath to sue, as at other times it is taken for the execution of this power, the Suit it self; and this is the proper sense of the word. Co. super Lit. fol. 284. 285.

1. Action, what.

Of Actions, some do concern the Pleas that were called the Pleas of the Crown, Placita Corona or Criminalia, (i. e.) Pleas of the Crown or Criminal, (of which we shall not speak at all here;) and others do concern Common Pleas, called Placita Communia seu Civilia: These are either Real, Personal, or Mixt.

The kinds of Actions.

The Real Action is such a one wherein Frank-tenement or Inheritance is to be recovered; or such an Action whereby the Demandant claimeth title to any Lands or Tenements, Rents or Common in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, or for term of life.

And this again is either Possessorie, (i. e.) of a mans own possession; or Ancestrel, (i. e.) of the seisin and possession of his ancestor. And this last is either Possessory; when nothing doth descend from the ancestor but a naked right; or Possessorie; i. e. when the ancestor doth die in possession, and the land it self doth descend.

The Personal Action is such an Action, as is in the personality only, whereby a man claimeth debt, or goods, or chattels, or damages for wrong done to his person; or when some personal thing, as a debt or sum of money or damages is to be recovered. And this is again so personal, that it cannot be brought by or against an Executor or Administrator: So are all the Actions that are founded on some wrong done by

or to the person of another, and for which a man shall recover damages only; as Actions of Trespass, Trespass upon the Case for misdoing, Debt upon an Escape, Waste, and Covenant grounded on a personal Covenant for a thing to be done by the person of the Covenantor, and the like: In all which Cases, upon the death of the party by or to whom it is done and made, the Action doth die and is gone, and neither Executors or Administrators can sue or be sued in it. Or it is such a personal action as doth continue to and against Executors and Administrators, as all other actions do. March Rep. 9. pl. 23. 13 pl. 33.

Popular.

And this personal action is also either Popular, (i. e.) given to any man that will sue, as upon a Statute; or it is Particular, (i. e.) such an action as is given to one, or some men in certain.

The Mixt action is such an action, as wherein not only the thing it self being a real thing in demand is to be recovered, but also damages for the wrong; as in Assise, Waste, Quare impedit, and the like.

Demandant and Tenant.
Plaintiff and Defendant.

He that sueth in an action Real for title of land, is called a Demandant; and he that is sued, is called a Tenant: but he that sueth an action Personal, is called Plaintiff; and he that is sued, is called Defendant.

Process, what.

In every action and the proceedings thereupon three things are to be done. 1. The Cause or matter of fact must be shewed, and this the parties must do. 2. The Law must be shewed, and Judgment given according to the Law upon the matter of fact appearing in the Case; and this the Judges must do. 3. The Execution of the Judgment given by the Judges; and this the Officers of the Court must do. Plow. 36.

The whole proceeding of a Suit from the original to the end, is called the Process: it is sometimes taken for the proceedings from the original to the Judgment: but most properly it signifieth nothing but the Writs and Precepts that issue out in all actions Criminal and Civil.

Set. 1.
2. A Writ, what.

A Writ is a Precept in the name of the Lord Protector, &c. written in parchment and sealed with the Great Seal. Wherein there is, 1. The Salutation. 2. The matter or cause of the Complaint briefly set down, called Breve, quia rem breviter enarras, for that it doth tell the matter in short. 3. The Conclusion, wherein are, 1. The Test, which in the Chancery is the Lord Protector himself, in other Courts the Chief Justice of the Court as a witness. 2. The place. 3. The time or the date. These Writs admit of many divisions and distinctions; some be Criminal, and some Civil or Common. Of Criminal, some be against the person to have Judgment of death, as Writs of Appeal of Death, Robbery, Rape, &c. And some to have Judgment of Damage to the party, Fine to the King, and Imprisonment, as Writs of Appeal of Maims, &c. These Civil or Common actions also admit many divisions and distinctions; for these are also Real, Personal, and Mixt. But sometimes they come open, and sometimes inclosed in the Seal, and hence perhaps they are said to be open or patent, and close. But some of them are said to be Brevia amabilia, some Brevia adversaria. Amabilia are Writs of Entry for the passing of a Common Recovery; and a Writ of Covenant for the passing of a Fine. Adversaria, are all other Writs, which are either Original, (i. e.) the foundation of the Action, as Distress, &c. Mean, (i. e.) between the Original and the Judgment, as Capias, Exigent, &c. Judicial, (i. e.) tending to the execution of the Judgment given, as Eligit, Fieri facias, Levare facias, Habere facias seisinam, or possessionem, &c. Original Writs have some of them a certain form and rule; others are to be framed according to the Case. Original Writs are some of them Real, some Personal, some Mixt. Some of them also are Writs of Prevention, or Anticipation, as Warrantia Charta, Audita Querela, &c. which may be had before Impleading, or Execution sued. Some for Restraint, as Waste, Trespass, &c. Some of them are to stay Suits in other Courts; some to remove Causes out of, or send them back to, or reform disorders in other Courts, as Accedat ad Curiam, &c. Some, to enable other Courts in an Action. Some, to be eased of a Burthen coming or come upon a man. Some Process or Writs are after appearance, when the parties be at issue, to make the Inquest to appear, as Veniis facias, Habeas corpus, and the like. But most Writs are to recover some debt or duty, or amends or recompence in lieu thereof. Some of these are of little or no use at this day; as Nativo habendo, Libertate probanda, Libertatibus allocandis, Manu caption, Extirpation, Passagio, Hæretico comburendo, Quale jus, Sine assensu capitali, Occupavit, Contra formam Collationis, Excommunicatione secta, Diem clausit extremum, Mandamus, Quæ plura, Devenere, Melius inquirendum, Valore maritagii, Ætate probanda, Præcipe in capite, Droit de Guard, Intrusion de Guard, Ejection de Guard, or Ejectione custodia, Ravissement de Guard, Datum est nobis intelligi Excommunicato capiendo, and in any other such like. Others there are, whereof there neither is, nor is like to be much use; as, Inhibition, Indicavit, Sequestro habendo, Ne admittas, Attornato faciend, Homine replegiando, Domo reparand, Premunire, Summons ad auxilian-dum, Plegius acquietandis, Monstraverunt, Protection, Essendi quietum de tollonio, Estrepment, and the like.

Others there are which are Writs appointed to be used in Real actions, as Writs of Right, and of Entry, Assise, Ayle, Besaile, Mordauncester, Nuper obiit, Casu consimili, Cui in vita, Cofinage, Formedon, Quod ei desorceat, Escheate, Rationabili parte, and such like, very seldom used in these days. Others there are of more common use, as Accedas ad Curiam, Recordari, Certiorari, Pone, Attachment, Audita Querela, Capias ad computandum, Corpus cum causa, Disceit, Warrantia charta, Dedimus potestatem, Dower, Distringas, Distress, Error, Dum non suis compos mentis, Dum fuit infra aetatem Capias pro fine, Ex parte talis, Extendi facias, Faux judgment, Habeas corpus, Habeas corpora, Injunction, Jusciens, Mesue, Moderata misericordia, Ne omittas propter aliquam libertatem, Nisi prius, Partitione faciend, Per qua servitia, Prohibition, Procedendo, Proprietate probanda, Quare ejecit infra terminum, Quid juris clamat, Quem redditum reddit, Quod permittat, Quo minus, Quo jure, Quo warranto, Recaption, Rescou, Recordare, Replevin, Retorno habendo, Scire facias, Second deliverance, Sequatur sub suo periculo, Summons, Summons ad warrantizandum, Superfedas, Venire facias, Venditioni exponas, Withornam, Latitas, and such like: Others there are of most common use; as, Account, Action of the case, Debt, Annuity, Trespass, Waste, Covenant, Detinue, Ejectione firme, Capias ad respondendum, Capias, Capias ad satisfaciendum, Fieri facias, Elegit, Exigent, Habere facias, Seisinam, Possessionem, Replevin, and such like: Of some of these you shall have the definition here; the rest you shall find in other places annexed to the things about which they serve.

Summons; is a Writ to the Sheriff to cite or warn one to appear at a certain day, and it must be by certain summoners in the Tenants land, not by his goods, Rent or Common; and if it be against an heir, it must be in the land that did descend; and if it be to recover the Freehold, it must be in the same land: Else making default, he may at the Grand Cape wage his law of Non-summons; but if he appear, it matters not where he was summoned. Co. 6. 54. 37 H. 6. 26.

3. Summons, what.

It is when a Suit is put without a day by the demise of the King; then this Writ shall go out, or a Reattachment as the case is; and as the first action was, to revive the suit: And this is either general, when it is one man for all suits; or special, when it is for one man for one suit only. 5 H. 7. 40. Co. 7. 29. Finchestey 441.

Re-summons, what.
Reattachment, what.

A Capias is a Writ to take the body of a man; and of these there be divers species: as before Judgment, a Capias ad respondendum; after Judgment, a Capias ad satisfaciendum, Capias pro fine, Cap. and others. That before Judgment is called Cap. ad resp. And if the Sheriff return upon that, Non est inventus, &c. then the Process is Alias capias, Pluries, and Exigent: which Exigent must be five times proclaimed, and the party not appearing is outlawed.

Capias, what.
The kinds.

Exigent; It is a Writ, and lieth where a man doth sue an Action personal, and the Defendant cannot be found, nor hath any thing within the County whereby he may be attached or distrained; then this Writ shall go forth to the Sheriff to make Proclamations at five Counties every one after another, that he appear, or else that he shall be outlawed; and if he be, then all his goods and chattels be forfeit. And this goeth forth in some cases before Judgment, and in some after Judgment: Before Judgment in a personal action it cannot be had till there have been three Capias's ad respondendum one after another, with a Non est inventus returned. But one upon a Capias upon an Indictment of Felony, and then the Exigent doth issue after the first Capias: After Judgment, on a Capias ad computandum, or Capias ad satisfaciendum; and and then it doth issue out after the first Capias. See at large, stat. 18. Ed. 3. chap. 5. Fitz. process 192. 5 & 6. Ed. 6. 26. 6 H. 6. 1. 8 H. 6. 10. 31 Eliz 3. 12. 25 Ed. 3. 14. Coo. 3. 12.

If the Exigent be returned not fully served, without any folly in the Plaintiff, as where the Defendant after demand at two Counties rendreth himself in Court, and upon Mainprise found hath a Superfedeas, and yet appeareth not at the day: but otherwise it is upon a Superfedeas by another person bearing the same name, or in case where no more Counties but four can be holden, between the delivery of the Writ to the Sheriff and the Return, the Plaintiff bringing a new Exigent before any other County holden, but else not, shall have the benefit of the former Counties: and therefore it is called an Exigent allocato Comitatu, or allocato Hustingo, if it be in London. 22 Ed. 3. 11. 38 Ed. 3. 1. 14 Ed. 3. 1. 17 Ed. 3. 43. *Fitz. Allocato, what.

Capias ad respondendum, what.

Capias ad respondendum, is a Writ to take the body of a man, after an Original or Summons is returned. Nihil. Fitz. Wast. 47. See Utlarie.

Latitat, what.

A Latitat is a Writ, whereby all men in Personal actions are called into the Upper-Bench.

Writs, or Process in Real Actions.

Self. 2.
Writ of Right, what.

THE Writ of Right lieth properly where a man is seised of land in Fee, and another recover it against him by default in a Precipe quod reddat. Now he that so loseth by default, may sue this Writ; or where one dyeth seised of land in Fee, and a stranger abateth and entreth into the land, and deforceth the heir, here the heir may have this Writ, or an Affise of Mortdauencester. FNB. 1.

Writ of Right quando Dominus reuiscit, &c.

Is a Writ which lieth in case, where lands or tenement that be in the Seignury of any Lord, are in demand by a Writ of Right. Regist. Orig. 4.

Is a Writ that lieth where the Lord in the Kings Court, scil. in the Common-Pleas, doth avow upon his Tenant, and the Tenant disclaimeth to hold of him, upon the Disclaimer he shall have this Writ. And if the Lord aver and prove that the land is holden of him, he shall recover the land for ever. Old N.B. fol. 150.

Writ of Right de Rationabili parte, what.

Is a Writ that lieth always between Privies blood, as Brothers in Gavelkinde, or Sisters, or other Coparceners, as Nephews or Nieces, and for land in Fee-simple, when the one doth enter upon all. Regist. Orig. 3.

The kinds of it.

A Writ of Entry sur disseison, lieth where a man is disseised of his Freehold, then he or his heirs shall have this Writ against the Disseisor or any other that is Tenant of the land. And if the Disseisor alien or die seised, then the Disseisee shall have this Writ against the Alienee or the heir in the per. And then the Writ shall say, In quod A. non habet ingressum nisi per B. qui illud ei demisit qui inde injustè disseisivit. And if the heir or Alienee die seised or alien to another, then the Writ shall be in the per & cui, and shall say, In quod idem A. non habet ingressum nisi per B. cui C. illum demisit, qui inde &c. Coo. super Lit. 238, 239.

Precipe, what.

Precipe is the beginning of many Writs of great diversity: There is a Precipe in capite, a Precipe quod reddat, as Writs of Right, Debt, and others; some be quod permittat, as Writs de quod permittat; some be quod faciat, as de consuetudinibus & servitiis, de domo reparanda, &c. And some of these contain several Preecepts, and some joint, and some are sole. See Coo. 2 par. Instit. 40.

Ad communem legem, what.

It is a Writ lying where a Tenant for life in Dower, or by the Curtesie, doth alien his land and die; then he in Reversion may have this Writ against him that hath the land. Terms ley.

Consimili casu, what.

The Writ of Entry Consimili casu, is a Writ of Entry granted where Tenant by the Courtesie or for the life of himself or another, alieneth in fee or in tail, or for any other life then what he hath, and this is given to him in Reversion against the party that it is so aliened to, and in the life of the Tenant. FNB. 206.

In casu proviso, what.

It is a Writ lying where a Tenant in Dower doth alien the land in fee, in tail, or for life she hath in Dower, in this case he in Reversion, Fee-simple, tail, or for life, may either enter, or have this Writ, (which he will) against the Alienee or him that is Tenant of the Freehold of the land, and that during the life of the Tenant in dower.

It

It is a Writ lying where a Bishop, Abbot, [or other that had a Common-Seal, Sine assensu capituli, what.] alien the lands they have in the right of their Churches without the consent of the Covent or Chapter, and die, then the successor might have this Writ or a Writ of Right. Terms ley 80. Bro. 380.

It is a Writ lying for a man, where he is in time of peace put out of his lands or tenements, or any profit aprender, as Rent-Common to be taken in a place certain, and so disseised of his Freehold, then he may have this Writ to recover the same again. Co. super Lit. fol. 135. Affise, what.

Formedon, It is a Writ lying where a Tenant in tail doth discontinue, or is disseised and dyeth, then the issue in tail may have this Writ for his remedy; and in this case he must have a Formedon in Descender: And if it be to remain over for want of issue, then he in Remainder must have a Formedon in Remainder: And if there be no Issue nor Remainder, then the Donor or his heir may have a Formedon in Reverter. Co. super Lit. 326. Formedon, what.

Is a Writ that lieth for the Tenant in tail, Tenant in dower, or Tenant for term of life, having lost by the default, against him that recovered, or against his heir. Regist. fol. 171. Quod ei deforcest, what.

Grand Cape, is a Writ in an Action real, lying where the Tenant doth not appear after the first Summons, but maketh default; then this Writ shall go forth to summon the party to answer the default, and also to the Demandant: and for this default he shall forfeit his land to the use of the Lord Protector, unless he can come into Court and wage his law that he was not summoned according to law, or let by water, or by imprisonment; for then he may plead with the Demandant. Old N. B. 177. 50 Ed. 3. 16. Grand Cape, what.

Petit Cape, is a Writ lying where any Real action is brought, and the Tenant appeareth, and afterwards maketh default; then this Writ shall go forth to seise the lands into the Lord Protectors hands. Dyer 24. Petit Cape, what.

For answer to this Question, it is to be known, 1. That Ideots, Mad-men, and such as be deaf and dumb, or any other man, woman or child, (except persons disabled by Law) being wronged, may bring the proper Action appointed for remedy in that case; and all, or any of these wronging others, may be sued: And if an Ideot sue or be sued, he must do it in person; an Infant must sue by Prochein-amy, and being sued must defend by Guardian. But some men there are that are disabled to sue; and this disability is either for a time only, or perpetually: And it is also either absolute, or secundum quid, and quoad only; as a man outlawed cannot sue in his own right, but he may sue in another's right as Executor; a Feme-covert cannot sue but with her husband. There are six manner of men (saith Littleton) who if they sue, Judgment may be demanded whether they shall be answered, &c. Or there are six kinds of disabilities of the person disabling him to sue, so long as the disability doth continue.

Lit. sect. 196. Cook upon it. 1. The Villain might not have sued his Lord in his own right, right, but as Executor he might have sued him. (2.) A man outlawed in any Action, or upon any Indictment, cannot sue any man in his own right whilst he doth so continue; and yet a person outlawed may sue in anothers right, as Executor or Administrator to another: So in his own right the person outlawed may bring a Writ of Error to reverse that Outlawry, or an Attaint. Lit. sect. 197. & Co. upon it.

(3.) An Alienee that was born out of the liegeance of the Lord Protector, in a strange Country, under a strange Prince, could not sue; if he be subject to a King that is an enemy, he cannot sue in any action; or if he be subject to a friend, he may not have a Real or Mixt action: but this impediment may be by Act of Parliament, or the Lord Protector's Letters-patents removed, and the party hereby be put in a capacity to sue. Lit. sect. 198. & Cook upon it.

(4.) He that hath a Judgment given against him upon a Writ of Pramunire facias, so long as the Judgment is in force, may not sue another. Lit. sect. 199. & Cook upon it.

(5.) Where a man is entred and professed in any Order of Religion, as Monk, Frier, or the like, so long as he continues so, and is not dearraigned, he is disabled to sue. Lit. sect. 200. & Cook upon it.

(6.) A man Excommunicate, till he is absolved, cannot sue in any action. And these disabilities hold for Suits in Courts of Equity also. But it seems that any of these disabled persons may sue in Anter droit, (i.e.) in anothers right, as being Executor or Administrator to another, they may sue so far as is needful to the performance of that trust. Dyer 275. 371. 117. 227. F.N.B. 36. 26 H.8.1. Cook 8.68. 3 H.6. 39. 23. 44 Ed.3. 27. 16 Ed.4. 4. 21 H.6. 30. Dyer 77. Cook upon Lit. fol. 124, 125, &c.

Excommunicate.

So he that is attainted of Treason or Felony, or a convict Recusant, or abjured the Realm, is disabled to sue for the time he continues in that estate. But in all those cases the disability being removed, the Pramunire or Attainder being pardoned, or Outlawry reversed, Excommunicate person absolved, &c. the party may sue again as before. 29 Aff. 47. 7 H.4. 39. Cook upon Lit. 128, 129.

Felon.

And in all these cases, the Defendant when he doth first appear, ere he make any delay, Effoin, or otherwise answer, must take exception to the Plaintiffs ability, and shew his disability, and demand Judgment of the Court, and pray that the Writ may abate; for if he make any Answer, the Exception comes too late.

Abatement.

3. If husband and wife deliver goods, he alone must bring a Detinue for them, 8 Ed.4. 15. So upon an Assumpsit made to her to pay him money, 27 H.8. 24. So if he have execution of a Statute made to his wife, or upon the execution of it by his wife before the marriage, and after marriage he is outed, he alone must sue for relief, 37 Aff. pl. 15. But the wife can in no case sue alone after marriage, nor can the husband sue alone for any kind of trespass done to her before or after marriage, but they must joyn. So for Recovery of her inheritance, and upon an Ejectione firme, they must join, Co. 5. 16. 97. Dyer 805. 9 Ed.4. 53. And therefore if the wife were beat before or after marriage, they must join; but if the husband die, she may sue alone; and if the beating during marriage be such as thereby he lose her service or company, the husband alone may sue, 20 H.7. 5. Adjudg. Pasch. 16 Jac. B.R. But if a Bond or Bill be made to them two during Coverture, he may, or may not join with her, 3 H.6. 37. So if an Account be to be made to her, by one who was her Receiver whilst she was sole, and yet in debt for the arrearages of account, they must join, 16 Ed.4. 8. Plow. 418. And yet it hath been said, that in all Actions wherein nothing but damages are to be recovered, and the husband alone may release it, he may sue alone, or join his wife with him, as where she is beat or slandered; but it is safe to sue in both their names. See March 212. pl. 249. So where a Reversion is granted to them, and the Lessee break a Covenant. Sir John Bret's Case, Pasch. 14 Jac. B.R.

hath a husband, cannot be sued in any case without him for any thing she hath done : but he may in some cases be sued without her, for things done by her ; as if goods were delivered to her being sole, now they must both be sued for it, 39 Ed. 3. 17. Trover and Conversion will lie against them both ; but take heed how you declare: Draper's Case, M. 7. Jac. B. R. So if he do waste in the land he hath in her right, they must both be sued. So if one had sued her for Recusancie on the Statutes, her husband must have been joined. So if one sue a man for land he hath in right of his wife, they must be joined, Co. 5. 75. 52. 11. 62. Co. upon Lit. 13. If she being sole, make a Bond or Assumpsit now after marriage, they must both of them be sued upon it, Dyer 355. But if they both during the Coverture make an Obligation, the husband alone may be sued, 43 Ed. 3. 10. And if one be possessed of the Wardship of certain land, either in his wives right, or jointly with her, the Writ of Dower shall be brought against the husband alone, Co. 1. p. 39. And in all cases where they are both sued, albeit the husband may answer alone, yet the wife shall never be forced to answer without the husband, 34 H. 6. 19. 40 Ed. 3. 34. 2 R. 3. 15. 41 Ed. 3. 22. Covenant.

3. In cases where the Covenantees have, or are to have several interests or estates, there when the Covenant is made to and with the Covenantees, & cum quolibet eorum, aut altero eorum, (i.e.) with either of them, and to either of them, in this case these words make the Covenant several. As if one by Indenture demise Black-acre to A. and White-acre to B. and Green-acre to C. and Covenant with them and either of them, or Covenant with them and every of them, that he is lawful Owner of all these acres ; in this case the Covenant is several : but if he demise to them the three acres together, and covenant in this manner, the Covenant is joint, and not several. And if A. and B. do covenant jointly and severally, in this case the Covenant may be joint or several, and the Covenanters may be sued either the one way or the other at the election of the Covenantee, Co. 5. 19. Dyer 338. Bro. Conventum. 49. Six Merchants covenant with the Owners of a ship separatim ; this word makes the Covenant several. Co. 5. 23.

Obligation.

4. If two, three, or more bind themselves in an Obligation thus, Obligamus nos, i. We bind us, and say no more; the Obligation is, and shall be taken to be joint only, and not several. But if it be thus: Obligamus nos & utrumque nostrum; or, obligamus nos & unumquemque nostrum; or, obligamus nos & quolibet nostrum; or, obligamus nos & alterum nostrum; We bind us & either [or every] of us: In all these cases the obligation is both joint & several ; so as in these cases the obligee may sue all the obligers together, or all of them apart at his pleasure ; but it seems he may not sue some of them, and spare the rest, but he must sue them all together, or all apart by several Precipes ; and in this case he may have several Judgments & several Executions against the Obligers, and take all their bodies in execution, but he shall have satisfaction but once, or from one of them only : for after he hath been satisfied by one, the rest shall be discharged. But in the first case, where the Obligation is joint and not several, the Obligee must sue all the Obligers together ; for he cannot sue one alone with effect, without the rest, unless it be in some special cases ; as where one of the Obligers alone doth seal the Deed, or where all of them do seal, but one of them is an Infant, a woman Covert, a Monk, or the like, or where one of them is dead ; for in these cases, one or some of them may be charged without the rest : But otherwise the Plaintiff cannot proceed in his suit against one, or some of them, without the rest, except the Defendant give him advantage. For howsoever the suit be well begun, (for when one or some of them alone is, or are sued, it shall not be intended that the rest are living, until it be shewed by the other party ;) yet the Defendant is not bound to answer, unless the rest be sued also. And therefore in this case, he or they that is or are sued alone, are thus to take advantage of it, viz. To shew the matter to the Court, and to plead in abatement of the Writ : For if he appear and shew it not, but plead Non est factum, or the like to the Obligation, the Jury must find against him, and he will be charged with the whole debt : And so also if one appear, and the other make default and is outlawed, it seems he that doth appear must answer all. Hil. 19. Eliz. B. R. Adjudg.

Abatement.

5. If a Bond or Promise be made by two or more, not one or any of them may be sued without the rest whilst they live, M. 7. Jac. B. R. Co. 9. 53. And if a promise be made made to two or more, no one of them can sue whilst the rest live, but they must sue all together:

6. If an erroneous Judgment be against many regularly, they must all join in a Writ of Error or Attaint, Co. 5. 25. 11. 43. And if there be many Executors, and some accept, and some refuse, if they bring any action, they must all be named in the Writ: and yet if one Executor have goods in his possession, and he alone sell them, perhaps for this Contract he may bring an action for the money in his own name; so also if the goods be taken out of his possession alone, it is said he alone may sue for them: But the safest way in these Cases, is to sue in the names of all the Executors; for, the possession of one of them, is said to be the possession of all of them. If many do commit a Trespass to me, I may sue all, some or any one of them at my choice; and the Recovery against one, will discharge and bar me against all the rest.

Executors

7. Where the wrong and action given for relief is said to be personal, there no action lieth for or against an Executor or Administrator; for the Rule in this is, An Action personal dieth with the person. And therefore if A. beat B. or suffer an escape, (which is a wrong to B.) he being a Sheriff, or do waste in the lands of B. or enter into the lands of B. and A. or B. die, here the action is gone for ever; and so in all cases where the wrong is ex maleficio. But where it is ex contractu, that it arise by way of Contract, there the Executor or Administrator shall have action: As if one deliver goods to another man, and he die, his Executor shall be charged: And albeit a man hath received profit, if the action be personal, yet in most cases he shall not be chargeable in Equity. *Plow. 181, 183. 8. A Creditor may sue the Executors or the Heir, which he will; or he may sue both, if he will; but he can have but one Execution with satisfaction, Brown. 2 part. 97. See Enfant, Husband and wife, Ability.

9. If two retain an Attorney, and both die, the Executor of the Survivor only shall be charged for the Fees; for a Personal contract doth survive of both parties, otherwise of Real contracts, as Warrantie. Brown. 2 part. 99.

10. If one Covenant with A. B. and C. to pay A. 10^{l.} and he die; in this case, B. and C. not the Executor of A. must sue, Brownl. 2 part. 207.

For answer to this question, these things are to be known.

1. If the Sheriff have one in execution for my debt, and suffer him to escape, I may (for my relief herein) have an action of Debt, or an action upon the Case. So if I sell my goods to one upon an Executory contract for money, I may have either of these actions for the money. Co. 4. 92.

5. Where the Plaintiff may bring one Action or other at his choice. Debt. Action upon the Case.

2. If an Officer take Toll of me, who ought to go quit of Toll, I may have a general action of Trespass, or an action of the Case against him at my choice: So if one distrain my goods that are not distrainable by Law, I may have either of these actions against him, Co. 4. 94.

3. If one distrain me or my Tenants to come to his Leet, who have a Leet my self the place, I may bring an action of Trespass, or Trespass on the Case against him, Co. 4. 94. And albeit it be in such case wherein I may have an Assise for my relief in the disturbance, yet I may have an action of the Case also at my choice, Co. 9. 51.

Trespass

4. If I be Executor of a Lessee for years, and be ousted by the Lessee himself, I may have for my relief herein an action of the Case, Ejectione firme, or action of Trespass at my choice, Co. 4. 95.

5. If one contract with me for good consideration, to deliver to me twenty bushels of Corn a year, every year during my life, and he fail to perform with me one year, for this I may have an action of the Case; but no action of Debt will lie upon this Contract till all the days be past, that is, till my death; after which my Executor or Administrator may have an action of Debt, Co. 4. 94. So likewise if a sum of money be given in marriage to be paid at several days, no action of Debt will lie until all the days be past; but an action of the Case will lie upon every failer, Co. 4. 94.

6. If one find my goods, or I deliver them to him, and he having them in his custody convert them, I may at my choice have an action of Detinue, or an action of the Case upon the Trover and Conversion, Dyer 121, 32. If I deliver to one money open open (not in a bag or box sealed) to keep to my use; in this case for my relief, I may have an action of Debt or Account, but not an action of Detinue, Dyer 22. If I be a Brewer, and buy Corn of a man to serve my turn, to be delivered me at such a time and place, and he fail me, whereby I am forced to buy elsewhere; in this case I may have an action of Debt, or an action of the Case, at my choice, but not an action of Detinue, Dyer 22.

Detinue

Master and Servant.

7. If a servant buy goods for his master, and give a Note of the Receipt of them to his masters use, and undertake by his Note to pay the money at a day, but this Note is not sealed; in this case an action of Debt doth not, but an action of the Case doth lie against the servant, Dyer 230.

Self. 7.

8. If I (being a Solicitor) retained for 7. s. do retain an Attorney for him to sue, and I do assume to pay him his Fees; in this case he may have an action of Debt, or an action of the Case against me (at his choice) for his Fees. Adj. H. 16 Jac. Bradfords case. 33 H. 6. 8. 17 Ed. 4. 5. But if I retain the Attorney for 7. s. and say no more, in this case (it seems) he can have neither of these actions against me. And yet if I say to him, Be Attorney for 7. s. and if he pay you not, I will; in this case he hath an action of the Case only. And if I say, Be his Attorney, and I will pay you; in this case I may be charged in both these actions at his pleasure. 43 Eliz. Simpson's Case.

9. If one grant me a Rent out of his land, with clause of Distress, I may distrain, or bring an Annuity at my choice: But if the Grant be not for him and his heirs, I may not have an Annuity against his heir, Dyer 344.

If one have a Judgment for Debt in any Court of Record, whilst this is in force, the Plaintiff cannot have a new action upon the first Cause; but he must sue Execution upon the Judgment. For which he may have a Fieri facias, Cap. ad sat. or Elegit, at his choice: Or he may outlaw him after Judgment, if he please: Or the Plaintiff may bring a new action of Debt upon the Judgment, Co. 6. 45. 1. 88. And albeit the Record be removed out of one Court into another, yet within the year the Plaintiff may take out his Execution at his pleasure. If one have a Judgment to recover an Annuity, he hath no remedy for the recovery of this, but by suing out a Scire facias on this Judgment, Co. 6. 45. See Election.

6. Within what time. Actions must be
not.

All actions of Trespas Quare clausum fregit, actions of Trespas, action sur Trover, Detinue and Replevin for taking away Goods and Cattel, all actions of Account, other then Accounts which concern the Trade of Merchandise between Merchant and Merchant, their Factors and Servants; all actions of Debt grounded upon any Lending or Contract without Especialty, and for arrearages of Rent; all actions of the Case, other then for Slander, which shall be sued, must be commenced and sued within six years after the cause of such action or suit accrued, if the Plaintiff be then of full age, discreet, compos mentis, at liberty out of prison, and in England; otherwise within that time after he become so; and not after.

All actions of Trespas for Assault, Menace, Battery, Wounding, and Imprisonment, within four years after the Cause, and not after.

All actions of the Case for words, within two years next after the words spoken, and not after.

But if in a former action, a Judgment being given or arrested, or the Defendant outlawed, and the Outlawry reversed, a new action may be brought within a year of the reversal or arrest of Judgment or Outlawry, 21 Jac. 16.

For the opening whereof take these things. 1. Where one is indebted to another for Wares, and the Debt is gone in time, and after they account together, and he is found so much in debt; in this he may bring an action upon this account, notwithstanding this Statute, March. 106. pl. 182. 2. A Trust is not within this Statute, and therefore no lapse of time herein shall take away remedy in Equity: But in other ordinary cases, where he is barred in Law by the time, he is barred in Equity also, Mar. 129. pl. 207. 3. The time must be accounted from the time that the Plaintiff hath compleat cause of action, and not from the time of the promise; as if one promise to pay upon request; or when one is married, or returned from Rome, or the like, Hughes, Rep. 437.

All

All Actions, Bills, Informations which shall be brought for any forfeiture upon a penal Law, then made or to be made, whereby the forfeiture was given to the Lord Protector only, was to be brought within two years after the offence done, and not afterwards.

And all others, except the Statutes of Tillage, which gave the benefit to the King and Prosecutor, was to be brought by the Prosecutor within a year after the offence done; and in his default, and for the King, within two years, and not after; and where by any Statute it is appointed to be brought in shorter time, there it must be brought in shorter time: Stat. 31 Eliz. 5. See more in Limitation.

All real and mixt actions, as Waste, Ejectione firma, &c. must be brought in the County where the land lieth, and cannot be laid in any other place, for they are local. So all actions of Trespafs; for Trespasses which are local (as Quare clausum fregit) must be brought in the County where the land lieth, and the same place must be set down in the Declaration wherein the wrong was done: But (by the Common-Law) all personal actions (that are not Local in their own nature, as Quare clausum fregit is) and briefly, all transitory actions may be brought in any County where the Plaintiff pleaseth; and the Plaintiff by his Declaration may suppose it to be done in any place or County. And so was it held by Justice Dodridge, Hil. 16 Jac. B. R. But by the Statute of 6 R. 2. chap. 2. the title whereof is this, [Writs of Debt, Account, &c. shall be commenced in the Counties where the Contracts were made;] and the Act it self is thus, [To the intent that Writs of Debt and Account, and all other such Actions, be from henceforth taken in their Counties, and directed to the Sheriffs of the Counties where the Contracts of the same Actions did rise: It is ordained, That if from henceforth in Pleas upon the same Writs it be declared, That the Contract thereof was made in another County then is contained in the Original Writ, that then instantly the same Writ shall be utterly abated.]

7. Where, and in what place Actions must be brought.

The Defendant in Debt upon a Bond, pleads this Statute of 6 R. 2. and that the Bond was not made in L. as in the Writ is alleged, and prays that the Plaintiff being present in Court, may be examined upon it; who thereupon was examined in Court upon his oath, who confessed upon his oath that it was made at H. in the County of C. whereupon it was adjudged, that the Plaintiff should take nothing by his Writ, &c. 9 H. 5. R. 109. Old book of Entries, 183. Crompt. Jur. Courts, 101. B. F. N. B. 116. Yet nevertheless the Law is held to be, and the practice is at this day, That one may lay a Transitory Action, as Debt, Detinue, Annuity, or Account, &c. in what place he pleaseth; and so the Plaintiff useth to do. And accordingly it was held by Justice Dodridge, Hil. 16. B. R. for (said he) the Statute was never put in ure. And so it is held in Coo. upon Lit. 282. Perk. Grants 80: Broo. ch. 457: Kitch. 180. 136. That in an Action brought for Transitory things, as beating a man, or the like; the wrong being done in one Town, the Plaintiff may allege it to be not only in another Town, but also in another County; and the Jury upon Not guilty pleaded are bound to find for the Plaintiff. And in these cases, if the Plaintiff lay the thing to be done in another place, the Defendant may not traverse it, and say it was done in another place, and not the place set down in the Declaration, unless there be special cause of Justification, which doth extend to the place: As if a Constable of a Town in another County arrest a man for the breaking of the Peace, and the Action being laid in another County, there he may traverse the County, but withall he must add, And all other places saving the Town whereof he is Constable. So for taking of goods, damage feasant in another County, Coo. upon Lit. 283, 282. A Lease for years was made of land in London, and the Lessor brought debt for the Rent against the Assignee in Middlesex; this is not well brought, by the opinion of the whole Court. Debt for Rent upon privity of Contract, may be brought in any County: but if it be upon privity of Estate, as by the Grantee of the Reversion, or against the Assignee of the Lessee, it must be brought in the County where the land is. Hughes Rep. 335. But if an Action be brought against an Officer, as Justice of Peace, Constable, Churchwarden, Surveyor of High-ways, or the like, for any thing done about his Office, it must be laid in the County where the fact was committed, or upon Trial it will go against the Plaintiff, 21 Jac. 12. Ord. 3. March, 1654.

The

The like is the Law upon an Action brought against a man for doing any thing under any Ordinance of Parliament. Ord. 2 Decemb. 1646. Co. 2 par. Inst. 231. For the place where Criminal Actions may be laid and tryed, See Stat. 17 H. 8. 4. 28 H. 8. 15. 33 H. 8. 11. 23. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. 24. 2 H. 5. 5. 11 H. 7. 9. 9 H. 5. 7. and the new Law, 20 Septemb. 1649.

For answer hereunto, take these things:

8. Where the Plaintiff may join several causes of wrong in one Action; and where Plaintiffs or Defendants may be joined in Action, or not.

1. In Personal actions one may comprehend several causes or wrongs in one Action or Writ, so as they be of one nature, and against one person: as Debt and Detinue may be joined together; and one may bring one Action of Trespass for divers several Trespasses done in divers places, and at divers times. So for divers Trespasses one after another in the same place, the Plaintiff may have relief by one Writ with a Continuando, (that is) that divers times continuing from such a time to such a time he did Trespass him. Co. upon Lit. 257. FNB. 91: And yet it hath been said that this cannot be, except the Plaintiff make a regress after his first entry, Baron Henden at Gloucester Assizes, 17 Car.

2. So one Action of the Case may be brought for divers Assumpsits; and so may one Action of Waste be brought for divers Wastes, done upon divers lands, granted by divers Leases. But if the causes and wrongs be of divers natures, as Debt and Trespass, and the like, albeit they be against one person, yet they cannot be joined together in one action, Co. 8. 87. 3 H. 4. 13. 14 H. 6. 18.

3. So likewise in Real actions which are founded upon a wrong or forcement, and doth not comprehend any Title in them, there the Demandant may demand in one Writ or Action divers lands and tenements which came to him by divers titles; as where divers Manors descend to me from divers ancestors, and I am disseised or deforced of them, I may have one Writ of Right or Entry into the nature of an Assise, or an Assise, and comprehend all these Rights in the same Writ. But if I bring a Writ of Entry sur disseisin, made to my Mother and my Aunt, Copartners in Fee-simple, the Writ shall abate, because the Title is by several Ancestors, Co. 8. 87.

4. The Plaintiff brought an Action of Debt for 3*l.* 18*s.* against the Defendant and his wife, and declared for 39*s.* upon a Contract of the wives, dum sola fuit; and 39*s.* upon an In simul computaverunt, with the husband only, and after issue: Nil debet found for the Plaintiff, Judgment was said for Error, Hobard 258.

5. So if the Defendant be by one Writ sued for one thing as Executor, by reason of the buying of the Testator, and for other things of his own buying; and declare, That upon an account the Executor being found in debt to him these sums, promised him payment, this is not good in one Action, for the Defendant is to be charged in two manners, Hob. fol. 120. pl. 115. And yet in Hobards Reports, fol. 8. an Action of the Case was brought for slander about Murther, and a Conspiracie to take away his life for it, in one Writ; and in a Writ of Error brought, wherein divers other Exceptions were moved, no Exception was taken to this; it seems therefore to be good.

6. Two or more Plaintiffs may not sue in one Action for several Causes, though of the same kind: And therefore two cannot join in one Writ to sue upon two Bonds for Debt due to them, or to sue one man for Trespasses. But if two or more have cause to have one Action, as if one Bond or Assumpsit be made to two or more, in this case they may and must sue all together. And if two men have more lands or goods together in joint-tenancie, and thereby wronged in it, regularly they must sue jointly in one Action for it; and if they be Tenants in Common of lands, in a Personal action, as for a Trespass or the like wrong, they must sue jointly; but in a Real action they must sue apart, Cook upon Lit. 195, 196, 198.

7. Nor can one man sue several Defendants in one Writ, in Actions of the same nature, as for several Trespasses; but if one Trespass be done by divers, the Plaintiff may make it joint or several, as he pleaseth. Co. upon Lit. 331, 332. And yet two that join in a Trespass, do so make one Trespasser, that one of them is answerable for his fellow; and if they be sued in one Action, they may sever in Pleas and Issues, yet one Jury must assess damages for all, and there shall be but one satisfaction, and a Release

Release to one will discharge them all; and as to the damages, he that is no party to the issues shall have an Attaint as well as his fellows: And if they be sued in several actions, though the Plaintiff may make choice of the best damages, yet if he take one satisfaction, he can take no more; and if he go about to take satisfaction twice, an Audita Querela lieth. Hob. Rep. 91. See before 3. See more in Brownlow's Rep. fol. 20.

For this take these things.

1. When one is barred in any personal action by Judgment upon Demurrer, or upon Confession, or upon Verdict; this is a bar to him for the same thing in any other action for ever. Expedit reipublica ut sit finis litium. 2. And in actions real where a man is so barred in any action, by this he shall be barred in the like action, or any action, or any action of the same nature. But in this case the party against whom the Recovery is, may notwithstanding have an action real of a higher nature, Co. 6:7. And therefore it is a good plea in Trespass to say, that the Plaintiff in another action hath recovered against him for the same cause. So a Recovery against another, if it be for the same thing, and execution made, which gives satisfaction. Trin. 3. Jac. B.R. Brown and Worton. 3. But a Recovery or Bar in an action popular by Covin, shall be no Bar to an action sued with good faith, Stat. 4. H. 7. ch. 20. 4. A Bar in one Ejectione firme is a Bar in another brought for the same Ejectment, but not for a new Ejectment, March 59. pl. 91.

Sec. 9.
9. Where an Action may be barred by a former Action had for the same thing, or not.

1. If one do maliciously vex another, and cause him to be arrested or attached at the suit of one, where there is none such, or without his consent, he shall be imprisoned six moneths without Bail, and not enlarged till he have satisfied the party grieved his treble damages, and 10^{l.} forfeiture, Stat. 8. Eliz. 2. See Accusation. 2. If one be twice arrested for the same cause, this is a misdemeanor punishable in the Plaintiff, Goldsb. 30. pl. 5.

10: Remedy for him who is causelessly vexed.

The Proceedings of Law in Actions, and the Terms concerning Pleading, are these which follow.

Circuit of Action, is a Term of Law signifying a longer course of proceeding to recover the thing sued for, then is needful. See for this more in the Terms of the Law.

Circuit of Action, what it is.

Appearance, is where a Tenant or Defendant in any Action doth appear and shew himself in person or by Attorney in the Court where the Action is sued, to answer the Action and defend the Suit. And the not appearing by the Tenant or Defendant at the day he ought to appear, is called a Default.

Appearance, what it is.

Default, what.

Saving of a Default is, where something is or may be said or done to save the default of another that ought to appear in any Action; or when a man cometh after his default, and sheweth good cause why he did it.

Saver of Default, what.

Essoin is, where an Action is brought, and the Plaintiff or Defendant cannot well appear at the time he is to appear in Court, for some special cause, sickness or the like, allowed to him by Law for a good excuse; and this doth save his default for this time.

Essoin, what.

Fourcher doth signifie a shifting, delay, or put-off by a Plaintiff or Demandant in a Suit.

Fourcher, what.

Departure in despite of the Court, is when the Tenant or Defendant doth appear to the Action brought against him, and hath a day over in the same Term, or is called after, though he had no day given him, so that it be in the same Term, and he do not then appear, but make default.

Departure in despite of the Court, what.

The Declaration or Count is the shewing in writing of the grief and complaint of the Plaintiff or Demandant against the Tenant or Defendant, wherein he supposeth to have received wrong.

Count or Declaration, what.

Continuance of a Suit, is the putting of it off from time to time by the Plaintiff or Demandant, to give it a being: And the last day given for this prorogation is called Darrein Continuance; when the further day is given by the Court, it is called Dies datus; and when it is by the agreement of the parties, it is called Ex assensu partium.

Continuance, what.
Darrein Continuance, what.
Dies datus.
Ex assensu partium.

- Continuando. Continuando, is a Term used in an action of Trespass, whereby the Plaintiff doth suppose the Trespass to be continued from such a time to such a time.
- Adjournment, what it is. Adjournment, is when any Court is dissolved, and assigned to be kept at another day or place.
- Imparance, what it is. Imparance is the desire of the Defendant in the Suit after the Declaration put into the Court, and the Courts Order thereupon, that the Defendant shall have a longer day to answer the matter. And this is also by the consent of the parties.
- Journies Account. And this also is by sometimes Journies account, which is a kind of continuance of a Suit begun and interrupted.
- Discontinuance, what it is. Discontinuance of a Suit, is the interruption or breaking of a Suit; which being done, the Plaintiff is without a day, and must begin his Suit again.
- Miscontinuance, what it is. Miscontinuance of a Suit, is where a Suit is continued, but not well continued: By this also the Suit is determined, and the Plaintiff is put to begin anew.
- Retrahit, what it is. Retrahit, is where the Plaintiff in a Suit comes in person into the Court alone, or with the Defendant, and saith he will proceed no further: This now is peremptory, and a perpetual bar to him.
- Non suit, what it is. Non suit, is where the Jury is ready to appear, or to give up their verdict, or when the parties have demurred in Judgment, and have a day given them further; and at that time the Plaintiff being called, doth wilfully make default and renounce his suit. This is always after appearance.
- Sett. 10. Abridgment of a Plaintiff or Demand, or Plea. Abridgment of a Plaintiff, Plea or Demand, is a form in pleading, whereby the Defendant-Plaintiff is put to, and doth abridge or ascertain his demand. But of this and of all the rest of the particulars before named, see the First Part of the Marrow of the Law, Chap 58.
- Pleading, what. Pleading, taken largely, doth signifie all the sayings of the parties to a Suit, after the Declaration put in; that is, all that is contained in the Bar, Replication, Rejoinder, Surrejoinder, &c. But more properly and strictly, it is taken for the Answer or Defence of the Defendant to the Declaration of the Plaintiff. And some kind of Pleas are called Exceptions: And when the Plea is such an Answer, as it doth destroy the Action of the Plaintiff for ever, then it is called a Bar.
- Plea or Defence. Abatement of a Writ or Plea, is, where a Writ, Plea, or Avowry is brought, wherein there are any of the Causes of Abatement; then the Defendant finding fault with it, and taking Exception against it in time, may by Pleading or Motion destroy it, and put the Plaintiff to begin his Suit again.
- Exception. Nihil dicit, is a failing to put in Answer to the Declaration of the Plaintiff by the Bar, what it is. Nihil dicit, is a failing to put in Answer to the Declaration of the Plaintiff by the day assigned: which if a man do, Judgment will be given against him for saying nothing to the contrary.
- Abatement of a Writ or Plea, what. Non sum informatus, is a formal Answer put in of course by an Attorney in defence of his Clients suit, by which he leaveth the same undefended, and so Judgment passeth against him.
- Nihil dicit, what. Nihil debet, is a general Answer used to an action of Debt without a Specialty, whereby the Defendant doth say, that he doth owe nothing to the Plaintiff.
- Non sum informatus, what. Not guilty, is a kind of Plea used to actions of Trespass and such like actions, whereby the Defendant doth absolutely deny the thing wherewith he is charged.
- Nihil debet, what. Riens arere, is a kind of Plea used to an action of Debt upon arrearages of Account, whereby the Defendant doth allege that there is nothing behind.
- Not guilty, what. Faint action or pleading, what. Faint action is, when the Writ is true, and yet the Plaintiff by Law can recover nothing by it. And a Faint Plea is a covenous kind of Plea to deceive a third person.
- Riens arere, what. Bewpleader, what it is. Bewpleader is a Writ in the nature of a Prohibition, to forbid the Sheriff to do something he had been used to do. But it is now out of use.
- Faint action or pleading, what. Dilatory plea, what. Dilatory Plea is a Plea that makes a delay and put-off in the matter, and is not to the matter.
- Bewpleader, what it is. Colour, what. Colour is a fained matter, which the Defendant in an action of Trespass or Affise useth in his Plea, by which he giveth the Plaintiff a shew of good matter, though in truth he have none; and the end of it is to bring the matter to be tried by the Judges, and not by the Jury.

A Forrein plea, it seems, is such a plea as is not triable in the County where it is made. Forrein plea, what it is.

A Double plea, is where the Defendant in an action pleadeth a plea wherein there are two matters, either of which is a sufficient bar to the action of it self. Double plea, what it is.

Modo & forma, are words of art in pleading, when the Defendant in his Answer denieth the thing laid to his charge to be done in manner and form as is declared. Modo & forma, what it is.

Negativa pregnans, is where the Defendant to an action pleadeth such a negative plea, which includeth in it an affirmative plea also. Negativa pregnans, what.

Protestation is a form used in pleading, when one will not directly affirm or deny any thing which is alleaged by another or by himself; or a defence and safeguard to the party which maketh it, from being concluded by the act he is about to do, that issue cannot be joyned upon it. Protestation, what.

Que est mesme, or which is the self-same thing; It is a word of art used in an Action for a direct Justification of the very act complained of by the Plaintiff as a wrong. Que est mesme, what.

Monstrance is a form of pleading, when one makes use of a Deed in a Court as Plaintiff or Defendant, that he saith he is ready to shew the Deed, for it must be shewed forth in Court. Monstrance de fait.

Que estate, it signifieth a plea whereby a man intitling another man to lands, &c. he saith, that the same estate that the other hath, he himself hath from him. Que estate, what.

Action of the Writ, is a kind of pleading whereby one sheweth some matter whereby he sheweth the Plaintiff hath no cause to have that Writ which he hath brought, and yet it may be he may have another Writ or action for the same matter. Action of the Writ, what.

Uncore prift, or yet ready; it is a form of pleading used by a Defendant in an action being sued for a debt due at a day past, to save the forfeiture of a Bond; saying, That he tendred the money at the time and place, and there was none to receive it; and that he is now also ready to pay the same. Uncore prift, what.

Traverse signifieth sometimes to deny, and so it is used in pleading; and then it is made by the words [without that:] and sometimes it signifieth to overthrow or undo: So a Traverse of an Indictment, is to deny the point of an Indictment. Traverse, or Sans ceo, what.

Confess and avoid, is a form of pleading, when the Defendant doth by his answer confess the effect of the Plaintiffs charge, but by some new matter he doth avoid it and put it from himself. Se&. 11. Confess and Avoid, what.

Conclusion of a Plea, is the latter part of the pleading in the Declaration, Bar, or Replication, which is and must be apt according to the precedent matter: As if the Suit be upon a Deed, and he hath pleaded in avoidance of it, then he demand the Judgment of the Court if it be his Deed; and if it he hath pleaded in discharge of the Debt, then he demands Judgment if he may have that action; and if one plead in abatement of a Writ or bar of an Action, he doth conclude, And this he is ready to aver. This is called an Averment. Conclusion of a Plea, what. Judgment si fait. Judgment si action. Averment, what.

Replication is, where the Defendant in the Action maketh an Answer, and the Plaintiff thereupon maketh an Answer to his Answer. Replication, what.

Departure from a plea or matter, is where a man pleadeth a plea in bar, and the Plaintiff doth reply to it, and he after in his Rejoinder pleadeth or sheweth another matter contrary or not pursuing to his first matter. Departure from his plea, what.

Variance is, where one part of the pleading doth not agree with another part thereof. Variance, what.

De son tort demesne, or, Of his own wrong; are words of art used by way of Reply to a plea of the Defendant, whereby he doth charge the other party to do the thing otherwise then as he hath set forth. De son tort demesne, what.

Rejoinder is, where after the Plaintiff in the Action hath replied to the Answer of the Defendant, the Defendant doth again make Answer to the Plaintiff. And if now after this the Plaintiff shall answer again to the Defendant, this is called a Sur-rejoinder. Rejoinder, what. Surrejoinder, what.

Jeofaile is, where the parties to any Suit in pleading have proceeded so far that they have joined issue, which shall be tried, or is tried by a Jury: And now it doth appear that there is some fault in it, and they cannot go on safely; this being shewed to the Court, it shall be stayed: Jeofaile, what.

Sett. 12.
Peremptorie,
what.

Repleader,
what.

Novel Assignment, what.
Interpleader,
what.

Counterplea,
what.
Receipt, what.

Demurrer, what

A Peremptorie is an art in pleading that is final, without hope of renewing. FNB. 35.

Repleader is, where the pleading in any part of it is bad, and by order of the Court or consent of the parties he is to plead again.

Novel assignment, is a form of pleading in an action of Trespass, whereby a man doth assign more certainty in the place then he did before.

Interpleader is the discussing of a point incidently falling out in the pleading, before the principal cause can have an end.

Counterplea is a kind of Replication against a praying in Aid, desired by or offered to a particular Tenant in defence of a Suit.

A Receipt is, where an Action is brought against a Tenant for life or years, and he in the Reversion comes into the Court and prays to be admitted to join in defence of the Title.

Demurrer is a kind of pause upon a point of difficulty in Law arising in the pleading, wherein they can go no further till the Judges have determined it. But of this, and all the rest before, See more in the First Part of the Marrow of the Law, Chap. 58.

For the several kinds of Actions, see them in their proper places. And for the rest of the Proceedings in Actions, see Error, Trial, Judgment, and other Titles.

CHAP. III.

Of an Action of the Case in general.

Case, what it is.

AN Action of the Case is a Writ brought against one for an offence done without force; as, for not keeping promise, for breaking trust, for slanderous words, deceit, or the like misdemeanor: And is called an Action of the Case, because the whole Case (so much as is in the Declaration, (save only the time and place) is set down in the Writ; and there is no other Action given in the Case, save only in some few Cases where the Plaintiff hath his choice to bring this, or some other Action.

How many

This Action is sometimes about Words, (that is) if another speak that to, or of me, by which I am any way damnified. And sometimes it is about Deeds, and then it is either for not doing what a man ought to do, either by his own undertaking, or the requiring of Law; or it is for doing something he should not do; or it is for doing something otherwise then he should do. That for Defamation, is either of Great men, called Scandalum Magnatum; or it is of ordinary men. That for Deeds, is either upon an Assumpsit or Promise, upon a Nuisance, upon a Trover and Conversion, upon a Deceit, upon a Conspiracie; or it is upon some other Non-feasance, or Mis-feasance. Amongst Slanders and Defamations also, some tend to the disgrace of the person of another, some to the disgrace of the Title of his Land. Those against the person also do some of them tend to the peril of his life, some to his prejudice in his livelihood and estate, and some to his reproach in his name only. Cook 4. 92, &c. Dyer 8. 72.

Sett. 1.

We shall begin with Actions for Words; and we will say a little to the Scandal of great men. But first of all we will give you certain general Rules that concern all sorts of Defamation, or the Slander of all sorts of men.

A Defamation also may be by Deeds, as by bringing an Action, or the like.

Of an Action of the Case for Slanderous words.

WE shall first give you in sundry Rules, the general Doctrine of Actions of the Case touching Slanders; and these like the Veins in the Body, run through the Body of all the Cases hereafter following, wherein the words are, or are not Actionable, as they fall within these Rules. And then we shall give you the Cases themselves, as examples answering to these Rules. The Rules are these.

1. In these Actions for words, the Law doth much heed how the words do sound, and are esteemed amongst the men of the place where they are spoken, whether they be odious in the estimation of men or not. And for this purpose, it is held, that words may be actionable in one Countrey, that being spoken in another Countrey, are not actionable; and this I take to be the most sure and best touchstone of all actionable words.

2. The sense of the words in these Cases, is much looked upon by the Law; and for the finding out thereof, the occasion, subject matter, and coherence of the Discourse must be weighed; Sensus verborum sumendus ex causa discendi, Coo. 4. 16. Words that of themselves will bear an Action, yet sometimes being considered causa discendi, (i. e.) By the occasion of the speech, will not bear Action. March Rep. f. 20. And they are to be taken as they are spoken Conjunctim & uno halitu. New Book of Entries, F. 22. 6.

3. All scandalous words which touch or concern a man in his life, as to say, He is a Traytor, Thief, or the like; or which touch him in his Liberty, as heretofore to have said of one, He was Villain to J. S. or which concern a man in Member in any corporal punishment, as to say, A man hath stoln sixpence, (which is petit Larceny) or the like: Or which scandal a man in his office, or place of trust, as to say to a Judge or Justice of Peace, He is a corrupt Judge or Justice of Peace, or the like; or which slander a man in his calling, or trade, by which he gets his living, as to say to an Attorney, You are a cheating knave; of a Tradesman that lives by buying and selling, He is a Bankrupt, or the like; or which tend to the loss of a mans preferment, as to say to a man about to be preferred to a Benefice, That he is an Heretick: Or of a Woman like to have a Husband, That she is a whore, or the like, if by this means they lose their preferment; or which charge a man to have any dangerous disease, by reason of which he ought to separate himself, or be separate by the Law from the society of men, as to say a man hath the French Pox, or the Plague, or the like: Or which tend to the slandering of a mans title, as to say, He hath no estate in his Mannor, when he is about, and hath need to sell it, or the like: Or which tend to a mans disinheretance, as to say to an Heir to Land, He is a Bastard, or the like: Or which tend any way to a mans particular damage. All such words are Actionable, Coo. 4. 13. 14. &c. Coo. 10. 130. Dyer 26. 72. This general Rule for the clearing of it doth admit of many Extensions, and many Exceptions and Limitations, which we shall lay down in the Rules that follow: And first of the Extensions.

4. Many words (though of themselves they be not Actionable) yet being equivalent to words that are Actionable, may bear an Action. Pasche 15. Car. B R. a. greed; for they may prima facie, sound from the mouth of the speaker, in the ears of the hearer, as bad as any Actionable words.

5. It matters not how the words (if they be Actionable) be published or divulged, whether by writing or speech; for the Action is maintainable in both Cases. A man might have been charged in this Action for a slander, by a Bill in the Star-Chamber, and so he may be now by a malicious Indictment, Coo. 4. 14, 15:

6. It is all one, as to the maintenance of the Action, if the words be spoken or written to the person slandered before his face, or of him behinde his back. Old Book of Entries, Coo. 4. 14, 15. and Hobb. Pl. 292.

7. Nor is it material, whether they be spoken in the second or third person; for the Action is alike maintainable in both Cases, Coo. 4. 14, 15, 16.

8. Nor is it material, in what Language they are written or spoken, if the hearers do, or may attain to understand it, Hobb. Rep. Pl. 165, 236, 351, 236.

9. Nor

9. Nor is it material, whether the words be uttered by way of affirmation, as A. is a thief; or hearsay, or report, as J. S. saith, A. is a thief, and J. S. did never say it; or by way of Interrogation, as, Hast thou been at London to change the money thou didst steal from me? Or by way of negation, when it doth imply an affirmation, as you are no thief, or the like; for in all these Cases they are Actionable. Pasche 15 Car. Appletons Case, B. R. Hill. 4 Jac. B. R. Lady Morrisons Case. See March. Rep. f. 7. Pl. 18. One said, That he would prove that J. S. had stoln his Books; or say, I will prove he hath stoln my Books, and I will have him before a Justice; it seems either of these Speeches are Actionable. March. f. 19. Pl. 44. It lieth for words spoken thus, Hast thou been at London to change the money thou didst steal from me. It is said it lieth for saying to one, I dreamed this night that J. S. did steal a horse, March. Rep. f. 58. Pl. 9. But I much doubt the last Case: It lieth for saying, I do verily think J. S. to be a horse-stealer, Goldsb. 186. So for words spoken thus, A Woman told me, that she heard say that J. S. &c. Goldsb. 139. Pl. 43.

10. Nor is it material, whether they be uttered by way of earnest, or seemingly onely in jest, but with a minde to slander; for the Action will lie in both Cases.

11. Nor is it material, whether the man that uttereth them, be sober, or drunk with Wine, or Passion; for the Action lieth alike in both Cases;

12. Nor is it material, whether the words be delivered in one or more sentences or speeches.

13. Nor is it material, how the words be uttered, either directly or indirectly, and obliquely, for the Action doth lie alike in both Cases.

14. The slander that doth concern a mans life, liberty, member, or any corporal punishment, his office, trust, calling, or that charge him with a foul Disease, to cause a separation; these Actions are maintainable, without averring in the Action any particular damage come to the Plaintiff by the slander.

Averment.

15. This Action may lie for words, though the words in a proper speech cannot be true; as if a Woman say to me, Thou hast stoln my goods; for she hath no goods, but what is her Husbands adjudge, M. 9 Jac.

16. If a man speak against another, words that are not in themselves Actionable as that he is a Rogue, Knave, Cozener, Fornicator, or the like; yet if the Party can make it appear by proof, he had any special loss hereby, he may perhaps have an Action for these words: But then he must make a special Averment in his Action of his loss. Thus much of the Rules of Extension: Now to the Rules of Limitation or Exception.

17. When words in themselves Actionable, are spoken too generally, so that they are uncertain, they will not then bear an action; as to say, A man deserves to be hanged, M. 4 Jac. B. R. He seeks my life, or the like. Coo: 4. 15. Hobb. Rep. Pl. 196. 332. 3.

18. Words not positively affirmative, will not bear an action; as, I fear you will be charged with Felony, &c. Hobb. Rep. Pl. 381. Or, Arrested for Felony. Hobb. Pl. 286 or the like. Hobb. Rep. Pl. 381.

19. Words of a double and indifferent meaning, when one of the senses is good, will not bear action; for, Verba accipienda sunt in mitiori sensu; as if one say of another, He did burn my Barn, Coo. 4. 20. For it may be a Barn without Corn; or, He hath the Pox; For it may be the ordinary, not the French Pox, Coo. 4. 17. For these actions are not to be maintained by a strained construction upon mens words, but where the words do clearly import a slander. But if the common ordinary and violent sense, and intent, be the worst, that sense shall be taken, as A. had the use of her body, this is to be taken in the worst sense, Hill. 4 Jac. B. R. Hobb. Rep. Pl. 350. 236.

20. Words of a doubtful meaning, that have no clear and certain Intendment, especially if they be insensible, will not bear an action; as to call one filching fellow, Coo. 4. 15. Or to say, He smells of a murder, Hobb. Rep. Pl. 350. or the like. And yet if they have a bad Intendment in the Countrey where they are spoken with an Averment thereof, they may be Actionable, Hobb. Rep. Pl. 394. 323.

21. Actionable words may be qualified, and made unactionable by subsequent words; words; as, Thou art a Thief, [for] thou hast stolen a Tree, my Apples, or Corn, or the like. But if he say, Thou hast stolen my Wood out of my Barton, Corn out of my Barn, or the like; these words are actionable. Hob. Rep. pl. 97. pl. 406. Co. 4. 19. Hob. Rep. pl. 381. 406.

22. Words that do not import an act, but an intent or inclination to a thing, are not actionable, Co. 4. 19. To say, He is a Thievish fellow; He had a mind to have killed me, Co. 4. 16. And yet if that intent be an offence punishable, as an intent of Treason is, the words are actionable. And therefore adjective words, as to say, a man is a Thievish, or Traiterous, or Seditious fellow, are not actionable: and yet if they be such as import an act done, as Perjured Knave; or the like slander in a mans Office, as to a Judge, Corrupt Judge, Bribing Knave; or slander to a mans Trade, as to a Tradesman, He is a Bankrupt fellow, or Bankruptly fellow, or the like, these words are actionable.

23. Words that are impossible, are not actionable; as to say, He is perjured, and that may be proved by stakes, &c. Co. 4. 19. My Mare doth piss as good drink as J. S. (being a Brewer) makes. Mich. 15 Car. B. R. or the like.

24. When it doth appear in the action brought, that the words spoken are no damage to the Plaintiff, no action will lie upon them: as when he saith, Thou hast killed my wife, or kinsman; and the Record shews him or her to be alive, Co. 4. 16. Hob. Rep. pl. 11. But if it appear not upon Record, some say the Plaintiff must aver it, or his action is not well laid; others say the Defendant must set it forth, and this is the safe way, and for this there seems to be better reason, Hob. Rep. pl. 11. March Rep. 110 pl. 189.

25. Words that are uncertain in themselves, will not bear action, as to say, Thou hast taken away the money of J. S. for it may be done without Felony, Hob. Rep. pl. 11. Thou hast taken away my money, Hob. pl. 136. and these cannot be made certain by an Innuendo. But to say, Thou didst kill a woman great with child, innuendo A. uxor cuiusdam R. defuncti, was ruled good, Mich. 2. J. A. B. R. And A. sued B. for saying, My Brother (innuendo the Plaintiff) is perjured; and upon Not guilty pleaded, and Verdict for the Plaintiff, it was adjudged good, for these words are certain in themselves; not like to this, One of my brothers is perjured. Wiseman's Case, Mich. 3. J. A. B. R. See for the Innuendo, Brownl. 1. par. 7. 13. 9. 10.

26. When the person charged is uncertain, no action will lie; as if one without any other speech precedent, say, One of the servants of J. S. is a Thief, and he have divers servants, or the like, Co. 4. 17. Hob. Rep. pl. 351. and yet words somewhat uncertain at first, by an Averment and the Verdict of a Jury may be made certain, in case where they are spoken of one man in certain, as, My brother is perjured, and averred it was meant of him, and the Jury found it so, M. 3. J. A. B. R. Wiseman's Case. Hob. Rep. pl. 300. So likewise when the thing charged is uncertain, no action can lie for the words, Hob. Rep. pl. 145. 119. Co. 4. 25. To say, This boy is a thief, of J. S. then present, is certain enough, Brownl. 1. par. 2. If two men speak together of J. Symes and W. Symes, and one of them said, These Symes make Half-Crown peeces; this is certain and actionable: Otherwise it is if he say, The Symes, &c. for this is uncertain, Hughes Rep. 391. So if there be divers Defendants in a Suit, and he say, These Defendants did, &c.

27. When there be actionable words spoken amongst others, but upon the whole discourse it appeareth the party did not intend them in a slanderous sense, these words are not actionable. As if their dialogue be about killing of Hares, and one saith, He killed six in one day, and thereupon the other said, He is a Murderer; these words here will not bear an action. So if one say to another, Thou art a Traitor, for I trusted thee to buy Land for me, and thou boughtest it for thy self: Or, Thou art a Thief, for thou robbedst my Orchard of my Apples. And if in this case the party sue upon those single words, and name not the rest, the Defendant may in his plea shew all the words specially, or he may plead Non culp. modo & forma, and give the special matter in evidence; or he may traverse these words, and justify the speaking of the words as they were, or he may upon the evidence have the words found specially, as he shall see cause, Co. 4. 13. or he may plead Not guilty to a part, and justify the rest. N. B. of Entries, f. 24. a. 25. a. 26. a. 27. a.

28. The

28. The words spoken, though actionable, must be spoken in the hearing of some body, or else the action will not lie; the Writ doth say so, In presentia quamplurimorum ligeor. &c. Hob. Rep. pl. 63. And (as some say) they must be spoken in a language that the hearers do understand; and therefore if they be spoken in Welsh, that no action will lie, unless one of the hearers do understand Welsh: and some Judgments are on this side, and others hold the contrary and (in my opinion) upon better reason; for a man may call another Thief in Latine or Welsh, in the hearing of such as understand it not, but they may remember the word and ask the meaning, and so a man may be grievously slandered without remedy. And yet it is held, if a man send or give a slanderous Letter to the party slandered, or speak such words in one mans ear only in private, both these are actionable, Hil. 38 Eliz. Cromp. Jur. 13. Hob. Rep. pl. 63. 276.

29. The Charge must be false, for the Writ is Falso & malitiose, and so it must be, or it is not actionable; for if the thing that he is charged with by the words be true, the Defendant may justifie it; but he must see he do not plead Not guilty, but make a special Justification.

30. The words must be spoken purposely; and therefore it is considerable here, quo animo they are spoken: for the Writ is malitiose, and so it must be, or the words are not actionable. And therefore it is held, that if a Minister preaching, recite a History; or a Lawyer pleading, do innocently and pertinently speak words whereby a man is charged with a crime, and it prove false, this is not actionable: So if one advise his friend to forbear the company of T. S. for he hath the Pox, &c. this is not actionable, 40 & 41 Eliz. C. B. And yet if such men shall make this but a cloak of their malice, contra: and circumstances will clear it with what mind he did it, Mic. 31 Jac. Brook's Case. Hob. Rep. pl. 399.

31. If the ground of the damage do not appear in the action, no action will lie; as to say a man did Cozen by false weights, and do not say he is a Tradesman, or getteth his living by buying and selling, M. 17. Car. B. R.

32. When it doth not appear that he that spake the words had notice of the ground or occasion of the offence, no action will lie: as, A. hath Thieves in his house; for he may not know it.

33. If this slander be in a course of Justice, and be not malicious and touch a mans life, it is not actionable, Kelm. 26. And therefore it lieth not against a man for suing a Writ of Forgery of False Deeds, or exhibiting Articles against a man for his good Behaviour, Coo. 4. Nor doth it lie against a man for putting in Articles against a Master of Chancery or Justice of Peace, to have the good Behaviour, though the things be false. But if he begin there, and give over there, and then begin elsewhere out of course; it is otherwise, Brownl. 1 par. 3, 4. 2 par. 100. It had lien against a man for slanderous matters (wherein the Court had not jurisdiction) put in a Bill in Star-chamber, Brownl. 2 par. 100. Hyghs 444. But herein let the party take heed he go not out of the Rode of Justice, nor say more herein then is necessary. For if a Robbery be done, and common report is that J. S. hath done it, he may arrest him; but if he say he hath done it, this is actionable: So if he tell abroad in Taverns the same thing, here he may be made liable to action by it, March. 76. pl. 119. Hob. Rep. pl. 105, 238, 381, 71, 112. So one may indict another for such a thing: But if I indict a man for Felony upon ground, this is justifiable; if I say he hath done the Felony, and it be not so, or I will speak of it in an Ale-house, I may be charged in this action for a slander; and I cannot justifie the speaking of slanderous words upon a fame, arrest, imprisonment, no nor upon Indictment; for if I justifie, I must prove he is guilty of it. And yet if there be malice, and a conspiracie in a course of Justice to take away my life, here I may have an action of the Case for the slander and vexation. As if two or more conspire to indict me for a Felony, and I be on a Trial legitimo modo acquiescens, I may have a Writ of Conspiracie against the Indictors. And if any man procure me falsely and maliciously to be indicted, arrested, and imprisoned, though I be not acquitted, I may have an action of the Case, Pasch. 3 Jac. B. R. Roll. 372. Hob. R. pl. 111. But if upon the Trial there do appear any probable cause for the Indictment and prosecution, this action will not lie, Hob. Rep. pl. 350.

34. Where any thing is the cause or ground of action, or tends necessarily to the maintenance of it, this thing must be averred to be, or not to be, as the case requires, or the action will not lie: As if one say, My son stole his Hens; in his suit he must aver he is my son, Mich. 14 Car. B.R. If I say, He that dwels in the next house to I.S. one R.L. did rob me; if he sue, he must aver he dwels in the next house to I.S. Pasch. 7 Jac. Clark's Case. So if I say, Pritchard's man robbed me; if he sue, he must aver he is Pritchard's man. See Cook 4. 16. Hob. Rep. f. 8.

Averment.

35. If the words in themselves be uncertain, and will not bear an action, as to say, One of my Brothers is perjured; they may not be made actionable by averment, or an Innuendo, as words of a double sense; by an Innuendo he meant the worst sense, as Pox, Innuendo the French Pox, Coo. 4. 17. 20. So to make uncertain words certain, He took my money with a strong hand, innuendo Felonice, M. 15 Car. B.R. He forged a Writing, innuendo such a Deed, Hob. Rep. pl. 4. 48. The office of this word is only to contain and design the same person which was named uncertain before, as thus: Two are speaking together of B. and one of them saith, He is a Thief; there B. in his Count may shew, that there was a speech of him betwixt those two, and that one of them said of him, He (innuendo the Plaintiff) is a Thief; or else to declare the matter or sense of the words themselves, which was certainly expressed before, as thus: A. and B. speaking of C. A. said, that C. was a Traitor, to whom B. said, that he was so too; in this case if A. bring an Action for these words, he may shew in his Count that there was a speech betwixt him and the Defendant of C. and that the Plaintiff said to the Defendant, that C. was a Traitor; and that the Defendant said then to the Plaintiff, that he (Innuendo the Plaintiff) was so too, [Innuendo, a Traitor] in both these cases the Innuendo is good, because it doth its office in designing of the person, as also in declaring of the matter or sense of the words which was certain before, Mich. 20. Jac. B.R. But an Innuendo cannot make a person certain, which was uncertain before, nor alter the matter or sense of the words themselves, Coo. 4. 17. See more, Brownl. 1 par. 7, 9, 10, 13. 2 par. 34, 272, 273. It lieth not for saying, He hath stolen 40 staure of Lead (meaning Laad in staure) from the Minister; for it shall be intended parcel of the Minister, Brownl. 2 par. 84.

Innuendo.

Out of all which it appears, that in all Cases where this Action will lie for words, the words must have these qualities in them.

1. They must be particular.
2. They must express or imply an affirmation.
3. Sufficient certainty both in the persons and thing charged.
4. They must be plain.
5. The thing must be directly, and in plain terms, and not by inference or argument applied to the person charged.
6. The things charged must be such as (if true) were against some Law, and the party may be punished for them, or he must have some special prejudice by the words which he must aver.
7. The charge must be out of a course of Justice.
8. The words must be sensible and plain.
9. They must be spoken in the hearing of some body.
10. And in a Tongue that some of the hearers do or may understand.
11. The thing charged by the words must be false.
12. The words must be spoken maliciously, and purposely to slander.
13. The thing charged to be done, must be possible.

Scandalum Magnatum, is a wrong done to some eminent person of the Land, as Duke, Earl, Baron, Chancellor, Treasurer, Privy-Seal, Justice of the one Bench, or of the other, by false news, or false messages, whereby debates and discords between them, or any scandal to their persons may arise, Stat. 2 R. 2. chap. 5. Westm. 1. chap. 34.

Scandalum Magnatum, what it is.

In this case the party defamed may have his Action in the name of the Keepers of the Liberties, and his own, upon the Stat. of 2 R. 2. And hereby he shall recover damages for the wrong, and the party shall also be otherwise punished. And if the Slander be divulged in the nature of a Libel, it is punishable by Indictment; and great Fines are imposed for this offence, for that the reproach of such persons is the reproach of the State it self, and of the Commonwealth. Coo. 5. 125. Old book of Entr. 593. Cromp. Jur. 35. 19. 13.

It matters not in what manner the words or reports be published, whether by speech or writing reported from another, or spoken by ones self; or by hanging up a writing in any open place: for publication may be by writing as well as by speech, Crompt. Jur. 13.

But if by any of these ways such persons had been slandered by these, or such like words as follow, they might have been relieved by this means. And this action did lie for these words: You maintain sedition against the Kings proceedings; or, You uphold and countenance them that do so, Coo. 4. 13. Or, You are a Traitor to your Prince, or Rebel against him, Sur. Monteagles Case, M. 9 Jac. B. R. Or You are a base Lord, and a pauntry Lord, and keep none but Rogues and Rascals like your self, E. of Lincoln's Case, Trin. 5. Jac. B. R. Or, It is your grief that you are a Subject, Countee of Salop's Case, M. 40 & 41 Eliz. B. R. Or, You charged them that transport, or import Merchandizes so, or from such a place, that they should not pay Custom for it, nor suffer the Customs to search them, Old Book of Entries, 393. Or, You have no more conscience then a Dog; so you have goods, you care not how you come by them, Duke of Buckingham's Case, M. 4. H. 8. Rot. 659. Or to a Chief Justice, You are a corrupt Judge, Crompt. Jur. 35. Or, You said you would winde my guts about your neck, Lord Abergavinie's Case, Crompt. Jur. 3. So also it is thought of these words, You are used to do things against Law, so impound the Subjects beasts, and keep them in a Castle that they cannot be relieved; or, You have sent Commissioners to spoil the Country. And generally any words which being spoken to an ordinary man will give him an Action, being spoken to such an eminent person, will give him this Action. But if a man do bring a Suit in a Legal way, or do Legally proceed by Indictment or otherwise for any misdemeanor; as if a man sue a Writ of Forger of False Deeds against a Peer of the Realm, or cause him to be indicted for a Crime, it is doubted whether for these acts this Action be given. Dyer 285. Kntw. 27. Crompt. Jur. 35. Yet for a Conspiracie to indict these persons, they have remedy as other men have.

It hath been adjudged that these Statutes do extend to Extrajudicial, and not to Judicial sayings or doings. And therefore a man may not be punished for an Appeal of Murder, Robbery, &c. brought against a Peer, nor for affirming it to Council, and the like, though the thing be false: For it is a Maxim in Law, That a man shall not be punished for suing of Writs in the Kings Court, be it for right or wrong. And therefore to have charged a man with any thing falsely in the Star-chamber, proper to the Court, while it stood, was not actionable: But to have charged one with a Felony there falsely, was actionable, Coo. 2 par. Inst. 228.

It will lie for words spoken thus, I will justifie that Barns is a Thief, Trin. 9 Jac. B. R. Barns Case. Adjudg.

It will lie for speaking words thus, What, I. S. that Thief? Nelson's Case, Pasch. 15 Jac. B. R. and Hardwick's Case, 40 Eliz. Co. B. So, Have you brought my horse you have stolln? Main's Case Adjudg. Trin. 18 Jac. B. R. Or, The twenty pounds you stole from me? So for these words, Thou wast in the Tower for High-treason, Cur. 9 Jac. B. R. But this Case others doubt.

It is said it lieth for this, I did dream this night that you stole a horse. But this seems to be a strange Case, and not so much as to report such a thing as is false. So it lieth for saying, I think in my conscience A. is a Thief, Adjudg. Hob. Rep. 152. For saying, Did not you kill I. S. It will lie for saying, That I. S. told me that A. was a thief, when I. S. never told him so, M. 9 Jac. B. R. Adjudg. But it doth not lie for saying, A. reported that B. did steal a horse, if it be true he did report it; but then it must be so alleged in pleading, per Just. Tanfield Hil. 4 Jac. B. R.

And it is said it will not lie for this, Will you not leave your stealing! It lieth for saying thus, Hast thou been at London to change the money thou didst steal from me? Mich. 15 Car. B. R. It lieth for calling one Thief in Welsh, or any other unknown language; but then it is said it must be averred in the Action, that one at least of the hearers did understand it; And it is said it hath been adjudged in the Exchequer-Chamber, that otherwise it will not lie. But I wish it may be well weighed; for they that hear the words, may carry them, and get the meaning from another that can interpret them; and so a man may be grievously slandered without remedy: And it is all one in reason, not to know the men, as not to know the tongue: But if one slander a meer stranger, that one of the hearers do not, perhaps never shall know, is not not this actionable? It is doubted of words spoken thus, I am persuaded thou wouldst, if thou couldst, kill the King. If I.S. and my self be speaking together of one Fox, and I say thus, Go tell him he is a Thief, and I will justify it, though I.S. never tell him so, M.9. Jac. B. R. Foxes Case.

I did tell Mr. Carm, That I am neither Traitor to my Prince, nor Rebel to my Country, as I.S. is, and these words are spoken to Corel; the words are actionable, though never spoken to Carm, nor to any but to Corel himself. Curia, Mich. 9. Jac.

The Declaration was, That the Defendant dixit de prefato the Plaintiff, Thou, innuendo &c. hast stoln, &c. and it was adjudged good: For, dixit de prefato, is all one with dixit ad prefatum, and these words may be spoken in his absence, Stoner's Case, Pasch. 5 Jac. B. R. and Dickenson's Case adjudged M. 20. Book. b. Eadem ratione, to say to ones face, He is a Thief.

Words in the second person, the party not present, Actionable.

If one exhibite Articles in writing to a Justice of Peace, and write thus, I.H. (who was the Informer) doth charge K: (who is the Plaintiff) that he did commit Burglary in breaking of my house, and stealing of my goods: an Action will lie for this, though he change the person, adjudg. Pasche 9 Jac. Pet's Case, B. R.

If a Minister in a Certificate to his Ordinary, where he was of duty to certifie some other matter, had inserted a slander, an Action will lie for this, Reads Case, M. 7. Jac. B. R.

To write a Letter in private sealed to the party slandered, unless he deliver it to his own hands, is (as it seems) actionable; so to speak it but in one mans hearing, and bid him keep counsel, M. 9. Jac. B. R. Hob. Rep. pl. 63.

It lieth for saying, You are no Thief, Pasch. 15 Car. but it must be intended ironically. It will not lie for saying, that I have Articles against you for Felony, Adjudg. B. R. Nor for this, I have matter enough against I.S. about the death of I.S. Nor, as it seems, for this, I.S. hath found Felony in I.S. and can prove it. See Hob. Rep. pl. 3. 395. Quare the last Case.

It will lie for saying, I will prove that you have stolen my books or my horse, Pasche 15 Car. B. R. So, I can prove you a thief, and ten men will justify it, Pasche 5 Jac. B. R. So, It will be proved by many vehement presumptions, that I.S. was a plotter of the death of I.R. Pasche 7 Jac. B. R. It is said it lieth for this, I.S. is a Felon: To which a Rander by said, Take heed what you say: To which he said, Is not he a Felon that doth conceal Felons, or steal trees? Hil. 17 Jac. Newland's Case, or takes my goods upon Execution? à Fortiori, if the last words be first, they are actionable.

And as it is in these cases where the charge is of Felony, so it will be where the charge is of a lesser offence, as to the manner of the speech.

It will not lie for saying, One of you three, or one of the company (where be more then one) or one of you two (where two be together) is a Thief, Adjudg. Harris Case. Or one of the servants of I.S. if I.S. have more then one servant, or one of my brothers, where I have more then one, Coo. 4 17. Or one that is near to I.S. or about I.S. or mine adversary, hath done a Felony, or other Act: For any of these words, no Action will lie.

For this is altogether incertain in the party charged to commit the offence, and an Averment will not help here, Hob. Rep. 375. pl. 351. And the Defendant in these cases may do well in avoidance of the Action, to set forth that there were more in the company. Uncertainty.

It will not lie for these words, One I.S. stole the horse that was lost. M. 7 Jac. B. R. Reads Case. So, Stiles stole my horse, omitting the Christian name: But this last may by an Innuendo be made good. And yet some circumstances may make such words certain and actionable, as Mich. 3 Jac. B. R. as if the precedent conference were about one man incertain, or the like.

Wiseman sued his brother for saying, My brother [innuendo the Plaintiff] is perjured: Upon Not guilty, it was found for the Plaintiff, and Judgment given. And this difference taken where the words are incertain, as in the Cases before. But where they are certain in themselves, so that it may appear that the speaker intended a person certain, they may be made certain, as before.

It hath been adjudged also to lie for these words, Thou didst kill a Woman great with childe, Innuendo J. uxorem cujusdam R. S. defunct. Here the offence, and person committing it, are certain, Mich. 2 Jac. B. R.

Foxcroft sued Lacy, and declared, That a talk was between Walter and Gwin about a suit wherein the Plaintiff and others were Defendants, and therein the Defendant Lacy spoke these words, These Defendants (Innuendo the Plaintiff, and the others) are those that did help to murder I. S. [meaning J. S. deceased] who was murdered by one T. G. who was hanged for it: This was adjudged to be Actionable, for words may be certain by reference, Id certum quod certum reddi potest, Hob. Rep. pl. 119.

If one say to a Woman, Your Husband is a thief; or to a man, Your Wife is a thief, this is certain enough, and Actionable: But if he say your Brother, or your son, Contra, unless the Plaintiff aver he hath but one brother, or one son, which is himself, Trin. 14. Jac. B. R. per Dodridge.

Self. 5.

So likewise it will not lie, when there is an uncertainty in the thing charged; as in these cases for saying, Thou art a false thief, rogue, or some such like thing, Brook Action of the Case, 112. To declare for calling one Thief, or Verba similia, is not good; but to declare for calling one Thief, and to say further, Ac eadem verba sapinus reperivit, it seems good, H. 41. Eliz. C. B. Goldsb. 55. pl. 11.

Averment.

It is said it was adjudged not to lie for these words, Thou wast whipt about Taurion, or burnt in the hand or shoulder, for stealing sheep, Hills Case, Mich. 8 Car. B. R. So it will not lie for saying, Thou art a healer of Felons, or didst strain my Mare, without Averment that the words have such a meaning in the Country, Cook 4. 25.

It is said it lieth not for saying, Thou hast cozened all my kindred, 18 Eliz. B. R. It lieth not for saying, Who ever is the falsest thief in the County of Salop, what ever he hath stoln, J. S. is falsest then he. But these words are Actionable with Averment, that there are Felons within that County, Hasselwoods Case, Pasche 1 Jac. B. R. Rol. 107.

It lieth for saying, Thou stolest a piece from me, Appletons Case adjudged.

No Action will lie for a slander by Indictment, though false, 27 Ass. pl. 12. nor for a false Affidavit in the Chancery, by which one is imprisoned, Trin. 41 Eliz. B. R. Heires Case; nor against J. S. for taking a false Oath, by which bad Bail is taken instead of good Bail, Trin. 41 Eliz. B. R. Nor for preferring Articles in the Sessions, though false, Cook 4. 15. Nor for Articles exhibited before a Master of the Chancery, for to have the good behavior for prosecuting a legal course in the Country, though it be false and unjust, yet this Action will not lie. But the Party is to be punished in the same Court for the misdemeanor, Trin. 9 Jac. B. R. Hunters Case. But if things be inserted, those Judges have not the Consuance of contra, Cook 4. 14. And if one Indict another, or charge him legally for a Felony where none is, nor any reason to charge him, here an Action will lie, Trin. 14 Jac. B. R. Dennis Case. But all these Actions must be malitiose indictavit. For a slanderous complaint put into a Member of the Parliaments hands it seems is not Actionable, Trin. 21 Jac. It lieth against the Husband and Wife, for the Wives saying, Thou hast stoln me two Cocks, [Innuendo, &c.] These words are Actionable, and shall be taken for two Cocks, and the Innuendo, and me, void, M. 9 Jac. B. R.

For the matter of the words which hazard a mans life.

This Action lieth for calling a man Traitor, Buggerer, Sodomite, Robber, Murderer, Felon, Thief, Sacriledger, House Robber, 30 Ass. 19. 27. H. 7. 14. 21. Cook 10. 130. 4. 15. 16. &c. 27 H. 8. 14. 22. Dyer 26. 19. 236. Newlands Case. Ghurch-Robber. Trin. 7 Jac. B. R. Beringtons Case. And so for saying, A man hath committed Treason, Buggery, Sodomy, Burglary, Robbery, Murder, Sacriledge, or Felony. Pets Case.

It lieth not in our Law (as it seems) for calling a man Heretick, unless he have some special loss by it. 27 H. 8. 14. Sed Quere. Hob. Rep. in pl. 276. f. 397.

It did lie for saying, There is no King in England, Trin. 37 Eliz. Mayes Case adjudged. B. R.

It lieth for saying, Thou hast spoken words that are high Treason. Atwards Case.
Or,

Or, Thou wouldst kill the King and all his Subjects, if thou couldst. This was adjudged. Sydenhams Case, Hob. Rep. pl. 152.

It is said it doth lie for this, Thou art no true Subject, Sir William Walgraves Case, M. 32, 33 Eliz. Cook, B. R. Or, I am a true Subject, but thou servest one who is none at all. Sed Quere at this; for it is said that it lieth not for saying, Thou art no true Subject to the King. Smiths Case. 5 Jac. B. R.

It doth lie for saying, Thou art an enemy to the State. Chambers Case. 38 Eliz. B. R.

It lieth for saying, Thou wast partaker with the Rebels in the North, in their Rebellion. But not for saying, Thou wast partaker with the Rebels in the North, and no more.

It lieth not for saying, Thou hast coynd Gold, and art a Coyner of Gold. Nor for saying, He did make Half-crown peeces, and did carry a Cloak-bag full of clippings. For these words are altogether uncertain, Hughs, Rep. 391. 375.

It lieth for saying, Thou hast killed J. S. or murdered J. S. or poisoned J. S. If he be revera dead, when the words are spoken. New Book of Entries, f. 25. Yet see Brownl. 2. part. 219.

And here some say, That the Plaintiff that doth sue, must aver in his Declaration that he is dead. But it is said to be adjudged to lie for saying, Thou hast poisoned J. S. albeit he be not dead. But this is clear, That if it appear by any part of the Record, that the Party supposed to be killed, is alive, as if the words be, Thou hast killed my Wife, the Action will not lie; and if the Plaintiff do not shew him to be dead (as it seems by the better Opinion he need not) then it concerns the Defendant to shew it in avoidance of the Action, Cook 4. 16. 14. New Book of Entries, f. 24.

It lieth for saying, She hath sacrificed a childe, to the intent to kill my Mother. Lock versus Lock. But it will not lie for this, He smells of the murder lately done. Dyer 317. Yet to say, He is infected with the murder lately done, may be Actionable.

It lieth for saying, Thou hast poisoned J. S. If he be dead, adjudged, Bumfords Case, Pasche 7 Jac. Cook B. R. But against this Judgment, Miles Case; and the reason thereof in Hob. Rep. pl. 11. is objected, That he doth not say he did it ex scientia wittingly: Hereupon, March, f. 36. concludes it will not lie. This Reason will shake other Cases out of question, as, Thou art a murderer, or, hast murdered J. S. or, hast killed J. S. For it may be with giving Physick, or otherwise, against his will, or in doing Justice, &c. For there is a Homicide lawful and justifiable. But this is the common acceptance of the word, That he killed him voluntarily, and unlawfully, and therefore I think without question Actionable. See more, Brownl. 2. part. 299.

It will not lie for saying, Thou hast killed J. S. Brownl. 2. part. 118.

It lieth for saying, He took my Wife by the hand and said, Thou and I will be married shortly; after that he dispatched his Wife out of the way.

It lieth for this, I will call him in question for killing my Aunt, and I doubt not but I shall prove it. Adjudged. 39 Eliz. Webs Case. A. told me, She poisoned her first Husband, adjudged to lie for this. Megi Case.

This Action will lie for calling one Witch, and so it hath been often adjudged, as in Lewis Case. M. 13 Jac. And Rogers Case. Trin. 39 Eliz. and Hil. 4 Jac. B. R. And yet some Judgments have been given on the other side, and it hath been doubted. Hob. Rep. pl. 155. because there is a good and a bad Witch. But I think it is at this day unquestionable, and that Reason of little weight; for the word imports a foul charge; both of them use unlawful means, and have too much familiarity with the Devil. So it will lie for this, The Devil appears to thee every night in the likeness of a man, and thou conferrest with him, and he giveth thee what thou askest; and therefore thou hast so much money. Adjudged, Hob. Rep. pl. 137. 155. So for this, Thou hast bewitched J. S. to death. So it will lie also (as it seems) for calling one Conjurer; for the Witch and Conjurer both deal with the Devil; the Witch by agreement, the Conjurer by Prayers, and such like powerful means.

It lieth for saying, Thou art a Witch and Inchanter, and hast bewitched Strongs children. But not for this, Thou hast bewitched children, that they are wasted and destroyed. Brownl. 1. part. 7.

Sett. 6.

So it will lie for saying, Thou dost confer with an Evil spirit. But it will not lie for calling one Inchanter or Sorcerer; for the former have personal conference with the Devil, but these meddle with medicines, and ceremonial forms of words called charms without apparitions. It hath been said also, that this Action will lie for calling one Hag: but this is doubted by others, unless he can aver that in the language of the place it doth signifie Witch.

This Action will not lie for these words, Thou seekest my life, Coo.4.16. Nor for these, Thou didst write a Letter to one, [or hire one] or give one counsel to kill me, Coo.4.16. or wouldest have killed [or robbed] me, Trin.4. Jac. B. R. Tanfields Case. Or, Thou wentest about to poison a child, Eatons Case. And yet it is said to be resolved in the Exchequer-Chamber in one Passys Case, That it will lie for these last words, March. fol. 12. And then for all such like words as in the Cases before, which do carry in their sound a foul slander, and of something done. And it is agreed on all sides, that it will lie for these words, Thou didst lie in wait to rob [or to murder] me, Pasch. 5. Jac. B. R. So for this, Thou didst procure one to lie in wait to murder me; Adjudged.

And that in all Cases where the words import an intent, joyned with any overt act or attempt, that these words are actionable; for then the thing is punishable by the Good Behavior or Indictment. And I find it adjudged to lie for these words, Thou hiredst a Rogue to come with thee to my house to murder me, Sutton's Case, Trin. 33 Eliz. B. R. And it was said to be adjudged for this, Thou hast sent one to kill me. And yet it will not lie for this, Thou hast procured a perjured Knave to seek my blood, 32 Eliz. Sir Edw. Hastings Case.

It is said to be adjudged to lie for this, He sought my innocent blood, Sir Edward Hartberies Case, B. R. But this is doubted; for it lieth not for saying, Thou seekest my life, Hexis Case, Coo.4. Nor for this, Thou hast procured one to seek my blood, 32 Eliz. B. R. Sir Edw. Hastings Case.

It will not lie for these words, Thou wast the cause of the death of I. S. Adjudg. B. R. Prows Case. Nor for this, Thou art a blood-sucker, and seekest my blood, Helliards Case, M. 37. 38 Eliz. B. R. But it lieth for this, He is a manslayer, and hath lain in wait to kill, 28 Eliz. B. R. adjudg.

It is said it lieth not for this, He is a Felon, for he knoweth of a murder and conceal-eth it. Nor for this (as is said) I. S. gave W. S. money to shift him away as soon as he had killed R. T. Parrants Case, B. R. But I must beg leave to suspect both these Cases, for the words are very scandalous; and I have seen the Report of a Case where it is said to be adjudged to lie for these words, Thou art a concealer of Felons, and hast shewed such favor to a horse-stealer, that he and the horse is conveyed away, and I can hang thee if I will. Bondman vers. Tooker, Pasch. 7 Jac. B. R. And I have seen a Report, that it lieth for these words, Thou art a concealer of Felonies, Pendants Case. If I had consented to C. I. S. had been dispatched out of the way: Adjudged to lie for this, as is said, Cardinals Case.

It is said it lieth for these words, Thou wast arraigned at Warwick-Affizes for stealing a horse, and didst make good friends, or else thou hadst been hanged, M 8 Car. B. R. And for this, He was in the Gaol at Norwich for robbing one on the High-way, Sprat and Hains Case.

And yet in Hob. Rep. pl. 196. it was agreed not to lie for these words, Thou wast in Warwick-Gaol for stealing a horse. Nor will an Action lie for these words, Thou hast been indicted for Felony, or thou wast impeached for Felony; or, thou wast arrested, imprisoned, [or in Gaol] and arraigned for stealing a horse: For this may befall an honest innocent man, and these Cases do differ a little from the first Case, Hob. Rep. pl. 209, 289. Nay, it is said that it hath been resolved by two Judges, it will not lie for these words, Thou hast been in Gaol for coyning, and hast been burned in the hand for it, Trin. Jac. B. R. But I cannot receive it without doubting of it. See Brownl. 1 par. 16.

It will lie for saying, Thou didst burn a barn full of corn, Coo.4.14. But it will not lie for saying, Thou didst burn a barn: Nor may one say, Innuendo a barn full of corn. Idem new Book of Entries, f. 25. Adjudg.

Innuendo.

It

It will not lie for saying, Thou art a breaker of houses, M.9. Jac. Slaughters Case.

It will lie for saying, Thou art infected of Robbery lately done, Dyer 317. and, thou dost smell of it. Or for saying, I was robbed and you were privy thereto, and had part of the money, Goldsb. 137. pl. 42. So it will lie for saying, You were in prison in a gaol for stealing of Mr. Piggotts beasts, Goldsb. 130. pl. 26.

It will lie for saying, Thou hast stolen my two Cocks (or Hens) or Horse, or any other goods, Trin. 5. Jac. B. R. Benfers Case adjudg. So it lieth for this, Thou didst steal my horse and wast in gaol for it, Hob. Rep. pl. 196. So it lieth for saying, Thou art a Steal-gown, and the first gown that thou didst wear thou didst steal, Adjudg. New book of Entries, f. 23.

It lieth for saying, Thou hast robbed the Church of S. and taken away the lead thereof, Pasch. 5. Jac. B. R. But not for saying, Thou hast robbed the Church, without more.

It lieth for saying, He should have been hanged for a Rape, and it cost him dear, M. 39. 40. Eliz. B. R. Redferns Case.

It hath been thought by some, that it lieth for these words, Thou didst like of those who do maintain sedition against the King, Coo. 4. 12. Sed quare.

It lieth for saying, He hath stolen a horse, and it will be proved by twenty witnesses, Adjudg. Hares Case. But it will not lie for these words, He hath stolen a Mare; or, I. S. is forsworn, Adjudg. Pasch. 17 Jac. B. R. Barhams Case. For this is an incertain charge.

It will not lie for these words, It is in my power to hang thee, 17 Jac. B. R. Pridhams Case. Nor for these words, Thou hast deserved hanging, Mich. 4 Jac. B. R. and Pasche 38 Eliz. Hollands Case. Nor for these words, If thou hadst had thy right, thou hadst been hanged for breaking of the house of I. S. Brownl. 1 part, 3. See Brownl. 2 part, 280.

It seems it lieth for this, I stole a Mare, and you knowing the same, conveyed her to D. to the house of I. S. Goldsb. 132. pl. 28.

It will not lie for these words, Hugh Hall hath received the three parcels of cloth from the thief again that he did steal from him, when there was a felony done. Goldsb. 119. pl. 1.

This Action will lie for these words, There is not a purse cut within twenty miles, but I. S. knows of it, and hath a share in it, Balls Case. And yet the contrary is said to be adjudged.

It lies for these words, I was rob'd, and thou wast privy to it, and hadst part of the money, Adj. 38 El. Redfords Case. And it is said to be resolved to lie for these words, A. hath half my goods, and shall be hanged for it, 8 Jac. B. R. Long and Kings Case. But this I cannot receive for Law: For it is said to be adjudged that it will not lie for these words, I. had forty pounds worth of Plate, and A. hath it, and will be hanged for it, Trin. 12. Jac. Kings Case. Nor will it lie for these words, J. S. was robbed of twenty pounds, and A. had it, and will be hanged for it, By two Judges, Pasch. 9. Jac. Foord vers. King. Nor will it lie for these words, I. was robbed, and A. received part of the goods stolen, and I. could hang him for it, Newlins Case, P. 7. Jac. And yet all these words import a more certain and foul slander then the first words do, I heard it spoken that I. S. was one of them that was at Purnels Robbery, and that four of them went to his house the next morning, Adjudged to lie, 40. 41. Eliz. R. B. Reads Case: yet some doubt of this.

It is said to be agreed, that an Action will lie for these words, A. did set on me, and took my purse from me, (not saying) in the high-way. And for this, Thou didst set on me in the high-way, and tookst my purse from me, Adjudg. Stoners Case, M. 10. Jac. B. R. And for this, Thou didst meet me on the high-way and askedst my purse, and I gave thee five shillings for fear, Bonds Case. And yet it is said to be resolved not to lie for these words, Thou tookest away my purse in the high-way, and I will swear it. Quere, for I see little or no difference between this and the last Case; the words carry as bad a report as the former words do. But it seems to be agreed that no Action will lie for these words, Thou didst take away my money; nor for these words, Thou didst didst beat me, and take away my money: Nor for this, Thou didst take away my money with a strong hand, March. f. 59. pl. 91. Or, thou didst take away my purse and twenty shillings in it, Hob. Rep. pl. 168. Adjudged, Mich. 36. 37 Eliz. Cook B. R. Lynes Case. It will lie for saying, He hath robbed J. S. notwithstanding J. S. were never robbed, per Cur. M. 9 Jac. B. R.

It is said to be adjudged not to lie for these words, I have an action against J. S. who hath stoln by the High-way side, Denizens Case. 36, 37 Eliz. B. R. This seems to me somewhat a hard Case; and yet Hob. Rep. pl. 382. hath a Case somewhat like, I have matter enough against him, for J. S. hath found forgery against him, and can prove it: The Reason seems to be taken from the manner, not the matter of the Speech.

It hath been judged to lie, for these words, There is many an honest man hanged. And there was a robbery committed, whereof I think him to be one; and I verily think him to be a horse-stealer, Goldsb. 130. pl. 1: 7.

It lieth for saying, Thou hast stoln my goods, and I will have thy Neck, Brownl. 2. part. 230.

It is said also, it will not lie for saying, Thou art a cut-purse, Trin. 17 Jac. B. R. For he may be a Glover: So that it will not lie for these words, Thou art a cunning cut-purse knave; and this is said to be adjudged, Trevillians Case, B. R. These Cases seem hard to me; for the common and necessary intendment of the words, is in the worst sense; and to call a man Cut-purse (me thinks) is actionable. And it is said to lie for this, Thou didst pick five shillings out of my Pocket, adjudged, Drumers Case. So it will not lie for saying, Thou art a Coyner of money, or, hast coyned money, Trin. 17 Jac. B. R. For it may be his Trade: Nor for these words, Thou gettest money every day by coyning Gold, M. 19 Jac. B. R. Burnels Case.

It will not lie for saying, Thou art a priggish pilfering-fellow, and hast pilfered away my Goods from my Wife and children, adjudged Carters Case. M. 37. 38 Eliz. B. R. Nor for this, Thou art a filching fellow, and hast filched away Ten pounds from me, adjudged, Hob. Rep. pl. 323. Nor will it lie for saying, Thou art a healer of Felons, or, Thou hast strained my Mare; without a special Averment, that it hath such a meaning in the place, that it doth import a scandal. Brownl. 1. part. 13.

Averment.

Averment.

It will lie for these words, Whoever is a false thief in Gloucestershire, J. S. is falser then he. But in this Case, there must be an Averment, that there is a false thief there, Hazelwoods Case. M. 2 Jac. B. R. But it lieth not for these words, I can finde in the Parish a falser knave then B. who was indicted for Felony; and this knave is J. S. in Hazelwoods Case.

It will not lie for saying Thou art a seditious knave, or, a thievish knave, or, a trayterous knave, Cook 4. 19. And yet it hath been said, it was agreed to lie for calling one Trayterous knave Hil. 32 Q. Ward and Thorns Case. But it will not lie for saying, Thou art a rebellious knave; for this may be upon a Writ of Rebellion in the Chancery.

This Action will not lie for saying, Thou maintainest a rebellious knave, or [rebellious persons.] Nor for this, Thou art a maintainer of thieves abroad and at home, and dost maintain J. S. in such a Castle. And yet it is said, it doth lie for these words, Thou art a maintainer of thieves in thy house. And clearly to say, Thou maintainest thieves in thy house, to rob thy Neighbors.

It lieth for saying, Thou dost harbor and maintain Rebels and Traitors, Goldsb. 48. pl. 7. But not for saying, Thou didst steal by the High-way side, Brownl. 1. part. 143. And yet it will not lie for saying, Thou keepest none but thieves, [or, cut-purses] in thy house, and hast their goods, M. 17 Jac. B. R. Nor will it lie for this, Thou art a favorer of thieves, Dyer 75. Nor for this, Thou keepest men which rob on the High-way [or which, rob me,] for all this may be unawares. Nor as it seems for this, Thou keepest men with intent to rob me. But it will lie for these words, Thou harborest, and maintainest traytors, conveyest them out of the Realm, and maintainest them with money there. Pasche, 29 Eliz. Goldsb. 48. pl. 7. Accord. So it seems it will lie for this, Thou hast been a setter of thieves to rob me, or, hast hired one to rob me: If I be robbed, this is Actionable, Hil. 13 Jac. B. R. So to say, Thou hast received thieves, knowing them to be so. Matthews Case. But to say, Thou art a receiver of thieves, contra.

This Action will lie for these words, Thou hast houlstred [or, received] goods that were stoln, knowing them to be stoln; but unless it be added, ex scientia, it seems they are not Actionable, M. 17 Car. B. R. Haws Case, adjudged. But if the manner of receipt spoken of, were such as is not Felony; the Defendant must shew how it was for the clearing of himself, March, f. 16. And yet if one say, J. S. hath stoln a horse, and his son is consenting to it; it seems the son cannot have this Action for these words, Trin. 14 Jac. Lewkners Case.

It hath been said, it will not lie for saying, Thou hast stoln away my Corn; because it doth not appear, whether the Corn were severed, Trin. 37 Eliz. And yet divers Judgments are recorded to be to the contrary, as this, Hil. 14. B. R. for saying, Thou didst steal my Corn, and carry it into the Market, Glovers Case. Pasche, 7 Jac. B. R. and Pasche, 40 Eliz. Cook. B. R. Thou art a false knave, and didst steal my Corn, Harris Case. Thou art a Corn-stealer, 39 Eliz. Cook, B. R. For saying, Thou art a thief, and hast stoln my Corn. Adjudged, Kelham and Mandes Case, B. R. 2 Jac. Also it is said to be adjudged to lie for this, He hath stoln my Wood, 5 Jac. B. R. Litchfields Case. March. Rep. 211. pl. 248.

It lieth for this, Male did steal my Corn out of my Barn, Hil. 14 Jac. Cook, B. R. adjudged. So for saying, Thou art a thief, and hast stoln the Town-beam; meaning the Town of Wickham. But not for saying, Thou art a thief, and hast stoln a Tree, or, hast stoln my Maiden-head, Brownl. 2. part. 3. Trin. 18 Car. B. R. And for this, He hath feloniously taken my Wood, Pasche, 38 Eliz. Cook, B. R. For this must be understood of Wood cut: But if he say, He hath stoln my Tree, or, my Trees, contra; Arbor dum crescit, lignum dum crescere nescit, Trin. 4 Jac. B. R. Rot. 1366. Accord. March. 211. pl. 280. Accord. Brownl. 2. part. 280. But it seems all these Judgments are not approved by the Court of Common Pleas: For there it hath been oft agreed, this this Action will not lie, for saying, Thou art a thief, for [or, and] thou hast stoln my Trees, or, Apples out of my ground, or, Corn out of my field, or, an Acre of my Corn, or, twenty load of my Furzes, Hob. Rep. pl. 106. pl. 97. 98, 473. 406. Nor for this, Thou hast robbed my Hop-ground, or, stoln my Apples out of my Orchard, [or] and it will be proved by stealing of my Apples in my Orchard, Co. 4. 19. So it will not lie for these words, Thou art a thief, for thou tookest away my Cattle upon an Execution, and I will hang thee, Mich. 7 Jac. Wilks Case. And yet some do put a difference between [and] and [for,] and say, That for this thou art a thief, and hast stoln my Trees or Apples, &c. it shall lie. But all agree, that it lieth not for these words, Thou art a thief, for thou hast stoln, &c. It was said to be adjudged, that it will not lie for this, Thou hast robbed me, and taken away my evidence. It will lie for this, Thou hast stoln my Cock, Brownl. 1. part. 1. And yet this is but Petit Larceny. It will not lie for saying, Thou art drunk, and I never held up my hand at the Bar as thou hast done. Nor to say, Thou wast arraigned for Felony, or, didst hold up thy hand for Felony, Bro. 2. p. 273.

It is said to be adjudged to lie for these words, A. is an arrant thief, and he hath stoln my Apple Trees, M. 7 Jac. B. R. Eyres Case. But it was moved in Arrest of this Judgment, and in Mymors Case, M. 4 Jac. B. R. This difference was agreed there, and it was said, It had been often adjudged there accordingly; and it seems that Court is of this opinion still. But the Judges of the Court of Common Pleas are utterly against it, and will by no means admit of this difference: And therefore they judge the Action to lie alike in both Cases, Hob. Rep. pl. 406. 98. 17. 20. But all agree it will lie without question, for saying, Thou hast stoln my Apples out of my Loft, or, thou hast stoln the Corn out of my Barn, or, thou hast stoln my Wood, [or, Furzes] out of my Barton, Hob. pl. 258. Hil. 37 Eliz. B. R. Castle mains Case.

It lieth not for this, Thou art a thief, for thou hast cut off the ear-mark of my sheep, and set on thine own, 29 Eliz. B. R.

It lieth for saying, Bear witness, I arrest you for Felony, Per curiam, M. 17 Jac. B. R. Serles Case. So for saying, If I could finde J. S. I doubt not but within two days to arrest H. of suspicion of Felony, Adjdg. Herles Case. Co. 4. 15. And it is said it hath been ruled to lie for these words, I charge you with Felony, and I charge the Com- stable to take you, M. 5. Jac. B. R. Also it hath been said to be adjudged to lie for these words, Bring me to the Constables house, for I am robbed, and I will bring him to the house of I. S. to arrest him, for he setteth them to rob me from time to time, Adjudg. B. B. And yet in other places we find it affirmed and ruled, that it will not lie for saying, I charge you for Felony for taking money out of the pocket of I. S. Nor for these words, I arrest you for Felony; or, I charge you with Felony, Hob. Rep. pl. 381, 394, 286, 38. and elsewhere. See Brownl. 1 part, 18.

And to reconcile these, I take the difference to be this. If I do arrest a man for a suspicion, and in the arrest use these words when there is cause, this is in the due way of Justice, and not actionable. But if I use these words without any just cause, or where I do not proceed in a course of Justice, but before or after the arrest, or otherwise speak any of the said words, they are actionable, Hob. Rep. pl. 258.

Which concern a man in his Office or place of trust.

It is said that this Action will lie for any Officer, against him that shall say, He hath no skill in his Office. But for a manual Tradesman, it will not lie for these words, He hath no skill in his Trade. Sed quare of this last, Hil. 16. Jac. B. R. It will lie for saying to any Officer, You are an Extortioner; or, you have extorted twenty shillings above your due Fees, Co. 10. 61.

Judge, Justice.

It will lie for saying to a Judge or Justice of Peace, You are a corrupt man (or Judge) or Justice of Peace; or, You deal corruptly, or you take bribes, or you do not minister true justice, or you are a false Judge or a false Justice of Peace, Co. 4. 16. Bro. 112. But it will not lie for these words, If any man will give him bribes, Sheep or Capons, he will take them. Adjudg. Pasch. 35 Eliz. B. R. Sir Chr. Helliards Case.

It will lie for saying to a Judge or Justice of Peace, You are an Ambodexter, or you take money on both sides, M. 2. Jac. B. R. Dawtreys Case. Or, You cover (or hide) Felonies, Dyer 72. and Struckleys Case, P. 7. Jac. B. R. Or, You are a common Barrister, or you are a common Champertor, or you are a common maintainer of Suits, Hob. pl. 188, 145. So for saying, You took money of a Felon brought before you, to let him escape, Pasch. 37. Eliz. B. R. Rot. 147. Adjudg. Cottons Case; and Trin. 36. Eliz. Staffords Case, B. R. See Brownl. 1 part, 11.

It lieth for saying, I was like to be killed at his house; he enticed me into his stable to see his horses, and there he instigated I. S. to beat me, M. 2. Jac. B. R.

It doth lie for saying of a Justice of Peace, He hath done me wrong in returning the Recognisance for I. S. in twenty pounds, whereas it was taken but for ten pounds, Pasch. 4 Jac. B. R.

Some think it will lie for these words, He can hear but with one ear, Cholmleys Case. And for these words, He doth maintain the worst people against Gods Law. 35 Eliz. Butlers Case, adjudged.

It will not lie for saying to a Justice of Peace, or Judge, speaking of the Tenants of his Manors, and his taking of Fines; When your Tenant took his Land, you cozened him of his Fine, and dealt corruptly, and I will make you appear where you dare not show your face for your base dealing, Trin. 4. Jac. And if the discourse be about health, and one say, He is a corrupt man, M. 7. Jac. Co. B. So if the talk be about his Estate, and one says, He is a Bankrupt. Or, if the discourse be about his Usury, or his fraud in an Executorship, and thereupon one saith, He is a corrupt man, or a false man, or the like. And therefore in such like Cases, if the Plaintiff set forth part of the words only, it will concern the Defendant to set forth the whole matter in avoidance of the Suit, Co. 4. 14. And yet if the words be spoken indefinitely, without any such reference as in the Cases before, they will be actionable. Sermo relatus ad personam, intelligi debet de conditione persona. Hob. Rep. pl. 351.

Sec. 9.

It will not lie for saying to a Justice of a Peace, You are an Usurer, or you have not dealt honestly about a Will, Co. 4. 16. New Book of Entries, fol. 22. Nor for saying, He hath gotten all he hath by swearing and forswearing. Adjudg. N. B. of Entries, f. 21.

Preacher.

This Action will lie for speaking these words to a Preacher, You have made a seditious Sermon, and moved the people to sedition. Co. 4. 19. and Philips Case, Pasch. 24. Eliz. B. R. But it will not lie for saying to him, Thou art an Adulterer, or, thou hast had two children by J. S. and I will cause thee to be deprived for it, adjudged, Parreys Case, M. 38, 39 Eliz.

It will lie for saying to a Sheriff, or any such like Officer, Thou art an Extortioner, Sheriff. or, Thou hast by colour of thy Office, extorted twenty shillings above thy due Fees, Co. 10. 61. And Stanleys Case, Pasche, 14 Jac. Co. B.R. And Jones Case, 38, 39 Eliz.

It lieth for saying to a Serjeant or Barrester, You are a dishonest man in your profession, or, you have undone many men, adjudged. Trin. 37 Eliz. Or, You did disclose my counsel to my adversary, or, you are a cozening knave, and shewed a counterfeit [or forged] Deed, knowing it to be so, M. 39, 40 Eliz. M. 20 Jac. Curia. But it will not lie for saying, You shewed a counterfeit [or forged] Deed, without more. It will lie for saying, He giveth bad counsel, or, he is no Lawyer, or, he is an ignorant man in the Law, or, he hath no skill in the Law, M. 8 Car. B. R. in Cawdreys Case. Also it lieth for this, He is the simplest Lawyer towards the Law, adjudged, 39, 40 Eliz. B. R. Or, He hath no more Law than an Ape: But to say, He hath as much Law as an Ape, is not actionable; and yet see the Case after, contrarily adjudged, Goldsb. 126 pl. 17. And yet it will not lie for these words, He is no Schollar, or, Thou wast never any Schollar (or to speak to a Schollar.) He hath no learning, or, he is an ignorant man; in general, without reference to his office. Nor will it lie for saying, Thou art a drunken fellow, or, thou art an Ass, in Cawdreys Case. It will lie for saying to him these words, Thou a Barrester! a Barrester! thou wast put from the Bar, adjudged, Pasche 8 Jac. Cook B. R. Besslies Case. So it will lie for these words, Thou a Counsellor! thou art a concealer of the Law, adjudged, Trin. 2 Jac. B. R. Coxes Case. It will lie for saying to a Barrester, You are a bribing knave, or, you are a corrupt man, or, you are a common Barrater, or, you are a common Champertor, or, you are a common maintainer of suits, Hob. Rep. pl. 188. 145. pl. 17. Cook 4. 16. It lieth for saying, He hath the falling sickness, by Tanfield Justice, Hil. 4 Jac. B. R. So it will lie for these words, He was of my Counsel, and revealed the secrets of my cause, Snags Case, Trin. 13 Eliz. B. R. New Book of Entries, f. 22. And yet it seems it will not lie for this, Go to him, he will deceive you, adjudged, March. Rep. 146. pl. 217. Brownl. Rep. 1. part. 11. To say to a Lawyer, Thou art a paltry Lawyer, and hast as much Law as a Jackanapes, Goldsb. 126 pl. 17.

It will not lie for these words to a Lawyer, Thou hast nothing but what thou hast gotten by swearing and forswearing. New Book of Entries, f. 22. Nor for saying, Thou art a Bankrupt, March. Rep. f. 8.

It will lie for saying of an Attorney, He is an extortioner, Hil. 40 Eliz. Cook B. R. Stanleys Case; or, he is a bribing knave, Cook 4. 16. Hob. Rep. pl. 17. adjudged; or, he is a corrupt man, and doth deal corruptly, Cook 4. 15: or, his credit is falsn, he dealeth on both sides, M. 43, 43 Eliz. Cook B. R. Kings Case; or, he is an ambodexter, or, he taketh money on both sides [or on both hands] in suits, M. 2 Jac. Dantreys Case, B. R. But it will not lie for saying of him, He is a common maintainer of suits, Hob. Rep. pl. 45. It lieth for saying of him, He is a false practiser, per 3. Justices, Pasche, 17 Jac. Moors Case; or, he is a cozening knave; or, he is a knave, adjudged. Tardlies Case, 18 Eliz. B. R. And yet, Forging knave, hath been doubted, Pasche 17 Jac. B. R. Moors Case; I know not upon what reason. It hath been adjudged to lie, in Smails Case, Brownl. 1. part. 16. And it is said it will not lie for these words, Thou art a false cozening knave, and hast cozened my two kinsmen of their Land, and deservest the Pillory, 26 Eliz. B. R. Nor for saying, He cozened J. S. out of his Land, adjudged. It lieth for saying, You are a dishonest man in your profession. It lieth for saying, Thou art a common Barrater, Hob. Rep. pl. 188. Or, thou art a common Champertor, Hob. Rep. pl. 183. 145. 351. Or, thou art a Champertor, Boxea Case. M. 14 Jac. Cook B. R. Or, thou art the simplest [or foolishhest] Attorney, towards the Law, M. 39. 40 Eliz. Cook B. R. Martins Case, adjudged; or, thou hast no skill in thy Office. But it will not lie for saying, Thou hast no skill in Husbandry, or the like, this is not actionable. It will lie for these words, Thou didst disclose thy Clients counsel to his adversary, Trin. 17 Car. Cook B. R. Sandersons Case; or, thou art a suborning knave; or, thou art an extorting knave, and didst suborn one to be forsworn before the Lord Chief Justice, 20 Jac. If a Suit be between R. and B. and B. say to R. J. S. your Attorney is a bribing knave, and hath twenty pound of you to cozen me; this is actionable, adjudged, M. 1 Jac. Cook B. R. Tardlies Case. But it will not lie for saying to an Attorney, Thou art a usurer, or, thou hast plaid the knave with me about a Will, Cook 4. 16. And it is said it will not lie for this, My Father was not pecked over the Bar as thy Father was, Trin. 41 Eliz. Cook, B. R. And yet it is said it will lie for saying, Thou wast pecked over the Bar, quere, what difference. Nor will it lie for this, He was or will be pecked over the Bar, Trin. 41 Eliz. Knightlies Case, Cook, B. R. Hob. Rep. pl. 145. Nor for this, I think thou art no Attorney, but an Attorneys Clerk; and if thou be, I shall have thee pecked over the Bar the next Term, and thy Ears nailed to the Pillory, Hob. Rep. pl. 159. Pasche, 7 Jac. Cook, B. R. Trotmans Case; for these words are of an uncertain sense. It is said it will not lie for saying of him, He gets his living by false Writs, adjudged, B. R. Nor if one speak of going to him, if another say, Go not to him, for he will conzen [or deceive] you, Pasche, 18 Jac. Ratcliffs Case.

It lieth for this, Brown is a good Attorney, but that he will play on both sides, Brownl. 1. part. 5.

It seems it lieth for this, Thou hast conzened J. S. of his Fee, I will sue thee for it in the Star-Chamber; for thou didst not come for J. S. Brownl. 1. part. 3. 15. 16. 6. 7. 2. part. 253.

It lieth also for this, Is he your Attorney, he is the foolishhest and simplest Attorney towards the Law: And if he do not overthrow your cause, I will give you my ears. He is a fool and an ass, and so I will prove him, 126. pl. 21.

Receiver.

It lieth for saying of the Receiver of the Court of Wards, Master Receiver hath conzened the King, and delt falsly with him, Trin. 17 Jac. Sir Miles Fleetwoods Case, Hob. Rep. pl. 351. So to call an Auditor of the Court of Wards frauditor, is actionable in Sir Miles Fleetwoods Case.

Auditor.

Constable.

It lieth for saying to a Constable, Thou hidest or coverest Felonies, or favorest Felons, Strucklies Case, Pasche, 7 Jac. B. R. and Bonmans Case.

Self. 10.
Physician.

It lieth for saying of a Physician, He hath no learning or skill in Physick, M. 8 Car. B. R. in Cawdreys Case. And yet to say, He is an ass, or hath no learning, or is no Schollar, in general, it seems is not actionable. But it will lie to say of a Doctor of Physick, He is a Mountebank, an Emperick, and a base fellow, adjudged, Pasche, 12 Car. B. R. Hughes Rep. 441.

Major.

It lieth not for saying to a Major, Thou hast conzened all thy brethren, 8 Car. B. R. Major of Tivertons Case, for the words are too general and incertain to uphold an Action.

Jury-man.

It lieth for saying to a common Jury-man, Thou art a common Jury-man, and hast been the death and the overthrow of a hundred men, by thy false and subtil means, adjudged, Pasche, 7 Jac. Cook, B. R. Peters Case. With Avowment that he was a Jury-man.

Overseers of the poor.

It is thought it will lie for saying of Overseers of the poor, That they have conzened the poor of their money, 9 Jac. B. R. yet this some doubt. But it seemes clearly, it will lie for saying, They have conzened the poor of their bread.

Commissioner.

It lieth for saying of a Commissioner, That he hath a Commission to hear and end a difference between A. and B. Thou art a corrupt man, and hast taken bribes of A. to defraud equity and justice, adjudged, Pasche, 3 Jac. B. R. Sir George Mores Case. So to say of him, That he put out Depositions taken, and put in some not taken, adjudged, Hil. 17 Jac. B. R. Sir Nich. Parkers Case. So for saying, He hath returned Depositions that were not taken, 40. 41 Eliz. B. R. Fishes Case; and whether he be nominated by the Court or Parties, it is all one in the Case.

Arbitrator.
Weigher of corn.

It lieth not for saying of an Arbitrator, He hath taken bribes, or, he is corrupt. But it will lie for saying to one appointed to be a common weigher in a Market or Fair, that did weigh Corn between us, He hath taken bribes to make false weighers.

Steward.

It lieth for saying of a Steward in a Leet, He hath added a presentment, which the Jury never made, M. 4 Jac. B. R. Carrs Case, especially if he keep many Courts.

Bailiff.

It will not lie for a Bailiff that had the selling of his Masters Corn for three years, for saying, Thou art a conzening knave, and hast conzened thy Master in selling by false measure, Hob. pl. 93. But if he did continue in his office, and these words did make his Master put him away, contra.

It will not lie for saying of a Scrivener, That he made false writings.

Scrivener.
Measurer of Land.

It lieth for saying of a Mathematical Measurer or Surveyor that is learned, and doth it by Art, or any such Officer, He hath no skill in his trade, or, he is a cheater or conzener in his trade. But to say so of one that doth measure by the Poll onely, contra, Hil. 16 Jac. B. R. Londons Case.

Out of all this, it appeareth, That where ever this Action is maintainable for any Defamation in a mans Office, the words must be spoken, either generally without any reference, and so may be referred to his Office, or with reference to his Office; for if they be spoken of any other subject then his Office, they will not be actionable, Agree. 16 Jac. B. R. in Londons Case. And the party that sues for the slander, must shew in his Declaration, that he was such an Officer at the time of the words spoken, otherwise the action is not maintainable. And it is not sufficient to say, he had been such an Officer before the time of the speaking of the words; but he need not shew that the hearers did know him to be such an officer, Hob. Rep. pl. 104. 93. 351. yet if the words be ambiguous, but there is a pregnant violence in them to lead the hearers and Court, to take them in the worst sense, they must be taken so, as in the Case of Sir Miles Fleetwood, Hob. Rep. pl. 35.

It lieth upon this ground also, against them that slander a Lawyer, or an Attorney with ignorance or unfairfulness in the Cases before set down.

Which concerns a man in his Trade or Calling, whereby he gets his living.

It will lie for saying to a Victualler or Inn-holder, He hath the Pox, or any other infectious disease in his house; if he lose his guests thereby, non aliter, Trin. 9 Jac. Ladlams Case. So for saying, He keeps a house of common Bawdry, curia, Hil. 4 Jac. B. R. Thornes Case. M. 39. 40 Eliz. And for this it seems it will lie without that consequence, and without Averment hereof. So this Action will lie for saying of any Tradesman that gets his living by buying and selling, or did so of late, and hath given it over a little while, as a Merchant, Shoemaker, Mercer, or the like Tradesman that useth buying and selling. He is a bankrupt, and I will drive him out of the Country for a bankrupt; M. 9 Jac. B. R. Dayes Case, adjudged. Or, he will be a bankrupt very shortly, Co. 4. 19. Dyer 72. Langs Case. M. 7 Jac. Co. B. R. Seleys Case. Pasche, 12 Jac. B. R. Or, he is a bankrupt, and fled beyond the Sea for money, Trin. 9 Jac. B. R. Trunlocks Case. Or, I will prove that he hath been a bankrupt, and hath agreed with his creditors for five shillings a pound. Edmunds Case. Hil. 3 Jac. B. R. Ror. 855. Or, he is broken, Hil. 17 Jac. B. R. Johnsons Case. But it will not lie for saying, I will sue out a Commission of Bankrupt against J. S. Nor will it lie for calling a Gentleman, or one that is no Tradesman, Bankrupt. Finchesley 186. Nor for saying to a Tradesman, Thou art a branded Rogue, and a Rogue by the Statute, M. 19 Jac. B. R. Harrisons Case, unless he can aver any special loss by it. Nor will it lie for these words of a Merchant. Doth he owe you money? get it quickly and take heed how you trust him, Trin. 36 Eliz. Vaspicks Case. Nor for this, He is a false knave, and keepeth a false debt book, for he chargeth me unjustly with what I never received, adjudged. Hil. 37 Eliz. B. R. Brooks Case. Nor for saying, He is a couzening knave, Pasche, 15 Car. B. R. And yet in these two last Cases, if the speeches be with reference to his Trade, Quere. It will not lie to say of a Tradesman, He is not worth a groat; no, nor albeit he aver that in the County, it means that he is a Bankrupt, Pasche, 15 Car. B. R. Axes Case; for his credit may be good, and he not worth a groat.

It will not lie for saying to a Merchant, He is a couzening knave, March. Rep. f. 8. pl. 19. But see more in Brownl. 1. part. 4. 16.

It will lie for saying to a Goldsmith, Thou art a couzening knave, for thou hast sold me a Saphir for a Diamond, Hil. 32 Eliz. B. R. But if one say to a Taylor, Thou art a couzening knave, because thou hast sold me a chain for Gold, where it is half Copper, and thou art a couzening knave upon record, and hast been imprisoned for couzening; no Action will lie for these words, 32 Eliz. B. R.

It will not lie for calling Rogue or Cozener, nor for saying, He is a cozening Rogue, and hath cozened R.W. of thirty pound, and goeth about to do the like to me, Brownl. 2. part, 120.

It doth not lie to say of a Carrier, He is a common Barreter. Hob. Rep. pl. 183. 188.

It lieth for saying of a Journeyman-Shomaker, Do not meddle with him, for he will undo you, or he will cut you out of doors; with an Averment that this word [cut] doth intend in the Country [undo.] Pasc. 15 Car. B.R.

It lieth for saying of a servant, He doth defraud, cozen, or cheat his master, or will undo him, if by this he have any special damage, otherwise not: But in the first case there must be an Averment of damage in particular. March, f. 1.

It lieth for saying of a Brewer, He sells naughty Beer, M. 15 Car. B.R. Or, My Mare doth piss as good Beer as he doth brew, if he can aver a loss by the words. Dykes Case, March 60.

It lieth for saying to a Brasier, Thou didst cozen I.S. in a Brass pot, Adj. Pasc. 7 Jac. B.R. So by the same reason to say to any Tradesman, He did cheat a man in trading. So to say of a Farmer, Badger, or any man that sells by weight and measure, He sells by false weights and measures, or he did keep false measures, by which he did cozen the Country. But it lieth not for saying, He had (or he kept) false weights or measures in his house, Hob. pl. 93. Pasc. Co. B. 17 Car. Payns Case. But to say this of a Bailiff that sold his masters Corn for a while, and hath given over, it seems it will not lie. But to say of a Tradesman, He doth sell by false weights or measures, will bear an Action, March Rep. 119. pl. 197.

It lieth for saying, that he kept a false bushel by which he did cheat and cozen the poor, if he shew he were a Farmer, and did sell his Corn, and that by these words he lost his Customers, March 116. pl. 192.

It lieth for saying to one that had oversight of a Gentlemans Farm, and sold his Corn, for these words; Thou art a cozening Knaave, and thou hast cozened me in selling false measure in my Barley, and the Country is bound to curse thee for selling with false measures, and I will prove it; and thou hast changed my Barley which I bought of thee. B.R. Rep. 1 par. 4. So for this, Thou didst keep and sell by false weights, and in 240 bestowing thy weights were false two ounces, and I will prove it, Brownl. 1 part, 42.

To say of a woman Inkeeper, She is a pocky unwholsom woman, doth wear a skarv to hide her blanches in her neck, it is a pocky household, may happily bear an action, M. 9 Jac. Ludlams Case.

Señ. 11.

Out of all which it is to be observed, that where-ever this Action lieth for a slander to a man in his Trade, the words must be spoken either generally, and so may be referred to it, or must be relative words, as Bankrupt or the like, or with express reference to it; for if they be spoken of any other thing, they will not bear an action: And the party that sues must set forth in his Declaration, that he was such a Tradesman in particular; and it is not enough to say, he got his living by buying and selling, but he must say he is a Merchant, Mercer, or the like, and that he was so a little before or at the time of the words spoken, else no action will lie, Hil. 7 Car. B.R. Collins Case, adjudged M. 17 Car. Co. B. But if the count be that he have been of that Trade for twenty years last past, and lay the words to be spoken within that time, it is good. But if he say that he hath been of that Trade for divers years last past, contra Hil. 17 Jac. B.R. Johnsons Case. Hob. Rep. pl. 16. 93.

Averment:

In all these Cases there must be a special averment of some loss by the words spoken, Pasc. 15 Car. B.R. Axes Case. But others upon better reason and authority hold the contrary. But all agree it to be best to allege some special damage, if the Case will bear it. March, f. 96.

Which tend to a mans disinherittance.

It lieth for saying of a lawful Heir to Land, before or after his fathers death, He is a Bastard. And this will lie, though the words were spoken before or after he hath the land in possession, and though he be not about to sell the land, and though he have no loss by the speaking of the words, Co. 4. 17 M. 20. Jac. B. Elborows Case: for by this the title of his Land may be called in question. But if the party speaking claim as next heir to the Land, he may justify it, and it will not bear an action, Trin. 25 Eliz. B.R. Banisters Case. Co. idem. And if the Plaintiff omit this, the Defendant may set it forth by way of bar. To say a man is his Villain, will not bear action now, as it seems, because Villenage is gone.

Which charge a man with an infectious disease.

It lieth for this, He hath the French pox, or is infected with the French pox, or is laid with the pox, or the pox doth haunt him twice a year, Co. 4. 17. and Ludlams Case, M. 2 Jac.

M. 2 Jac. per Fenner and Williams Justices. So, Thou hast caught the French pox, and carried it to thy wife, Hob. Rep. pl. 190. So for saying, Thou art a pocky whore, and the pox hath eaten out the bottom of thy belly, that thy guts are ready to fall out, M. 7 Jac. Co. B. Miles Case. Trin. 15 Jac. B. R. Mitwards Case. So it seems it will lie for saying, Thou hast the great pox, 20 Jac. B. R. or the plague. So it lieth for saying, Thou art a leprous knave, not fit for company, or thou art a leper, Trin. 4 Jac. B. R. Rot. 1051. But it will not lie for saying, One hath the Falling-sickness, Hil. 4 Jac. B. R. or the Pox, Co. 4. 17. Nor for this, Hang him, he is full of the Pox, Co. 4. 17. It will not lie for saying, Thou art a pocky Whore, 44, 45 Eliz. Adjudg. Curia. M. 7 Jac. Co. B. Nor will it lie for this, That pocky Drab doth wear a scarf about her neck to hide her blanches, I will not eat with her for ten pounds; by three Judges, Trin. 9 Jac. Ludmans Case. Nor for this, Thou hast lien in Fullers tub, Chapels Case. Nor will it lie for these words with this Averment, That none do lie there but such as have the French pox, Adjudg. M. 44, & 45 Eliz. Boddin and Jones Case. Nor for this, Thou art a pocky Drab, doest wear a scarf about thy neck to hide thy blanches; you are a pocky household, and I will not eat with you for twenty Nobles. And yet if they were speaking of the French pox, and the party speak these words, it is dangerous, M. 9 Jac. Nor for this, He hath been in Fowlers tub, (meaning a Chyrurgeons tub, wherein none were but such as had the pox) I will not say of the pox, but he lay in the tub that time that Lagmans wife was laid of the pox, and his hair falls from his head, and he is a pilled and a Rascal-knave, and a Villain, and no Christian, and thinks there is neither heaven nor hell, Goldsb. 135. pl. 34.

If I have Land, and have need, and am about to sell it, and another say, It is his Land, and I have no right to it, or I have no Title to it, or I have no good Estate of it, or that I can make no good Estate of it; and hereby my Chapman doth desist and fall off, I may have this Action: And albeit he or some other have a colourable Estate, yet if he have not a good Title in Law to it, this will bear an Action, Co. 4. 18. New book of Entries, 28. As if two have Leases of the same Land, and he hath the latter which is not good, and he say, The Land is his, and the others Estate is not good; this is actionable. Mildmays Case, Adjudg. 6 Eliz. Co. B. Co. 1. 177.

If I be about to sell my Land, and another saith, I know one that hath a Lease of the Land, and he will not part from it at any rate; this is actionable, Adjudg. M. 37, 38 Eliz. B. R. Pennymans Case. M. 20 Jac. B. R. Elborrows Case. The Plaintiff set forth he had much Land by Inheritance, and the Defendant intending to impeach his Title, said, His wife shall not sit above mine, for her husband is a bastard, innuendo the Plaintiff; It was adjudged to lie without any Averment. So it will lie for saying, Your father is a bastard, 6 Eliz. Co. B. So, Thou art an Alien, 15 Jac. B. R. adjudged. And yet in case where I claim an Estate, if I say so, That I have a title, and the title of the other is not good; these words may be justified, and are not actionable, Co. 4. 18. But there must be a special Averment of some loss; and therefore he must shew that he was the Heir, and the other intending to impeach his Title, or that there was a communication for a sale: For some hold, that if there were only an intent of sale in the Owner, and no progress, no Action will lie for the slander of the Title, Co. New book of Entries, f. 35. M. 18 Jac. Sleeds Case. Yet some Judges have held it will lie without any Averment; for it may cause the King or Lord to search for the Title, and bring a loss in time to come.

If one be heir to his father or brother, who intend to settle their land upon him, and another say, He is a Bastard, and thereupon they give away the land from him, this will bear Action, adjudged, Hughes Rep. 451.

If a woman be like to have a husband, or a man a wife, and one say of him or her, He (or she) had a bastard, or she is incontinent, or lay with I. S. or I. S. had the use of her body, and he or the lose their match thereby; this Action will lie for this slander, Co. 4. 16. Hil. 4 Jac. B. R. Dame Harrisons Case. M. 8 Car. B. R. So if a Widower be like to have a Maid or Widow, and one say to her, I wonder you will have him, for he was like to starve his last wife, and would not allow her necessaries; and by this he lose her. Adjudged.

If a Divine be to be presented to a Benefice, and one say to him, He is an Heretick,

Which consider a mans title of his land.

Sec. 12:

Which tend to hinder a mans preferment:

or a Bastard, or excommunicate; and hereby he lose his preferment, he may have this Action for this Slander, Co. 4. 16.

If a Lawyer stand for an Office, as for a Stewardship, or the like, and being in speech about him, one saith to another, He is an ignorant man, unfit for this place; and thereby he loseth the place, this Action lieth for this Slander, Sandersons Case, 17 Car. Co. B. R.

And so by the same reason, if any common servant be like to have a service, and by some slanderous speeches he loseth his service; it seems he may have this Action for his relief. Agreed. M. 15 Car. B. R. But in all these Cases, there must be a special Averment of the loss of the preferment; otherwise the Action is not maintainable.

Averment:

Which doth tend to the hurt of a man in his Liberty, or to bring any corporal, or mony punishment on a man.

I finde in the Judgments and Opinions of men upon this point, very great contradiction also; and so much difficulty and uncertainty in the Law in these Cases, that it is hard to give you any Rules on which you may relie herein.

Some say an Action will lie for any words which may induce any corporal or pecuniary punishment; others, the contrary. We shall say this onely in the Slanders within this degree, and the next that follow, it is good to observe how the words do sound, and what the thing said, if true, would produce. For if the words do sound Scandalous, or if the thing charged were true, it would bring any sharp punishment, especially to the body, there (for the most part) the words will bear Action; we say (for the most part) for it is not always so. But on the other side, if the words do not sound foul, as to say, Thou buildest a Cottage, didst strike in the Church, or the like; or the punishment of the thing charged would be but light, As to be bound to the good behavior, or the like; or none at all, there (for the most part) it will not lie. And yet in this Case also, sometimes it will lie, Co. 4. 17. Kitch. 173. Co. 4. 19. Dyer 285. 37. But if any special loss happen to the Party, by the speaking of the words there, though the words in themselves be not Actionable, yet they may be Actionable in respect of the loss, M. 17 Car. B. R. As if one had said, Thou speakest against the Book of Common-Prayer, and thereby he was vexed in the Spiritual Court, Co. 4. 17. Marsh Rep. f. 114. pl. 115.

It is held somewhat confidently, the Action will lie in all the Cases, and for any of the words following, (viz.) Thou hast bewitched my cattle, [my milk] my beer, or any of my goods, M. 18 Jac. B. R. Sturdens Case. But it will not lie for saying, Thou hast bewitched my ware, that I can catch no fish.

But it lieth not for this, Thou art a Sorcerer or Inchanter, Brownl. 1. part. 8. 9. 14. 2 parts. 276.

It hath been agreed, that since the Statute of 1 Jac. an Action will lie for calling one Witch generally. It hath been said, it will not lie for saying, Thou art a Witch; and hast bewitched my childe; for the words shall be taken mitiori sensu, of anothers bewitching. See Quere of this, Hughes 341.

It lieth for saying, Thou hast a Bastard, Co. 4. 17. So for saying, Thou didst steal six pence, Hob. Rep. pl. 258. So for saying, Thou didst hire one [or send one] to my house to kill me, Trin. 33 Eliz. B. R. Suttons Case, adjudged. Or, Thou didst lie in wait to kill [or to rob] me, Pasche, 5 Jac. B. R. Or, Thou soughtest the life of J. S. if he be dead, adjudged, Mich. 7 Jac. Weblins Case. So for saying of a Woman, She is a Bawd and a Whore, and keepeth a house of Bawdry, Dame Bartlets Case, Trin. 38 Eliz. B. R. And Morgans Case, Trin. 16 Car. B. R. adjudged, and many others. See March. 212. pl. 249.

It is said it will lie for this, Thou didst report money was false, Finchesley 185.

It will lie for any of these speeches, Thou art a forger of false Deeds [or writings, or thou hast forged a Feoffment,] Bond, Lease, or Release, Dyer 285. 37. Pasche, 39 Eliz. B. R. Wades Case. Or, Thou art a forger of writings, 39 Eliz. B. R. Goodals Case. Or, This is a forged Deed made by J. S. under a hedge, Sir G. Reynels Case. Or, Thou hast forged the will of J. S. adjudged, Pasche, 7 Car. B. R. Mackenists Case. Or, Thou hast sued out a Writ against me, and got a counterfeite Warrant of thine own making, adjudged, M. 20 Jac. B. R. Stones Case. Or, Thou camest with a counterfeite Commission, when he had a good Commission, Yorks Case. Or, Thou hast forged a Re- a Record in Abergavein Court, M. 7 Car. Co. B.R. adjudged. For this is punishable by the Common-Law, though not by the Statute. But not for saying, Thou art a forging knave, Goldsb. 25. pl. 5.

It is held somewhat confidently, That it will not lie in all the Cases, or for any of the words following, Thou art an Extortioner, or thou art a peace breaker, common Quarreller, suspected to be a common Pilferer, common Rioter, a common Libeller, or thou art a common Champertor, or thou art a common maintainer of Suits, thou art a Recusant, or men cannot have their Cattle go in the Common, but J. S. killeth them with dogs, Dyer 118. Thou hast robbed my Orchard, thou hast spoken against the Book of Common-Prayer, or thou hast set up an unlawful Cottage against the Statute, thou hast made a forcible entry into Land, or thou didst strike a man in a Church with a Weapon, thou art a Forestaller, Regrator, or Ingrosser.

It would have lien, when villenage was here, for saying, Thou art a villain to J. S. 2 Ed. 4. 5:

It lieth for any of these speeches, I will prove thee [or I can prove thee] perjured, M. 7 Jac. B. R. Roberts Case. Or, Thou wast perjured in the Star-Chamber, or, thou wast committed for perjury there, Co. 4 19. Hob. Rep. pl. 107. 15. Or, Thou perjured beast, adjudged. 18 Jac. B.R. Bensons Case. Or, Thou art perjured, or wast perjured, adjudged. M. 25 Eliz. B. R.

It lieth for saying, Thou art a perjured man, 25 Eliz. B. R. adjudged. It will not lie for these words, Thou hast got thy living by swearing and forswearing, adjudged. M. 9 Jac. B. R. So, Thou hast taken a false oath [or, hast forsworn thy self] in the Kings-Bench Court, the Leet of S. or any other Court of Record, Harisons Case, B. R. As, Thou tookest a false Oath in the Bishops Court at Excester, or in the Leet of S. or in the Quarter-Sessions at Gloucester. 38 Eliz. Adjudged. Castlemains Case, Co. 4. 15. Hob. Rep. pl. 346. 360. One said, Thou art forsworn and hast taken a false oath at Hereford Assizes against John at stile. The opinion of the Court in this Case, was, That the Action would not lie: Otherwise, if he had said, Thou art forsworn, and hast taken a false Oath at the Assizes against such a one, with Averment, That he was sworn in the cause, March. Rep. f. 7. pl. 17.

It lieth for saying, It is a main-sworn man, Brownl. 1. part. 9, 10, 11, 14, 15.

So it lieth for saying, You have caused J. S. to perjure himself, adjudged. Brownl. 1. part. 2: See Part. 2. 49.

If one say of a witness presently after a tryal, He hath now forsworn himself, adjudged; it lieth for this, Hughs Rep. 445.

It lieth for this saying, He was forsworn in Chancery, and the Lord Keeper committed him for it, adjudged. Hughs Rep. 444. But not for saying, He is a proper witness, he will swear any thing. But the words must import the perjury was committed in a Court of Record and judicially there. And if the words will not bear, it cannot be strained by an Innuendo to it. As if the words be, Thou wast forsworn, the Plaintiff cannot make them Actionable by an Innuendo, in the Quarter-Sessions of S. and in the service of the Court, Trin. 19 Jac. B. R. And 48 Eliz. B. R. So it will not lie for saying, Thou wast forsworn at Horsley Court, Innuendo the Court Leet there, for it may be the Court Baron there. And yet it is said, the contrary hath been adjudged. So neither will it lie for saying, Thou wast forsworn in the Kings-Bench; for it may be the Prison so called, not the Court, M. 42 Eliz.

It lieth for saying, Thou hast procured one to commit perjury, or, thou art a procurer of perjury, 25 Eliz. B. R. Or, thou hast suborned one to come ten miles to be perjured, and given him money to do it, Harris Case. Pasche, 5 Jac. B. R. But if the words import he did it not, contra.

It lieth for charging one sworn in a Court upon a Voyer dire, as well as upon an Issue that he was forsworn; for this perjury is punishable by the Common Law, M. 7 Car. Cawdreys Case: So it is thought of these words, You were forsworn in your Answer in the Court of Request; for this is punishable by the Pillory. So it is said, it lieth for this, He hath delivered an untruth in a material thing in the Star-Chamber. Sed Quere. But not for saying, He hath delivered an untruth in his answer in the Chancery, 38, 39 Eliz. Browns Case.

See B. 13.

It will lie for saying, Thou art a forsworn fellow; for by thy false oath thou hast hanged as true a man as thy self, Adjudg. Rais Case, and 39 Eliz. Brooks Case. So for saying, I. S. is mean sworn, with an Averment that it doth signifie perjured in the place where the words were spoken. Adjudged, B. R.

We have shewed before, that it lieth for saying, Thou wast forsworn in the Leet at W. [or in Hereford-Affizes, or in the Quarter-Sessions at Gloucester;] and that is out of question. But it is said by some, it will not lie for saying, Thou wast forsworn at the Leet at W. or at Hereford-Affizes, or at the Quarter-Sessions at Gloucester; for it may be in ordinary discourse, and extrajudicially; and a Judgment is cited, M. 38, 39 Eliz. B. R. Willis Case, to be given accordingly: Yet I cannot but doubt it, for the vulgar acceptance is alike in both cases; and there is a Record of a Judgment on this side against the other Judgment, 38, 39 Eliz. Cockins Case. And Hil. 1 Jac. B. R. it was ruled to lie for this, Thou hast taken a false oath in the Quarter-Sessions at Gloucester. If I say to one coming out of a Court where he was sworn, Thou hast forsworn thy self, it is said to be actionable, Harrisens Case. And yet it is said, if I say to a man giving his oath in a Court, You are forsworn, and say not, in your testimony in this cause, or the like, this is doubted, M. 7 Car. B. R. Cawdrys Case. This distinction seems to me a very nice one. Quare bien. It lieth not for saying, Thou art a false forsworn man, 25 Eliz. B. R.

It is said it lieth not for saying, Thou art a common Swearer, or thou art a common haunter of Ale-houses, or thou art a common fighter, or thou art a Sabbath-breaker, or thou art a common Whoremonger, or thou art a common Whore, or thou art a Whore, a Whoremaster, or a Bawd, or thou art a Harlot, or thou art a common breaker of the Peace, or a common Affrayer, or thou art an Adulterer, or thou art a Fornicator, or thou didst lie with I. S. or I. S. doth lie with thee, [or use thy body] M. 39 Eliz. B. R. Or thou art a Queen, or thou art a Thievish whore, Adjudg. Hil. 17 Jac. B. R. Nor for this, Thou art the Hackney-whore of I. S. Bodins Case: Or, thou wast rid up and down stairs, M. 9 Jac. B. R. And yet for many of these one may be bound to the good behavior, and for others of them punished by Fine or great penalty. See March. 2: part 5. It lieth for saying to a woman, She keeps a Bawdy-house, or house of Bawdry. But it lieth not for saying, She is a Bawd or Whore, albeit she be married. And yet in London by a special custom it lieth for these words, Trin. 17 Car. B. R. March f. 107. Brownl. 1 part, 162.

It lieth not for saying, Thou art a false forsworn Knaave, or thou hast forsworn thy self, M. 7 Jac. B. R. Nor for this, Thou hast but one Manner, and thou hast got it by swearing and forswearing, Co. 4. 15. Nor for saying, He was detested for perjury in the Star-chamber, Co. 4. 16. Nor for this, Thou art a perjured Knaave, that is to be proved by a stake parting the land of A. and B. Co. 4. 19. So if in a cause depending betwixt A. and B. in the Kings Bench, certain Affidavits being openly read in the Court, the Defendant saith openly, There is not a word true in them, as I can prove by twenty witnesses; this is not actionable, Pasch. 15 Car. B. R. Moltons Case. March Rep. f. 20. pl. 45.

It lieth not for saying, I have matter enough against him; for I. S. hath found forgery against him, and can prove it, Adjudg. Hob. Rep. pl. 395. Nor for this, Thou hast forged a Writing, Hob. Rep. pl. 3. Nor for this, Thou gettest thy living by false Writs, Adjudged. Nor for saying, Thou hast made a false Bond (or a false Deed) Pasch. 39 Eliz. B. R. Nor for this, Thou art a Varlet, and hast suppressed thy brothers will to deceive others of Legacies, Trin. 17 Jac. B. R. Godfreys Case. Nor for this, This is the writing of I. S. he hath forged this Warrant, Hob. Rep. pl. 3. For these words in these Cases are too general and incertain to bear an Action. So if one say to another, Whereas I. S. had made and sealed to him a Bill for 10l. thou didst shew me the Bill released, and after sealed, thou didst forge that seal; no Action will lie for this, Hob. Rep. pl. 48. Nor for this, Thou hast made the Great Seal. Nor for this, Thou hast made false Records, and dost verifie them. Adjudged.

It is very much doubted whether the Action will lie, or not lie, in all the Cases, or for any of the words following; Thou art a common Drunkard, a common Rioter: And for this it is yet said, it hath been ruled, it will lie, M. 8 Car. B. R. Stones Case. Or, Thou

Thou art a common Night-walker, or thou art a common Evef-dropper, or thou art a common Barretor, or a common Hedg-breaker; for, for these a man may be bound to the good behavior.

But most men incline that these words are not actionable, Thou art a branded Rogue, M. 19 Jac. B.R. Harrisons Case. And yet the better opinion was, that it will not lie for this, Thou hast bought Titles, Hares Case. Thou hast hired one to rob me; or thou art a setter of thieves to rob me; or, thou keepest men with intent to rob me; or, thou keepest men to rob me, Hil. 13 Jac. B.R. But if I be robbed, these are dangerous words. But to say, Thou keepest men which do rob me, or which have robbed me, contrâ.

And yet it is held, that for most of these words in this last rank, if they be spoken in reference to mens Trades, &c. or if any special loss can be averred to come to the party by the speaking of them, that then they may be actionable. Co. 4. 15, 17, 20 M. 19 Jac. B.R. Harrisons Case.

It is held somewhat clearly, it will lie for this, If one say to a Lord of a Mannor, Thou art a cozening knave, and keepest cozening Courts to cozen men of their Fines, 4 Jac. B.R.

Which tend to a mans disgrace and reproach only.

It is held somewhat clearly, it will not lie for these words, and in these Cases following: Thou art a Varlet; or, thou art a Rogue; or, thou art a Rascal; or, thou art of evil name; or, thou art a Villain; or, thou art a Slanderer; or, thou art a Cheater; or, thou art a cheating Knave; or, thou art a Pillory-Knave; or, thou art a cozening Knave, a Vermine of the earth. a false brother, 25 Eliz. B.R. Or, thou art a false fellow; or, thou art a Lyar; or, thou art a Conspirator; or, thou art a Railer; or, thou art a sower of discord; or, thou art a Malefactor; or, thou art a Miscreant; or, thou art a Drunken fellow; or, thou art a Bastard; or, thou art an Heretick; or, thou art a Schismatick; or, thou art an Hypocrite of the Church; or, thou didst famish thy last wife with thy wretchedness; or, thou art an Extortioner. It will not lie for saying, Thou art a cozening Knave, and hast cozened me of a hundred pounds, and I will make thee stand on the Pillory for it, Adjudg. 30 Eliz. B.R. Nor for this, (unless it be of a Goldsmith) I will prove thee a Cozener, for selling me a Saphir for a Diamond, Brownl. 2 part. 100. Nor for this, Thou gettest thy living by cozening, or, thou hast cozened I.S. in buying Saddles for him, Pasch. 27 Car. B.R. Nor for this, Thou hast cozened me and all my kindred, 18 Eliz. B.R. Nor for this, Thou art a false Knave, and hast cozened me and my two kinsmen, Adjudg. 26 Eliz. B.R. Nor for this, Thou hast cozened all the Town of Coventry, Adjudged. So it lieth not for saying, He is a very bad fellow, for he made I. S. drunken in the night, and cozened him of a thousand marks, Goldsb. 125. pl. 12. It lieth not for saying of any man, He is a Papist, and hath a Pardon from the Pope, and can help you to such a one, if he will. Or thus, He is an arrant Papist, and, it were well if all such were hanged for they would have the Crown from the Kings head, if they durst, Brownl. 2 part. 166. To say, a man is a Recusant, or received a Recusant-Priest, or hath committed a Riot, or the like words, that, if true, would bring one in question and danger upon a penal Law; with Averment of special damage by them, will bear Action, otherwise not. See March. f. 114, 115. and Brownl. 1 par. 9, 11, 12. It will not lie for saying, Thou art a Papist, and hadst a Pardon from the Pope, Brownl. 2 par. 166. It will not lie for saying, Thou art a Hornsby, and a Cuckoldly knave, Trin. 9 Jac. Palmers Case. Nor for this, Thou hast cozened the Earl of Hartford of as much as thou art worth, Trin. 9 Jac. B.R. Tucks Case, Curia.

It is very doubtful whether it will, or will not lie in these following Cases; Thou didst hold up thy hand at the Bar, or thou hast deserved hanging, M. 4 Jac. B.R. It is in my power to hang thee, 7 Jac. B.R. Thou didst deserve hanging, Trin. 16 Car. B.R. Or, Thou deservedst the pillory, or hast deserved to have thine ears nailed to the pillory, Pasch. 37 Eliz. B.R.

To me there seems great reason, that these five last should bear an Action; for they necessarily imply the doing of such a thing as hath deserved it: yet the current Opinion and Cases go the other way.

And yet it is held for many, if not for any of these words, if any special loss can be averred to come to the Plaintiff by them, that he may have this Action for the speaking of them; also many of these words having reference to a man in his Office or

Trade,

Of an Averment in this Action, and where and what Averment is necessary, and what other thing must be shewed in the Declaration to maintain the Action, or not.

Trade, are actionable, Co. 4. 15, 17, 20. M. 19 Jac. B. R. Harrissons Case.

It matters not whether the Plaintiff set forth all the circumstantial words as they were spoken, so as he set forth the very words truly. As if he set forth the talk be, Will you be present at such a Trial between A. and B. and in truth it was between R. and B. (or the like) and he say, I'll warrant you B. dare not be there, for he is broken. Hil. 17 Jac. B. R. Johnsons Case.

An Action will lie for these words, I will justifie that Barns is accessory to the Burglary for which C. D. was hanged, without averring that he was hanged for such a Burglary, Trin. 9 Jac. B. R. Adjudg. Barns and Hunts Case.

If an Action be brought for saying words, as, Thou hast strained my Mare, art mean sworn, or the like, there must be an Averment that the words have such a meaning in that Country; but this is confidently denied by others. See in March. f. 18. The safe way is to aver it.

If an Action be brought for saying, A man hath killed I. S. and he sue for this slander, it need not be averred, that the party said to be killed is dead, Adjudg. B. R. Co. 4. 16. Hob. Rep. p. 11. And this seems to me clear Law, yet hath been much opposed, March. Rep. 109. pl. 187.

If the slander be upon a Report, it must be averred that there was no such Report, Hil. 4 Jac. B. R. Lady Morrissons Case; and Pasch. 42 Eliz. Co. B. Morleys Case, adjudged.

If an Action be brought for saying, Thou wast in the gaol at S. for robbing, &c. he needs not aver that he was not in gaol, but this is the best pleading. Sprat and Hayns Case. To call one Bankrupt, if one bring Action, he must aver he is a Tradesman.

By the better opinion, this Action will lie for a slander in another tongue, or by a strange word, without averment of the meaning of the words, Hob. Rep. pl. 165, 268. March. f. 18. But an Averment of special damage is not necessary, in case where the words touch or concern a mans life, liberty, or member, or any corporal punishment, or which scandal a man in his Office or Trade, or which charge him with any great infectious disease, by reason of which he must be separate from humane society. But if they be in scandal of a mans Title, or in other cases, there must be an allegation of particular damage; yet the best way in all these Cases is to allege some special damage, if the Case will bear it.

If any words be spoken (in themselves not actionable) of a young woman or man, charging them with Incontinencie or otherwise, by which they lose their match; or of any man, by which he loseth an office, service, or preferment he stands for; his loss of the match, or office, &c. must be specially averred, or else it is not good, Pasc. 15 Car. B. R. Axes Case, Sandersons Case, Trin. 17 Car. Co. B.

So if any words of passion only, not actionable, be spoken; as to say, A man is forsworn, he is a Rogue, Villain, or the like; if any Action be brought upon them, it must be maintained by a special Averment of loss, Co. 4. 15.

There are other words which concern matter meerly spiritual, and determinable in the Ecclesiastical Court only; as for calling a man a Bastard, a Heretick, a Schismatick, an Advouterer, a Fornicator; for calling of a woman a Whore, or charging her with any particular act of Incontinencie, or the like. Yet in these Cases, with an Averment of a particular damage, an Action will lie at the Common-Law, as it is adjudged in Anne Davis Case, Co. 4. 17. a. & f. 20. a. 27 H. 8. 14. Regist. f. 54.

By Popham Chief Justice, if one say of a woman that is an Inholder, That she hath a great infectious disease, by which she loses her Guests, an Action will lie. This must be taken with an Averment of that particular damage; otherwise an Action will not lie, unless the disease be such for which she ought to separate herself, or to be separated by the Law from common society, Co. 4. 17.

Axe and Moods Case cited before; The Plaintiff being a Dyer brought an Action for these words, Thou art not worth a groat; Adjudged that the words were not actionable, because that many a man in his beginning is not worth a groat, and yet hath good credit with the world, Pasch. 15. Car. B. R. But in this Case it was agreed, that if the Plaintiff had averred specially that he was thereby damnified, and had lost his credit, credit, so that none would trust him, with such an averment the Action would have layen.

The brother of the Defendant spake these words to the Plaintiff, Thou thief, thou Gaol-bribe, thou hast stolen a peece of silver from my master: and hereupon the Defendant spake these words, That which my brother spake is true, I will justifie it. And in this case it was agreed, that Action will not lie for them, without averment that he had notice of his brothers words. Brownl. 2 par. 100.

In the Case of the Foreman of a Shoemakers Shop, cited before, for these words, It is no matter who hath him, for he will cut him out of doors; the Plaintiff averred, that the common acceptation of these words inter Calcearios is, that he will beggar his Master and make him run away, and shewed a special damage by the speaking these words, and it was adjudged that the Action would lie, which I conceive was only for the particular damage: For to say of a Servant, That he doth cheat, cozen, or defraud his Master, or that he will beggar his Master, or the like, will not bear an Action without an averment of a particular damage. M. 15 Car. B.R.

And in this case it was said by the Court, that for some words an Action will lie without an averment of any particular damage, as for calling of a man Thief, Traitor, and the like: And some words will not bear an Action without an averment of a particular damage; as if a man shall say of another, That he kept his wife basely, and starved her, these words of themselves will not bear an action; but if the party of whom they were spoken were to be married to another, and by these words is hindred; in such case, with an averment of the particular damage, an action will lie.

So likewise in the Case of Dicks and Fenne, which I cited before, where one said of the Plaintiff, being a Brewer, That he would give a peck of mault to his Mare, and lead her to the water to drink, and he should pifs as good Beer as the Plaintiff brewed: It was resolved that the words themselves were not actionable, because of the impossibility of them; but it was agreed by the Court, that if there had been a special damage alleged, as loss of custom, or the like, the action would have layen, M. 15 Car. B. R.

Haws Case cited likewise before; one said of him, that he had spoken against the Book of Common-Prayer, and said, That it was not fit to be read in the Church; for which he brought his action, and shewed how that by reason of the speaking of these words by the Defendant, he was cited into the Ecclesiastical Court, and had paid and expended several sums, &c. Adjudged that the words themselves were not actionable, because if they had been true, they charge him only with an offence against a penal Law, which doth not inflict corporal punishment, but for non-payment of penalty, M. 17 Car. B.R. But it was resolved, that for the particular damage the action would lie. See Brownl. 1 par. 10. 13. 2 par. 100. 129.

That in all Cases for words, where there is any thing that is the cause or ground of the Action, or tends necessarily to the maintenance of it, in such Case the Action will not lie, without that thing be expressly averred to be, or not to be, as the Case requireth, Haslewood and Garrets Case cited before; Whosoever is he that is falsest Thief, and strongest in the County of Salop, whatsoever he hath stolen, or whatsoever he hath done, Thomas Haslewood is falsest then he: Resolved that the words were actionable, with an averment that there were Felons within the County of Salop; but fault of such averment, the Judgment given in the Common-Pleas was reversed in this Court. Pasch. Jac. B.R.

Note Reader, if there were no Felons in that County, (which will rather be intended, if it be not averred that there were some) then the speaking of the words could be no slander to the Plaintiff, and so no action can lie. Hob. Rep. 309. Blands Case cited before: He brought an action against A. B. for saying, That he was indicted for Felony at a Sessions holden, &c. and did not aver that he was not indicted; and after a Verdict for the Plaintiff, Judgment was stayed, because there was no averment, ut supra. Note, if he were indicted, which he doth tacitely admit, yet no cause of Action, for the words in themselves are not actionable, Hob. pl. 2. 9.

Johnson against Dyer; the Defendant having communicated with the Father of the Plaintiff, said to him, I will take my oath that your son stole my Hens; and the Plaintiff Plaintiff did not aver that he was his Son, or that he had but one Son, and therefore adjudged, that the Action would not lie in this Case, if he were not his son, then no cause of action, M. 15 Car. B.R.

Self. 15.

One Clark said that he had a son in Nottinghamshire who had his Chest picked, and one hundred pounds taken out of it, in one Locksmiths house, and I thank God I have found the thief who it is, it is one that dwelleth in the next house, called Robert Kingston. Upon which, Kingston brought an action, and had a verdict, and it was moved in Arrest of Judgment, because that he did not aver that he dwelt in the next house, Pasche 7 Jac. B. R. Crook. One said that Pritchards man robbed him, who brought an action, and did not aver that he was Pritchards man, and therefore it was held that the action would not lie, and the Justices in this case would not give Judgment.

Non constat in this Case, that the Plaintiff was the party of whom the words were spoken; for there might be another of the same name dwelling elsewhere; and therefore he ought to aver that he dwelt in the next house, that he may be certainly intended to be the same person of whom the words were spoken. See Brownl. 7. part. 13: 2. part. 100.

What shall be said a good bar or plea in this Action.

The Defendant may plead not guilty; or if the Plaintiff sue upon some of the words, when all together, are not actionable, the Defendant must set them forth at large, (Co. 4. 13. 19.) as he spake them, and traverse, or justify, or plead not guilty to the rest of the words, as the Case is. Co. New Book of Entries, f. 24. a. 25. a. 26. Or, if the words be true, and he be able to prove it, he may justify the speaking of them; as if I say 7. S. was perjured, I may shew he was so in the Star-chamber; or he is a thief, I may shew he was attainted of Petit Larceny.

Justification.

It is not a good Justification for calling one Murderer, to say there was a murder done, and the Plaintiff was indicted for it, or that the common fame was he did it: Dyer 236. Broo. 127. New Book of Entries, 26, 27. Nor can one justify for charging one with a Felony after he hath a pardon, Hob. Rep. pl. 106. 71. To say a man was indicted for Felony at S. it may be justified, if it be true, Hob. Rep. pl. 289. but the words are not actionable. So in a charge of Perjury, it is not a good justification to say, he swore such a thing in a Court falsely, unless he add this, knowing it to be false. M. 38, 39 Eliz. B. R. Willis Case. See Brownl. 1. part. 10. 11. 14. 13. 2. part. 49. 272.

If one call a man Thief, he may justify it, for that he stole a sheep, Hob. Rep. f. 258. 27 H.8. 22. If 7. S. say to another, 7. S. is a Thief to 7. S. and to me, and in an Action brought by him, I justify for a Felony done to me onely, this is not sufficient, for the charge is of a double Felony, and the justification to a single Felony, M. 21 Jac. B.R. See Brownl. 1. part. 2. 5. 7. 13: 2. part. 100.

Where the Verdict of the Jury will maintain the Declaration and the Action, or not.

That where the words that are found, do not agree with the Declaration in the substantial and essential form, that in such case they do not warrant the Declaration: But if they do agree in the substantial and essential form, though they agree not in every word, yet they do well warrant the Declaration, and by consequence maintain the Action.

Sydenham against Man, for these words, If Sir John Sydenham might have his will, he would kill all the true Subjects in England, and the King too; and he is a maintainer of Papistry, and Rebellious persons. The Defendant pleaded other words, and traversed the speaking of the words Modo & forma, &c. The Jury found that he spoke these words, (viz.) I think in my Conscience that if Sir John Sydenham might have his will, he would kill, &c. and finde all the subsequent words before alledged. In this Case, it was resolved against the Defendant, Hob. Rep. pl. 252. pl. 213. But this Case notwithstanding is doubted by some.

Fenner against Mutton, in an Action upon the Case for words, which were thus, Nicholas Fenner procured eight or ten of his neighbors to perjure themselves; the Defendant pleaded not guilty; and the Jury finde that the Defendant said, That Nicholas Fenner had caused eight or ten of his neighbors to perjure themselves, M. 4 Jac. B.R. This was doubted by Tanfield Justice, and by him held not a sufficient Verdict to maintain the words.

Chipsam

Chipsam against Jeek for these words; Chipsam is a Thief, for he hath stolen a Lamb from A. and Geese from B. and killed them in my ground. Issue was joined whether the Defendant spake the words modo & forma, &c. the Jury find that the Defendant said, That the Plaintiff was a Thief, for he hath stolen a Lamb from A. and killed it in my ground; but they find he spake nothing of the Geese: yet it was resolved, that the finding of the Jury did well warrant the Declaration of the Plaintiff. Hil 3 Jac: B. R.

Norman and Symons Case, the Plaintiff brought an Action for words, and declared that they were spoken falso & malitiose; the Jury find the words spoken falso & injuriose, and it was adjudged that the Action would not lie, because the finding of the Jury doth not warrant the Declaration in the substantial form of it. Trin. 7 Car. B. R.

Burgis brought an Action for these words, Burgis is a maintainer of Thieves, and a strong Thief himself: Issue was joined whether the Defendant spake the words modo & forma, and the Jury found all the words except the word [strong] and in this Case the Plaintiff had Judgment, 6 E. 6. Dyer f. 75. 21. Here we may observe, that though every word alleged in the Declaration be not found, yet the essential and substantial form of the words being found, that is sufficient to maintain the Declaration. This, I say, you may observe, not only by this Case, but the Cases also before put.

Barber brought an Action against Hawley for these words, John Barber and his children be false Thieves, men cannot have their Cattell going upon the Common, but they will kill them and eat them, &c. Issue was joined whether the Defendant spake the words modo & forma, and the Jury found that he spake these words, viz. Men cannot have their Cattell going upon the Common, but John Barber and his children will kill them with Barbers dogs; in this Case it was adjudged for the Defendant.

The Action is brought for saying, I know him to be a Thief; and the Defendant pleaded other words absque hoc, and the Jury find he say, I think him to be a Thief; this is not sufficient. See Hob. Rep. pl. 213.

If one say to another of a woman passing by, She is a Witch, and hath bewitched my child [innuendo the Plaintiff] and Verdict is given for the Plaintiff, now it is out of question. Vasch. 18 Jac. B. R. Roberts Case.

If the Declaration say, that the Defendant spake of the Plaintiff these words, Eyres [innuendo the Plaintiff] is a Thief, and Verdict be given hereupon for the Plaintiff, this is good and made certain. Eyres Case, adjudged M. 7 Jac. B. R.

If one bring this Action for divers words, whereof some are, and some are not actionable, and the Jury assents damages for all together, this is Error and cause to arrest the Judgment. But if it appear they do distinguish them, then it is well, 25 Eliz. B. R. Out of all this take notice, it is good policie, when one lays his Action for words, to suppose the Action for divers slanders, as for words spoken at several times and several ways; that in one of the Charges the Plaintiff may be sure to hit the very words, or the substance thereof.

St. B. 16.

Of an Action of the Case upon an Assumpsit.

AN Assumpsit is nothing but a voluntary promise made by word of mouth only, Assumpsit, what by which a man doth assume or take upon him to do or pay any thing to another: New Terms of the Law. it is.

If it be in Writing and by a Deed, it is of another consideration; we meddle not with this. But an Assumpsit seemeth to differ from an Agreement, but as the Genus and Species: For an Assumpsit is but a special kind of agreement, and every Executory Contract hath an Assumpsit in it, Co. 4. 44.

There are two considerable parts of it; the Consideration of the Assumpsit, and the Assumpsit or Promise it self.

This Action of the Case upon an Assumpsit (as the Contract) is either express, as when one for good cause doth promise that himself or some other shall pay money, make a House, seal a Bond, make a Lease, or the like: Or implied, and supplied by the

the Law, as in every Executory contract there is an Assumpsit implied: Co. 3. 19. 4. 94. 49. Plow. 308.

They that are exprefs, are also absolute or conditional: And these are also some of them, such as have a consideration called Quid pro quo in them; and some of them are without consideration called a bare or naked promise, which is where a man bargaineth or selleth his lands or goods, or promiseth to give one money or a horse to build a house, or do any thing by a day, and there is no recompence appointed to him for the doing thereof; this is void, and no Action lieth for the not doing thereof; for the rule is, Ex nudo pacto non oritur actio. Also these Assumpsits are either Real, or Personal.

Every Promise must have a Consideration; and that must be of some benefit to him that makes it, or disadvantage to him to whom it is made. March. 202. pl. 143.

What shall be
said a good implied Assumpsit, or Assumpsit in Law, upon which an
lie, or not.

If I intreat one to be bound for me, there is in this an implicate Assumpsit that I shall save him harmless; and upon this if he be molested, he may have this Action. 2 Car. per Just. Richardson at Northampton-Assizes; for the Assumpsit is implied.

If any goods besides money be delivered to one to deliver over to another, or to the use of another, or to be employed to any other purpose, or on condition that if he do such a thing, he shall keep them; in all these and such like cases, some think there is an Assumpsit implied, upon which this Action will lie in case of breach of the trust. Dyer 21, 22, &c.

If I bid one do work for me, and do not promise any thing, the Law makes it, and he must say it was worth so much, and that which he deserves is recoverable in this Action. Trin. 8 Car.

Every Executory Contract doth imply an Assumpsit: So every Debt that is not upon a Specialty (or for Rent upon a Lease) but which may be turned into Damage, as upon an Account, or upon a Buying or an Agreement, hath an implied Promise, and the Plaintiff may say that the Defendant did promise to pay it, and make the Debt the Consideration. See divers Cases infra.

An Executor cannot be charged in account for any Receipt or Occupation by the deceased, nor in debt upon the Contract of the deceased; but an action of the Case it is thought will lie in the first, and it is clear will lie in the last Case, upon the implicate Contract. Co. 4. 8. 94. 133. As if one receive my money to account, and he and I cast it up and agree in certain what is due, and then he die; in this case it seems I may have this Action against the Executor or Administrator, albeit I cannot have an Account. Hil. 13 Jac. per Ch. Justice.

A bare submission to an Award without any exprefs promise, is sufficient to yield this Action upon the Assumpsit in Law. Adjudged. Neals Case, M. 37, 38 Eliz. B.R. and in Trin. 18 Jac. B.R. Brooms Case. And so in divers other Cases.

What shall be
said a good exprefs Assumpsit, on which this Action
will lie, or not.
For the man-

Sell. 17.
Matter.

As touching this point, the manner and the matter is considerable. As to the manner, it matters not in what form of words the Assumpsit is made, so the sense be clear; and therefore if one promise me twenty pounds when I have done a work, or to do a work, or if I do a work, or so as I do a work, all these are good Assumpsits, Plow. 5. 305. So if one promise me twenty pounds, if I marry his daughter, or with the marriage of his daughter, these are good, Plow. 305. Or if you will satisfie me, I will do such a work.

As to the matter, it is considerable together, or apart. Together; and as to this, this must be known. 1. That the whole agreement must be consummate. If A. and B. agree, that A. shall lend B. twenty pounds for a time, and for this that B. shall mortgage to A. such Land upon request; and after A. upon request of B. deliver wares to C. for part of this twenty pounds, and hereupon B. doth promise to accept it for part of the mony, or to redeliver it to A. upon request, this Contract is perfect and good to give action, Old book of Entries, f. 4. So if A. owe B. one hundred pounds, and C. being a Clothworker to A. having clothes of his in his house, and they three agree that B. shall have these clothes for his money, and that C. shall deliver them, this is good, and sufficient. Adjudged. So one possessed of a Field of Corn, agreeth with another, that he shall have all the Corn there for Twenty pounds, to be paid him at Michaelmas next, Co. 4. 92. But if the agreement be onely in inchoation and not perfect, no action will lie upon it. And therefore if two speak together about an agreement, and they in the midst of their discourse break off, and say they will talk further of it to morrow, no Action can be brought upon any of the conference of this day. See Contract, chap. 15. sect. 4.

If two be in Speech about marriage between their Children, and one say to the other, I intend to give my daughter One hundred pounds to him that shall marry her with my consent, this is imperfect. 2. It must be sensible and certain.

If an agreement be between me and another, that for Ten pounds paid he shall give me a Horse, or a Watch such a day; this is good and certain enough, Fitz. Debit. 89. So if the agreement be that he for good cause shall make good such a house, this is good, and shall be taken for repair of it, M. 2 Jac. B. R. So if the agreement be about a horse for Twenty shillings in hand, and Ten pounds more to be paid at the death or marriage of the buyer, for which he shall become bound with sufficient surety by their writing obligatory, that for this, the seller will deliver the horse upon request; this is certain enough and good, Hob. Rep. pl. 79. But if the agreement be such as cannot be made certain and sensible, it is void. And therefore if the agreement be, to save harmless, and not for what, or against whom, this is void. So if it be agreed between A. and B. that A. shall keep B. without damage against J. S. for ten pounds, in which the Obligee is bound to the Obligor; or, if the Assumpsit be, that A. shall pay to B. his part of the sum of moneys that shall be levied for the trying of the customs of M. these are all insensible and void, on which no Action will lie. See Co. 1c. 102. 76. Dyer 356. 3. It must agree. If one in consideration that I have given and delivered to him one horse, and have promised unto him, that upon twenty pounds paid to me, I will deliver him such an Indenture, and he assume to pay me this twenty pound at Michaelmas; this is not repugnant, but good to give Action for the Twenty pound at Michaelmas, if not paid, Co. 5. 37. But if the agreement be repugnant and contrary to it self, it is void. If it be agreed between A. and B. that A. shall do such a work, and B. shall give so much for it, but A. shall not sue for the money: this is void, and will not binde on either side before the work be done. But after the work is done, it may perhaps bear an Action, Queres, 7 H. 6. 44. 21 H. 7. 24. 3.

Assumpsit insensible and uncertain.

In the matter considerable apart, there are three things to be considered. 1. The persons to the Assumpsit, and for or against whom this action doth lie. 2. The cause or consideration of it. 3. The promise it self.

As touching the persons to the Assumpsit, these things are to be known. 1. The persons that do promise, must be able in Law to Contract; otherwise the promise will not binde; and therefore regularly the Assumpsits of Infants, Women that have Husbands, and such like, do not binde; yet generally promises made to them are good. But see how and more of this point in Contract before. 2. A promise to the Wife is all one as if it were to the Husband; and therefore, if one say to my Wife, that if I will let A. out of prison, being there in execution for a debt owing to me, that if the prisoner pay it not to me by such a day, he will pay it; in this Case I alone without my Wife may sue him, 27 H. 8. 24. 3. If a promise be made to my Servant to my use, I may have an Action upon it, and suppose it to be made to my self, M. 36, 37 Eliz. B. R. Jordans Case. But of this, and of Contracts made by, or with Servants, for their Masters, enough already hath been spoken. But otherwise it is of Contracts made with a Stranger to my use; and therefore if there be Mother, Son, or Daughter, and the Mother having a Joynture on her Sons Land, the Son in consideration that his Mother doth surrender, doth assume with her to pay the Daughter One hundred pounds at a day; in this Case the Daughter (at least in a Court of Law) cannot sue for this Hundred pound, but the Mother must sue for it. And yet it is thought the Daughter may sue in a Court of Equity for it, Adjudged. Trin. 18 Jac. B. R. If one in consideration that I have paid him Ten pounds, assume to a stranger to assure me an Acre of Land, no Action will lie for me at Common Law upon this. But in a Court of Equity, happily I may have relief, Jolleys Case. Pasche, 9 Jac. B. R. by three Judges. 4. This Action lieth for an Executor or Administrator, upon a promise to the deceased. And if a man promise to pay money, or to pay that which is in the nature of a debt, or where the ground is a true debt, and he die before it be done, the Executor or Administrator shall be charged with it. Hob. Rep. pl. 278. Co. 9. 68. Plow. 182. But otherwise it is when it is to do some Collateral thing, as to build a house, or the like, or when it is to pay money in consideration of some Collateral thing, as in consideration of the enlargement of a man out of prison, or the like. And upon this difference it hath been oft adjudged, Trin. 3 Jac. B. R. yet see Co. 10. 77. That for the Assumpsit of the Testator to pay a debt or perform a duty, an Action of the Case lieth against the Executors, New Book of Entries, f. 1, 2. 5. If an Assumpsit be made by two or more, they must be sued together, and one of them cannot be sued alone, as long as the rest live. But if one of them die, the rest may be sued alone, M. 7 Jac. B. R. Curia.

Assumpsit by two or more to a person in certain.

If another and I be speaking about marriage between his Daughter and my Son, and in conference I use these words, That I shall give him One hundred pounds that shall marry my Daughter with my consent: No Action will lie upon this, though he do after marry my Daughter with my consent, Pasche, 3 Jac. B. R. Goldsmith ver. Weston.

In respect of the cause or consideration.

To make the cause or consideration of an Assumpsit good, it must have all these qualities. 1. It must be valuable, that is, it must import some gain to him that makes the promise, or (at the least) some loss to him to whom it is made, or both. But the proportion of the value is not considerable; for a penny, or pint of Wine, will as much engage a promise of One hundred pound, as more. Hob. Rep. pl. 6, 7. Trin. 7 Jac. B. R. Friends Case. Co. 10. 102: 76. But in that Case the Jury will probably give damage accordingly, as the cause is. And the Law is all one in this, when the Contract is in a writing, ora writing sealed and not delivered. But if it be in a writing sealed and delivered as a Bond or Bill, there the consideration is not at all material. Fitz. Debt. 126. Broo. Action of the Case, 40. But if there be two parts of the consideration, and one part is valuable, and the other not, it is good. But in a Non-Assumpsit both parts must be proved, or the Action will fail, M. 4 Jac. B. R. Lees Case; but care must be had in giving of damages, See Brownl. 2. part. 274.

S. B. 18.

If A. delivered to B. the eighth of May, One hundred French Crowns, and delivered also as many the ninth of May, and B. in consideration thereof did then and there assume to deliver six shillings in silver for every Crown upon a Non-Assumpsit, verdict for the Plaintiff, and entire damages, the Judgment was reversed; for the Assumpsit goeth onely to that which was last delivered. M. 42, 43 Eliz. Pilsworth and Seals Case.

2. The consideration must be lawful, for if the consideration moving the promise, be either Malum in se, or, malum prohibitum, it is void. And yet if part of the promise be lawful, and part unlawful, there it may be good. Dyer 359. Co. 30. 102.

3. If the consideration be Executory, there it must be duly performed, 9 H. 7. 13. otherwise the action will not lie. And therefore if one promise to me, so I will help him to gather his Tithe-Hay and Corn, he will pay me Ten pounds: If I help him to gather his Hay onely, I cannot recover the Ten pounds, M. 7 Jac. B. R. 8 H. 7. 13. See Brownl. 1. part. 8. 2. part. 137, 138, 279.

All these things are valuable and good considerations, money paid, or any valuable thing done, paid, or delivered to suffer a Tenant at will to hold the Land longer, M. 9 Jac. B. R. Coventrias Case. Loan of money, New Book of Entries, f. 1, 2. To marry ones childe or friend, New Book of Entries, f. 2. To Ear Land, Solicite Suits, to deliver one in prison on an Execution for debt, out of prison; to forbear a Suit for a certain time, to make, or give up, or release an estate or interest into Land, Plow. 20. Keth. 69. 77. To stand to an Award to be made, not to trouble a man upon a Judgment I have against him, Hofebours Case; to become bound as a surety with another, M. 9 Jac. B. R. to keep goods safe committed to him, Old Book of Entries, f. 9. To marry my Daughter or Kinswoman, or (as it seems) any other at the request of him that makes the promise. To make an Obligation; and finally, any thing which which for the matter of it may be good in a Promise, may be good in a Consideration. See for these things more, Brownl. 1 par. 41. 2 par. 274, 279.

In consideration that a stranger shall surrender a Lease to me at the request of the Plaintiff, and that the Plaintiff shall cancel an Indenture, is a good consideration, if it be done to produce an Action, Pasch. 9 Jac. B.R. Collins Case.

If A. be indebted to me, and for payment thereof deliver me goods, and C. in consideration that I will deliver him the goods, doth promise to pay me the money, this is a good promise. Brownl. 1 part, 3.

Tenant at will of Land sowed surrendreth to him in Reversion, and for this he promiseth; it seems this is no good consideration: but if he be a Tenant for any Term of years, it is otherwise. Brownl. 1 par. 6.

If A. owe to B. fourscore pounds, and A. in consideration that I will be bound with him for the money to B. promise to enter into a Bond of one hundred pounds to me, and I become bound with him, this is a good consideration to give an action upon his breach of promise. Adjudg. M. 9 Jac. B.R. Knevatts Case. So also a promise to do any such thing, may be a good consideration of another promise; for one promise may be a good consideration of another promise, if they be made together at one time, for otherwise they are both void. Hob. Rep. 16. 116. M. 2 Jac. Co. B. Somes Case, and M. 4 Jac. B.R. Cadels Case. Brownl. 1 par. 10.

If one for forty shillings paid, assume to deliver me forty quarters of corn at such a time and place for ten pounds to be then paid, this is good; and if I bring the money at the time and place, I may sue for the corn; if he bring the corn, he may sue for the money. Plow. 182. Co. 4. 91. Goods, or a promise of goods may be a good consideration for goods, or a promise for goods, as well as money. Fitz. Debs. 68. But if there be none of this in the Case, it is but Nudum pactum ex quo non oritur actio. One doth promise me in consideration that I will not enter a Caveat against the Probate of the Will of I.S. that he will pay me ten pounds, this is a good consideration, whether I have any cause to do so or not. Adjudged in the Exchequer-Chamber.

If A. and B. be bound in a Bond jointly and severally to pay money, and in truth A. is principal, and A. saith to B. Pay the money to the Obligee, and I will repay you; this is a good promise, and if B. do pay it, he may recover it again by this action. Adjudg. 9 Car. B.R.

If I have a Judgment against a man for twenty pounds, and I promise him that if he will pay me the money, I will give him five pounds, this is a good consideration to bind the promise; for it will cost me charge and pains to recover it. Trin. 38. Eliz. Dixon versus Adams. So if one take away my goods wrongfully, and I promise him, so he will let me have mine own goods, to give him ten pounds. Adjudg. Pool & Clifsons Case, temp. Car. R.

If one say to me, that if I will depose before the Maior of A. the truth of that which I do affirm, he will pay me twenty pounds, this is good; and if I do voluntarily depose it before the Maior, I may recover the money by this action. Hil. 38 El. Co. B.

If A. owe to B. twenty pounds, and C. say to A. Pay him his twenty pounds, and I will pay it to you again; this is a good consideration to make good the promise. Adjudg. M. 7 Car. B.R.

If one have a Judgment against me for one hundred pounds, and he promise me, so I will pay him fifty pounds, he will acknowledg satisfaction or release the execution of the hundred pounds by a day; this is a good consideration to give an Action, if it be not done. Adjudg. Cook & Harvies Case, and M. 38 Eliz. Co. B. Reynolds & Pynhams Case.

If one have goods delivered to him in pawn, and another desire him to deliver the goods pawned to him, and he will pay him the debt for which they were pawned, this is a good consideration; and the certainty of the goods need not be shewed in the count, as in case where goods are demanded or damage for them. Brownl. 2 part, 274. So a consideration to go to Westminster, to cure a poor man, or marry a poor woman, are good considerations.

If I be bound in a Bond of 20^l. to pay 10^l. by a day, and fail at the day, and after the Obligee bid me pay twelve pounds to I. S. and he will deliver me up the Bond by a day, day, this is good to give an Action if he do not deliver it. Harveys Case, 4 Jac.

If one that hath my Goods, promise me, so that I will let him have them for a moneth, that he will deliver them to me; this is a good consideration to uphold an Action against him, if he do not deliver them, Pasche, 37 Eliz. Co. B.R. May vers. Alvers.

These also are good considerations, That upon account between them, the Defendant was found so much in debt to the Plaintiff, Hob. Rep. pl. 117. So that he was in debt to him, and in consideration of forbearance promised to pay it, Co. 10. 77.

The Plaintiff declared, That the Defendant in an Account between them, was found in arrearages; and in consideration that the Plaintiff would defer the day of the payment of his debt, for a little time, he did assume to pay it; it was judged good, Goldsb. 48. pl. 6.

An Action was brought by Richard Body against A. and declared, That whereas K. Rawly was indebted to Body, and the said A. indebted to R. in Fifty pound, in consideration that the said K. R. allocavit eidem A. Fourteen pound, & promissit ei ad exonerandum eundem A. Fourteen pound, puncel. predict. Fifty pound; the Defendant did assume to pay the Fourteen pound. It was adjudged a good consideration, Goldsb. 49. pl. 8.

If the Executor or Administrator of one that did ow me money, in consideration thereof, and that he hath assets in his hands, assume to pay me such a day; this is a good consideration to make the promise actionable, especially if I give any time for it. But if there were no debt originally due, or no assets in their hands to pay it, some say no Action will lie, Co. 9. 93, 94. But Justice Hutton at Sarum Assizes, 21 Jac. held the Action will lie, though there be no assets, and without giving time; and so was it held in Barns Case, Pasche, 9 Jac. B. R. per cur.

If an Executor ow me Five pounds for the Testator, and buy of me Six Barrells of Beer, and in consideration hereof, promise to pay me for both; this is a good consideration for both, to charge him De bonis propriis, Trin. 37 Eliz. Co. B. R. Wheelers Case.

If A. ow B. One hundred pounds, and C. being a Clothworker to A. have clothes of his in his house, and they three agree that B. shall have these clothes for his money, and C. promise to deliver them; this is a good consideration to binde C. to deliver them, for hereby he shall be discharged against A. adjudged. Trin. 2 Jac. B. R. Warder versus Chapman.

If I demand Ten pounds of another, and he promise me, that if I can prove it to be a true debt, he will pay me; if I prove it as I may in the same Suit for it; this will be a good consideration, adjudged. M. 18 Jac. Stat. vers. Mary, Co. 11. 59. 10 Ed. 4. 11.

If a Scrivener promise me in consideration, that I will let him have the putting out of my money, that he will take good security for it; this is a good consideration, and makes a good Assumpsit, M. 7 Jac. B. R. Kellingworths Case.

If I deliver one Ten pounds to redeliver to me again, and he do not so, it seems I cannot have this Action for my relief, but I may have an Action of Account; but if there be a promise to redeliver it, perhaps this Action will lie, Hil. 37 Eliz. Co. B. R. Howdells Case.

If one in consideration of a Lease for years made by me, promise to pay me a sum of money; for this money I may have this action. But if for this he promise to pay me a yearly rent during the Lease, it seems I cannot have an Action of the Case, but my proper remedy is an Action of Debt, Lis. Brook, Sect. 452. Fitz. Debt. 129. Morgans Case, M. 18 Jac. B. R. And yet if I promise another the Herbage of my Ground for a year, and he promise me Twenty shillings for it, either of us may have this Action against the other, adjudged, M. 17 Jac. B. R. Sir George Marshalls Case.

If one promise me in consideration, he is indebted to me, so much rent reserved on a Lease for Land, that he will pay me by a day; this is not a good consideration; other-otherwise it is if it be for herbage, or for the forbearance of a Rent reserved on a Lease of Land, 14 Jac. B.R. Sir George Marshall's Case, adjudged, Hill. 9 Car. B.R. Bret and Heath's Case.

If one in consideration of Land sold to him by me, promise me Twenty pounds at a day certain : or I sell my Land for Twenty pounds to be paid me on a day certain ; in these cases I may have this Action for the money, though the Land be not assured ; for he may compel me in Chancery to assure it, 3 H. 7. 14. 2 H. 7. 12.

If I promise in consideration of a surrender to be made to me of such Land to pay Ten pounds, and a surrender is made, but it is not a good surrender in Law ; this is no good consideration to raise the Action, Hill. 37 Eliz. B. R. Sleight vers. Bateman.

If I buy Land, Trees, or Corn of a man for money, and he promise to make my assurance, or deliver the Trees or Corn by a day, and do not, or sell it to another, I may have this Action, 21 H. 7. 41. Dyer. 22. Co. 10. 130. Old Book of Entries, 6.

If I be seised of Copyhold Land in Fee, and am in debt to J. S. One hundred pounds, and lying very sick, I make W. L. my Executor, and declaring my minde to be to surrender it to the use of my Executor, to enable him the better to pay the debt, and L. S. (heir to the Copyhold) perswades me not to surrender, but to let the Land descend to him, and he assume to pay the Hundred pound to J. S. This is a good consideration to give this Action to the Executor, Hil. 9 Jac. Grayer's Case.

If I promise to one in consideration, he will be bound for my Friend, I will save him harmless ; this is a good consideration to give an Action, M. 9 Jac. B. R. Somershal's Case.

If I promise to one in consideration, he will lay down his own money to pay for cloth bought by J. S. for me, that I will pay it him again ; this is good, Trin. 9 Jac. B. R. Moors's Case.

If one in consideration of a Pint of Wine promise to assure me Land by a day, and do not ; this is a good consideration to give this Action upon the Assumpsit, adjudged, Friends's Case. Trin. 7 Jac. B. R.

If I request one to sollicite a business for me, and after he hath done, promise him Ten pounds for it ; this is a good promise, and not naked : For the request, and the merits are joyned together ; but if it be a meer voluntary courtesie, it is otherwise, Hob. Rep. pl. 128. 72. Dyer. 355. And it hath been said to be adjudged to lie in this Case, when I do request B. to bail my servant, and after I say to him, In consideration that you have at my request bailed my servant, I will pay you Ten pounds such a day ; that this is good. See Brownl. 1. part. 7. 8. 73:

If one be about to buy goods or borrow money of me, and another before the sale or loan, tell me, That if the buyer or borrower pay not, he will ; or if he bid me deliver the things, and if the buyer pay me not, he will pay me on request ; these are good considerations. But otherwise it is when the promise comes after the borrowing or buying, 12 H. 8. 12. 44 Edw. 3. 21. But here must be a Demand before the Suit begin.

But if I promise to another Twenty pounds, because he is my Kinsman or acquaintance ; this is not good, it is but Nudum pactum onely, Plow 309. 302.

If one on the Eighth of May deliver me Ten pounds, and I do the Ninth of May, promise him in consideration hereof to repay the Ten pounds ; this is no good consideration. But if it were at the same time, it were good, M. 42. 43 Eliz. Piffworth's Case. So if I sell one all my Lands or Goods, and nothing appointed by the agreement what I shall have for it ; it is good, and I shall have the worth of it.

If one buy a horse or some other thing of me for money, and no money is paid, nor earnest given, nor day set for payment, nor the thing delivered ; in these Cases no Action will lie for the money, or the thing sold, but I may sell it to another ; it is Nudum pactum, Plow 309. 302. So if I promise to pay one money, to give him a horse, build a house, or the like ; and nothing, and no recompence appointed to me for doing it ; these are void promises, upon which no Action will lie.

If I promise in consideration of something past, as because he hath builded a house, quitted me a Trespass, or hath let my friend have Wares, that I will pay him money, money, or do any thing else; this is Nudum pactum, Plow 5. 302. yet see Brownl. 8. 9. So if I say to another to whom J. S. doth ow money, If he do not pay you, I will pay you; this is Nudum pactum, Do. & St. 105, 12 H. 8. 12. Dyer. 21. 27. This hath been often adjudged. So if one promise me, if I will deliver him One hundred Crowns, he will deliver them to me again. But if he do deliver me Twenty Crowns, and in consideration thereof, I did at the time promise to redeliver them; this is a good promise, adjudged.

SeB. 19.

Demand.

If I without other cause promise to give one Twenty pounds towards his losses by fire, or to build his house anew: These Assumpsits are not good to give an Action, 17 Ed. 4. 4. Plow. 308. So if J. S. ow me money, and another say, That he will be my pay-master, and pray me to take him debtor for it; this is not good. Fitz. Debr. 126. If one promise me Twenty pounds, because I have built him an house, or, if one ow me Twenty pounds, and another come to me, and pray me to take him debtor for it; or, if he say, if the other do not pay it at Michaelmas, he will: These are not good considerations to raise Actions, 9 Edw. 5. 14. 44 Edw. 3. 21.

If I promise to one so [or, if] he will marry my Daughter, [Kinswoman, or Servant] that I will give him [or pay him] Twenty pounds, or if I promise twenty pounds with my Daughter in marriage; in all these Cases the party may have this Action for this money, Plow 30. Fitz. prohib. 3. Do. & St. 104. So also it is said, That if one promise me One hundred pounds in consideration that I have married his Kinswoman; that this is good to give an Action, because the consideration doth continue, M. 8 Car. B. R. per curiam, and in M. 4 Car. B. R. it is said to be so adjudged. But against this it is said to be adjudged in the Exchequer Chamber inter Sandil & Jenny, That if I entreat one to marry my Daughter, and after the marriage, say, That in consideration he hath at my request married my Daughter, that I will pay him Ten pounds such a day, this Action will not lie; yet the former Judgment seems most to agree with the Cases before, and with Reason. So if I promise to a Woman, that if she will marry with my Son, I will give her to her marriage, the one half of all my goods; this is good and actionable. See Brownl. 1. part. 18.

If a Bail pay the debt, and hereupon the Plaintiff promise to deliver to him the principal Obligation, and a Letter of Attorney to sue the principal; this is no good consideration to raise an Action, adjudged in the Exchequer Chamber, 38, 39 Eliz. Dixon vers. Adams.

If I promise to a Woman, having a Husband who hath a Daughter and Heir to Land, That if she will give her consent I shall have her Daughter, I will pay her Ten pounds: This is a good consideration, adjudged. Hob. Rep. pl. o.

If I promise Twenty pounds to a man in consideration he will not beat me: This is no good consideration to make the Assumpsit Actionable, 21 Jac.

One did declare, that in consideration that he had sold a horse to him, that he would pay him Five pounds, it is said to be adjudged in the Exchequer Chamber good, albeit it had implied time past, Pasche, 8 Jac. Co. B. R. Mary Andrews Case.

If the Obligor pay the money to the Obligee after the day, and thereupon the Obligee promise to deliver the Bond, and do not, no Action will lie; for the consideration is not good, nor hath the Obligor any remedy but in a Court of Equity, Forbearance.

If A. ow to me Ten bushels of Corn, and deliver them to B. to deliver to me, and B. pray me to forbear it till Michaelmas, and he will pay me the Corn, or the worth of it; this is a good consideration and Assumpsit, M. 18 Jac. B. R. Jacksons Case.

If I be in debt to J. S. and I deliver goods to B. to pay the debt to J. S. and J. S. require the debt of B. who doth desire him to forbear it three weeks, and he will pay him: this is a good Assumpsit to give an Action. Williams Case. M. 7 Jac. B. R. But he shall recover damage onely for Forbearance; for the debt is recoverable still as it was before, M. 4 Jac. Lees Case, B. R.

If A. and B. be bound jointly and severally to C. who releaseth to A. and after B. and C. being talking together of the debt, B. in consideration that C. would forbear him him till such a day promised to pay it; this is no good promise, for by the Release to one the other is discharged, and the debt gone, no good consideration therefore. March. 201. pl. 243.

If I have a Writ against J. S. and J. S. knowing of it doth pray me to forbear to go any further on that Writ, and he will pay me twenty pounds; this is a good consideration, Hob. Rep. pl. 278. and he need not shew any cause of the first action. But if the consideration be to forbear, and say not how long this is no good consideration, Tardlies Case, Hob. Rep. pl. 287. But if one owe me money, and he himself or another on his behalf promise me that so I will forbear him [or not sue him] till such a day, or not go forwards in my suit begun against him till such a day, that he will pay me; this is a good consideration to give an Action. Co. 9. 9. 94. New Book of Entries, f. 8. 10. 47. Sir Moyl Finch's Case, M. 4 Jac. B. R. But if re vera no debt were originally due, some doubt whether the Action will lie or not: And so if the Promise were by an Executor that hath no Assets in his hands. Co. 9. 9. 94.

If one owe money to me, and he promise me that in consideration that I will agree to give further day for the money he owes me for six moneths, he will secure it to me; this is no good consideration; for he may agree to give day, and sue after. M. 7 Jac. B. R.

If one be bound by obligation to me to pay J. S. money on such a day, and the Obligor promise J. S. that if he will forbear him till such a day, he will then pay it, this is no good consideration, for J. S. had not cause of suit, per Justice Bridgman. So if an Infant buy wares or other unnecessary apparel, and when he comes to full age in consideration that he had a good bargain, he doth promise if the other will forbear him a moneth, he will pay him; this is no good consideration. Adjdg. 30 Eliz. Withipoles Case.

If one promise to build me an house, make me an estate or any other thing, and there is nothing given or promised by me for it; this is no good Assumpsit, but a Nudum pactum. And where one doth promise to do a work by a day, and it is not agreed what he shall have for his pains, or when, or if it be agreed, no part of the money is paid; he cannot sue for the not doing of the work, nor the workman for his money till he have done the work. But if there be a mutual promise of work, and of recompence for the work, they may have mutual actions on both sides, 3 H. 6. 36. Dyer 21. Plow. 5.

If I promise money to a Physician to cure another poor man, or to a Labourer to mend a high way, these are good considerations in Assumpsit on which this Action will lie in respect of the nature of the works. Do. & St. 105. Plow. 35: 17 Ed. 4: 5: Hob. Rep. pl. 278. and if the day of payment be come, they may sue for it before the work be done.

If a Prisoner promise the Sheriff in consideration he will let him escape, he will save him harmless, or pay him ten pounds, the consideration is naught, and the promise void: So if one promise me ten pounds if I will maintain him in such a suit, this is naught, Co. 10. 76. 102. Dyer 356 But if one be in debt to me, and deliver me goods in pledg for the debt, and a stranger promise to pay me the debt if I will deliver the pledg; this is a lawful and good consideration. Levitts Case, adjudged.

If one promise to me in consideration I will seal a Release to J. S. he will pay me ten pounds, and after at his request I seal it to J. D. in this case I cannot bring this Action for the money, because I have not pursued the consideration. Trin. 4 Jac. B. R. Cranfield vers. Green.

To make the promise or Assumpsit it self good, it must have all these qualities.

1. The thing promised must be such a thing as is lawful: For if the thing promised be that which is either evil in it self, as to kill a man, or a prohibited evil, as to forestal Corn, or the like, it is no good Assumpsit, let the consideration be never so good. Dyer 356. Co. 10. 102.

2. The thing promised must be possible to be done; for if one promise to do a thing impossible, as to go to Rome within three days, or the like, this is not good.

3. There

3. There must be certainty in it; for if a promise be of a thing altogether uncertain, it is altogether void.

4. It must be serious and weighty; for if it be frivolous and idle, it is void.

A promise to do any lawful thing, as to deliver or to give Corn or other goods, Plow. 182. Fitz. det. 68. To ear Land, make a house, make or release an estate in land, Plow. 308. Kelm. 69. 77. Finches ley 49. To save a man harmless from a Bond entred into, or the like engagement, M. 9 Jac. B.R. To stand to an award, Ca. 5. 78. To keep goods safe, Old B. of Entries, f. 4. That goods shall come safe to Dale, Co. 6. 47. From the Lessor to the Lessee at will of a house, not to out him, but to suffer him to enjoy it till such a time. From a Creditor that hath a Judgment for his money, that upon payment thereof he will acknowledg satisfaction, or deliver up the Bond, Trin. 38 Eliz. B.R. To marry a daughter or kinswoman. To pay an Annuity of ten pounds a year for life, Pasc. 9 Jac. B.R. Collins Case. Not to molest one upon a Judgment, M. 9 Jac. B.R. To save the Lessor harmless and without loss by reason of his inhabitation in his house, M. 9 Jac. B.R. That an Attorney shall retain a Rent he is to pay to his Client for Fees due from his Client to him, M. 9 Jac. B.R. Jarvis Case. To deliver up a Bond to stand to the award of l. s. or pay twenty pounds, New B. of Entries, f. 3. And finally, whatsoever (for the matter of it) is good in the consideration, will be good in the promise.

If one lay his Action in consideration of ten pounds lent by him to the Defendant, that he assumed to pay the same to the Plaintiff; this is good. Brownl. 2 part, 40.

If one having made me a Lease for years, assume that I shall quietly hold it without the let of any person whatsoever, this is a good promise; and disturbance with or without Title, is a breach of it to give Action. Dyer 328.

If one in consideration that I will be bound for his appearance, he being arrested on a Recognizance, promise me to appear at the day, and do not, I may have this Action against him, Adjudge. Trin. 9 Jac. B. R. Rolls Case. And it will not excuse him that a Certiorari came to remove the Record; for I must appear notwithstanding.

If one sell me Land for money, and promise to make me an Assurance of it, or put me in possession of it, upon request, by a day, and do not, I may have this Action, Old B. of Entries, f. 5. and recover damages. And if I will, I may waive this, and compel him to make me an Assurance of the Land in Chancery, per three Justices. Pasc. 9 Jac. B. R. Jolleys Case.

If one sell me a horse for ten pounds, on condition that I pay him this ten pounds in corn; in this case I must pay him in corn, or he may for his remedy have this Action. Fitz. Det. 68.

If one be arrested at my suit for a debt, and make an obligation for the money to pay it at a day to come, but do not deliver, but in consideration of his enlargement promise to seal it upon request; this is good to produce an Action. Pasc. 9 Jac. B. R. Bassets Case.

To save harmless.

If one in consideration I will be bound for him promise to save me harmless, this is a good Assumpsit; and if I be any way troubled, I may sue him upon it by this Action, Somerton's Case. So for any thing else that I do at his request, Boynston versus Vaughan, P. 19 Jac. B. R. Old book of Entries, f. 111.

If A. promise K. a woman, that if she marry his kinsman and outlive him, that A. will pay her twenty pounds, and she do so, this Action will lie. Hob. Rep. pl. 179.

If one promise for good consideration to pay me Ten pounds, or give me a ground such a day, this is certain enough and good; and if one of them be not done at the day, this Action lieth; and before the day, he that is to do it hath the election; but after the day, he to whom it is to be done. Fitz. Det. 89. 9 Ed. 4. 39.

If a Chyrurgeon for good cause warrant or promise to cure a man, or warrant the cure, or a Farrier a horse, and do not the cure, though he be not negligent, this Action will lie against him: And if he undertake the cure only, and make no warranty, and be negligent, an Action of the Case lieth. Plow. 305. Doff. & Stu. 105. 17 Ed. 4. 25. 5.

If

If a Terre-tenant of Land promise to me in consideration, that I do assign to him a Statute I have chargeable upon his Land, by way of discharge, that he will pay me twenty pounds; this is a good consideration to produce this Action. But if the assignment of it were to be to a stranger by the consideration, Contra. Adjudged, Pasche, 38 Eliz. Perrow. vers. Gray.

If my debtor who hath Statutes from other men, deliver them to me towards my satisfaction, and die, and one that is neither his Executor or Administrator request me to deliver him the Statutes, and he will pay me the debts; this is consideration good enough, Hob. Rep. pl. 7.

If one promise to me in consideration that I will make him a Lease [generally] that he will pay me ten pounds, this is no good promise: For the consideration is void; for the Lease may be a Lease at will, and he may avoid it as soon as he makes it, Pasche, 39 Eliz. C. B. Burkins Case, adjudged. So if the consideration be to forbear a Suit, and say not how long. So if the consideration be to relinquish my Suit; for I may relinquish it, and begin it again presently, Pasche, 39 Eliz. in Lurkins Case.

Sett. 21.
Certainty.

If a promise be to pay money, and say not when, it is good enough, and must be paid presently. So if a promise be to make a Lease for years, and say not when it shall begin; this is good, and shall begin presently, Co. 10. 76. 102.

If one promise to make good a house; this is good, and shall be taken to repair it, M. 21 Jac. B. R. Keyts Case.

If one ow me money, and another for good cause promise to make it good to me, this is good, M. 21 Jac. B. R. Keyts Case.

If one promise me all that he can recover in such a suite, or upon a composition upon such a Bond, this is good, Trin. 19 Jac. B. R. Morris Case. And all these are certain enough. So if one promise to content me for my work, M. 17 Jac. B. R. Griffins Case. So if one promise to give me a childes part, this is good; or so much as he shall give with any child, this is good; for it may be made good by Averment. Id certum est quod certum reddi potest; for if he give one hundred pounds by his will to another child, I may recover one hundred pounds of his Executor. Trin. 17 Jac. B. R. Bolles Case.

If one ow me twenty pounds by Bill, and I promise, to deliver him the Bill, and he promise to bring me two sufficient Sureties, and give Bond for the money by a day, this is a good promise on both sides: For a promise is a good consideration of a promise. But if the promise be conditional, contra. M. 38, 39 Eliz. Gowers Case, adjudged. See Brownl. 1. part. 11. And therefore if the agreement between me, and J. S. be, that if he deliver twenty broad clothes, or if he make me an assurance of such a piece of Land, I will pay him one hundred pounds, in these Cases I cannot be sued for the money, till I have the things. So if I promise to make new pales, if I may have the old pales, 37 H. 6. 42. 27 H. 8. 34. Perk. Sett. 713. Dyer. 76. 14 H. 8. 20.

If a Lessee for years assign his Lease, on condition that the purchaser shall get the good will of the Lessor, and pay the Lessee so much as J. S. shall arbitrate; in this Case when he hath gotten his favor, and J. S. hath arbitrated, he may have this Action for the money, 14 H. 8. 20. Brownl. 1. part. 14.

If one in consideration that he doth ow me five pounds Rent, on a Lease of a Ground for a year, or a Bond, promise to pay it to me upon request, it seems this is not a good consideration, Hob. Rep. pl. 305. For it is real and certain, and I have debt for my Rent and Bond, and may not have two Remedies. And yet if one, in consideration he doth ow me five pounds on a Contract, promise to pay me such a day, this is good, adjudged. So if one indebted to me on a Bond, or for a Rent, promise in consideration of forbearance of the debt to pay it; in this case the promise may be good.

If one promise to pay, or do a thing which is unlawful, the Assumpsit is void. Against Law; And therefore if one promise to do that which to do is maintenance, it is void. But if a Solicitor sue upon a promise for money for soliciting a Suit, this is good; for it is lawful, and may be without maintenance, Hob. Rep. pl. 72. Dyer 356. But to promise promise to do any thing of that nature which is not maintenance, or a lawful maintenance, is good.

If a Sheriff for ten pounds, promise the prisoner that he shall escape; this promise is not good, nor will it give an Action, Co. 10. 76. 102. Dyer 356.

If A. be sued on a Bond, and I become bail for him, and Judgment and Execution is had against me, and the Plaintiff doth promise me, so as I will pay him, he will assign me the Bond and the Debt, and make me a Letter of Attorney to sue for it in my own name; this is not a good promise, for it is against Law, being Champerty, adjudged. Dixons Case, Trin. 38 Eliz. B. R.

If A. and B. be Mercers, and they agree that A. shall sell to B. all his Mercery Wares, and take his shop of him, in consideration whereof, A. doth promise that he will not set up his Trade in the same Town; this is a good Assumpsit. But if one be bound not to use his Trade at all; this is not good, March. 77. pl. 121. See more Covenant Conditions in the Titles. But a Bond not to use his Trade in such a Town, is not good.

If one promise an Officer more to do his duty then his just Fees, which to take is Extortion, this promise is void, Hil. 22 Jac.

If I owe a man One hundred pounds, and promise to him, in consideration he will forbear me six moneths, I will give him One hundred pounds; this is naught, though part of it be lawful; for the excess is usury, Trin. 20 Jac. B. R.

If I arrest a man, to the end he should engage himself to me for money, where none is due, and he do so being in prison, so that it be made by Duress of imprisonment; this is not good. But an engagement for a due debt by a prisoner for his liberty, is not against Law, Pasche, 9 Jac. B. R.

Uncertain.

If I promise one, so he marry my Daughter, to give him as much as I shall give with any other Childe; this is good: And if by my last Will, I give One hundred pounds to another Childe, he may sue my Executor for a Hundred pound, Glocester Assizes, 6 Car. Whistlocks Justice.

Impossible.

A promise to do an impossible thing, as to go to Rome in three days, or the like, it seems is void, and not Obligatory.

Frivolous.

If one give me twelve pence, and I promise to him in consideration thereof, that if I do not cause him to be whipt to morrow about the Cross in Glocester, I will give him five pounds, and he is not whipt; yet no Action will lie for this five pounds upon this frivolous promise. See more in Bargain, and Sale; and Contract.

How the pleading in this Action must be. What Aver. ment or Allegation is necessary in the Declaration, or not.

If one promise to pay me ten pound, in consideration of something to be done by me in futuro; if I sue for the ten pound, I must set forth and aver that I have done this thing; and till it be done, no Action can be brought for the promise: As if I promise to another, in consideration he will forbear his debt till such a day, I will pay him; I must aver that I did forbear him till the day: For if in this case he sue for his debt within the time, the Assumpsit and Action upon the promise is gone, Hob. Rep. pl. 128. Otherwise it is where one promise is the consideration of another, there nothing but the promise is to be shewed to maintain the Action, Curia, M. 4 Jac. B. R. Hil. 38 Eliz. B. R. Thorntons Case. Hob. Rep. pl. 7. 27. 8 H. 8. 34.

If one for good cause promise to do a thing to me in consideration of another thing to be done by me at such a time, or in such a place; if he sue upon the promise, he must aver he did the thing in the consideration at that time and place, Brownl. part. 1. 21. 2. part. 137, 138.

If all or part of the consideration of a promise be to stand to the arbitrement of J. S. or to make a surrender, in a thing for this promise, he must set forth that he hath performed the award, or made a surrender; for it is not sufficient to say; Quod fuit paratus stare, &c. or, Quod fuit paratus cursum reddere, M. 9 Jac. B. R. Hofboots Case.

If one sue upon a promise for a Childes part, as much as he shall give with any Childe, in the Declaration he must shew how much he did give with a Childe in certain, or it is not good, Trin. 17 Jac. B. R.

If one sue upon a promise to satisfy one [or to content one] for a work done, he must must say in the Declaration how much he deserved for the work, or it is not good. M. 17 Jac. B. R.

If I sell a thing without a price, I must in suing for it aver it to be worth so much.

If one promise to deliver me twenty of his sheep before his flock is shorne, if I sue for this, I must aver that the flock is shorne, for he hath time to do it till that time.

Sett. 22.

M. 9 Jac. B. B. Cadels Case.

A Tenant at will of a house, in consideration that the Lessor would suffer him to continue in the house till such a time, doth assume to keep the Lessor free and indemnified from all loss and detriment by reason of his inhabitation in the house, and that for every farthing-worth of hurt he will satisfy him two pence, and his servant by his negligence suffers the house to be burnt; this Action will lie, albeit the master dwell not there; but in his count he must aver how many farthings it came to, and demand two pence for every farthing in a gross sum. M. 9 Jac. B. R. Coventries Case.

Demand.

If an Executor be sued upon the Assumpsit of the Testator, the Plaintiff needs not to aver that he hath Assets, but it must come on the other side to be averred if it be not so. Co. 9. 90.

The Plaintiff declared that the Defendant, in consideration that the Plaintiff would be bound for his son, assumed to save him harmless from all such obligations as he at the request of his son should enter into for him, and shewed that he was bound for him such a day &c. to &c. which obligation he was forced to satisfy. And this was adjudged to be a good pleading, though he did not lay any request or notice, for he was not bound to give notice to the father. M. 9 Jac. B. R. inter Somershal & Barnaby.

Notice.

The Plaintiff declared that I. S. emissit equum at such a price, and the Defendant ad tunc & ibidem ratione premissarum did assume to pay the money; this was adjudged to be naught, for the sale did precede the consideration. Pasch. 9 Jac. B. R. Farmers Case.

The Plaintiff declared, quod cum the Defendant was in debt to the Plaintiff in Twenty pounds for meat, drink and lodging for himself and two others, that he did such a day assume to pay it to him; this is no good consideration. Curia, Steedmans Case. A. Executor of B. declared against C. upon a promise made to B. that C. would repay to A. all such sums of money as he should lay out of his own money for cloth bought and delivered to the use of C. This is a good Consideration to raise an Action, without averring that the cloth did come to his use, Trin. 9 Jac. B. R. Moors Case. A. sued B. and declared that B. was indebted to him Ten pounds for Wheat, Agistments and Wares had of the Plaintiff, and in consideration thereof did assume to pay the same to the Plaintiff; it was adjudged good and certain enough. But this were not good in an Action of Debt upon the very Contract, for that must be more certain, Hob. Rep. pl. 8. But to declare thus, That whereas the Defendant was indebted to the Plaintiff Ten pounds, he promised to pay it to him, is not sufficient; for it may be for Rents on Leases, or Debts on Especialty, for which no Action will lie upon a new promise, Idem. And yet upon the consideration of forbearance of a Debt due for Rent, or on a Bond, this Action will arise well enough. Adjudg.

If the Plaintiff saith that he had a Writ out in such a Term against the Defendant for Fifty pounds, and the Defendant knowing of it prayed him to go no further on that Writ, and he would pay him the Fifty pounds on request; this is sufficient without shewing the cause of the debt. Hob. Rep. pl. 278.

A. declared against B. that he accounted with the Defendant for divers sums of money due to the Plaintiff from the Defendant, and upon the Account the Defendant was found in arrear Ten pounds, and in consideration thereof did promise to pay the money at a day; this was adjudged good, notwithstanding he did not shew for what the money was due, whether for Wares, money lent, &c. Hob. Rep. pl. 16.

A. declared against B. that in consideration that he had given him time for three months for a Debt of Ten pounds that he owed him, that he would pay the Ten pounds pounds after verdict; it was adjudged good enough, albeit he did not shew for what the Debt was, Hob. Rep. pl. 31. Sir Moyl Finch's Case. M. 4 Jac. B. R. Trin. 9 Jac. B. R. Deans Case. But where it is grounded on an Indebitatus Assumpsit, in which Case the Debt it self is the consideration of the promise, there the Case must be averred; for a general count in an Action upon the Case, Quod cum indebitatus fuit, in such a sum super se assumpsit, without shewing the cause of the Debt, is insufficient; but where there is another consideration, Contra, as here the Forbearance, often adjudged, Hob. Rep. pl. 32. Co. 10. 77. Fuller and Thorns Case, Pasche, 14 Jac. B. R. accord.

If one declare against an Executor, that whereas the Testator was in debt to the Plaintiff Ten pound, the Executor in consideration thereof assume to pay it without shewing the cause; this is not good, M. Jac. B. R. Ingram's Case; yet see the New Book of Entries, f. 2. And yet if in these Cases the Defendant shall in pleading aver there was no cause at first. Quere.

If A. in consideration that B. is indebted to C. Ten pound, assume in consideration that if C. will forbear it till Michaelmas, that if B. pay it not, he will; this is good without averment of the first cause, Hil. 14 Jac. B. R. A. declares against B. that he bought of B. a horse for Twenty shillings, paid in hand, and for Eleven pound more to be paid at the death or marriage of A. for which he should become bound with sufficient Surety by their writing Obligatory. B. in consideration hereof promised to deliver the horse on request; avers that he offered to become bound to him, but doth not set forth in what sum, nor with what surety, nor that he did offer to deliver it, being sealed; and for these causes after verdict, the Judgment was staid, Hob. Rep. pl. 79. 96.

In an Action of the Case upon an Assumpsit, if the consideration be Executory, then the Declaration must have time and place where it was made, and after it must be averred in facto, when it was performed accordingly. But if it be by way of Reciprocal agreement, then he may say, That in consideration he hath promised to do for the Defendant, the Defendant hath promised to do another thing for him; there need no such setting down of time, &c. and Averment. Brownl. 2. part. 137.

An Action is maintainable against an Executor upon the Assumpsit of the Testator, without Averment of Assets above, for Debts by Especialty, Brownl. 2. part. 138.

Request or Demand.
Notice.

If I promise for good cause to pay Ten pound to J. S. when he shall purchase White-Acre, he must give me notice ere he can sue. But if it be when a stranger shall purchase White-Acre, it seems otherwise: For this is as much in the knowledge of the Promisor, as the Promisee, Brownl. 1. part. 9. 10. 3. 46. 64.

If one promise for good cause to save me harmless from such an Engagement, and I be sued. I am not bound before I sue him, to give him notice of it, nor to allege it in the Count, adjudged, M. 9 Jac. B. R. Somersbals Case. But if he have promised to deliver goods to me upon request, I must make an Actual request ere I can sue for the goods, 13 Car. B. R. But if I deliver goods to redeliver upon request, here it seems no request is needful. But when the thing promised to be done, doth lie as much in the knowledge of the Promisor, as of the Promisee, as the death or marriage of a stranger, there generally no notice need to be given, Co. 7. 29.

If I promise for good cause to pay a man Ten pound, and say not when I shall pay it, no demand in this Case is needful to be made: If a promise be laid in consideration of a marriage to be had with J. S. that the Defendant, if the Womans portion shall not amount to Four hundred pound: will make it up so much upon request, the Plaintiff must aver a request in his Declaration: But it seems he need not prove it upon a Non Assumpsit pleaded. Glocester Assizes, 17 Car. per Baron Henden.

If a Suit be going on to Tryal, and the Defendant in consideration that the Plaintiff shall not go to trial, and give him a note of the charge, promise to pay him at his first coming to Glocester: In this Case if he sue, he must aver not onely the forbearance of proceeding, and the giving of the note of charges, but the giving of notice of his first coming to Glocester, Hob. Rep. pl. 63.

Sett. 23.

If I have Ten quarters of Corn, and I sell one quarter to J. S. to pay me half a year year hence, after the rate as I sell the rest, I must give him notice how I sell the rest, or I cannot sue: And this giving of notice must be averred in my Action; Hob. Rep. pl. 56. otherwise it is of an Award.

If I promise on good consideration to pay Ten pound on demand, it seems here no demand is needful. But if the promise be to do a Collateral thing, as if I promise to pay Ten pound lent to another, if he do not pay it himself at Michaelmas upon demand; in this Case he must demand it ere he can sue for it: Therefore in his Declaration he must set it forth so, 12 H. 8. 12. 17 Jac. B. R.

If I promise money to the marriage of my Daughter or Kinswoman, in this Case it seems no notice is needful, unless the promise be penal; as if you marry her, and I do not pay you Twenty pound in three weeks, I will pay you Forty pound: Here the Forty pound must be demanded: So also if I promise a Woman, that if she will marry with my son, I will give her the one half of my Lands and Goods; in this Case it seems there must be notice given before a Suit be begun, Old Book of Entries, f. 4. New Book of Entries, f. 2. So also if I promise a man Twenty pound when he marrieth any Woman whatsoever; in this Case also he must give me notice ere he can sue for the money.

If one be arrested for my Debt, and he make an Obligation to me for his delivery to pay the money at a day to come, but doth not deliver it as his deed, and doth promise to deliver it upon request; in this Case I must make a request. And therefore if I make no request till the day of payment be past, I am remediless at Law, and must sue to the Court of Equity, Pasche, 9 Jac. B. R. Bassett's Case by two Judges.

The Plaintiff declared, that in consideration he would die divers Cloths which he counted to Sixty, that the Defendant did promise to pay him for every Cloth Ten shillings, and avers he did Dye them all, being Fifty nine Cloths, and that the money came to so much: So that Fifty nine was put for Sixty, but after verdict adjudged good, Hob. Rep. pl. 120.

The Plaintiff declared, that he had sold to the Defendant so many Oats as according to the rate of Fifteen shillings nine pence for every quarter, and shall amount to Fifty two pound to be delivered at such a time, and that the said Oats after such a rate came to Ninety six quarters and six bushels, which the Defendant hath not delivered, &c. Which money the Plaintiff was to pay at a day certain: After verdict it was adjudged good, notwithstanding the mistake; for the Ninety six quarters of Oats after the rate came to Fifty two pound three quarters, Hob. Rep. pl. 114. But generally in all special Actions of the Case upon a promise, if any substantial variance be between the laying of the Action, and the Evidence, it will be fatal: Wherefore it is policy in the Plaintiff in all these Cases, to suppose several promises as near the matter as he can frame, that he may be sure in one of them to hit the very promise it self, or at least the substance thereof.

No Traverse can be of consideration executed alone; but a consideration executory may be traversed alone, Hob. Rep. pl. 128.

If the Lessor assume to his Lessee on good consideration, that he shall hold the Land without the let of any person whatsoever; this shall be taken a let by one that hath no title, as well as by one that hath a title, and either of them will be a breach, and give an Action, Dyer 328. Gambles Case, M. 7 Jac. B. R.

If I promise to another, to whom I owe money, to pay him at Michaelmas, in consideration that he will give me day till then, and he arrest me in the mean time; this doth not take away the Action, otherwise it is, if it be in consideration, that he will not sue till Michaelmas, Goldsb. 146. pl. 65.

If my Tenant at Will of my house, promise upon good cause to save me harmless and indemnified from all loss and harm, by reason of his Inhabitation in the said house, and by the neglect of his servant, the house is burnt; this is a breach to give an Action, Coventries Case.

If I promise to J. S. that his goods shall come safe to Dale, and they be arrested by the way; this is a breach of the promise, and Actionable, Co. 6. 47.

If one for good cause promise to make a Feoffment of Land by a day, and before the the day he Enfeoff another, or grant a Rent-charge out of it; this is a breach of the promise. So if he promise me Trees out of a Wood, and before the time he sell them away. So if he promise me the delivery of a horse, and before the day he sell him to another, Dyer. 22. 21 H.7. 41. Co. 10. 130. Kelm. 77. 20 H.6. 34. F.N.B. 99. k. If one promise to deliver Wares, and he deliver false and sophisticated Wares; this is a breach of the promise. So if he promise to make a Surrender of an Estate, and he make a Surrender that is not good; this is no performance, but a breach, Dyer. 75. 23, 24. Hill. 37 Eliz. B. R. Sleighs Case.

Election.

If a promise be to do one of two things by a day, till the day be past; he that made the promise hath the Election. But after the day, he to whom it is made, hath the Election, 9 Ed.4. 39. Co. 9. 94. 6.

If it be part of the agreement to give a Bond with Sureties, and say not what Sureties, nor in what sum, the Court must judge what Sureties, and what sum, Hob. Rep. pl. 79.

If for good cause the promise be to pay money, and no time set, it shall be presently; and if it be to make a Lease for years, and no time set when it shall begin, it shall begin presently, Co. 10. 77. Co. 6. 33. But if one promise to deliver me goods, or make me a Lease, or the like, and no time is set; in this Case he shall have all his life time to do it, except I hasten it by request.

If one promise for Ten pound paid him in hand, to build me a house; this is a conditional promise, and the money must be paid ere the promise will have virtue to produce an Action, and is not like as where one promises to build a house, and the other doth promise Ten pound, there they are reciprocal, and they have equal remedy.

Sett. 24.

If one binde himself by promise to pay money yearly or quarterly at several days, upon the breach of the promise one day, this Action will lie; but an Action of Debt will not lie upon the Contract till all the days are past, 11 H. 6. 18. Breo. 108. Dyer 113. Co. 4. 94.

Of an Action upon the Case for a Nuisance.

What it is.

How many kinds there are.

What shall be said a Nuisance, or not; for which, this Action of the Case may be had, or not.

A Nuisance is where any thing is done by a man upon his own ground, or elsewhere to the unlawful hurt and annoyance of another that is his Neighbor, in his Free-lands, or otherwise. And this is either common, when it is or may be a grievance to many, or special when it is onely or especially a hurt to some few, or particular when it is or may be a hurt onely to one particular man, Old. N.B. 108, 109: F.N.B. 193.

A Nuisance may be by stopping or annoying a mans Water, Way, Light, or Air, by building, diverting, stopping, digging, or the like; for remedy whereof the party grieved may have this Action. And therefore if a man set up a house upon a new Foundation so near to my house, that thereby he stop up my Windows, and take away my light and prospect, I may have this Action: But if his building be upon an old Foundation, and where there was a house before, no Action will lie for this, Cujus est solum, ejus est usque ad Cælum, New Book of Entries, f. 19, 20. Co. 9. 55. 5. 10. Hughs Case. So if a man do over-build my house, so that his House-eves do drop upon my house, and cause it to perish, or trouble my dwelling, I may have this Action, 22 H.6. 14. And yet in Trin. 42 Q. Inter Nicholson & Bradshaw, Lessee for years of a Shop, brought an Action against one that was Tenant at Will of a Kitchen over the Shop, for suffering it to decay, and to spoil the Wares of his Shop, and after a Judgment for the Plaintiff, it was reversed. See Brownl. 1. part. 4.

The erecting of a Die-house, Pig-stye, House of Office, Brew-house, or Chimney, may be a Nuisance to the Neighborhood; for which, he that is hurt, may have his Action, Pasche, 5 Jac. B. R.

If I have a building beneath, and another man hath a building above me, and I suffer mine to decay, so as to hazard his, or he suffereth his to decay so, as to harm mine; in this Case each of us may have this Action against the other, Old Book of Entries, f. 21. Kilm 48. If one set up a Pig-stye under my house, and keep Pigs in it, on a House of Office, Lime-kiln, or Brew-house, and use it so near my house, that the smell thereof doth annoy me, and hazard my health, or the smoke of the Brew-house or Lime-kiln destroy or hurt my Trees: In these Cases, and for these Wrongs, I may have this Remedy, Co. 5. 73. 101. M. 8 fac. Adjudged. Aldreds Case. The building of a Brew-house, or the keeping of a Chandlers, or a Butchers shop by my Neighbor, in a place inconvenient, to the offence of my Garden or House, may be a Nuisance; for which I may have this Action, Trin. 13 Car. B. R. But if such a man do set up his Trade by me, though this be offensive to me, yet I cannot have this Action, per Cook and Warborton Justices, M. 8 fac. And Pasche, 5 fac. B. R. If a man have a house very near mine, and he suffer it to decay, and fall, and throw down some of mine; it seems I may have this Action for this, Co. upon Lit. f. 56.

If I have a private way to my house or ground, and a man stop it or mar it, that I cannot have it in all or part; this is such a wrong, as for which I may have this Action, Co. 5. 73. F.N.B. 184. But if the wrong be to the Common High-ways; this Action will not lie, but it must be punished in a Leet, or some other Court. And yet if a Nuisance be done to a Common High-way, whereby I have more special loss than another; as if he dig a pit, or lay a block there, and my horse stumble, and I fall and have hurt by it; for this I may have this Action, Co. super Lit. 56. Co. 9. 55. Exod. 21. 33. Pasche, 5 fac. B. R. Penhams Case: 27 H.8. 26.

No Action of the Case will lie for a Nuisance to a High-way, that is to be repaired by a Parish; for then every Parish might have it. But if one man by Prescription be bound to keep, and any man do mar it by any special Nuisance, he may have this Action, March, 136. 137.

A man being drunk rode along a High-way, which was One hundred and sixty foot in breadth, and in some green parcels of the way there were laid pieces of Timber for the use of the houses thereabouts, and the drunken mans horse stumbled at one of these, and fell, and hurt him, and he brought this Action, and the Defendant prescribed to lay his Timber there; and yet it was adjudged against him, as Justice Bridgman said at the Marches of Wales in my hearing: It lieth against one for stopping of my way totaliter, so that I cannot use my Common, Pasche, 13 Eliz. See Brownl. 1. part. 4. 6. 142. 197. 208. 211. 2. part. 55.

If I have a Water-course or Conduit belonging to my house or ground, and another man stop or mar it by Liming, Tanning, or the like, in part or in all, I may have this Action, New Book of Entries, 18. Co. 5. 73. F.N.B. 184. 14 H.8. pl. ult. But if the water be a common water, and belong no more to me than to others: In this Case I may not have this Remedy, but some other; and yet if in this case I have any special prejudice by the thing done, it seems I may have this Action, as well as in the Case before of a Nuisance upon the High-way.

If any one set up any House of Office, Lime-kiln, Tan-house, or lay any filth so near my dwelling, that it corruptieth the Air, and be dangerous and grievous to me, and my Family: I may have this Action, New Book of Entries, f. 18, 19.

If the Commoner be ousted or disturbed in the Common, by drowning, or planting Conies upon it, or the like, so that there is not enough left for him, and he cannot take it according as he ought, and hath been used to have it, he may have this Action: But if it be so small a Trespass that it doth not hurt his Common, but he hath enough besides; no Action will lie for this, Co. 9. 112, 113. 8. 79. 4. 39. Dyer 316.

If a man by building, &c. stop up my ancient Lights of my House, to my prejudice, I may have this Action for my relief, New Book of Entries, f. 19.

If I have a Mill upon a River, and another man setteth up a Mill upon the same River, whereby I lose part of my Custom, I cannot have this Action against him for this. And yet if he set up a Mill where I by an ancient custom have the grinding of all the Grist, and gone ought to have a Mill but my self; or, if thereby my Water be stoppt or turned, that it doth not come so freely as formerly; in these Cases

- I may perhaps have this Remedy : So if any do break down the Sluces, or throw down the Banks that the Water do not come as formerly, Old Book of Entries, f. 10.
- In setting up a Market. If one levy a new Market without authority, Ad nocummentum of my Antient Market, I may have this Action, M. 41, 42 Eliz. Co. B. R. Mayns and the City of Londons Case.
- Wood-pile. If my Neighbor set up a Wood-pile against my house, upon his own ground, where by my light or prospect is hurt, I may have this Action, Co. 9. 55.
- School. If a Schoolmaster keep School so near to my Study, being a Lawyer, that the Scholars disturb my Study, I may not have this Action, Curia, M. 8 Jac.
- Pigeon-house. So if any man set up a Pigeon-house that doth hurt by his Pigeons in the Neighborhood, Co. 5. Hill. 39 Eliz. Co. B. R.
- Coneys. So if a man plant his own ground with Coneys, and they do Trespass to his Neighbors, whether it be a free Warren, or not; there is no Remedy for the party grieved, but to kill the Coneys upon his own ground, which he may lawfully do, adjudged. Hill. 39 Eliz. Co. B. R.
- School. If I have a School, and another Schoolmaster set up a School by me, I cannot have an Action for this, 11 H. 6. 64. 47. 22 H. 6. 14, 15.

But if he have only a Lease for years, or a Copyhold estate of that to which it doth belong, and it be wholly stoppt or taken away, or he be a Free-holder, and it be stoppt or let in part onely: In these Cases the proper Remedy is by this Action, Co. 5. 73. 101. 9. 113. F. N. B. 184. See more in Nuisance.

Of an Action upon the Case upon a Trover and Conversion.

What it is.

THIS Action is a kinde of Action of the Case, which a man hath against another, that having gotten any of his Goods, doth refuse to deliver them upon demand, New Terms of the Law.

In what case it doth lie, or not, For the persons. For the nature of the thing.

It will lie against any man that hath had my Goods, and converted them; as if my horse have been sold by twenty men, I may bring this Action against either of them: And it will lie against any one that hath the possession of the Goods, though he have them by borrowing onely. Experientia, 17 Car. per Baron Henden.

This Action will not lie for Wood-growing, M. 10 Jac. B. R. Nor for things that are fera natura; nor for any part of a Free-hold; as for Lead upon the house, while it is so, but after it is taken off, if it be converted, it will lie for it; nor as is generally held for money at large, as for Ten pound in money; but it will lie for money in a Bag or Chest, or for so many peeces of Gold of Twenty shillings a peece, or so many peeces of Silver in certain: And it will lie for any other Goods animate, as Oxen, Horses, Hens, and the like; or inanimate, as Rings, Carpets, Woods or Trees, cut down, and the like: So for things that are fera natura, as Deer, Hawks, and the like, after they are reclaimed.

For the Case.

If another man get into his hands any such Goods, living or dead, being my Goods, by finding, or otherwise, in any Case whatsoever, where he hath not a right in property or possession to the thing, and he waste it or convey it away, sell it, or otherwise convert it to his own use, or keep it from me; I may have Remedy by this Action. And therefore if I lose my Goods, and another man finde them; as if he take up my Hawk that is escaped, or my Horse or Beast that was straid away; or if a man who is Executor to another, have my Goods that were in the keeping of the Testator, come to him amongst the Testators Goods, or a Felon leave my Goods within a Mannor, and the Lords Bailiffs seize them, not being waved; or if a man ride my Horse to an Inn, and the Inn-keeper keep my Horse from me: In these and all such like Cases, I may have this Action for my Remedy, 12 Ed. 4. 8. 12 H. 8. 3. 9. 7 H. 4. 3. Dyer 306. Co. 2. 25. 5. 27. 109. Old Book of Entries, f. 4. Litt. Broo. Sess. 174. 198. 382. 405. Finchessley 181. 186. Brown. 1. part. 44.

If

If a man that is a Suitor to a woman, give her in the wooing-time gifts, and they do not go on, but break off, and she refuse to redeliver these goods, it seems he may have remedy by this Action for the goods. Womans Lawyer, f. 71. sett. 32. Dame Fitz Case, M. 7 Jac. B. R.

But this Action will not lie in these Cases following, viz. 1. When he that brings the Action hath neither right to, or property in, nor hath had a possession in the thing sued for; and if he bring the Action upon a possession, he must shew that he was once in the actual possession of it. 2. Where the party that hath the goods, hath them by delivery with a Trust; as where I deliver my goods to a Carrier to carry for me, and he doth keep or convey, and dispose them another way. Wormwalls Case, M. 9 Jac. But another kind of Action of the Case doth lie in this case. 3. Nor where the party that hath the goods hath a good property in them by sale, gift, or otherwise, as being seized for a Harriot, or the like. N. book of Entries, 39. 41. Co. 8. 15. Broo. 405. 193. Broo. Distress. 198. 4. Nor where the party that hath the goods, hath the lawful possession of them; as where another man doth bring my horse into an Inne, and there refuseth to pay for his meat, and the Inne-keeper detaineth him for his meat, as he lawfully may do till he be paid; or where goods are duly seized as a Waif or Estray, or the like. N. book of Entries, f. 10. 41, &c. Co. 8. 147. Hill. 14 Jac. B. R. Adjudge Robsons Case. 2. Nor as it seems for a bare finding or receipt of goods, and a possession only without any conversion. And therefore if one deliver another mans goods to me, and I do not convert them, it seems this Action will not lie; it seems then that the conversion is traversable. Dyer 121. Finches ley 186. per Baron Henden at Gloucester Assizes, 17 Car.

And as to Conversion, these things are to be known. 1. To do a lawful act, as distrain and impound Cattel, is no conversion; but to work them, is a conversion, Brownl. 1 par. 5. 2. To deny the things upon demand, is a conversion; but without Request there can be no conversion, and so no action, The Court, Brownl. 1 par. 152. pl. 79.

To maintain and bear up this Action, these things are necessary to be averred or proved in the Case. 1. The Plaintiffs right to the thing. 2. That the Defendant hath, or had it. 3. A demand of the goods, and denial; for how else shall a man that finds goods, know the owner, and to whom to deliver them? By Serjeants Turner at Leint Assizes at Gloucester, 23 Car. 4. Some say there must be a Conversion; and in Trin. 44 Eliz. in Com. B. it was adjudged, that if A. deliver a Chain of gold to B. and A. demand it, and B. deny it, and say he shall not have it till he can recover it, that this was no Conversion. But I take it, the contrary is held and practised at this day; and Baron Henden at Glouc. Assizes, 17 Car. ruled it, That a demand and a denial is a Conversion; and whatever is such an act for which Trespass will lie, is a Conversion to give this Action of the Case on a Trover. 5. And these things must be set forth in the Declaration; but the time of the Conversion is not needful to be set forth in the Declaration. M. 37, 38 Eliz. Co. B. Earl of Rutlands Case. Goldsb. 152. pl. 79. For pleading in this, See Brownl. 1 part, 8, 9, 12, 16, 17.

What must be proved or averred to make good this Action.

Of an Action of the Case for a Conspiracie or Confederacie.

A Conspiracie strictly taken, is, where two or more persons do purposely and maliciously conspire and labour together falsely and unjustly, and without any ground at all to indict another for some Treason, Felony, or other offence, and after he which is so indicted is upon that indictment after a lawful Trial purged and acquitted. In this case, and for this wrong, as he may have other remedy, so he may have remedy by an Action of the Case, wherein the Plaintiff shall recover damages according to his hurt. Co. 9. 56. FNB. 114, 115, 116.

What it is.

If two or more falsely and maliciously conspire to indict or appeal another of any offence against any Law, and after he that is so indicted is acquitted, a Writ of Conspiracie lies. FNB. 114, 115, 116. Co. 5. 56. And in all Cases where the practice and procurement is such by one person, that if there were more joyned with him, a Writ of Conspiracie would lie, there a general Action of the Case will lie. FNB. 116. L.

Where and in what case this Action will lie for a Conspiracie, or not, and how,

Sect. 26.

If one man only falsely and maliciously cause another to be indicted for Felony, Barretry, or the like, who is thereupon acquitted, an Action of the Case in the nature of a Writ of Conspiracie lieth. This hath been often adjudged; and in this case the Plaintiff that brings the Action, must be sure to make it good that it be false and malicious; for the malice is the ground of the Action: For if upon the Trial it doth appear, that either it was forced in a course of Justice, or there was probabilis causa for the indictment and prosecution, no Action will lie. March. f. 130. 41, 42 Eliz. Co. B. Sheringtons Case. And in this case the Plaintiff need not say that he was legitimo modo acquiesatus, as he must in a Writ of Conspiracie. P. 3 Jac. B. R. Marshams Case. And if a man do procure another to be arrested, brought before Justices, examined or imprisoned for a Felony, with a plot to vex and disgrace him albeit he be not indicted for the Felony, it seems for this only he may have this Action of the Case, Co. 9. 56, 57. Co. 4. 14, 15. F. N. B. 116, 114. And in these cases, and for these wrongs, it is better to bring this Action of the Case, then to bring a Writ of Conspiracie, which is a special Action in the nature of an Action of the Case. For in all Cases where a Writ of Conspiracie lieth, there must be these things incident to the Case.

1. There must be two or more in the plot, for this Writ of Conspiracie will not lie against one, nor against a man and his wife (who are but one in Law) unless the Writ be that they simul cum others did it. And hence it is, that if this Suit be begun against divers, and all but one are discharged of it to all intents, as being acquit by Verdict, hereby he is discharged also. F. N. B. 114, 116. 18 Ed. 4. 1. Br. Conspir. 21. But if the Writ be brought against two, and the one of them is attainted, and the other doth bar the Plaintiff by a Demur in Law, or one doth appear and plead, and his plea is found against him; in these cases the other is not discharged, but the Plaintiff shall recover, though the other be not attainted. And yet in this case perhaps he may refuse to answer without the other; or if all the Conspirators but one be dead, there the Writ may be had against him alone. F. N. B. 116, 115. 40 Ed. 3. 19. 38 E. 3. 3. 35 H. 6. 14. 24 H. 6. 25.

2. The party that brings this Action of Conspiracie must be indicted, arraigned, and acquitted; for it will not lie for a plot or preparation without an execution: Non efficit conatus nisi sequatur effectus. Co. 9. 56. F. N. B. 114.

3. The proceeding and prosecution must be voluntary. And therefore neither this Action, nor an Action of the Case in general will lie against such men as do prosecute by constraint or compulsion; as when men are obliged to it by oath or office, as Justices of Peace, or Jurors sworn to present such offences, or Witnesses called to testify their knowledge of such things, or one doth come into a Court voluntarily and discover a Felon; for all this is justifiable: 27 Aff. pl. 12 Ed. 4. 18. 21 Ed. 3. 17. 7 H. 4. 31. 35 H. 6. 14. 20 H. 6. 5. F. N. B. 115. 1. Broo. Conspir. 4. 4.

4. The proceeding must be malicious. And therefore if one man do prosecute another upon good ground, as when a Felony is done, and there is some cause of suspicion of that person more than another, either by the common fame or otherwise; as when a man is robbed, and the next Village upon a Hue and Cry doth make pursuit, and take a man they suspect, and thereupon the party robbed doth indict that man, and he is acquitted; or a Coroner after a murder, sitting super visum corporis, cannot find out the murder, and then enquiring of the first finders of the body, they present that I. S. killed him, and thereupon I. S. is indicted and acquitted; these proceedings are not punishable by any Action. Broo. Conspir. 4. Trin. 9 Jac. B. R. Wall v. H. Hill.

5. The charge and accusation must be false. And therefore if the Conspiracie be supposed to indict a man for murder, and upon his arraignment it is found he killed the man, but the killing was lawful per infortunium or se defendendo, this Writ will not lie. Fitz. Conspir. 21. Stamf. lib. 3. ch. 12.

6. The party indicted or appealed must be legitimo modo acquiesatus, (viz.) he must be acquitted upon his Trial by the Petty-Jury, after Indictment found by the Grand-Jury; or if he bring an Appeal, be Non-suit, or the like. And therefore if the acquittal be by a general or particular Pardon, or he is discharged by the insufficiency ficiencie of the Indictment, or the party be indicted, and an Ignoramus be found upon the Bill; in all these cases this Writ of Conspiracie will not lie, 9 Ed. 4. 12. F.N.B. 114. Co. 4. 45. And yet the last Case is doubted of some, and the contrary is said to be twice adjudged in 41 Eliz. B. R. and 20 Jac. See 19 R. 2. tit. Brief. 926. See Brownl. 1 par. 9.

It is a good Plea in Bar to this Action, that there hath been an Accord made between the parties, and the same is executed, 21 H. 6. 28. So it is a good Plea to shew, that the Indictment or Acquittal was erroneous, albeit the party indicted did not take advantage of it, Co. 9. 26. 9 E. 4. 12. So it is a good Plea to say, That there is no such Record as the Plaintiff sets forth, 9 H. 6. 26. So any of the things before may be pleaded, That that which was done, was done by compulsion and ex officio, as by Jurors and Witnesses, or the like, 20 H. 6. 5. But it is no good Plea to say for one, that another is dead, hanging the Writ, 18 Ed. 4. 1. Nor to say, that the Plaintiff was guilty of the Felony whereof he is so acquitted: Nor to say that the Record is, that the Plaintiff and divers others are indicted besides the Plaintiff, 9 Ed. 4. 23. See Conspiracie.

What matter shall be said a good bar or plea in this action, or not.

Of an Action of the Case for a Disceipt.

Disceipt is said to be a Writ, either Original, when it is brought against a man for some deceit he hath used or done; or Judicial, where upon some Writ directed to the Sheriff, he doth make a false Return, and thereby the Defendant doth lose his Land: In both cases he may have an Action of the Case for his relief; and in the last case, the act unduly done will be avoided also. New Terms of the Law, 154. F.N.B. 95.

What it is.

If a man make his Attorney in a real Action brought against him, and the Attorney by agreement suffer Judgment to be given, and the Land be lost, his Client may have this Action for his remedy. F.N.B. 95. Co. 6. 9. Old book of Entries, 2. So if he use any falshood or deceit whatsoever, sue me for another, or another appear or plead for me without warrant, or if my Attorney in a suit for or against me shall do any thing without warrant, and I be hurt thereby, I may have this Action against him, Co. 7. 12. Dyer 361. 13 F.N.B. 98. k. So if the Attorney for Plaintiff or Defendant do any way do against or besides his office, Idem. 20 H. 6. 25. 15 H. 7. 14. Old book of Entries, 2.

What shall be said to be a Disceipt for which and where this Action lieth, or not? Against an Attorney.

If I appoint my Attorney to take an obligation for me in my own name, and he take it to himself and in his own name, I may have this action against him, 20 H. 6. 4. 25. 3 H. 7. 14. Br. 117. So if it be to buy a Lease, and he buy it for himself, 3 H. 7. 14. 17. 20 H. 6. 25.

If my Attorney or Counsellor discover my Conveyances or other secrets which I have shewed to him, to my prejudice, I may have this remedy against him, 11 H. 6. 18. Broo. 108. Or procure himself to be retained for the other side, Old book of Entries, f. 2. But if another that is not a Lawyer discover my Evidences I have shewed to him, contra. 11 H. 6. 18.

If any mischief come to me in any suit between me and another, by the false Return of a Sheriff, I may have my remedy by this action, Co. super Lit. 259. Co. 6. 9. F.N.B. 97. 98. Co. 9. 32. Dyer 353. March Rep. f. 99. pl. 169. But if a Judgment be had by default against me, being all that time in prison, and I be summoned according to Law, I cannot have this action, Co. super Lit. 259.

Against a Sheriff.

If in a suit or action, another person will come in Court, and pretend he is the party to the suit, and so let Judgment be had, or some other prejudice be done to the party himself, he may have this remedy against him that doth it. As for example, if one purchase a Writ out of the Chancery in my name, and upon that Writ a Fine is to be paid to the King; or if I have cause to bring an action, and another bring it in my name, and let Judgment go against me by Nonsuit, or the like; or if one acknowledged a Judgment, levy a Fine, suffer a Recovery in my name, and all this is done without my leave or privity; in all these cases this action lieth for remedy, F.N.B. 96, 97, 1 Co. 19 H. 6. 44. F.N.B. So for any other thing a man shall do in my name, and for me in a Court, without my agreement, Idem. March, Rep. fol. 48. pl. 76.

If a Writ be brought against two as Executors, and one of them is no Executor, and he that is Executor confesses the Action, the other that is hurt hereby may have Remedy by this Action, F. N. B. 98. 9 Ed. 4. 15.

If one acknowledge a Statute, Recognizance, or enter into a Bail in my name, if I be hereby damaged, I may have reparations by this Writ, 19 H. 6. 44. F. N. B. 100.

By Forgery.

If any man forge a Deed in my name, and it be given in Evidence, or made use of against me, and I receive any hurt by it, I may have my Remedy by this Action, 5 Ed. 4. 126. 116. F. N. B. 99. k. But for a forging only this Action will not lie the same.

If one that is not the true Executor or Administrator get a Statute made to the Testator, and come into the Chancery, and shew the Testament proved, or the Letters of Administration, and so getteth out Writs and hath Execution, the true Executor may have this Writ against this counterfeit one. So if he do in the life time of the Counsellor supposing him to be dead, 2 R. 3. 8.

Sett. 27.
Delays in Suits.

If a man in a Suit will procure a protection for a year, and do not pursue it accordingly, but remove the suit, or do any such act, which by matter Ex post facto shall appear to be but to make delay, the party grieved may have this Action for his relief, F. N. B. 97. 20 H. 6. 10. Co. 5. 34. So if he get a Writ of Privilege as a servant to one of the Clerks in Chancery, when in truth he is not so, 11 H. 6. 8. So if the Essoynor cast an Essoyn, and warrant it not at the day, the Demandant that is hereby delayed, may have this Remedy, Bro. Disceit. 40.

If I enter into a Statute to pay money by a day, and pay it, and after another get the Statute and sue it against me, I may have this Action against him that doth it, F. N. B. 100. So if any man sue me in anothers name without his privity, I may sue him in this Action, Fitz. Action on the Case 3. F. N. B. 100. 96. 97.

If one procure another to sue and vex me without cause, I may have this Remedy against the procurer, F. N. B. 98. 116.

If one counterfeit a Letter in my name, and deliver him to my servant, and the effect of it is to persuade him to deliver the counterfeiter money, and my servant doth deliver it; in this Case I may for my relief have this Action against the counterfeiter, adjudged. Trin. 7 Jac. B. R. Tracies Case.

If a Tenant in antient Demesne levy a Fine of his Land at Common Law, it seems the Lord may have this Action, Plow. 370. F. N. B. 98. 99.

In Play.

If one that doth play with me, doth use false Dice and couzen me of my money thereby; I may have this action against him, Co. 11. 87. F. N. B. 95. New Book of Entries, 8.

In a Contract or Bargain.

If a man sell me any living or dead thing, as Cattle, Cloth, or the like, and at the time of the sale he doth warrant it to me good and right, and it be otherwise, I may have this Action for my Remedy; and this will lie, albeit I have not paid all the money for the thing bought, Kelw. 89. 9 H. 7. 22. 5 H. 7. 41. F. N. B. 94. Old N. B. 50. And if the seller say he will warrant it, but doth not say to me yet this a good warranty, Pasche, 3 Jac. B. R. Curia. Old Book of Entries, 9.

Upon a Warranty.

If one sell me any Land, or make me a Lease of that wherein he hath no right, I may perhaps have this Action, Goldsb. 123. pl. 8.

If one sell me Clothes, and warrant them to be of a certain length, and they be not so; I may have remedy by this Action, F. N. B. 98. 11 Ed. 4. 2.

If one sell me a Horse, and warrant him sound, wind, and limb, and he hath some secret disease known to the seller, and not visible to the buyer; as if he be shoulder-shot, or the like; this Action lieth for this, adjudged. Trin. 18 Jac. B. R. 11 Ed. 4. 6. 13 H. 4. 1. But it is held by some it will not lie upon a warranty, when the fault is such as the seller did not know of it, F. N. B. 94. But the Books are general, and it seems the Law is otherwise: So it is said, it will not lie upon the warranty, when the fault is apparent that the buyer may discern it by one of his five senses: As when the seller doth warrant the Clothes to be Red, and the buyer having seen them and they be Blue; or he doth warrant a Horse to be sound, and he hath a splint, spavy, oyl, or is lame, 13 H. 4. 2. 7 H. 4. 14. 5 H. 7. 41. 20 H. 6. 37. 31 H. 6. 11. So when when the warranty doth extend to a thing to come, as that a Horse shall carry a man thirty miles a day, Finchesley 188. So when the warranty is made after the thing is sold, and is no part of the Contract, and yet such a warranty Ex post facto, if it be by Deed, may amount to a Covenant, 5 H. 7. 41. 11 Ed. 4. 6. F. N. B. 98. Pasche, 3 Jac. B. R. Goldsmiths Case. Covenant:

If one sell me corrupt Victual or Wine, as if he mix Wine and Water, or the like, without any warranty, I may have this Action against him for his Deceit, Kelw. 91. 11 Ed. 4. 6. But if one sell corrupt or false and sophisticated Wares, it seems no Action of the Case will lie upon this sale without a warranty be made, Dyer 75, 76. yet see Kelw. 89. 7 H. 4. 10. 13 H. 4. 2. 9 H. 6. 52. 11 H. 6. 22. 19 H. 6. 49. F. N. B. 88. So if one sell me an Horse which is unsound, and I know him to be unsound, without warranty I cannot sue him for this, F. N. B. 94. 31 H. 6. Stratham action, Sur. le Case, pl. ult. 7 R. 2. Monstrance de faulse 160. So if one sell corrupt Wine or Victuals, if the buyer or his servant taste it before-hand, and like and accept it; in this Case this Action will not lie, 7 H. 4. 16. 13 H. 4. 2. Without a Warranty.

If one be about to sell me a Lease, and I tell him that J. S. bid me a hundred pound for it, and thereupon he giving credit to my report, is moved to give me one hundred pound for it, and J. S. did never bid me a hundred pound for it; he cannot have this Action against me for this falsity, for it was his Error to believe it, adjudged. B. R. 41 Eliz. Taylor's Case.

If one sell me Land or Goods that are none of his own to sell, and it is after taken away from me; or I be molested about it by the right owner, I may be relieved by this Action, Co. 4. 18. 42. Aff. 8. Bro. Action of the Case, 85. Fitz. 4.

If one sell me Land, and agree to make me an Estate by a day, and before the day he doth make it away, or some Estate out of it, or charge upon it to another, and then doth make the Estate to me, I may have this Action for my relief, 3 H. 7. 14. F. N. B. 98. 20 H. 6. 34. 2 H. 7. 12.

The Plaintiff declared that he sued D. The Defendant in an Action of the Case for words, and upon not guilty, the Defendant to take away the Plaintiffs credit, gave evidence, that he was a common lyer, and so recorded in the Star-Chamber; by reason whereof, the Jury gave very small damage, &c. It seemed to the Court not actionable, Brownl. 1. part. 2.

If one convey his Land to J. S. to that intent, that J. S. shall convey it to J. D. to whom the Feoffor had sold it, and J. S. refuse to convey it to him, and sell it to another: In this Case, the first owner of the Land may bring this Action against J. S. for his breach of Trust, Hughes, Rep. 64.

As for Deceit in breaking of promises, we have spoken to it before in an Action of the Case upon an Assumpsit. See Deceit.

Where an Action of the Case will lie for other misdoings, or not doings, or not.

THis Action of the Case lieth for wilful or negligent Misfeasances or Non-feasances in all the Cases following. (viz.)

If one stop a Ditch or River, or set up Flood-gates, so as to make the Water overflow and drown my ground adjoining to it, or stop or divert a Water-course running to my Mill or House; so that I cannot have that benefit by it I was used to have; I may have this Action for my Remedy, Co. 486. Dyer 248. 320. Co. 9. 50. F. N. B. 88, 89. 21 H. 7. 20. F. N. B. 92. But if a man stop or divert Water to amend a mans Banks or Mills, having by a custom such a liberty and power; this is justifiable, and will not bear an Action, 39 H. 6. 32. Bro. 77.

If one do procure another falsely and maliciously to indite me for any offence, or Indictment, cause me to be arrested, imprisoned, bound over, or arraigned for an offence, without any colour or cause of suspicion, I may have this Action against him for my relief, M. 4 Jac. B. R. Marshams Case, adjudged. Trin. 17 Jac. B. R. Olivers Case. M. 7 Jac. B. R. Gambels Case: See for this in an Action of the Case for a Conspiracy. Yet I have seen the report of a Case, that this Action will not lie, but where the party party indicted is acquitted upon a Trial, M. 5 Jac. B. R. Myn versus Tailor. But the contrary is practised every day; and therefore I cannot receive that for Law.

If one put such things in the water as do occasion the drowning of my ship, I may have this Action against him, F. N. B. 91. If my sheep be passing over Severn, and one of the passengers force one of them into the water, and all the rest follow and are drowned, I may have this Action; but whether I shall have damages for all, or one only, the Jury must well consider of it.

If one put Cats into my Warren amongst my Conies, it seems I may have this Action against him, Old book of Entries, f. 13. Mich. 2 Jac. B. R. by two Justices.

Self. 28.
Hindring my Execution.

If one hinder me of my Execution, as if a Sheriff come to another mans house where the goods of the Defendant are, and the door of the house being open, another man, not the owner of the house, shut the door and keep him out, or the owner of the house or any other man convey away the goods, and so prevent the Execution; this Action will lie for this, Adj. Hil. 20 Jac. B. R. Woods Case. New Book of Entries, f. 13. But if it be his own house, or to defend his own goods against the Execution, he may justify it, Co. 5. 91.

Executor.

If I have a Judgment against an Executor, and he do secretly and fraudulently make away his goods to prevent Execution, I may have this Action against him, M. 2 Car. B. R. Curia. If an Officer be coming to arrest a man, or attach his goods at my suit, and another man convey away the goods or the person, so that he cannot do the work, I may have this Action against him, F. N. B. 102. 21 H. 7. 40. 18 Ed. 3. 3. If a man be arrested at my suit, and another man rescue him, and so he get away, in this case I may have this remedy and recover the debt in damage from him, Hil. 20 Jac. B. R. nullo contradicente, & 7 Jac. B. R. Hawks Case.

Distress.

If another mans cattel be on my ground damage fasant, and a stranger of his own head remove them, so as I cannot distrain them damage fasant, I may (as it seems) have this Action, Finches ley 200. Co. 5. 91. So if I be coming to distrain my Tenant for my Rent, and he hearing thereof drive away the cattel and prevent my distress, Hil. 20 Jac. per Just. Haughton.

If I have provided wood for a special purpose, as to make Iron, or the like, and a stranger take it away, I may have remedy for this Action, New book of Entries, 36, 37.

Abusing a Distress.

If one distrain my Kine great with Calf, and by driving they lose their Calves, I may have this Action, F. N. B. 86. Brownl. 1 part, 12.

Burning a House.

If my neighbor, his servant or any other that shall come into his house by his good will and agreement, shall wilfully, or through negligence fire his, and thereby my house, I may have relief by this Action, 2 H. 4. 18. Exod. 22. 6. Old book Entries f. 8. But if my neighbor without negligence, and against his will, and thereby my house is burnt, contra. 2 H. 4. 18. See Brownl. 1 part, 197.

Menacing.

If one threaten me, my wife, servants or children, that he or some other shall do us some hurt, and do afterwards lie in wait to do it, and by this means we be so put in fear that we dare not follow our business, as if my servant by this means dare not go abroad about his work, or depart away out of my service, and I have hereby any particular loss, I may have remedy by this Action. But for a bare threatening, without some doing or endeavor, as lying in wait, or the like, no Action will lie, Co. 7. 1. Kelm. 40. 9 H. 7. 7.

Dog killing Cattel.

If another man hath a dog that hath been used to kill cattel, and the owner of the dog hath had notice given him thereof, and this dog happen to kill my cattel, I may have this action against the master of the dog, Dyer 25. Co. 4. 18. Exod. 21. 29, 35. 36 H. 6. 6. So there must be three things in the Case to bear up the action. 1. The dog must be used to bite. 2. The owner must have notice of it. 3. It must be his dog when he doth it, Pasc. 9 Jac. B. R. Londars Case. And it was held by Baron Denham, and accordingly he gave direction to a Jury, That if A. have such a dog, and B. take him out with A. without his privity, and then he kill my cattel, that I may sue A. for this.

If one remove a meer-stone, and I be hurt by it, I may have this Action against him that did it, Old Book of Entries, f. 9. Removing bounds.

If one stop Water, and put it out of his old course, and by that means it surround my ground to my hurt, I may have this Action, New Book of Entries, f. 18. Nuisance.

If one take out an Execution upon a Record in any Court, when he knoweth the Record is removed by a Writ of Error into another Court; it seems I may have this Action, Trin. 39 Eliz. Co. B.R. Willis vers. Stroud. Abuse of Justice.

If one cast a false Protection, the party delaid hereby, may have this Action, Trin. 19 Jac. B.R. 21 Ed. 4.

If one sue me in a Court that hath not jurisdiction of my person, or sue me for a thing whereof that Court hath not jurisdiction; for this unjust vexation, I may have this Remedy: As if one sue me in the Admiralty or Spiritual Court for a thing not triable there, or sue me in the Kings-Marshalsey, when neither of us are of the Kings house; in these Cases this Action lieth: But if one sue me in an improper or unjust Action, this Action will not lie for this; for here I shall have costs in the same Suit for my relief, Co. 10. 76. Stat. 2 H. 4. 11. Fitz. Estoppel. 18. 10 H. 6. 13. Trin. 3 Jac. B. R. Dame Waterhouse Case. And yet if one sue me for Tithes, where I ought not to pay Tithes, which is forbidden by the Statute of 32 Eliz. 7. I may not have this Action for this, adjudged. Partridge Case. But if one take a false Oath against me in a proper Court, whether he come in by or without Proces, and I be prejudiced by it, I cannot have this Action against him, M. 38. 39 Eliz. Co. B. R. Adjudged. Dampports Case. M. 18 Jac. B. R. Evers Case. Co. 4. 14. For it is in an ordinary course of Justice, and an Act of the Court. Suits in improper Courts or Counties.

If one sue me in anothers name, without his privity, though it be upon a just cause, I may have this Action against him; and if I have any special loss by it, recover damages accordingly, March. Rep. f. 48. pl. 76. For this is Maintenance. False Oath.

Where one that is not of a Jury, causeth himself to be sworn in the name of one returned of the Jury, and gives his verdict; either party may have this Action against him, March. Rep. f. 81. pl. 132.

If one hinder the Parson that he cannot have his Tythe; he may have this Action, Co. 2 part. Inst. 650.

If one indict another, or sue an appeal against another, in another County, then that wherein he dwells; this Action lieth against him for this wrong, Stat. 8 H. 6. ch. 10. 6 H. 6. ch. 1. Kelw. 21. So if one sue me in a Forreign County, and there secretly pursue me to an Out-lawry, I having no notice of it; this Action lieth for my relief, New Book of Entries, f. 42.

If a Prohibition be delivered to a man, to stay a Suit he hath against me in a Court, and he proceed in that Suit notwithstanding, I may have this Action, F. N. B. 92.

If a man have a Judgment, and have levied goods to pay the Debt upon an Execution, and the Sheriff return that they are in his hands for default of buyers, and the Plaintiff knowing hereof, sues out a new Execution which the Sheriff doth execute; no Action will lie against the Plaintiff for this, Pasche, 17 Jac. Co. B. R. Waterer vers. Freeman. So if one be to pay me money at Michaelmas on a Bond, and pay it, and after I sue the Bond, he cannot have this Action against me, Pasche, 17 Jac. B. R. per Ch. Justice.

If a Guardian be to sue for an Infant, and do it not as he should, the Infant may have remedy by this Action, Dyer 361. Kelw. 135. Broo. 118.

If I be bound to appear in a Court at a day, and before or against the day, one cause me to be arrested of purpose and malice to prevent my appearance, and to cause a forfeiture of my Bond; in this Case I may have this Action for my relief, 7 H. 6. 45. Fitz. 4.

If a Lessee for life do make a Lease for years, and this Lessee for years doth commit waste, for which the Lessee for life is punished; in this Case he shall have this Action against the Lessee for years, and recover as much as the Lessor doth or may recover of him, Pasche, 38 Eliz. B. R. Germies Case. So if Lessee for years of a house, Lease it for part of the time, and that time expire, the Lessee continue in possession, Between Lessor and Lessee, or Lord and Copibolders.

possession, and pull down part of the house, the first Lessee may have this Action, adjudged, Trin. 6 Car. B. R. If the Lessee will not suffer his Lessor to come into the house to see if any Waste be done in it, the Lessor may have remedy by this Action, Hil. 20 Jac. B. R. adjudged. See Brownl. 1 part, 197, 329, 370.

If the Lord cut down the Copiholders trees without his leave, though he leave the shrouds behind him, yet this Action lieth for the Copiholder against the Lord, M. 3 Jac. B. R. Cross vers. Abbot, unless the Lord be by custom to have the trees, & Trin. 17 Jac. per Just. Haughton.

If a Lord cut down a tree whereof the Tenant is to have the lops, Brownl. 1 part, 197, 231. See more in 142, 197, 208. 2 part, 55, 331, 332. So of a Copiholder, where the Lord doth cut down all the trees, that he cannot have fireboot, &c. Brownl. 1 part, 231.

If I deliver to another cloth to keep, and he keep it negligently; I may have this Action or Detinue against him, 2 H. 7. Brownl. 1 part, 152.

If I be a Baker, and buy Corn of another to deliver me such a day, and he do not deliver it, I may have this Action or Debt for it, by 20 H. 7. Brownl. 1 part, 79.

If a Tenant at will of a house, or his servant, or his Lessee at will, which is his servant, do voluntarily burn the house, the first Lessor may have remedy by this action, M. 17 Jac. B. R. per Ch. Justice. But if he suffer the house by negligence to be burnt, or the trees negligently to be cut down, no action will lie for this, Co. 5. 13. But in the first Case it seems the proper remedy is to be against the Tenant at will by a general action of Trespass, and not by this action; for if he burn, pull down the house, or cut trees, the Will is determined, Dyer 122. 15 Ed. 4. 20. Lit. f. 15.

If the Lessor put out the Executors of the Lessee out of their term, they may have this action, Co. 4. 18. F. N. B. 92.

Disturbance in
office, &c.

If I be hindered in all or part of my Common, private way, or private water, Walk or Foldage, which time out of mind by prescription or otherwise I have good right unto, I may have remedy by this action, New book of Entries, f. 9, 11, 14. Co. 5. 76. 13 H. 7. 26. Co. 1 part, Inst. 56. So if the inhabitants of my Parish have by prescription a watering place, and it be disturbed, every one of us may have this action, Finches Ley, 187. 27 H. 8. 27. See Brownl. 1 part, 197, 231.

If one inclose Land which should lie open in a Manor, in which the Commoners have Common, or eat up the Common so that the Commoners have not sufficient, every Commoner may have this action against the Disturber, Co. 9. 113, 11, 54. F. N. B. 145. 21 H. 7. 40.

Self. 29.

If I have an Office, and another disturb me in it, that I cannot use it, this action is given me for my relief, 6 Ed. 4. 9. Broo. 94. Co. 9. 50. F. N. B. 94. So if one hinder me in my Fair or Market, that I cannot have the Toll, or distrain one to come to his Leet that ought to come to my Leet, I may have this action, Old B. of Entries, f. 5, New B. of Entries, f. 10. 11 H. 4. 64.

If I and my ancestors time out of mind have had an Isle in a Church for seats, and funeral of such as die in my house, as belonging to my house, and the Parson or any other disturb me, I may have this remedy, New B. of Entries, f. 9.

If one grant me to have hay and straw in his house for my two Kine all the winter long during my life, and I be disturbed of it, it seems this Action lieth, Fitz. 17.

If a Statute forbid a thing without a penalty, and it be broken, and I have any special loss by it, it is thought I may have relief by this Action, F. N. B. 90. Trin. 3 Jac. B. R.

Escape.

If a Prisoner escape by the Gaolers means, either wilfully or negligently, I may have remedy against the Gaoler; and if he go against the Gaolers will, and he be forced in this Action to make me amends, he may have this Action against the Prisoner for his counter-remedy, 7 H. 4. 14. Broo. 34.

For spoiling
my goods.

If I deliver Goods to W. and he deliver them over to I. S. to my use, and I. S. do impair them, I may have this remedy against I. S. 12 Ed. 4. 13. Broo. 96.

If one cancel my Deed, or mar my Goods delivered to him, I may have this Action; and I may have this Action for marring my Deed, albeit the Deed be naught, Old B. of Entries, f. 7. Broo. 382. M. 9 Jac. B. R. Constables Case.

If

If one have my Cattel to keep, and they die by Gods hand, this Action lieth not; nor albeit he promise to keep them safe, per Just. Bridgman. But if one have my Cattel to keep, and suffer them to die by his negligence, I may have this remedy,

2 H. 7. 11. Dyer 12. Co. 5. 14.

If I pledg my goods for money to another, and at the time of payment of the money I tender the money, and require my pledg, and he will not deliver it, I may have this Action against him, Old B. of Entries, f. 8. F.N.B.86. And if they perish by his default, I may have this Action; but if they perish by accident without any default of his, I can have no Action for this, D. & St. 129.

If one that findeth my goods doth lose them, or suffer them to be impaired by his default, I may have this Action against him. But if they be left in a house which by chance is burned or falleth, or they be delivered to another to keep who doth run away with them, in these cases it seems the Finder is not chargeable for them. But if one find my goods, and they be afterwards hurt or lost by casualty without any default of his, no action will lie for this, D. & St. 38. 1. 9.

If one for hire borrow my horse to ride to London, and he ride him further, or ride him out of the way, or forwards and backwards, and forwards again, in and upon the right way; in all these Cases I may for this have this action, and especially there where the horse is hurt. So if the borrower ride him excessively, so as to hurt him. So if the borrower put him into an old rotten house ready to fall, and the house fall down and kill him. So if any one borrow or hire my goods to use to one purpose, and he use it to another; in all these cases this action is given to me for my relief, 12 E. 4. 8, 13. 21 E. 4. 79. D. & St. 129, 128. Co. 8. 146. 2 H. 7. 11. But if one that doth borrow my horse, by hard riding make him very weary only, so that he will do no work in a good while after; or if a horse so borrowed die suddenly without any default in the borrower, in doing that for which he was hired; or if he put him in a strange house which doth casually fall and kill him, in all these cases no action will lie, D. & St. 128, 129. Exod. 22. 14, 15. 40 Ed. 3. 6. If one lend me a horse for hire for a time, and he take him from me within the time, I may have this action against him, F.N.B.86. See Brownl. 1 part, 8, 9, 17.

Upon a Loan.

If I be Executor to a man, and the goods be in another mans house, and I come in time convenient to fetch them away, and he do actually disturb me, so that I cannot have them, I may have this action against him. M. 7 Jac B R.

If one take my beasts or goods from me, and another take them by force from him, I may have this action against the second taker, 12 E. 4. 12.

If I be to have Corn I have sowed upon another mans Land, and be disturbed in it, I may have this action, Finches Ley 187.

For a disturbance and detainer.

If I buy Corn of one, and pay him part of the money, and leave it with him, and pray him to keep it till such a time, and he convert it to his own use, I may have remedy by this action; and if the Corn were in bags, I may have also a Detinue for it, Kelm. 77.

Detinue.

If I leave my goods with one to keep, or I leave them with him, and he take them into his custody without any words, and the goods be lost or wasted, I may recover the worth of them in this action, albeit he be to have nothing for keeping them: But if when he doth receive them, he receive them with a special caution and agreement, that he tell the owner he will not answer for them, or he will keep them as his own, or keep them as well as he can; in these cases no action will lie unless there be an Assumpsit, and good consideration for it in the Case, Co. 4. 83. 5. 13. Exod. 22. 9, 10, 11. Kelm. 77. 12 E. 4. 15. 2 H. 7. 11. Co. super Lis. 89. Old book of Entries, 3, 9.

Bailment.

If a Gaoler use me (being his prisoner) extremly, I may have remedy by this action, F.N.B.93.

Gaoler.

If a Ferriman undertake to carry any thing for me over the water, and by his default it doth take hurt or is spoiled in or after the carriage, I may have this remedy against him, Adjudg. Partridges Case.

Ferriman.

If a common Carrier (although he be but newly a Carrier, or carry but for some persons only, if he carry for money) take any thing for me to carry, and do hurt or impair it himself, or suffer it to be hurt by his apparent negligence, as if he over-load his horse, and by that means he fall into the water, and so it is marred; or he drive his horses by night, or out of the way, and is thereby robbed, I may have this Action for my relief. And yet a Carrier by a special agreement in the undertaking of the carriage may avoid the Action. If therefore when he takes them to carry, he saith, and agreeth that he will not answer them if they are lost, he shall not be charged, as in case where he undertaketh them generally, D. & St. 139. 38. Fitz. 14, 15.

Servant.

If my Bailiff that doth keep my Cattel, kill them, or cut down my Trees, or my Butler break my Hamper, or the like; I may have remedy by this Action against them, 18 Ed. 4. 20. 27. Broo. 95. Or rather by a general Action of Trespass, for by this the privity and trust is determined, Co. 5. 13. If my Ploughman that hath the charge of my Plough, drive so hard as to kill or harm it, I may have this Action against him, 7 H. 4. 14. Broo. 34. If I put a confidence in a man, albeit he come to my goods by his delivery, yet if he be negligent, I may have this Action. As if my Shepherd that I do trust with my Sheep, keep them so carelessly, that they be drowned; or turn shabby by his neglect, I shall have remedy by this Action, 2 H. 7. 1. Co. 5. 14. If one undertake to do a work for me, as to set plants, or the like, and do it deceitfully, I may have remedy by this Action, Old Book of Entries, f. 13.

Smith.

If a Smith refuse to shooe my horse, being requested, or clie him in his shooing of him, so that I loose the use of him for a time, I may have this Action against him, 14 H. 7. 22. Kelm. 40. F.N.B. 94.

Tailor.

So if a Tailor spoil my Garment in the making of it, or a Barber shave me with an unwholsome Razor, so that my face is hurt, or cut my face with any Razor, I may sue him in this Action. And so for other men that undertake to do work of their calling, and do it amiss, F.N.B. 94. 7 H. 6. 5. Old Book of Entries f. 2. 46 Ed. 3 19.

Señ. 30.
Inn-keeper.

If an Inn-keeper refuse to lodg me, or herbage my horse when he hath room and may do it, I may have this Action against him, and the Constable of the Town may (if he will) compel him to receive me, unless he can give good reasons for his refusal, as that his house is full, or I have the plague, or the like, 14 H. 7. 22. Kelm. 50. Dyer 158. 5 Ed. 4. 2. Pasche, 7 fac. Curia. But it seems he may refuse the horse or goods of any man that will not lie there himself, Pasche, 7 fac. B. R. Walbrooks Case. If I loose any thing out of an Inn, or common Hostelry, I may have this Action for my relief against the Inn-keeper or Hostler; and this Action will lie, albeit the Inn-keeper did at the first refuse me, and albeit the goods lost were never delivered to the host, or he were never charged with it, and albeit his house be full of guests, and albeit I kept the Key of my Chamber-door my self, and leave open the door my self, and albeit I be robbed by my Chamber-fellow, if the Inn-keeper placed him with me, Co. 8. 32. F.N.B. 95. Dyer 58. But in all Cases where this Action is maintainable, these things must be in the Case. 1. The thing must be lost. 2. The person to be charged must be a common Host, he must be one that doth receive such, Co. 8. 32. For if one leave his horse with one that is no common Inn-holder, and it be lost, he shall not answer it, Dyer 166. 158. And yet if he have but newly set up, he shall be chargable. 3. The party that lost the goods must be a stranger or traveller, and therefore if it be a friend or neighbor that hath lost it, he shall not have this Action, Co. 8. 32. 4. The thing lost must be gone out of the Inn, the House, or the Stable; and therefore if the owner bid the Hostler put his horse to grass, and it be lost there, the owner must bear it; but if the Host of his own head, put him out to grass, and he be lost, the Host must bear it, Co. 8. 32. 5. It must be lost by the negligence of the Hostler, or his Servants, as in the Cases last before. If the Host or his man put the guests horse to grass, without the privity of the guest: If a horse die in the Stable without any default of the Host or his man, they are not chargable, Pasche, 12 fac. Co. B. R. Whitakers Case. So if the guest be robbed by his own servant, or his Chamber-fellow of his own choice, no Action will lie for this, Co. 8. 32. It must therefore appear that the goods came into his hands. 6. The party that doth loose must be a guest to the house, at the time of the loss; for if he be a friend invited, to lodg all night by the Inn-keeper, he is not chargable for this loss, Pasche, 7 fac. B. R. Walbrooks Case. 7. The goods must be lost whilst the owner is there; for if one leave his dead goods with the Inn-holder, and he do not lie there himself, and the goods are stole, the Host shall not answer them, Idem. And yet if it be a horse or living thing which is left, by which the Inn-keeper gets, he must answer it. But if a man leave other goods, as Hats, or the like, and the Host saith he will keep them safe, and the guest come not in many days, and these be lost, he shall not be charged. But if the guest go away in the morning, and come at night, Contra, adjudged. Brownl. 1. part. 254. And Inn-holders.

If an Officer take Toll of me, where none is due, for my relief herein I may have Officer-this Action, F.N.B. 94.

If an Officer of a Court get a priviledge for one, supposing him to be his servant who is not so, and is sued by me, and thereby my suit is delayed, I may have this Action against him, 31 Ed. 4. 22. It is said by some, that if a publick Officer whose Fee is tendered to him or recoverable by Law, do refuse to execute his Office, that he is liable to this Action. And therefore if a Sergeant at Law, refuse to give advice to, or an Attorney to be retained by me, that I may have this Action against him; otherwise it is of a Barrester, for he cannot sue for his Fee: Of this opinion was Justice Bridgman, 17 Car. If a Sheriff, Bailiff, or any such like Officer do misdemean himself in not doing, or neglect, or misdoing his office, the party hurt by this, may have this Action, especially, if he give him or tender him his Fees before-hand to do it, as if he refuse a Writ, or have a Writ or Warrant to Arrest a man, and may do it, and doth it not, the Plaintiff in the Action may have this remedy, Co. 9. 60. 5. 89. Plow. 48. So if the Sheriff refuse to return a Writ, or make a false return of a Writ, the party grieved by it may have this Action, 41 Affize, pl. 12. 21 Ed. 3. 43. 10 H. 7. 23. Old Book of Entries, f. 111. March. Rep. f. 99. pl. 169. So if an Officer make a false Certificate, he that is hurt by it may have this Action, Co. 11. 94. Or if the Sheriff refuse to receive a Writ against one he hath in execution, the Plaintiff may have this Action, 41 Aff. pl. 12. Co. 5. 87. So if the Sheriff have a Writ against a man at my Suit, and I shew him the man, and he do not Arrest him, I shall have this Action, and albeit it be on the Sabbath day when I do shew him to him, yet he is bound then to Arrest him, Pasche, 18 Jac. B.R. per 3 Justices.

Smith sued the Sheriff of London for not putting his name to the Return of a Venire facias, by which the Judgment was reversed for Error, and the Plaintiff recovered damages by this Action, Brownl. 1. part. 3. 12. 50.

If the Sheriff do Out-law a man, and do not proclaim him according to the Statute, 10 H. 7. 23. Broo. 122. Or if he return a man of a Jury that hath a Charter of Exemption, and hath given notice thereof to the Sheriff; in these Cases this Action lieth, 18 H. 8. 5. If the Sheriff or his Bailiff enter upon any Franchise or Liberty to execute Writs, I may have this Action, but the Arrest is good, and no false imprisonment lieth upon it, F.N.B. 95.

False Imprisonment.

Escape.

If the Sheriff suffer a man arrested upon an Execution to Escape, the Plaintiff in the first Action, may have this Action for his relief, 15 Ed. 4. 32. Co. 4. 95. March. Rep. f. 1. So if the prisoner be rescued, otherwise it is, if it be on a mean Proces. If the Sheriff proceed in his Court after the Cause is removed into another Court, this Action lieth, F.N.B. 99. If the Sheriff or his Bailiff attach goods, and deliver them back again, the Plaintiff in the first Suit may have this Action for his remedy, F.N.B. 92. If an Escheater had returned any other thing then what was found by the Jury, 9 H. 6. 66. Fitz. 6. So if an Ordinary or other Officer doth so, the party grieved may have this Action in these Cases. But all this (as it seems) is to be understood of Ministerial Acts onely; for if they refuse to do, or do amiss, or do not their duty in Judicial Acts; it is said this Action will not lie, 12 H. 6. 2. 2 R. 3. 9, 10. 12 H. 6. 3. And this difference was agreed by the Court, M. 22 Jac. B.R. Sed quare, and study the reason of this diversity. See more of this before in an Action of the Case for a Deceit.

If there be a Charge upon any man by reason of his Tenure of House or Land, to Repair.
repair any Bank, Bridge, Gutter, or private way, or the like, and he doth it not, and hereby I have a special prejudice, I may have remedy by this Action, Old Book of Entries, f. 10. Or if one be bound to repair the Sea or Severn Banks, and he neglect it, and hereby my ground is drowned; I may have this Action, Trin. 20 Jac. B. R. But in this Case if the decay be by an extraordinary inundation or accident, no Action lieth for this, Co. 10. 139.

Suit to a Court.

If one that ought to do Suit to my Court, or grinde at Mill, pay Toll in my Fair or Market, or to egest my Land with his Cattel, doth refuse to do it; this Action lieth for my Remedy, 7 H. 4. 9. 44. 21 H. 7. 16. 22 H. 6. 14. Brownl. 11 part. 204.

For not repairing.

If a Lessor do not repair the decays of the housing, having notice, where he is bound to do it, or pay subsidies, and such things as by Law he ought to do, but suffer it to fall upon the Lessee, or he be prejudiced by it; he may have remedy by this Action, 21 H. 7. 12. 22 H. 6. 14.

For damage-felant;

If one tack Cattel with me till Michaelmas, and the owner suffer them to stay longer, and do not take them away, I may have this Action against him for this injury, 45 Ed. 3. 6. 21 H. 7.

If one buy my Hay in my Meadow, and do not take it away in time, but suffer it to lie so long as to mar the Grass, I may have this remedy, Fitz. 48. So if I set out the Parsons Tithes duly, and give the Parson notice of it, and he do not take it away out of my house or ground in a reasonable time, but suffer it there to my prejudice, I may have this Action for my relief, Stucklies Case, Co. B. R. 45 Ed. 3. 6. M. 20 Jac. Denhams Case:

For disceipr.

If I retain a man to purchase Land for me, and he do it not; but do his endeavor to do it, no Action lieth for it: But if he purchase it for himself, for this I may have this Action, 11 H. 6. 18. 3 H. 7. 14. 17.

For detaining writings.

If I buy Land, and a stranger hath some of the Writings that doth concern the Land, and the vender and I request the Writings, and he will not deliver them, it is thought I may bring this Action, Old Book of Entries, f. 5.

Self. 31. Mounds.

If one be bound by prescription to make his Hedge next to my ground, and do it not, and thereby other mens Cattel come into my ground, or I am otherwise dampnified, I may have this Action for my relief against him that should make the Hedge, Trin. 20 Jac. B. R. And so for any such like thing which a man is bound to do, as to help Wares out of the Sea with a Crane, or the like, Old Book of Entries, fol. 3.

Against a Parson for not keeping a Bull.

If the Parson of the Parish be bound by the Custom to keep a common Bull or Bear, and do not, and any of the Parishioners have any loss thereby, he may be righted by this Action, adjudged. Trin. 36 Eliz. Yaldings Case. Fitz. 5c.

For not saying Divine Service.

If one ought to say Divine Service in my private Chappel, and do it not; I may have this Action, Co. 5. 71. 22 H. 6. 46. But if it be to be said to a whole Parish, no Action will lie for the neglect or omission, Co. 5. 73.

Upon a Robbery against a Hundred.

If I be robbed in my travel, I may recover damages for my loss of the Hundred wherein I am robbed, by an Action in the nature of an Action of Trespass on the Case, upon the Statutes of 13 Ed. 1. 1, 2. 28 Ed. 3. 11. 27 Eliz. 13. But for the further opening hereof these things are to be known.

Where ever this Action is maintainable, there must be these things in the Case:

1. The party robbed, must with all the speed he can, give notice thereof to, and make Hue and Cry at the next Village (be it in the same or another Hundred, or Countrey) and to some of the Inhabitants dwelling in or near the place where the thing is done. And herein it is most safe for him to give notice to the Inhabitants on that side, which way the Theeves do flie, and to give notice to many of the Neighborhood; and yet see Goldsb. 56. 62. the contrary.

2. He must bring his Action for it within a year after the Robbery done, and yet not within forty days after the Robbery done.

3. He must within twenty days next before the Action brought, and Test of the Original Writ, be examined upon Oath before one of the next Justices of Peace of the County, in or neer the Hundred, whether he knoweth any of the parties that robbed him; and if he doth know any of them, then before the Action brought, he must be bound by Recognizance before that Justice effectually to prosecute them.

4. The Robbery must be done in the day time, for if it be done after the night is come; and before the day, no Action will lie for it. And yet see Goldsb. 56: pl. 10. 61. 70.

5. The Robbery must be on the High-way, for it lieth not for a Robbery upon me in my House.

6. The Felons must be fled, for if any of them be apprehended, although it be by the party robbed himself, the Action fails, but pursue without taking will not excuse the Hundred.

7. It must be a Robbery on the person; for if a man have tied his Horse to a Hedge, and be gone aside to untruss-a-point, and the while the Thief take away his Cloak-bag, or a Carrier be behinde his Horses, and not near them, and his packs be robbed before he come; no Action will lie for this.

And as to this point these things are further to be known.

1. That if my Servant or Carrier be robbed of my money or goods, I may sue, but the Servant or Carrier must be examined upon Oath; and if he will not be examined, I have no remedy; and in these Cases a man may be a witness in his own cause, but a man must make a very clear proof that he or a Carrier had so much money, or such goods.

2. In case of the Carrier, if he be robbed of my goods, either he or I may sue, unless the case be such as he is not answerable, as where he doth take the goods upon a special agreement to keep them as his own, &c.

3. If one of the Robbers be not taken within forty days, it seems the Hundred is chargeable.

4. If it be done between two Hundreds, both the Hundreds and Franchises within them shall be charged with it.

5. If it light upon any persons in particular, they must help by way of contribution from the rest, by the help of the Justices of Peace.

6. If any default have been in the following of the Hue and Cry by any other Hundred, the Hundred charged with the Robbery, may recover half their damage again of the Hundred in default, Co. 7. 7. Plow. 128. 27 Eliz. 13. Trin. 21 Jac. Francis Forsters Case, Dyer 370. 13 Ed. 1. 2. 28 Ed. 3. 11.

7. If the man be robbed of the Masters money, the Master may sue.

8. Though the party robbed, be negligent to pursue, and refuse to lend his horse to make Hue and Cry, this will not hinder him of his Action, so convenient notice be given.

9. Albeit, the party robbed do not know the Theeves at the time, and take his Oath so, and after he come to know them, and say so; yet this doth not take away his Action.

10. Notice given in the Hundred, five miles from the place where he is robbed, is sufficient.

11. Notice at one Town, and Hue and Cry at another, is good. March. Rep. 10. pl. 28.

12. All that live in the Hundred at the time of Execution, shall be contributory to the same.

13. A Servant to, or a Receiver of anothers money, may also sue the Hundred, as well as the Master. Goldsb. 24. pl. 3. See Brownl. 1. part. 155.

Self. 1.
What it is.

It is a Writ lying where a Bailiff of a Lord, Receiver, Guardian, or other hath received money, or other things of me, or of another for me, for which he ought to render an account, and he doth refuse to do it; by this means he may be compelled to account, and I may recover not only mine own, but damages also if there be cause, Co. super Lit. 172. F. N. B. 116.

Bailiff, what.

By Bailiff here we understand a Servant that hath the administration or charge of lands, goods or chattels, to make the best benefit for the owners.

And against him this Action doth lie, which he hath, or might have made by his industry, his reasonable charges allowed, Co. super Lit. 171. Co. 4. 30.

Receiver, what

By Receiver here we understand him that receiveth money or other things to the use of another to render an account, Co. super Lit. 171.

Self. 2.
How the Accountant shall be charged.
For the manner.

In this Action the Plaintiff must take great care that he charge the Defendant aright: For he must be charged (except it be in case of the Keepers of the Liberties) as Bailiff, Receiver, or Guardian; for otherwise as Apprentice, Surveyor, Comptroller, Reeve or Hayward, he cannot be charged; and therein he must be charged as he is. For if he be a Bailiff, the Writ must charge him as Bailiff; if a Receiver, the Writ must say so; if both, the Writ or Action must so charge him, Co. super Lit. 172. When the things of which a man doth receive the profits (whether it be Lands or Goods) be incertain, as a Manor, Hundred, or the like, that may be improved, there he shall be charged as Bailiff: But where the things (be it profits of Courts, Forfeitures, Issues, Fines or Amerciaments) be certain, there he shall be charged as Receiver, 9 Ed. 4. 40.

If an Heir do sue his Guardian in Socage, for the Profits of his Lands taken before his age of fourteen years, he must charge him as Guardian; but if he sue him for any of the Profits after his age of fourteen years, there he must charge him as Bailiff; and if he sue a stranger that doth intermeddle with his Land, he must charge him as Guardian, Lit. fell. 124. F. N. B. 118.

If I deliver another Wares to sell, and he sell them to divers persons and receive the money; in this case it seems he is to be charged as Bailiff, not as Receiver, 4 H. 6. 27. Broo. Account, 18, 53.

For the matter.

Where a Bailiff doth make a Deputy, yet the Writ must be against the Bailiff himself, F. N. B. 119 b.

The Bailiff shall be charged for the Profits which he hath, or might by his industry and care have reasonably made and raised, his reasonable charges and expences deducted, Co. super Lit. 172.

Self. 3.
The method and proceeding in this Action.

In the Suit upon this Writ, if the Defendant cannot avoid it by Plea, Judgment is first given, that the Defendant must account; and thereupon Auditors are appointed and assigned by the Court to hear and examine the accounts of the party, what he hath received, and what he hath laid out; and that being done, to present it to the Court; and thereupon there is another Judgment entred, That the Plaintiff shall recover this money of the Defendant.

Ex parte talis, what it is.

And if the Accomptant be found in arrearages before the Auditors, they may award him to prison till agreement made with the party. And in this account they must allow him his reasonable allowances and expences: And if the Auditors refuse so to do, or charge him with more then he hath received, then (for his relief) his next friend may have a Writ out of the Chancery, called Ex parte talis, which is directed to the Sheriff to bring his body into the Exchequer before the Barons there, with four Mainpernors, there to account before them at a certain day, and to warn the the Lord to appear at that day; or if the Plaintiff please, he may wave this course, and bring a new Action of Debt for the arrearages found upon the Account, or he may keep him in Prison upon their Commitment, till he have paid or agreed. But if when the Defendant doth first appear, he deny he is his Bailiff or Receiver, then this Issue must first be tried; and if it be found against the Defendant, the Judgment is, Quod computat: and if after that he will not appear, a Scire facias is to be had; and if he come not, a Capias ad computandum, and upon that an Exigent. And if the Defendant appear not upon the first Writ, the Plaintiff may have a Capias, and Process of Outlawry, or he may have a Monstravit, which is an old Writ (now out of use) and doth lie where the Bailiff or Receiver hath no Lands whereby to be distrained, and doth lie hid, then this Writ was granted to take his body, and this was used before any Process of Outlawry was given in the Case; but after the first Judgment, a Capias ad computandum only lieth Stat. 13 E. 1. West. cap. 11. F. N. B. 117. Plow. 393. Co. 11. 40. Stat. 52 H. 3. 24. Marlb. c. 23.

Capias ad computandum, where it lieth. Monstravit, what it is.

The Ward may have this Writ against his Guardian in Socage, Lit. 124. F. N. B. 118. The Executor or Administrator, upon Accounts to be made to the Testator, Stat. 13 E. 1. cap. 23. Dyer 23. Kelw. 131. The succeeding against the preceding Churchwardens, 8 E. 4. 6. Broo. Account 71. But the Parishioners cannot bring it against the Churchwardens.

Señ. 4. Who may have this Writ, or not.

One Merchant may have it against another Merchant, where they occupie their merchandizes and Trade together, F. N. B. 117. Also one Joint-Tenant, or Tenant in common, in case where he doth make his companion his Bailiff of his part, may have this Action against him: But if one Joint-Tenant, or Tenant of goods in common, deliver them to a stranger, he alone must have the Action, Co. 11. 89. F. N. B. 118.

If a stranger take the profits of my wives Land during marriage, and I die; my Executor, and not my wife, shall have this Action for the profits, F. N. B. 119.

Executor.

If I deliver one money to keep till after my death, and then to dispose for my soul, my Executor cannot recover it by this Action; for as to this money, he is my Executor.

It lieth (as before) against a Guardian, Joint-Tenant, Tenant in common, Merchant: But it doth not lie against a Joint-Tenant, or Tenant in common, by his companion, unless he be made Bailiff for the profits, &c. Co. super Lit. 272.

Señ. 5. Against whom this Action maybe brought or not. Joint-Tenant. Tenant in Common. Baron & feme.

It lieth against a man or woman Guardian, Bailiff, or Receiver, Co. 11. 89. F. N. B. 119.

It lieth against the husband, for the Receipt of his wife; against the wife and husband, for the Receipt of the wife whilst she was sole; but it lieth not against a wife without her husband, 4 E. 4. 25. Broo. Account, 68. 82. Dyer 202. 28. It lieth against a Body-Politique, as against any man, 19 H. 6. 5. It doth lie against a Se-vant that hath a command to receive for his Master, 19 H. 6. 5. It lieth against the Keeper of a Park that hath the charge of the Deer, as Bailiff of his Park; 10 H. 7. 6. Also it lieth against an Executor or Administrator, or any other that medleth with the Lands of the King in his case; but in the case of a common person it doth not lie against an Executor or Administrator, Lit. 28. Co. 11. 84. 90. Nor doth this Action lie against an Infant as Bailiff or Receiver, Lit. 28. Co. upon it, 172. Nor against a Disseisor for the profits of the Land, Co. 11. 89. upon Lit. 73. Nor against a Parish-Priest for Offerings, without some agreement, F. N. B. 119. Nor against a Surveyor, Apprentice, Comptrollor, Reeve or Hayward, unless he can be charged as Bailiff or Receiver.

Executor: Infant.

The Heir may have this Action against his Guardian in Socage, to compel him to render the profits of the Land to him; but he cannot sue him till he be fourteen years old. And if a stranger that is not a Prochein-Amy, enter upon the Lands of such an Heir before his age of fourteen years, as Guardian to him, in this case he may sue him also, and charge him as Guardian in Socage; and in this case it seems he may sue him before he is fourteen years old. But if a stranger enter upon an Infants Land without any such pretence, the Infant is to be relieved by an Action of Trespass, and not by this Action, Lit. 124: Co. upon it, 89. F. N. B. 118. Dyer 136. 31. Doct. & St. 13.

Señ. 6. Where and in what case the Action lieth, or not, but some other Action, or none at all. Against a Guardian.

If

Against a Bailiff.

If a man will enter upon my Land upon any pretence to my use, and take the profits of it as for me, I may have this Writ, and charge him to account for it. So if a man will take up my Rents as my Bailiff, being so appointed by me, I may have this Writ, and charge him to account for them. But if one enter so upon my Land before I enter into it, and have the possession of it, in this case it seems this Writ will not lie, Co. super Lis. 89, 90. Dyer 277.

If a Tenant by Elegit of my Land, do make waste upon the Land, and have received more then his due money, I may call him to an account by this Writ, 12 E. 3. 30. And if there be two Joint-Tenants, or Tenants in common of Land, and the one of them doth make the other his Bailiff of his Moity, and he will not answer him the profits, he may by this Writ compel him to it, Co. super Lis. 172. F.N.B. 118.

Against a Receiver.

If I deliver to another Money, Corn or Wares to account for, or to imploy to any purpose, as to pay over, to bestow, or the Wares to give to the poor; or on condition, that if he do such a thing he shall have it, otherwise that he shall redeliver it:

Property. Countermand.

In all these cases until the thing be done, the property is in me, and I may countermand it; and if it be not done, and the thing not restored to me, I may recover it by this Action, Dyer 21. 57. Plowden 92. F.N.B. 118. But in the case of Money, if it be in a bag sealed, or box locked, the proper remedy is by Detinue, Broo. Acc. 52. If one receive Money of another to my use, or to pay over to me, and he do not pay it to me, I may have this Action against him, and so may be that delivered the money to him, Dyer 22. 57. 18 Ed. 4. 23.

Detinue.

Sheriff.

If a Sheriff levie money on a Fieri facias for me, and do not pay it to me, I have this Action to recover it, 13 H. 7. 1. & Curia in Co. Banco. March. f. 13. pl. 33.

Election.

If I make a Bill under my hand and seal, that I received Twenty pounds of I S. to bestow on Wares, and I do not bestow it accordingly, in this case whilst I live he may have this Action, or an Action of Debt against me at his choice; but after my death, he hath no remedy against my Executors but by Action of Debt, Dyer 20. 21.

Debt.

If I deliver to another Goods or Money beyond Sea, to be delivered to me here again in England at a certain place, and he deliver it not, I may be relieved by this Action, F.N.B. 118. 9.

Executors.

If one devise that his Executors shall sell his Land, and out of the profits thereof shall give such a sum to me; in this case and such like, where the money is to issue out of the Land, I may have remedy by this Writ, and I need not sue for it as for a Legacie, Dyer 151. & per three Justices.

Legacy.

If the Mortgagee after the payment of the money by the Mortgager deliver him the money again, the Mortgagee may recover it by this Action, Adjudged, Mich. 4 Eliz.

If one take upon him to receive my Rents without my agreement, and do not pay them to me, I may recover them by this Action, 4 H. 7. 6: Brook Account 65.

Election. Detinue.

If one deliver goods to deliver to me an Infant at my full age, in this case when I am of age I may recover them of him in this Action, or a Detinue, at my choice, Fitz. Detinue, 53.

Prerogative.

If two Joint-Merchants occupie their stocks, goods and merchandizes in common, to their common profit, one of them may have this Writ against the other; but then they must be both of them named Merchants in the Writ, Co. super Lis. 172. And a man could not have touched the Kings lands, or medled with his goods, but he was liable to be questioned by this Remedy, and to be called to an account in the Exchequer, though not by this Writ, Co. 11. 91.

Privy.

But this action of Account lieth not in these following Cases. 1. Where the party to be sued claimeth the thing to his own use. 2. Where there is no privy between the parties, neither ex provisione legis, called Privy in Law, as in the case of a Guardian, nor in Deed, by the consent of the party; as when Goods are delivered to a stranger, and not to my use, or to be delivered over to me, there is no agreement between the parties: But in the Kings case, the Law will supply a privy. 3. When he that delivereth the things, hath taken an Obligation for security of the things delivered. 4. Where the party that hath the things, hath only a bare oversight of them, as a Bailiff of a Plough, Shepherd of Sheep, or the like, Co. 11. 93. Dyer 114. & 20. 277. Brook Account 81. 29. Co. upon Litt. 272.

If one by wrong enter into my Land, and take the profits thereof, I cannot bring this Action against him, Co. upon Litt. 172.

So if I be a Parson, and a stranger take away my Tythes after Severance, I may not have this Action against him, but some other for lack of privity: By the better Opinion, M. 14 Q. Com. B.

So if a Term of years be Devised to another for life, the Remainder to 7. S. and the first Devisee is Executor, and he enter, and make his Executor, and die, and he enter and take the profits; in this Case 7. S. cannot bring this Action for his relief, Dyer 277.

If a man give me goods by his Will, and his Executor will not deliver them, I cannot recover them by this Action, Co. 11. 89.

So neither if Goods of the Testator be kept from an Executor, he cannot recover them by this Action, Co. 11. 89. And if I deliver another any live or dead Goods to his own use, or to any such purpose, it seems I may not have this Action; but if he keep it, or take it away, I may have an Action of Detinue, and if he harm it, an Action of the Case: But if they be delivered to be sold, and the most be made of them, there this Action lieth, Dyer 120. 22. 6 Ed. 4. 1. F.N.B. 118. B.

Detinue:

Action of the Case.

If a man deliver Ten pound to Merchandize, no Account doth lie for the Ten pound, for this is certain; but for the profits thereof, which is uncertain, it doth lie: So it doth not lie for the arrears of a Lease for years, or at will, because it is certain; for uncertain things lie onely in Account, Brook Account 81. 8 H. 5. 3.

Auditors, what they are, and their power.

The Auditors are such as are appointed by the Court to hear, and examine the Accounts of a Bailiff or Receiver, that is sued upon this Writ in the same Court; and these are either upon the Statute of Westm. 2. cap. 11. and then they are Judges of Record, but then there must be two at the least; or one may be an Auditor at the Common Law; and when there is but one, he is such an Auditor, Co. 10. 103. 2 H. 6. 41. 10 H. 6. 24.

Such as are Auditors within the Statute, may commit the Accountant to prison if he be found in arrearages, and do not pay it, but then they must do it presently, and cannot do it afterward; but if the Lord be arrear to his Bailiff, they cannot commit him to prison; for he doth remain still at the Common Law; yet if the Lord be found in debt to his Bailiff, or one be in debt to his Receiver, they shall have their Remedy against them, or their Executors after their death, Co. 10. 103. 27 H. 6. 8. 10 H. 6. 24. 25. Plow. 17.

A Bailiff shall have Allowances upon his Account, but a Receiver shall have none. If therefore the Bailiff disburse any thing for his Master belonging to his Office, as pay his quit Rent, or the like; or if he be robbed, or suffer loss by other means without any default in him, it shall be allowed him upon his Account; but if he pay his Masters debts, or lay out any thing else, not appertaining to his Office; this will not be allowed him, Co. upon Litt. 172. 14 H. 7. 14. Plow. 14.

Self. 7. Allowances, and what shall be granted to an Accountant, or not.

A Guardian also shall have an Allowance, as a Bailiff shall have, but not a Receiver; and therefore he is not bound to Trade with the money received, Brook Account 66.

Some Pleas are in Bar of the Account, and some in discharge before Auditors; and some Pleas will be allowed before Auditors that will not be allowed in Bar of the Account. As to the Account, the Defendant may plead, Ne unques son Receiver ou Bailiff pur Account Render, or that he was sued for the same cause, and adjudged to Account, and Error brought upon the first Judgment in another Court, where it is depending, and the like, Dyer 21. Co. 11. 8. 9 Ed. 4. 30. And as to his discharge before Auditors, he may plead (if he be not a Receiver) he was robbed, or his disbursements, or that he hath fully accounted with the Plaintiff himself, or the like, Co. 4. 84. 5 Ed. 4. 5. And if a new Action of Debt be brought for the arrearages found against the Bailiff or Receiver (as it may) the Defendant may plead Nisi debet, or wage his Law, Co. 6. 53. Stat. 5 H. 4. 8.

Self. 8. Pleas in Account, and what may be pleaded, or not.

See 9.
The Judgments in an Account.

There are two Judgments upon this Writ : The first is, Quod computet, which is interlocutory ; the last is, Quod querens recuperet versus defendantem, so much as he is found in arrearages, & damna occasione interplacitationis.

The first is to account only, and upon this the Defendant may be outlawed : And then before Outlawry, if he appear and enter into account, and be found in arrearages, the Plaintiff shall have a definitive Judgment for the arrearages ; and after the first Judgment, no abatement can be for any cause, but a Discontinuance or Nonsuit may be.

The first Judgment is but an Award of the Court, like to a Writ to enquire of Damages, and not like to a final Judgment, for there the Action is clearly determined. And these two Judgments depend one upon another : For if Judgment be to Account, and the Plaintiff die before he hath accounted, the Executor cannot go on in that suit, but he must begin again ; and no Writ of Error will lie upon the first, till after the second Judgment, Co. 11. 40. Broo. Account, 39. 33.

CHAP. V.

Of Acts, and Agent, and Patient.

General Rules

Here many join in an Act, and some of them might not lawfully do it, it shall be said the Act of him only that might lawfully do it, and not of the rest. As if a Patron that doth suffer an usurpation by six moneths, grant an Annuity to I. S. till he do promote him to a Benefice, and after he and the Usurper present him to that Benefice, this is the act of the Usurper in Law, and therefore the Annuity is not determined. So if the Disseisee, and the Heir of the Disseisor that is in by descent, make a Feoffment by one Deed, and give Livery, this shall be said the Feoffment of the Heir only, and the Confirmation of the Disseisee, Dyer 192. Littleton.

Escrow.

2. The Law regardeth Deeds and Acts more then Words ; and therefore if mens deeds and words be repugnant, the Law will operate upon the deeds, and reject the words. As if one make a Deed, and deliver it to the party himself as an Escrow till certain Conditions, this shall take effect presently by the delivery, Co. 3. 26.

3. The Law doth more favor and delight in substantial Acts, then circumstantial : As in pleading, if one plead a Fine levied by a husband and wife, he need not shew how the wife was examined, nor before whom it was acknowledged, nor such like circumstances, Plow. 10.

4. The Law doth not require unnecessary circumstances : As that Process should be sent out to command one to appear in Court, that is always present in Court, 2 H. 6. 1.

Political/capa-
Natural/city.

5. A man cannot do an Act to himself, and be both Agent and Patient, unless it be a man that hath a double capacity. Therefore a man cannot present himself to a Benefice, nor make himself an Officer, nor be both Judge, and party to be judged ; nor being a Sheriff, summon or warn himself, nor sue himself. But a Dean and Chapter in the politique capacity, may enfeoff the same Dean in his natural capacity, And a man may by way of Retainer do an Act to himself ; as if he disseise one of Land out of which he hath a Rent-charge, he may pay himself, 13 H. 8. 1. 2. 14 H. 8. 13. Dyer 188. 8 H. 6. 29. Lit. 147.

Retainer.

6. A man shall not be suffered to do any thing against his own Act.

7. Every mans Act shall be expounded most strongly against him that doth it, Plow. 140.

8. When any Act is to be done by agreement between parties, and it is not expressed between them by whom, but it is left doubtfully, it shall be done by him that hath most skill. As if the Condition of an Obligation be, That the Obligee shall bring to the Obligors shop, being a Tailor, three Yards of Cloth (which shall be shapen) and the Obligor shall make the Obligee a Gown of it; the Obligor, that is, the Tailor, must shape it, 9 E. 4. 4.

Condition of an Obligation.

9. All personal Acts must be done by the person himself, and cannot be done by another, 22 E. 4. 34.

11. The Law hath much regard to the Original of every Act; therefore it is, that a woman Covert, when she hath but the beginning of a title of Dower by marriage, may bar it by Fine, Co. 10. 49.

12. The Act of GOD shall prejudice no man. Necessitas non habet legem, Necessity hath no law.

13. All the Acts of Law are very equal and just. Aequior est dispositio legis quam hominis, 2 H. 7. 5. Dyer 29. F. N. B. 34.

14. Acts of Law are of more efficacie then the Acts of the party. Fortior est dispositio legis quam hominis, Co 8. 78. 185. 6. 40. The disposition of Law is of more force then that of a man.

15. Acts of Law are more esteemed then Acts of men; and therefore Parceners that come to the Land by Act of Law, were enabled by the Common-Law to make partition, but not Joint-Tenants, or Tenants in Common, 49 E. 3. 15.

Parceners.

16. The Law favoreth things executed, more then Acts executory.

17. The execution of all executory things, hath at all times retrospect to the original cause, and it all maketh but one Act, though it be done at several times. Causa & origo est materia negotii, Co. 1. 97.

18. Acts done between persons, shall not prejudice a stranger that is not party nor privy to such Act. Res inter alios acta nemini nocere debent, Co 6. 16 (1.) Things among others ought not to prejudice any man; as if a Tenant by an entire service aliens part of the Land, the services shall be multiplied, 6 Rep. 1. (2.) No Incumbent shall be removed by the Stat. Westm. 2. by 2 Imp. an Attile of Darrein-presentment purchased within six moneths, unless the Incumbent be named in the Writ, 6 Rep. 51. (3.) If a Lessee grant a Rent-charge to a stranger, and after this surrenders to his lessor, though by the Surrender the Term be extinct, yet this shall not hurt the stranger, but that he shall have his Rent, 8 Rep. 14. (4.) So if A. having a Rent-charge, acknowledgeth a Recognizance to B. and afterwards A. releaseth the Rent to the Fore-tenant, yet B. may extend this Rent, 7 Rep. Lit. 39. (5.) So if A. enfeoff B. upon Condition to be void upon payment of one hundred pounds to the heirs of B. B. enfeoff C. and dieth; then it is agreed between A. and the heir of B. that A. shall pay but Thirty two pounds, but yet that One hundred pounds shall be paid, and all that shall be repaid except Thirty two pounds, whereupon such payment and repayment is made, this is no performance of the Condition; for the Estate of a third person shall not be divested by Covenous payments between other parties, 5 Rep. 96.

If A. make a Lease to B. saying Render Rent generally, this Rent shall go to A. and his heirs; but if he saith Render Rent to A. this shall not go to the heir Dyer 45. So if A. enfeoff B. with Warrantie generally, this Warrant shall go to the heir of B. But if he saith with Warrant to B. this Warrant shall not go to the heir of B. Dyer 45.

20. Compulsorie Acts are more favored in Law then voluntary Acts; and therefore if an Administrator pay Debts, or discharge Funerals, this shall be good and bind the Executors. compellable to find the Prisoner. Acts that men are forced by necessity and compulsion to do, are not regarded: And therefore if a man be made, his hand be held and forced to kill another, this is no offence, Plow. 19. If a man do an Act per duress, it is void and shall not bind him, Idem. For, Necessity doth yield and give place to the Laws of God and man, Mat. 12. Exod. 29. 1 King. ch. 21.

Accusation.

For false Accusations and Surmises to vex men unjustly by Suits in Courts or otherwise, these things are to be known.

1. No man is to be condemned without due Trial, Mag. Char. 29.
2. Nor to be vexed upon any Accusation, but according to the Law of the Land, 5 Ed. 3. 9. 28 Ed. 3. 3.
3. None may be molested by Imprisonment upon Petition to the King and his Council, without Indictment or Presentment, 37 Ed. 3. 18. Stat. 25 Ed. 3. 4. Stat. 5.
4. And any thing thus unduly done, shall be void, Idem.
5. Those that preferred Accusations to the King against others, and could not make them good against other men, were to be severely punished, Stat. 37 Ed. 3. 18. 38 Ed. 3. 9. 41 Ed. 3. 9.

AN Adwovson is the Reversion of a Spiritual Living, or the Right that a man hath to him, and his Heirs for ever, to present a Clerk to the Ordinary for a Parsonage, or a Spiritual Benefice, when it becometh void. It is called also a Patronage, for he that doth present the Clerk, is called the Patron; for he by our Law is called a Patron, that hath the gift of such a Living or Benefice, or one that hath the Adwovson of a Parsonage, Vicarage, Free Chappel, or other Spiritual Promotion: And this Adwovson is either Incident or Appendant, and so it doth belong to some Manor or Land, or Engros, when one hath it alone, and not by reason of any other thing. And he that is presented to such a Parsonage, is called a Parson, and the Living a Parsonage; if to a Vicarage, a Vicar, and the Living a Vicarage; and both these are the present Incumbents of these Spiritual Livings. The Vicar is one that hath a Spiritual Promotion or Living, called a Vicarage, which was a certain portion of a Parsonage, to be allowed to the Minister for his maintenance, and was brought in when Disappropriations began to be made; and both these Livings are sometimes (but very improperly) called the Church; and so both these persons in relation to the Patron, are said to be, and are called his Clerk. And this grew at first by this means, because he that had this gift or power, or his Ancestors, or those whose Estate he had, did at first build the Church, or else endowed it with some part of the Revenues belonging to it, or else the Church was set upon his ground, Plow. 495. Dyer 48. Co. 1. 102. 4. 37. 6. 39. Litt. 119. 120. But it is now of that nature, as a mans other Inheritance, for he may give or grant it by Will or Deed, in Fee for life or years, as he may do any other thing he hath, Co. 5. 56. 15 H. 7. 8. Or he may present a Minister to it for once, and then he may grant the next Avoidance (that is power to another, to present to the Church, when it shall next become void, Co. upon Litt. 120. And Voidance is the want of an Incumbent on the Benefice, fice, which is in Deed, by Death or Deprivation, or by Law, by taking two Benefices, and being incapable: It is opposed to Plenarty.

And here we are to know before we go further, That some of these Spiritual Livings (as they are called) are changed into another nature, which are those we now call Impropriations or Appropriations; which is said to be the improper taking of Spiritual Benefits by Temporal or Secular men; and is said to be where any Body-corporate or private, hath the right of a Parsonage or Spiritual Benefice in themselves, and power also to take the profits thereof to their own use, appointing onely, and allowing a Vicar there to serve the Cure. And this at first was tollerated onely to Spiritual persons, such as were able to administer holy things, and for their help to hospitality; and at last went further, to what we finde at this day; and these were made first by the Pope, the King and Ordinary; and when the Pope was cast out, by the King and Ordinary: And at this time, and by this means, Vicars and Vicarages came in; for then a certain portion of the Parsonage was allowed and set apart from the rest, to maintain the Vicar, who was to serve the Cure, and the Prior, Prioreesses, &c. they had the rest. See Agreement, Numb. 5. Plow. 495. And this might have been, and so may yet be dissolved, and again become Propriate; as if it did belong to a Corporation, which is now dissolved; or the Advowson be recovered by an ancient Title before the Appropriation; in these Cases the Appropriation is gone: So that, now at this day, we have Lay Parsons and Parsonages (as they are called) and so are these Impropriators and Impropriations, which are of the nature of other Lay Inheritances. Those that had these at first were called Proprietaries, and Spiritual Parsonages and Parsons, both these Parsons are called in our Law Incumbents; and these also, especially such as have the Church by Impropriation, are called Parson Imparsones, and are said to be perpetually appropriate, Co. 11. 10. Plow. 49. 6. But we in this place shall speak onely of the Spiritual Parson and Parsonage. As touching which these things are to be known.

1. Every Church Living is to be had and obtained by Presentation, Collation, Donation, or Election; and he that comes into any Parsonage or Vicarage at this day, must come into it by one of these means. And in some places there is a Nomination also (that is) a power that some man hath to name a Clerk to the Patron for the Benefice, when it is void; and then he to whom he is named, must have presented him to the Ordinary; and if he had been lett of this, he might have had his Quare impedit, Dyer 327. 48. Presentation is the Patrons gift or commendation of the Clerk elected to his Parsonage or Vicarage, by writing to the Bishop; and this man the Bishop did use to examine and allow, by taking of a Record of his name, which was called Admission; and thereupon he did give him Institution by these words, Instituo, &c. I appoint thee to such a Benefice, &c. And then after this, the Archdeacon was wont to put the Minister into Possession, by delivering to him the Ring of the Church door, ringing of the Bells, &c. And until this was done, he was not compleat Incumbent. Articuli Cleri, ch. 12. 14 H. 7. 28. Dyer 325. Co. 5. 58. 4. 79. But the Clerk being thus inducted, and in possession six moneths, this is a Plenarty, and gives such a Title to that Presentation, that will bar all others in a Quare impedit, 21 Eliz. 4. 34. Kelm. 88. Co. 4. 79. 7. 38. upon Littl. 344. But this is not to be done at this day. The Collation to a Benefice, was where the Bishop himself did give a Benefice that was of his own gift, by right of Patronage, or that came to him by Lapse, Stat. 25 Ed. 3. 6. 1 Ed. 4. The Donative is where a Benefice is meerly given and collated by the Patron, without any Presentation to the Ordinary; and with this, the Bishop had nothing to do, but the Patron might have disposed it at his pleasure; and by this way now, most Clergy men come into their Livings, Brownl. Rep. 1. part. 201.

2. He that hath this Right to present to a Benefice, when it doth become void, must have presented within six moneths after the Avoidance, or he had lost his Presentment for that turn; and then that Presentment came to the Bishop of the Diocess, who had six moneths time to present; and if he did not present in this time, it was lapsed to the Archbishop of that Diocess, who had six moneths to present; and if he lapsed that time, then it had come to the King, who might have presented at any any time, during his life. But for this, see Co. 7. 27. 4. 117. 6. 22. 30. Plow. 49. 8. D. & St. 116. Dyer 369. Kelw. 49. And the new Ordinance, by which Patrons are bound to present to the Commissioners for Approbation of Ministers within six moneths after the Voidance, or else it will Lapse to the Lord Protector, Ordin. March. 20. 1653. But if any disturbance be, and a Suit begun within six moneths, and notice hereof in writing left with the Commissioners; this will prevent the Lapse.

3. The Parson, Patron, and Ordinary, by Common Law, in reference to diverse Acts and Considerations of Law, are Relatives; and they three together might have done any thing with the Parsonage or Vicarage; but now the Law is altered herein, for neither the Clerk Incumbent himself, nor he with the Patron and Ordinary, can do any thing to conclude, or hurt his Successor, Co. 2. 44. 8 Ed. 4. 14.

If I have such an Advowson, and the Parson Incumbent dieth, and another presenteth upon me, or before me, and hindreth me, that I cannot take the Fruit of my Presentment, I may have a Quare impedit for my relief. See for this F. N. B. Plow. 84 Co. 10. 130. But if my Clerk be presented, and in possession of the Benefice, and then he is put out; in this Case I must be relieved by a Writ called an Affise of Darreine Presentment, F. N. B. 36. And both these are to recover the Presentment for this time onely. For if the Right of the Advowson be in question, it must be recovered by a Writ of Right of Advowson; which is, where one hath an Advowson in Fee, and right to present after the death of a Parson to a Church, and he bring no Quare impedit, nor Darreine Presentment, but suffereth a stranger to usurpe (that is) to present his Clerk, and suffer this Clerk to be instituted and inducted: In this Case he must have this Writ of Right of Advowson, F. N. B. 34. Co. upon Littl. 344.

If two Clerks had claimed by two or more Patrons, and it was in question who was the right Patron, and whose Clerk shall be admitted, this Writ in the nature of a Commission was granted to enquire thereof.

If any difference had been between two Parsons or two Incumbents claiming under one Patron, and the Right of Patronage not in question, this was to be decided in the Spiritual Court, and was called Spoilation, F. N. B. 36. 37.

If the Incumbent alien the Land or any of it, his Successor may have a Juris utrum, F. N. B. 30.

This was a Judicial Writ that did lie where one had recovered a Presentation by a Quare impedit or Affise of Darrein-presentment to the Bishop, to command him to admit his Clerk that had recovered it: And if in this case the Bishop had refused, he might have had another Judicial Writ called a Quare non admittit.

This is a Judicial Writ directed to the Ordinary, and may be sued out by the Plaintiff or Defendant, to command the Ordinary that he do not admit the Clerk of the other party till the plea be determined, F. N. B. 37.

This is a Judicial Writ against the Ordinary for one that sueth a Ne admittas, and doth after recover in a Quare impedit, or Affise de Darrein-presentment, though it be after the six moneths, F. N. B. 48:

If debate be between two Parsons for a Church, and one of them entreth with a greater power of Lay-men and keepeth the other out by force; in this case, upon a Certificate of the Bishop to the Lord Chancellor, he might have this Writ to remove the force, F. N. B.

This is a Benefice which being void is commended to the care of some sufficient Clerk, until it can be otherwise provided for of a Pastor: And of this, he that hath it is only to have the custody and profits for the time, and is revocable at pleasure.

Where the Churches be small, they have had a way to put two of them together, which hath been done by this means. 1. The King did give licence to do it. 2. The Patrons of the Churches having the Fee-simple thereof, and of full age, did consent thereunto. 3. The Incumbents of both Churches, and those of full age, did consent thereunto. 4. The Ordinary did agree to it. And this was called Union or Consolidation. See for this Stat. 37 H. 8. ch. 21. 1 E. 6. ch. 9. 6 H. 7. 12. 38 H. 6. 21. And there is a way now for uniting of small Parishes and their Churches. See it in the Service of God.

The Incumbent of a Church might have resigned or left his Parsonage or Vicarage to the Ordinary which did admit him; and this is called a Resignation, and is like a Surrender, Plow. 498. Resignation, what it is.

The Incumbent was sometimes for some offence deprived and put out of his Benefice; and this was called a Deprivation. See for this, Co. 11, 98. Stat. 13 Eliz. ch. 12. 39 Eliz. ch. 8. Deprivation, what it is.

The Benefice might have been in some cases by the Ordinary sequestred from the Incumbent, and so might the profits have been also sequestred by him after his death for the profit of his successor, Stat. 28 H. 8. ch. 11. This is sequestrable still in some cases; for which see Religion, and the New Ordinances. Sequestration, what it is.

The greatest part of all this Law must now be gone, the Ordinary being gone, and no other person appointed to exercise his power, save only in the case of Probate of Wills and granting of Administrations.

Disappropriation is, where a Parsonage impropriate doth become propriate again, which is a thing may happen many ways. For which see Plow. 497. 501. Co. 2. 49. Disappropriation, what.

Cession is, where the Incumbent takes another Benefice being incompatible. For a Church or Benefice presentative (as every Parochial Church is supposed to be) might have become void five ways. 1. By Creation, when the Incumbent had been made a Bishop. 2. By Death. 3. By Resignation, when the Incumbent in his lifetime had resigned his Benefice to the Ordinary. 4. By Deprivation, when the Incumbent is by Judgment of Law deprived. 5. By Cession; and some call the first so: But in both these cases the first Benefice doth become void. Cession, what.

Gleebe or Glebe is that portion of Land, Meadow or Pasture, that is belonging to, and parcel of some Parsonages which have such things besides their Tythes. See more in my Second Part of the Marrow of the Law, fol. 9. Gleebe, what.

CHAP. VII.

Of Age-Prier.

It is where any Action is brought by, or against an Infant; there upon motion to the Court or plea, by the Infant in the one case, or other party, or a stranger in some cases, or sometimes by the Court it self ex officio, the Suit shall be stayed until the full age of the Demandant or Tenant, Brook. Age in toto. Finch. 360. Co. 6. 5. Age-Prier.

In most cases where the Heir is sued for the Land he hath by Discent, or for something out of, or concerning that Land wherein he is by Discent, and he be an Infant, there upon prayer made he shall have his Age allowed him; as in a Cui in vita, a Writ of Customs and Services, a Cessavit, when the Infant hath the Tenancie by Discent; a Writ of Des. brought upon an Especialty, as for an Obligation, Statute, or for a Nomine pene; a Writ of Error, if he be Tenant; a Writ of Ayel, if the Action were founded on his own wrong; a Writ of Formedon in Descender, Co. 6. 5. 9. 85. 3 H 6 46. Co. super Lit. 290. Fitz. Age. Br. Joyntenantie 27. Merton cap. 3. Where Age shall be granted to him or them who pray for the nonage of the Defendant or Tenant.

But in such Actions where the Infant is supposed to come to the Land by his own wrong, as if he be a Disseisor; and in such Actions as are found upon the Infants own wrong, as in a Cessavit of his own cession; and in a Per quod servitium against an Infant that hath the Tenancie by discent; and in a Formedon brought against the heirs of one that had an estate for the life of another granted to him and his heirs, where he is heir by special occupancie only; and in a Nuper obiit, when he claimeth as heir from the same Ancestor; and in a Partitio facienda, where they are both in possession; and in an Attaint; and in a Writ of Entry sur disseison to the Ancestor, if it be freshly pursued; Where not.

perused; and in a Cui in vita, or Sur cui in vita, against the Vouchee, being Heir to the Husband within age; (a) and in a Writ of Dower, or an Appeal; (b) and in a Writ of Execution sued against his Lands, upon a Judgment had against his Father: In all these cases he shall not have his Age allowed him, neither shall the Suit stay for that cause. And so it is for personal actions; an Infant may be sued for a Trespass, and in divers other cases, for which see Enfant; and the Suit shall not stay for his Nonage, Co. 9. 85. Sr. 3. Ed. 1. 46. Dyer 137. Co. sup. Lit. 239. Co. 6. 4. Dyer 321. 9 H. 6. 6. 10 H. 4. 5. 9 H. 6. 46. West. 4. 46. (a) Adj. Eppecau. Tr. 4. 7. (b) Vivcau, M. 7. 7. C. B.

In all cases where it may be presumed to be in favor to, and for the benefit of the Infant; lest for want of the right and full understanding of his Case, and the truth of the matter, he be prejudiced of the right descended to him, though but a bare Right descend: As in all real actions Auncetrel of the possession of his Ancestor; and in all cases where a bare right in Fee-simple descendeth from any Ancestor to an Infant, (which right was once in possession) there in any action Auncetrel brought by the Infant, the Tenant without pleading any Plea may pray the Suit may stay, as in a Writ of Right, as Heir to his Ancestor, and lay the Esplees to be taken in his Ancestor: So in a Formedon in the Reverter as Heir to the Donor: So if an Infant alien within age, and his Heir being an Infant sue a Dum fuit infra aetatem: So if the Heir within age bring a Non compos mentis, the Tenant may pray it may stay. And in all actions Auncetrel possessory, as Cosenage, Belayl, Ayle, &c. where the Ancestor dies seised, the Tenant cannot without pleading pray the Suit may stay. And in Waste, or Quid Juris clamat brought by an Infant, the Tenant plead a Lease, without Impeachment del waste, and offer to attorn saving his priviledg, and pray the Suit may stay, it shall stay, Co. 6. 3. 985. & super Lit. 64. Glouc. cap. 2.

In all cases where it cannot be presumed to be for the benefit of the Heir within age to have the suit to stay: As where the Ancestor died seised, and the Land descended to the Infant, and he hath entred and took the profits, here the suit shall not stay. And therefore in all real actions possessory, generally the suit shall not stay for the nonage of the Plaintiff or Demandant: As in a Writ of Entry sur disseison, of a Disseison made to the Infant himself; in a Writ of Right upon a Deforcement to the Infant himself, of the Land he had by descent; in Escheat, Cessavit, Droit sur Disclaimet, Mesne, in Formedon in Descender, unless something be pleaded against him to which he cannot be party to try it within age: In a Writ of Entry sur Disseison to the Ancestor, if fresh suit be made to the Ancestor; and after the Writ brought, the Ancestor died before Trial could be had. See Infant. Co. 6. 3. 985. Westm. 1. 46:

A man hath by Common-Law for several purposes divers Ages assigned to him, viz. Twelve years, at which age he may take the Oath of Allegiance in the Torn or Leet. Fourteen years, at which age he may consent to marriage then, or agree to a marriage before; at which age also he being an Heir in Socage may choose his Guardian, and at this age he is counted to be of discretion. Fifteen years, at which age the Lord shall have aid to make his son Knight. Under Twenty one, to be in Ward to the Lord by Knights service; under Fourteen, to be in Ward to Guardian in Socage; at Fourteen, to be out of Ward of the Guardian in Socage, and then he may choose his Guardian; at Twenty one, to be out of Ward of Guardian in Chivalry. So also hath a woman divers Ages assigned to her, viz. Seven years, at which age the Lord her Father shall have aid of his Tenants to marry his daughter: Nine years, at which age a woman may deserve and have a Dower: Twelve years, at which age she may consent to a marriage then, or agree to a marriage before: Until Fourteen to be in Ward, and then to be out of Ward: Fourteen years, at which age, if she attained thereunto in the life of her Ancestor, she shall be out of Ward: Sixteen years, to tender her marriage, if she were under the age of Fourteen at the death of her Ancestor; and at, or after Sixteen years, she is past the Lords tender of a husband: At seven years of age, not before, she may promise marriage to a husband. See the Womans Lawyer, f. 52. Co. super Lit. 78. 34 Ed. 1. Stat. 3. Dyer 162, 213. Co. 7. 43. 6. 67. Lit. 204. 3 H. 7. 1. 21 H. 7. 31. Lit. 158. 159. 35 H. 6. 40. But at this day the Law is much changed in some of these things: For as to Wardships of men and women Heirs, they are quite taken away: And the age of a man to consent consent to marriage, is sixteen years, and the age of a Woman is fourteen years; and before this time they cannot agree to marriage, As. Aug. 1653.

Also there be divers ages assigned to Men and Women both: As for the committing of Felony, any age of discretion which is in some sooner, in some longer; and of this the Judge shall enquire and judge. Seventeen years, at which age they may take upon them an Executorship, or be an Administrator. Eighteen years, at which age they may make a Testament, and make Executors for Goods and Chattels. Twenty and one, which is the full age of Male and Female, and then, and not till then, they may make all manner of Contracts, alienate their Lands and Goods, and in some places by special Customs sooner. See Custom, Co. super Littl. 171. Doff. & Stu. f. 113.

Two Justices of the Peace in the County, or the head Officer and two Burgeses in Cities, &c. may appoint any woman of the age of twelve years, and under forty being unmarried, and out of service, to serve and be retained by year, week, or day in such sort, and for such wages as they shall think meet; and if she refuse, they may commit her to prison till she shall be bound to serve, Stat. 5 Eliz. 4.

It is when one bringeth an Action, and the Tenant or Defendant either for his non-age, or the non-age of the Plaintiff or Demandant prayeth, that the Suit may stay; and thereupon the other replieth, and sheweth cause why it should not stay; this reply is called a Counter-plea of the Age, Terms Ley. Counter-plea. See more in Infant and Westm. 1. cap. 46. Stat. Gloc. 2. Westm. 2. 10. Counter-plea of Age.

CHAP. VIII.

Of Agreement.

Agreement is the coupling or knitting together of two or more mindes in any thing already done, or to be done. And Disagreement is the contrary to this, when their mindes are not united, Plow. 6. Terms Ley. Agreement.

Agreement or Disagreement is diversly distinguished. For it is either real (i.) that which doth concern Lands; or personal (i.) that which doth concern other matters: And these are also either General or Special: And both these are also Express or Implied; also Verbal or Actual; and also Executed or Executory. Assent and Disagreement.

That which is Executed, is either Precedent, as when goods are sold for money, and the money is paid; or when the Husband doth agree his Wife shall make a Will, and she doth so, or else it is Subsequent. As when one doth disseise another to my use, and after I agree to it; or the Executor doth assent to a Legacy given, or the Lessee agree to the Grant of the Reversion. That which is Executory, is also either grounded on certainty, as when the Agreement is to pay ten pounds for ten bushels of Barley at Michaelmas; or else it is grounded on uncertainty, as where I do agree with another at a price for all his Wood, if I like it when I see it. Plow. 6. Perk. 45. Co. 3. 26. Stat. 25 Ed. 3. 3. 44 Ed. 3. 37. 18 Ed. 4. 15. Stat. 26 H. 8. 3. 14 H. 8. 24.

Agreements of the parties in many cases will change the course of the Law, as the Rule is, Modus & conventio vincunt legem; as though a Lessee for life or years be to have Houseboot, &c. and be not to cut Timber by Law, yet by agreement he may be abridged of the one, or granted the other: Also this will help faults and errors in Proces and proceedings of Law, juxta illud, Consensus tollit errorem, (i.) Consent taketh away Error. Also disagreement will make a nullity of a thing that before had essence; as if a Deed be made to a Feme Covert, and the Husband do after disagree to it, Co. 4. 62. 64. 5. 36. 40. Co. 5. 119. 1. If one promise to my Wife, that if I release J. S. out of Execution, who is at my Suit; that if J. S. do not pay me the money by such a day, he will; and when I hear of it, I do enlarge him, this is an actual or implied agreement, on which I may ground an Action, 27 H.8. 24.

If one Devise a Term to A. for life, the Remainder to B. for all the Term, and make A. his Executor and die: And after A. the Executor comes to B. and intreats him to release all his interest in the Term to A. and he doth so, and A. doth accept it: This is an actual assent to the Devise, Co. 10. 52.

If an Estate were made in Fee-simple or tail to a man and his wife, and he die (i.) and he have not disagreed to it, now this is an agreement in Law, and vesteth the Estate in her, and if she after his death enter into the Land, and take the profits: This is an actual agreement, and good to binde her, though she say never a word, or do it never so secretly, Co. 3. 26. & 4. 4.

If there be Lord and Tenant, and the Tenant Enfeoff the Lord and a Stranger, and give livery to the stranger in the name of both, and after the Lord doth enter and take the profits: This is a good agreement in the Lord, Co. 3. 26. 10 Ed. 4. 12.

If Lands be given to the Husband and Wife in tail, and after the Statute of 32 H. 8. the Husband alien the Land to the use of him and his Heirs, and after Devise it to his Wife for life, and die, and after his life she doth enter, claiming onely the estate for life: This is a good agreement to bar her of taking or claiming any other estate. But if the agreement had been by word onely, it had been nothing worth, Co. 3. 26. Dyer 51.

An Agreement as an Attornment, or the like may be good in the absence of the party for whom it is, Co. 2. 69.

If the Husband and Wife sell the Land of the Wife for money by word, and after they two levy a Fine to the Vendee and his Heirs: This will binde the Wife without any writing to prove her assent or agreement, Co. 2. 57.

If an Infant a Parcener that hath made division, do after at his full age take the profits of the part allotted to him: This is a good agreement affirming the division, but the taking of the profits of a moyety doth not so, Co. super Littl. fol. 171.

If an Infant under the age of consent for Marriage endow his Wife ad osium Ecclesie without Deed, and after when he is of age of consent agree to it, yet this agreement will not make the Endowment good, Perk. 438.

If an Estate be made in Fee-simple, or Fee-tail to a man and his Wife, and the Husband die, and the Wife before her Entry say she doth agree to her Estate, or use the like words; yet this will not binde her where she doth demand Dower in a Court of Record, but that she may there waive it, Co. 3. 26.

If an Obligation be made to my use, and being tendred to me, I refuse it, and after again I agree to it, and will accept it: Now this agreement after will not make the Obligation that was void by my refusal good again, Co. 5. 119.

If a Devise be made of any Goods or Chattels, the agreement of the Executor is necessary, and the Legatee cannot take the thing devised without the assent of the Executor, but he will be a Trespasser in so doing to the Executor. Vide Testament. Co. 10. 47. Plow. 540.

If a Reversion be granted of an Estate for life or years, or a Rent in being; in most cases it is needful the Tenant for life or years, or the Ter-tenant do agree, else the grant is not good, Vide Attornment. Plow. 25.

If J. S. Disseise another to my use, I am no Disseisor, nor have any Free-hold till I agree to the Disseison, but he is the Tenant till then: And after I have agreed to it, I am the Tenant and seised of the Free-hold, 12 Ed. 4. 9: Perk. 47.

If a Tenant in Tail make an exchange and die, and the Land taken in exchange, descend to his issue; in this Case the agreement of the Issue is requisite, for the exchange is not good till then, 14 H. 6. 2.

If a Feme Covert make a Testament, the Husband must agree to it, else it is not good, Co. 4. 51.

If a Feme Covert be an Executrix, she cannot release any Debt or Duty to the Testator, without the assent of the Husband, Co. 5. 27.

If any Estate in Possession or Remainder, or Reversion by Devise, or act executed for life, in Fee, or otherwise be made to me, I must agree to it, until it be in me, for I may refuse it, Doll. & Sim. 119. b.

If a Release, Obligation, or Deed be made to me, and delivered to another to my use, here there is no need of any agreement to make the Deed good or vest the things in me: But if I disagree to it, by this I make the Deed void, Co. 3. 26. Dyer 167. Br. 5. Co. 5. 119.

If an Estate be made to a Woman Covert, there needs no agreement of the Husband to vest the Estate in him, 3 H. 7. 9.

If a Woman hunt a Right or Title of Entry into any Land, and she take a Husband, and he enter, here needs no agreement of the Wife to vest the Freehold in her: So if an Infant have a Right or Title of Entry, and a stranger enter to his use, the Estate is in him without agreement, Perk. 46, 47.

If the Husband and Wife levy a Fine of the Land of the Wife, and the Husband alone declare the use; this will binde the Wife, and her agreement to the limitation of the uses is not needful, Perk. 2. 57.

If a Feoffment be made to a Woman Covert, her Husband being beyond the Sea, and when he returns, being not content with the Feoffment, he will not suffer his Wife to take the profits, nor to continue the Seison, but doth himself, and also causeth her to relinquish the occupation: Now hereby he shall be discharged of damages, for the time after his relinquishment, if the Feoffor were a Disseisor, Perk. 14.

If there be Lord and Tenant, and the Tenant by Deed Infeoff the Lord and a stranger; and give livery to the stranger in the name of both, and after the Lord enter; and distrain for the Seignior: This Act doth amount to a disagreement of the Feoffment, and doth divest the Frank Tenant out of the Lord, Co. 3. 26. 12 Ed. 4. 12.

If Lands be given to the Husband and Wife in Tail, and after the Statute of 32 H. 8. the Husband Alien to the use of him and his Heirs, and then Devise the Land to his Wife for life; and after his death she enter claiming for life only: This is a disagreement to the Estate Tail, Co. 3. 26. Dyer 351.

If a Woman Covert have a Joynture made to her after marriage, and after her Husbunds death, she brings a Writ of Dower for her Thirds: This is a disagreement to the Joynture Co. 4. 5.

If an Infant marry Infra annos Nubiles, and after before any agreement when he is of age of consent, he marry another; this is a good Disagreement, without any words of Disagreement at all. And it seems that Disagreement, though it be not before the Ordinary is good, and they may not marry elsewhere, but the Ordinary may punish it, Robinsons Case, Curia. 7 Jac. Broo. Gard. 124. Co. super Littl. fol. 79. a. b.

If one Devise Land to his Heir in Tail, the Remainder over to a stranger, and the Heir enter and disagree to the Devise, and say he will have it in Fee, yet he shall have but an Estate Tail only, Plow. 545. Perk. 569.

If one agree to give me Twenty pounds for a parcel of Wood, if he like it when he see it, and when he see it, he do like it: Now he cannot afterwards disagree to it, to make void the Contract again, 18 Ed. 4. 15.

If Tenant in Precipe agree not in the Countrey: This is not sufficient to bar the Freehold, 12 H. 4. 21. Br. Surrender 28. 11 H. 4. 62. 6 Ass. p. 2. Kelw. 116. b. 8. Rep. 61. 6 Encounter. 27 Ass. p. 27. Br. Surrender 28. 6 Ass. p. 2.

If Lands be given to a Husband and Wife in Tail, or in Fee, and the Husband dieth, and the Wife doth afterwards disagree to the Estate by words in the Countrey, and saith she will not have it, or the like: This Verbal Wayver in the Countrey, will not divest the Franck Tenement out of her, but she may enter when she will after, notwithstanding, unless it be in case where she will demand Dower of by the Statute, 27 H. 8. 10. Co. 3. 26.

If an Estate were made to a Man and his Wife, and he die, and the Lord supposing the Husband to die sole-seized, assign the Wife her Dower by word; which she accepted, yet she hath the free-hold of the whole in her; and this agreement shall not prejudice her, Co. 3. 26.

Señ. 3.

If a Feoffment were made to four, and Livery is made to three, in the name of the rest, and the fourth when he seeth the Deed saith, That he will not agree to it, nor have any thing in the Land; yet this Disagreement will not divest the Freehold, for his Disagreement must be in a Court of Record. So if a Feoffment be made to the Lord, and a stranger by the Tenant, and the Lord by word disagree to it: This is no disagreement to divest the Estate, Co. 3. 26. 10 Ed. 4. 12.

5. Where and in what Case the Disagreement of any person is necessary for the divesting of any interest, or property.

If an Obligation be made to me, and delivered to my use, now if I will avoid it, I must disagree to it when I hear of it. So if a Deed of Gift be made to me of Goods, if I will avoid it, I must disagree to it; and by this the property will be divested: So if any Estate or an Obligation be made to a Feme Covert, if her Husband will avoid it, he must disagree to it, for it is in him till disagreement: So if any Estate be made to the Husband and Wife, during the Coverture, and she would avoid it after his death; she must disagree to it, then, for till then it shall be in her. If an Infant be married Infra annos nobiles, and he would avoid it after, it must be by Disagreement, Co. 3. 26, 27. Dyer 167. & 49. Perk. 43. Co. 5. 119. 3 H. 6. 59. Broo. 6. Co. 6. 22. Perk. 438.

If the Husband and Wife levy a Fine of the Land of the Wife, and the Husband alone declare the uses, if the Wife will avoid this or alter the limitation, she must disagree to that Declaration, and make her Disagreement to appear, Co. 2. 57.

6. Where and in what Case after Agreement, one may disagree, where other wife.

Regularly where a man hath once disagreed to the party himself, unto whom the Agreement or Disagreement is to be made; he can never after agree. But if persons married within age of consent do afterwards before that age, by word or writing under their hands, or before their Parents disagree or marry others; yet after their years of consent, they may agree again, and make the marriage good. But after Disagreement at age of consent, no new Agreement without a new marriage shall make it good, 27 H. 8. Robinsons Case. Curia, p. 7 Jac. Co. B. Co. super Litt. f. 79.

Composition.

This is applied to a special kinde of Agreement, made either between Coparceners (which may be made without writing) as to present to a Benefice by Turn, or the like. But it cannot be between Tenants in Common without writing, for in a 2. Impedit, the Composition must be shewed; but if once every one have had his Turn according to the Composition, then after the Composition need not be shewed: Or it may be heretofore between the Parson, and one of his Parish, to be discharged of paying Tyths for something agreed on, or between the Parson and Vicar, called sometimes an Indowment, Dyer 29. 194. Co. 1. 38, 44, 46, 47. Co. 6. 6.

7. How it shall be taken.

In the Composition between the Parson and Vicar, usage is much regarded; for though the Composition be, that the Vicar should have Garba, yet if he have never had but Hay, he shall have no more now. Smiths Case, adjudged. If the Composition be, that the Parson shall have all the Tyth-Corn, and the Vicar all other Tythes; and one sow his arable Land with Saffron, the Vicar shall have it. Vicar de Farnhams Case, Tr. 1. Jac. Co. B. It is commonly held, That if the Vicar be to have the Tyths of all the Crofts in such a place, that yet he shall not have the Tyths of the Crofts, parcel of the Parsonage; and if he be to have the Tyths of all the Dove-houses of the place, yet he shall not have the Tyths of the Dove-houses belonging to the Parsonage. If the Vicar by the Endowment, be to have the Tythe Hay of all the Meadows in such a place, yet he shall not hereby have any more but the Tyths of those that were Meadows at the time of the Endowment, and not of those grounds that were made Meadow since the Endowment.

By Baron Drabam a difference was taken, where an Endowment is local, as where the Vicar doth claim to have all the Tyths in such grounds, and he hath always had the Tythe of that place; and it hath never been sowed, and he have no Tyths, but the small Tyths of the rest of the Parish by the Endowment; yet if it be new sowed, he shall have the Tythe of the Corn: But if he be to have the small Tyths generally, and he hath always had Tyths in such a place, and it was never sowed, and now it is sowed to Corn; in this Case he shall not have the Corn. 8 Cap. & Sarum Assises.

CHAP. IX.

Of Aid.

Aid is a Subsidy or yielding of help by one to another, unto whom he oweth it, and whose case calleth for it: And sometimes it is from an Inferior to a Superior, and sometimes from a Superior to an Inferior, and sometimes from one equal to another, Terms Ley Aid. Finch. 80.

Aid, what.

From the Inferior to the Superior. 1. From the Subjects to the Supreme Governor, when he hath need, and that Aid is called Subsidy or Custom, &c. (for which, see Subsidy.) 2. From the Tenant that holdeth in Socage to the Lord; and that for two purposes, First, To make his Son Knight, which he may do at fifteen years of age, and then he is to have this Aid. Secondly, To marry his Eldest Daughter, which he is to have when she is of the age of seven years (to wit) of him that holdeth Lands in Socage to the value of Twenty pound per annum, Twenty shillings & sic pro rat: Which if the Tenant will not pay, the Supreme Governor or other Lord, may at his Election, either distrain him for it, or have a Writ to recover it. But Aid annexed to a Tenure in Capite, or in Knights Service, is gone by the late Order. Stat. 14 Ed. 3. 1. Co. super Lit. fol. 91. 162. 25 Ed. 3. 11. F.N.B. 82. Co. 11. 44. See Lord and Tenant, Chap. Sett.

Sett. 1.
From an Inferior to a Superior.

Reasonable Aid shall be Twenty shillings for a whole Knights Fee, and as much for Twenty pound Land in Socage, and so after the Rate more or less: If the Father after the Aid levied, die before he marry his Daughter; the Executors of the Father shall be charged to the Daughter, for so much as he received, or his Heir, if the Executor have not Assets. The King also was to have this Aid according to this proportion by the Statute: But Tenant by Grand Sergeanty, or Petty Sergeanty, or Copiholders shall not pay this Aid. Westm. 1. 35. 25 Ed. 3. 21 H. 4. 32.

From a Superior to an Inferior. First, Where the Kings Tenant that held in Capite, was impleaded for the Land, or somewhat that doth issue out of the Land, as Rebt, &c. Or if any City or Burrough that had any Fee-Farm of the King, had been questioned for it; or, where the Kings Bailiff, Purveyor, or Collector, had been questioned: In these Cases they might have paid, and had Aid of the King. So where the King had warranted Land: For one cannot Vouch, but in that Case must have prayed in Aid of the King; but in the Kings Case, Aid was always to be prayed before Issue joyned, Co. 8. 50. 4. 22. 5. 109. 1. 48. 9. 16. Stat. 4 Ed. 1. 3. Dyer 25. Secondly, Where a Tenant for life, years, at will, by Statute, Elegit, or Copy, is impleaded for the Land or any Rent, &c. out of it; then he may pray help, and Aid of him in Reversion (which may sometimes be before Issue joyned, and sometimes after.) And then he may come in gratis, if he will, or if he will not, then shall issue forth the Writ called Somons ad auxiliandum, which is to compel him to come in, and to plead with his Tenant in the defence of the Land: And if he come not upon the second Writ, then the Tenant must go on without him; and if he do appear, and the Tenant and he do not agree, but differ in their Plea, then the Tenant shall be ousted of his Aid, and the Plea of the Tenant shall be taken alone, Co. 4. 9. 20. 8. 50. 10. 31. 8. 75. 11. 80. Co. 9. 31. Dyer 256. Thirdly, Where a Bailiff or Servant is questioned for what he did in his Masters service, he may pray; and shall have Aid of his Master, 14 H. 7. 6. 4 Ed. 3. 11.

Sett. 2.
From a Superior to an Inferior.

Somons ad auxiliandum, what.

From one equal to another: As if one after Partition made, be impleaded, and lose all or part of her Land, by one that hath Title Paragonus, she shall have Aid of the rest, and shall recover according to the rate of the rest again, Co. 4. 122.

Between Equals.

It is where one bringeth an Action, and the Tenant in his answer, prayeth in Aid of another that hath a better estate then he; and the Demandant replieth, That he ought not to have Aid of him. This Plea is called a Counterplea to the Aid. Terms Ley,

CHAP. X.

Of Allegiance.

Allegiance,
what it is.

How many
there be.

It is a true and faithful Obedience of the Subject to his Sovereign. And this is incident to every Subject, that as soon as they be born, they do by Birth-right owe this Obedience to the Sovereign Magistrate: Hence the Subjects are called Liege People. Co. 7. 4, 6. 5.

And there are four kinds of Ligeances. The first is Natural, Absolute, Pure, and Indefinite: And this is that which is originally due by Nature and Birth-right, which is called Alta Ligeantia; and the Subject that oweth it is Subditus natus. See the excellent Learning of this matter, Co. 7. Calvins Case.

The second is Acquisition, which is not by Nature, but by Acquisition, as by Denization; and this is either absolute, as the common Denizations be to them and their Heirs, without any limitation or restraint. Secondly, Limited, as when the King had granted Letters of Denization to an Alien, and to the Heirs-Males of his body. Thirdly, It may be granted upon condition: And this may be effected three manner of ways, 1. By Parliament; 2. By Letters Patents which is the usual manner; 3. By Conquest.

The third is Local, which is made by the Law, and is when an Alien, which is in Amity, cometh into England; because as long as he is here, he is within the Supreme Magistrates Protection; therefore he oweth unto him a Local Obedience.

The fourth is a Legal Obedience, which is called Legal, because the Laws of the Realm have prescribed the order and form of it, which is the Oath of Allegiance, which is commonly to be taken in the Tourn, Lies, or by every man that is above the age of twelve years. Co. super Litt. 68. 8. 172. b.

The effect of this Allegiance.

And by virtue hereof, they are bound to the Commandment of the Supreme Magistrate, to go any where within the Realm with him, for the defence thereof, without wages, but not out of the Realm without wages: For every Subject is bound hereby to defend him and his Realm, F. N. B. 8, F. Protection 100. 18 Ed. 3. 8. Crompt. Jur. f. 84.

Supremacy.

And that which is repugnant, and an enemy to this Allegiance, is the acknowledging and submitting to any Foreign usurped Authority, such as was the Popes sometimes here in England. All the Kings Liege people therefore, were to acknowledge and submit to the Kings Supremacy; and to oblige them hereunto, was the Oath of Supremacy Devised, which was as followeth.

Oath of Supremacy:

I. A. B. Do utterly testifie and declare in my Conscience, That the Queens Highness is the only Supreme Governor of this Realm, and of all other Her Highness Dominions and Countreys, as well in all Spiritual as Ecclesiastical things or causes, as Temporal. And that no Foreign Prince, Person, Prelate, State, or Potentate, hath or ought to have any Jurisdiction, Power, Superiority, Preheminence or Authority Ecclesiastical or Spiritual, within this Realm. And therefore I do utterly renounce and forsake all Foreign Jurisdiction, Powers, Superiorities, and Authorities; and do promise, That from henceforth I shall bear Faith and true Allegiance to the Queens Highness, Her Heirs and Lawful Successors; and to my power, shall assist and defend all Jurisdictions, Privileges, Preheminences, and Authorities, granted or belonging to the the Queens Highness, Her Heirs, and Successors, or united and annexed to the Imperial Crown of this Realm: So help me God, and by the Contents of this Book, Stat. 1 Eliz. cap. 1.

But this Oath, and the Oath of Allegiance, as to a King, are now taken away, and not to be imposed upon any body, in any Case. See the Act of Parliament, 9 Febr. 1648.

CHAP. XI,

Of an Alien.

AN Alien is a Subject born out of the Legeance of our Supreme Magistrate, and within the Legeance of another King. And such a one is either Amy, i. one of such a Nation, as between whom and us there is no War, as now the French and Dutch; or else he is enemy, which is one of such a Nation, as between whom and us there is open War. And he also is either perpetuus; as all Infidels, betwixt whom and us Christians there is a perpetual War: Or pro tempore, as sometimes the Spanish, and sometimes the French, &c. Or specialiter permissus, as when an enemy is suffered by the Supreme Magistrates safe conduct to pass into the Country: And such an Alien-enemy may be, though he be born within this Country; as the Issues of enemies born here that hold a Foite, or of other Alien-enemies born here, Terms Ley, Co. 7: 17, 18.

Alien, what.

He shall be said an Alien that is within the definition aforesaid. But if an Amy come into England here, and have Issue; his Issue is no Alien. So if an Englishman go beyond Sea by License, and have Issue there; his issue is no Alien. So if one be born under our Dominions, in any other Country, as Scotland, or the like; he is no Alien; and therefore in these Cases, such Issues may inherit Land, and have all other benefits of any other Heir born in England. But if one be once an Alien, no continuance of him here in England, though it be from his Childhood, and though he be sworn in the Kings Leet will make him a Denizen, Co. 7. 6. Stat. 25 Ed. 3. Stat. 42 Ed. 3. 10. Finches Ley, f. 84.

Who shall be said an Alien born, or not.

An Alien that is Amy, whether he be an Infidel baptized, or any other, though he be not made Denizen, may by the Common Law, acquire, get, and have by Gift, Trade, or any other lawful ways or means, any Treasure or Personal Goods, as well as an Englishman. And if he be a Merchant he may take a Lease of a House, and it shall be good for that special purpose, but not to his Executors or Administrators; or being any other, he may take a House for his Habitation; and for these things he is capable of, he may have any Action, and the Plea of Alienée shall be no bar to him. But he is not capable of, neither can he have or enjoy any Estate of any Lands or Tenements, or any Chattels real, by descent, purchase, or otherwise; neither can he have a Benefice, if he be a Spiritual man, until he be made Denizen. And if he have any such Estate, the Lord Protector will have it by his Prerogative. Neither can he have any Action real, or mixt, or personal, concerning Land, but in every such Action, the Tenant or Defendant may plead that he was born in such a place, which is not within the Kings Ligeance, and demand Judgment, if he shall be answered: Neither can such Aliens serve in Juries here, Co. 7. 1. 16. Plow. 483. Co. 9. 141. Dyer 2. 283. Co. super F. 1. Stat. 7 R. 2. cap. 12. Terms Ley.

The capacity of an Alienée to purchase Lands, or gain Goods, or Chattels, and to bring Actions. And what thing he may take or enjoy to his own use or not. Alien's Friend.

But he that is an Alien-Enemy, so long as he remains so, is not capable of any such benefit that an Alien-Amy is capable of: For if he have any goods, any man may seise them, and the Lord Protector shall have all his Specialties, and any man may kill him by Martial law, Co. 7. 17. Dyer 2. 12 H. 8. 4. And if he do any offence here, he he shall be executed by that Law, Trin. 41 Eliz. Co. B. And he is held to be an Alien-Enemy, that is subject to one between whom and us is open war; and not the subject of such a King as hath denied to traffique with us, or hath done to us some discourtesie. But Ambassadors of any King, friend or enemy, have a privilege to come here. See more for Alien, the Statutes of 1 H.6. cap 3.8. 14 & 15 H.8. cap. 2. 32 H.8. 16.

Denizen, what.

Naturalized or Naturalization,
what.

A Denizen is one that hath been an Alien, and doth after become a Subject here; and this may be either by Act of Parliament, or by Letters-Patents: And by this he may be made Denizen in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, or for life; and it may be conditional, or absolute, as other things be granted; and then such a Denizen is capable of all other privileges and benefits for Estates of Lands and Chattels real, that a Natural born Subject is capable of, save only of Lands by descent, which no Alien can be capable of until he be Naturalized, (i.) endowed with all the privileges of a natural Subject, which cannot be but by Act of Parliament. But he may have Land by purchase; and if he die without heir, it shall go to the Lord, and not to the King by Escheat, Co. 7.6.7. 3 H.6.55. Broo. 22 H.8.8. Co. super Lit. f.1. See for Alien-Merchants, and other Aliens, the Statutes of 5 R. 2. 1. *An. CHAP. XII.

Of an Alienation, Alimony, Apparel, and Ambodexter.

Seff. 1.
Alienation,
what.

Alienation is nothing else but Alienum facere, to make a thing another mans, or to put a thing from one man to another: And if it be of Land, as it is most commonly understood, it is but the transmutation of the possession: Which may be either by Deed, as by Covenant, Fine, Feoffment, or Recovery; or by Law, as by Descent or Escheat, Terms ley. Co. 6. 27. & super Lit. f. 118. And in some cases a man hath power of himself so to do; and in some cases he cannot do it without the licence and assent of another: As one that had held of the King in capite, could not have aliened it without the Kings licence: So if any man will now alien Lands in Fee-simple to a House of Religion, or to a Body Incorporate, he must have the Lord Protectors, and the Lords licence of whom the Land is holden, first, or else he will forfeit the Land aliened. See Mortmaine, Stat. 1. Ed. 3: cap. 12. 15 R. 2. cap. 5.

Licence of Alienation, when it is required,
or not.

If the Lands that had been alienated from one man to another had been of the Kings in capite, or if any Honor in capite or in Serjeanty by Knights service, or Socage in chief; in these cases the Kings licence must first have been had, and a Fine paid to him before the Alienation had been made, whether it had been Lands Rent, Mesuagialty, Advowson, or a Reversion that had been so alienated, if there be any Estate of Freehold that is aliened, to the end that the King might still be sure of his Tenant; as in these cases following.

1. If there be three Joint-Tenants, and one release to one of his Companions; hereupon a Licence must be had, and a Fine paid.
2. If any Estate be made of such Land in Fee-simple, Tail, or for Life.
3. If a Partition had been in the Chancery by the Kings Tenants, and it had not been equal, and after they had altered it.
4. If a Fine or Recovery had been of Land to divers uses, and estates of Freehold had been created by this means, there must have been a Licence; and so must it have been, though the uses and estates had been with power of revocation or alteration; but in that case if the uses had been after revoked, there had not needed a new licence.

But

But the Tenure in Capite being now gone, no Licence is requisite upon such an Alienation. See Broo. 27. 18. 17. 33. 45 Ed. 3. 62. 3 H. 4. 8. Br. 4. 33 H. 6. 4. 11 H. 4. 33. 43 Ed. 3. 6. Co. 6. 27. Also when Lands are aliened in Mortmain, the Lord Protector's Licence must first be had, else the Lands are forfeit. But Licence for Alienation of Capite Land, is taken away, by Parliament, Order 24 of Febr. 1645.

But of the Lands held of the King in Burgage-tenure, or of any Honor of his, and not in Capite, there the Tenant might have aliened without any Licence. So also though the Lands be held of him in Capite, or otherwise as above, if it be in these cases following.

1. When by the Alienation no Freehold is made, but there is only a Lease for years made.
2. When there is in the sale but a bare Release of a Right by way of extinguishment, as when it is by a Fine sur Release, &c.
3. Where there be three Joint-Tenants, and one release to the other two.
4. Where there is only a Rent granted out of such Land by the Tenant.
5. When there is a new Declaration of Uses only, Stamf. Pr. fol 33. Broo. 296. Co. 6. 27.

These Licences so had from the King as before, must have been pursued, else the Licence would not help them that did alien: And therefore if the Licence had been to alien the third part, and he had aliened the whole, this Licence was void for all. So if the Licence be to alien the Manor of Dale, with all his Lands and Tenements in Dale; and he alien by Fine a certain number of acres (as he must in Fine) this Licence will not help him. So if the Licence be to alien the Manor of Dale rendring Five pounds rent, and he alien the Manor excepting twelve acres rendring Five pounds rent, this variance maketh the Licence insufficient for this Alienation. And then in all these cases it is an Alienation without Licence, 4 Ed. 6. 6. Br. 30. 23.

Sett. 2.
Licence pursued, or not.

But if the Licence be to alien to I.S. and W.S. and the Conveyance is made to them to divers uses, this is a good Licence, and the Licence need not mention the uses of a Deed, Fine, or Recovery. So if a Licence be to purchase Lands or Tenements, and he purchase an Advowson, this is a good Licence; for an Advowson is a Tenement, Co. 6. 27. Br. 35.

Upon this Licence had from the King, the party was to pay a Fine or sum of money to the King, viz. upon the Alienation of such Land as was held of him, or any Honor of his in capite, the third part of the yearly value; and for a Licence to alien in Mortmain, the value of three years profit, which is by composition to be paid presently before the Licence be granted, Stamf. Pr. cap. 27. 8 Ed. 4. 4. Br. 82. 205. Co. 6. 107. 2. 80. But if there had been an Alienation without Licence by the King's Tenant, where a Licence ought to have been had, there (though the alienation be made) yet the party must sue out his Pardon from the King, and the King must have recompence for this wrong done him, which was a Fine only, which is the value of the Land for the year; and for this the King might have seised the Land and kept it till he were satisfied for his wrong, and till he had sued out his pardon for it. But heretofore the Land it self was held to be forfeited, Co. super Lis. f. 43. 1 Ed. 3. 12. Co. 6. 27. But now all Fines, Licences, Seisures, and Pardons for Alienation and Charges incident thereunto, are taken away by Parliament Order. For restraint of Alienation, & Conditions repugnant.

Fine for Alienation, what.

Of Alimony:

FOR Alimony, which is maintenance for a Woman cast off by her Husband, this was recoverable by the Woman against her Husband in the Spiritual Court; but now there is no Court will believe her but the Chancery. See Chancery.

Alimony.

Of Apparel.

Apparel.

THE Statute that was made in 24 H. 3. against excess of Apparel is now repealed; so that there is now no Common or Statute-Law touching Apparel, but that every one may wear what he will, 21 Jac. 25.

Hats and Caps.

None may make or work any Felt or Hat of or with any foreign wooll or stuff, unless he have been first Apprentice or Covenant-servant to such myserie of Felt or Hat-making seven years at the least, sub pena of Five pounds a moneth, and the loss of all the Hats made while he doth so work, Stat. 8 Eliz. cap. 111 & 1 Jac. cap. 17.

None shall make or sell any Cap or other thing, or Felts, but only Hats, nor any Cap of any woollen cloth nor knit. None shall dye any Cap with Bark or Swarf, but only with Copperas and Gall, or with Wood and Madder.

None shall thick or full any Cap in any Mill, until the same be first well scoured and closed upon the back, and half thicked at the least in the Foot-stock.

No Hat-maker shall take above two Apprentices at a time, and them not under seven years. See for Hat-makers in Norwich, 33 H. 8. cap. 16. 1 Ed. 6. cap. 6. 5 Ed. 6. cap. 7.

Of Ambodexter.

AN Ambodexter is (by our Law) one that being a Juror taketh money to say his Verdict of the one side, and of the other. For this offence he is to be fined ten times so much as he takes, and imprisoned, and never to serve on a Jury again, 38 Ed. 3. 12. 5 Ed. 3. 10.

CHAP. XIII.

Of an Appeal.

Appeal, what.

His word bath two significations: For sometimes it doth intend an accusation or suit given to one for some wrong done to him, or his friend, against the wrong-doer: Of which read Offences. And sometimes it is used in our Law, as it is in the Civil Law, for the removing of a cause in any Ecclesiastical Court from an inferior Judge to a superior, when the Plaintiff or Defendant refuseth the Judge, and desireth to have his Cause tryed in the higher Court before the superior Judge; and then he is said to appeal, as Paul did from Festus to Cesar the Emperor: And he that doth so appeal, is called an Appealant, 24 H. 8. 12. 1 Eliz. 1. Co super Lis.

Appealant.

In what cases Appeal may be had or not, and how and before whom.

In all causes Testamentary, causes of Matrimony and Divorces, Tythes, Oblations and Obventions, the party grieved that had cause to sue, provoke or procure any Appeal, might so do: But he must have it within this Realm, and not elsewhere; and in this manner, viz. First from the Archdeacon or his Official, if the matter be there begun, to the Bishop Diocesan of the same See; and if it be begun before the Bishop Diocesan or his Commissary, then from them within fifteen days after the sentence given, to the Archbishop of that Province, and there it must definitively have been ordered without any further Appeal. And that for lack of Justice at or in any of the Courts of the Archbishops, or in any of the Kings Dominions, the party grieved might have appealed to the King in Chancery, and there by special Commissioners called the Delegates appointed by the King, the matter should have been determined without further Appeal. And if any such cause or matter had in any wise touched or concerned the King, the party grieved might have Appeal from any of the said Courts to the Upper-House of Convocation, there to be ended without further Appeal, 24 H. 8. 12. 25 H. 8. 19. 1 Eliz. 1. 32 H. 8. 6. But in no case may a man attempt or labor to have an Appeal to the Pope, or Rome, or any other person or place out of the Realm, without great danger: For which see Premunire, 24 H. 8. 12.

But in case of privation of a President of a College, or any such like matter which is a meer temporal thing, and as by Patron, no Appeal lieth upon these Statutes. As if the President of Magdalen College in Oxford had been deprived by the Bishop of Winchester the Visitor, he could not have had an Appeal to the Delegates; for this is out of the Statutes: But it may be he might have had an Assise, Dyer 209, P. 20.

— And in all cases, he that doth sue an Appeal, must pursue the order of these Statutes, or his Appeal shall be disallowed, and he shall have no benefit by it, Dyer 240. P. 46.

If a Suit begin before the Admiral touching any Civil or Marine matter, the party grieved may appeal from the sentence of the Admiral into the Chancery before the King, and he is to delegate Commissioners to end it without further Appeal, 8 Eliz. 5: 25 H. 8. 19.

CHAP. XIV.

Of Apportionment.

IT is the dividing into parts of some thing dividable (and not entire and whole) by reason of the division or alteration of some other things out of which that did come, or on which it hath dependance, or otherwise; as Rents, Commons, Conditions, Contracts, Obligations, Suits of Court, Debts, Covenants, Authorities, Damages: About which all the Questions touching Apportionment are moved, Term's ley. Co. super Lit. 147.

And these things divided or altered which cause this Apportionment, are so divided or altered sometimes by the act of God alone, and sometimes by the act of God and Law together, and sometimes by the act of Law alone, and sometimes by the act of the Law and the party together, and sometimes by the act of the party alone: And by these means such Rents Commons, &c. that did issue out of them, or depend upon them, be sometimes extinct, and sometimes suspended, and sometimes apportioned, and sometimes continue entire and unaltered, as in the Examples following, Co. 10. 128.

Rents and Services severable, Commons, Conditions annexed for Estates, may be apportioned. But Conditions of Obligations, Contracts, Suit of Court, and Services entire are not apportionable. So Assumpsits, March 101. pl. 172. 57 pl. 61.

A Rent-charge shall be apportioned by act of Law, and by act of Law when it is mixed with the act of the party, but not by the act of the party, Co. super Lit. 49. & 150.

If I let a flock of Sheep, Horses, or Land to one for years rendring Rent, and part of the Sheep be killed, Houses burnt, or Land drowned by the act of God, if so be it be without any negligence or default in the Lessee; here the Rent shall be apportioned with respect to so much as is gone, Dyer 56.

If a Lessee for life make a Lease for years rendring Rent at Easter, and before the Feast part of the Land be evicted, and the Lessor live till after Easter, and then die; here the Rent shall be apportioned, and so much abated as is of the Land evicted, Co. 10. 126.

If I let Lands or Goods for years rendring Rent, and during the Term a stranger recover

1. The act of God and Law together.

2. The act of the Law alone.

3. The act of the Law and party together.

4. The act of the party alone.

2. What things are apportionable, and what not.

3. Where and in what case Apportionment may be on Rent or other Services.

recover part of the Lands or Goods by a good Title; in this Case the Rent shall be abated and apportioned, having respect to what is recovered: As if I be seized of two Acres of Land, one in Fee, and the other in Tail: And I make a gift in Tail, Lease for life or years of both, rendring Rent, and after my death the Issue in Tail avoideth the Gift or Lease for the one Acre, here the Rent shall be apportioned. Co. 10. 128. Dyer 81. 67. 212. 38. 56. 7 H. 7. 4. Co. super Lit. 148.

If I be seized of two Acres of Land, the one in Borough-English, the other in Gavel-kinde, for years, rendring Rent, and have Issue two sons and die, and the Land go betwixt them (as it must) in this Case the Rent shall be divided between them, Dyer 46.

If a Lessee for years or life do surrender part of his Land, or do commit Wast, or make a Feoffment of part of his Land, and the Lessor recover the place wasted, or enter on the Land aliened for a Forfeiture (as he may) or if he enter upon part upon the breach of a Condition: In this Case the Rent shall be apportioned, and he shall pay but pro rata. of the Land is left in his hands, Dyer 45. Co. super Lit. 148. 214.

If my Father purchase part of the Land, out of which I have a Rent-charge, and dye, and that part of the Land descend upon me; in this Case the Rent shall be apportioned, and I shall recover a part of the Rent still, according to the value of the Land: And so it is if the Tenant of the Land make a Gift in tail of part of the Land to my Father, and this descend to me; and so it is also if my Father be Grantee of a Rent in Fee, and I purchase part of the Land charged, and my Father dieth, and the Rent descend to me; and so it is also if the Grantee grant the Rent to the Tenant of the Land and a stranger, the Rent shall be apportioned, and is extinct but for a Moyety, and the Grantee shall have a part of it of the stranger still. And in all Cases where any part of the Land descend to him that hath the Rent-charge, the Rent shall be apportioned. See Co. super Litt. 149. f. Lit. Sect. 224. 34 H. 6. 41. Plow. 419. Co. super Lit. 149.

If a man have Issue two Daughters, and grant a Rent-charge out of his Land to one of them, and dieth, the Rent shall be apportioned: And so if the Grantee in this Case enfeoffe another of her part of the Land, yet the one half of the Rent remaineth out of her Sisters part, and after partition shall be revived: So if one have a Son and Daughter, by one Venter, and a Daughter by another, and grant a Rent-charge to his Son in Fee, and he die, and the Rent come to his Sister, and after the Land come between them, Co. super Lit. 225. 7 H. 6. 3. 34 Aff. p. 15.

If one seised in Fee of Land, take a Wife, and make a Feoffment, and the Feoffee grant a Rent-charge to the Husband and Wife, and after the Husband die, and the Wife is endowed of part of the Land, out of which the Rent doth go: Now two parts of the Rent shall continue and be apportioned, and the third part extinct, Co. 9. 135. 20 Aff. p. 10.

One having a Rent-charge of Twenty shillings, grants Ten shillings, part thereof, to a stranger; this is a good Grant, and thereby the Rent is apportioned, 9 H. 6. B. 13. A.

One having a Rent-charge of Twenty pounds, releaseth to the Ter-tenant five pounds parcel thereof; this is good. Old Tenures 10 B.

A. doth lease to B. for life, rendring a Rent, and doth after release part of the Rent; this is good. 9 Ed. 3. 8. Br. Release 83.

Rent-seck which was once Rent-service, is apportionable.

If two Daughters, and Heirs be, and one is full age, and the other not, the Services shall be apportioned, and the Lord shall have the Moyety still, 7 H. 6. 3. Br. Entering 17.

If one have a Rent-service of Money, or Corn, or Pepper, &c. Issuing out of Land and purchase part of it in Fee, the whole Rent is not extinct, but shall be apportioned juxta valorem terra; and so also it is of other Services if they be dividable, but if they be entire and they be valuable as a horse, or the like, then they be gone and extinct: But if it be Homage or Fealty, that doth continue: And if parcel of the Land held by such entire Service come to the Lord by descent; if the Service be be Suit-service that are annual, that they are extinct also; and if they be yearly and valuable as a Horse, or the like, that they shall be multiplied, and not apportioned in neither Case: So if the Service be pro bono publico, yet they shall not be apportioned, but continue entire still. Co. super Litt. 143. 149. Co. 9. 135. Co. super Litt. 149.

If one Lease three Acres, rendring three Shillings Rent, and a stranger buy the Fee of one of them, or the Lessor Devise by Will the Fee of one of them, now the Rent shall be divided, and the Purchaser shall have seven pence of the Rent. So if the Tenant make a Feoffment of parcel of the Land, out of which Rent is to go to a stranger: So if the Lessee or his Assignee grant or surrender one Acre to the Lessor; in this Case the Rent shall be divided, and the Lessee shall pay less Rent by so much. And this is true, though it be in Case of the King, that the Reversion is his, Co. super Litt. f. 149. 148. 147. Dyer f. 4. & 5.

If there be Lessee for years, rendring Rent, and he assign his Term to the Wife of the Lessor, and a stranger, the Rent shall be apportioned, and the stranger shall pay half during the life of the Wife, Plow. 10.

If one make a Lease of two Acres, rendring Rent two Shillings, on condition, that if he do such an Act, he shall have the Fee; now if the Contingent happen, and that he have the Fee of one, then the Rent shall be apportioned, Co. super Litt. 148.

If the Gardein in Chivalry entreth into the Land of his Ward within age, now is the Seigniorie suspended: But if the Wife of the Tenant be endowed of a third part of the Tenancy; in this Case the Rent shall be apportioned, and she shall pay to the Lord a third part of the Rent. Fitz. Dower 138. Co. super Litt. 148.

If the Tenant give a part of the Tenancy to the Father of the Lord in Tail, the Father dieth, and this descends to the Lord; in this Case the Rent or Service shall be apportioned, and so is the Law of a Rent-charge, Co. super Litt. 148.

If two Joynt-tenants or Co-parceners be of a Seigniorie, and one of them Disseise the Tenant of the Land, the Service shall be divided, and the other Joynt tenant or Co-parcener shall distrain for his or her Moyety, Co. super Litt. 148.

Where Land to which a Condition is annexed, is divided by Act in Law, as where part is recovered by an elder title, or part doth descend, there the Condition shall be apportioned, and shall remain to the residue, Dyer 309. Co. 5. 59.

If one be seised of two Acres of Land of several natures (i. e.) the one in Fee-simple, the other of the Custom of Burrough-English, and make an Estate of them both together on condition, and die, and one Acre descend to one Heir, and another to another Heir; in this Case the Condition shall be apportioned, and both the Heirs shall take advantage of it, Co. 4. 120. Dyer 309.

If a Lease be made on Condition, and the Lessee do Alien part of the Land leased in Fee, or commit waste, and so commit a Forfeiture, and the Lessor enter, or recover it from him; in this Case the Condition shall be apportioned; and remains with the residue: For a Condition may be apportioned by Act of Law, but not by the act of the party, Co. 4. 120.

If one purchase part of the Land out of which another hath Common Appendant; in this Case the Common shall be apportioned, Co. 8. 79. 4. 37. Dyer 319.

If one have Common Appendant on Appurtenant to Land, and he sell away part of it; in this Case the Purchaser shall have Common pro rata, and there shall be an Apportionment, Co. 8. 79. 4. 37.

If he out of whose Land the Common is taken, do purchase part of the Land, to which the Common is appendant, yet the Commoner shall have an Apportionment for the residue, Co. 4. 37. 38.

If one have Common in certain in twenty Acres of Land, and ten of those descend to the Commoner; in this Case the Common shall be apportioned, and he shall have Common in the residue: But if he have Common ad mensuram, then he shall have Common so still, Co. super Litt. 149.

Condition:

4. How and in what a Condition may be apportioned:

Of a Common.

Apportionment in Common Appendant and Appurtenant.

Of Warranty,
how it may be apportioned by Act of the Law.

Two Joynt-tenants with warranty, the one makes a Feoffment the warranty is not divideable, 29 Ed. 3. 70.

If two Joynt-tenants with warranty make partition by writ, the warranty remains by force of the Statute, 31 H. 8. For a warranty may be apportioned by Act of Law, but not by act of the party, 38 Ed. 3. 20. 48 Ed. 3. 17. 6 Rep. 12. b.

Of Execution.

If Execution be sued of Lands upon a Statute, and after the Inheritance of part of those Lands descend to the Conusee, all the Execution is avoided, and there shall be no Apportionment; but if the descent had been before Execution, Contra. Co. super Litt. f. 150.

Of an Annuity.

A. grants an annuity of ten pounds a year to B. B. grants to C. five pounds parcel of the said annuity of ten pounds, A. shall be liable to pay five pounds to C. F. N. B. 152.

§. How Apportionment shall be made. Where and in what Case not.

Rent shall be apportioned to the value of the Land purchased, and not according to the quantity, 18 Ed. 2. Avowry 218. Adjudged.

If one grant to another a Pension of twenty pounds yearly, while he doth keep him company, to be paid such a day, and before the day the Grantor die; in this Case there shall be no Apportionment, but the whole Rent is gone, Co. 10. 128.

Of Rent.

If I have a Rent-charge issuing out of Land, and purchase part of the Land, the whole Rent is extinct, and shall not be apportioned, but by Agreement of the parties it may be received again: So if I enter upon part of the Land, the Rent shall be suspended, and not apportioned, Co. super Litt. fol. 147. Doff. lib. 2. cap. 16. 7 H. 6. 26. Bro. 3.

If there be Lord and Tenant of Twenty Acres of Land by fealty, and twenty shillings Rent; If the Tenant make a gift in Tail, a Lease for life or years, of parcel thereof to the Lord, in this Case the Rent shall not be apportioned but is all suspended: But if the Lord purchase part in Fee of the Tenant, the Rent shall be apportioned, Co. super Litt. 148.

See. 3:

If the Lessor enter upon part of the Land of his Lessee for life or years, and Disfeise or out him, the Rent is suspended for the whole, and shall not be apportioned for any part, 4 H. 7. 6. Co. super Litt. 148.

If one have a Rent-charge out of Twelve Acres, and release the Rent out of one of the Acres, the Rent shall not be apportioned and be chargeable upon the rest, 34 Aff. p. 15.

If a Tenant Infeoff his Lord, and another in Fee, the Rent shall not be apportioned, but is all extinct, 7 H. 6. 3.

If one hold his Land of his Lord by the Service, to render to the Lord yearly at such a Feast, a Horse, a Golden Spur, a Clove, a Gilliflower; If in this Case the Lord purchase parcel of the Land, the whole Service is gone, and there shall be no Apportionment; and so also is the Law, where parcel of the Land held by such entire Service come to the Lord by Descent, there shall be no Apportionment; for in some cases the Service doth remain entire, and in some cases it is extinct, Co. super Litt. f. 149. Co. 8. 105.

If Tenants in Tail, or for life Lease part of the Land to others for years, there shall be no Apportionment, but the Tenant in Tail, or Lessee for life shall be still charged with the whole Rent, 22 Aff. p. 52.

If one make a Lease for years rendering Rent, and after the Lessee assign over part of the thing leased, it seems here shall be no Apportionment of the Rent, Dyer fol. 4. 5.

If one grant a Rent-charge out of two Acres, and after the Grantee recovereth one of the Acres by title Paramount, against the Grantor; in this Case there shall be no Apportionment of the Rent: For if it were true, the whole Rent shall issue out of the other Acre; if otherwise that it were fained, it is all extinct, Doff. & Stur. l. 2. c. 17. Co. super Litt. 148.

If A. Enfeoff B. of one Acre in Fee on Condition, and B. being seised of another Acre in Fee, grant a Rent out of both to the Feoffor, and A. re-enter for the Condition broken; here shall be no Apportionment, Co. super Litt. f. 148.

If

If one make a Lease for years or life, rendring Rent at Michaelmas, or twelve days after; and before the last day of payment of the Rent, the Land is evicted from the Lessee; in this case shall be no Apportionment, for Rent shall never be apportioned in respect of time. And so it seems if a Lease be for the life of the Lessee, on condition he shall pay Twenty pounds a year at Michaelmas, and he die before Michaelmas, that the whole Rent shall not be apportioned. And so if a Tenant for life make a Lease for years, rendring Rent at Michaelmas, and the Tenant for life dieth, here Rent shall not be apportioned, but is all lost, Co. 10. 128: Opinio Bridgman Just. Co. 10. 128.

If I let a flock of Sheep, or Houses, or Land to one for years rendring Rent, and part of the Flock, Houses, or Land be spoiled by the act of God, and default or negligence of the Lessee together, here shall be no apportionment, but the whole Rent shall continue still, Dyer 56.

If three Joint-tenants hold by an entire yearly Rent, as of a Horse, or of a grain of Wheat, and the Tenant cease by two years, and the Lord recover two parts of the land against two of them, and the third do save his part by tendring his Rent, and giving surety, &c. In this case the Rent shall not be apportioned, but is all extinct, F. N. B. 209. Co. super Lis. 149.

If a Lease be made on Condition that the Lessee shall not alien the land or any part of it without the licence of the Lessor, and he licence him to alien part; now the Condition is gone of the whole, and shall not be apportioned, and he may after alien the rest without licence, Co. 4. 120. Co. 8. 79: Co. super Lis. 215. Of a Condition.

If one lease three Acres for years or life, rendring Rent upon a Condition, and after sell the Reversion of one of these Acres; now in this case there shall be no Apportionment of the Condition, but it is destroyed in all. So also if the Lessee let or surrender part of the land to the Lessor. So if the Lessor enter upon part of the land wrongfully, the Condition is not to be apportioned, but is suspended in all, Co. 4. 120: Co. 5. 54. Dyer 308. St. B. 4.

If two Joint-tenants be with Warranty, and they make partition without Writ, the Warranty is destroyed, Co. 6. 12. Of a Warranty.

If I have Common appurtenant to Land, and purchase part of the Land, the Common shall not be apportioned, but is all gone and extinct, Co. 4. 38. 8. 79. Of a Common.

If A. hath Common of Pasture sans number in twenty Acres of Land, and ten of those Acres descend to A. the Common shall not be apportioned, but doth remain entire: And so it is of Common of Estovers, of Turbary, of Piscary, &c. Co. super Lis. 149.

If Lands be held by suit of Court, and it descend to Daughters, the service shall not be divided, but the eldest shall do all, and the rest shall contribute; and if the Lord purchase part of the Land, the whole is extinct, 40 Ed. 3. Br. 2. Of Suit of Court.

If a Lease for years be made, rendring Rent at four days in the year; this Rent is not so entire, but it may be divided, and after the first day is past, the Lessor may bring an action of Debt for that Quarters Rent. So also if one be to pay money by the Condition of an Obligation or Recognizance, or by a Covenant at several days; after a Failer the first day, the Obligation, Recognizance, or Covenant may be sued. But upon a single Obligation, or a Contract or promise to pay money at several days, there no Action can be brought for the Debt, until all the days be incurred, and the Debt shall not be apportioned, Co. 10. 128. Lis. f. 117. F. N. B. 267. Dyer 103. 6. Where a Debt upon a Specialty or Contract shall be divided, and where not. Contract, how taken.

If the Condition of an Obligation be to pay Four pounds at a day, and at the day the Obligor pay Three pounds, now the Condition shall not be divided, but the Obligation is all forfeit as if he had paid no part of it, 20 H. 6. 23. Br. 1.

If one promise me Three shillings a week for his Diet and Lodging, and I find him Diet, but not Lodging; this Debt shall not be divided, neither can I bring an action of Debt for the Diet, by or upon this Contract, 9 Ed. 4. 1. Br. 2.

If one promise to serve me a year for Ten pounds, and before the year be expired he he depart out of my service or die, or I discharge him, and he agree to it; now in this case the money shall not be divided, and therefore he hath no remedy for any part of his money: But if the money were to be paid quarterly, and he overlive the quarter, then he shall have the Quarteridge.

If I have land in the right of my Wife, and I sell twenty Trees upon that land for twenty pounds, and the Vendee cut some of them, and my Wife die before the rest be cut; now in this case the debt shall not be divided, neither can I sue for any part of the twenty pounds, but am without remedy, 10 Ed. 4. 18. 10 H. 6. 25. 3 Ed. 4. 6. Br. 25.

If a Lessee covenant to pay the Rent, and after surrender part of the Land, or be evicted out of part by title Paramount; it seems the Rent shall not be appportioned, and that the whole must be paid still, Hil. 7 Jac. B. Regis. See more in Contract, in Extinguishment.

7. Contribution.

Equality.

It is where a burthen or charge is to be laid, or somewhat had from divers, and one ought to bear it as well as another: But if it is wholly laid upon one, in this case the Law (that delighteth in equality) will give him relief against the rest, Co. 2. 25. 11 H. 7. 12.

If one bind him and his heirs by a Specialty, and die, and his Land descend to divers heirs, here they shall be equally charged. So likewise upon a Warranty where his Land doth after go to divers persons as heirs, they must all be vouched, Co. super Lit. 143.

So if one have entered into a Statute, and sold his Land after to divers, and the Statute is extended upon one, he shall have Contribution against the rest: Ipsa etenim leges capiunt ut jure reguntur.

If one hold three Manors by Knights service of divers Lords all of equal value, he cannot devise two Manors, and leave the third to descend; but he must leave a third part of each Manor to descend for the benefit of every Lord, Co. 2. 25.

If a Lord of a Mannor would approve Common, he cannot take it all out of one Village, and leave it in another, according to the Statute, but he must leave it in the same, Co. 2. 25.

Sect. 5.

In these and such like cases therefore the Law willeth, that there shall be a Contribution: And to give relief in some of these Causes, are the Writs of Contributione facienda, & de onerando pro rata portione; which Writs are of great affinity, the one seeming to be the Genus of the other. (See more for Appportionment, in Contract, Sect. 7. Rent, Sect. 5. Common, Sect. 5. Condition, numb. 15. Services, Sect. 6. Debt.)

Contributione facienda.

De onerando pro rata portione.

Where the first lieth or not, and where Contribution shall be made or not.

The first being defined to be, A Writ that lieth in case where more are bound to one thing, and one is put to the whole burden. And the last, A Writ that lieth where one is distrained for a Rent that ought to be paid by others proportionally with him. So that it seems the first doth lie in most or all cases where the latter doth lie, but not à contra. Terms of the Law, F. N. B. 134.

If Tenants in common or Joint-tenants hold a Mill (pro indiviso) and equally take the profits thereof, the Mill falling to decay, and one or more of them refusing to contribute towards the reparation thereof, the rest shall have this Writ to compel them, F. N. B. 61. Manth. cap. 3.

If there be three Coparceners of land that have suit to the Lords Court, and the eldest perform the whole, then may she have this Writ to compel the other two to a Contribution of the Charge, or to one of them, if one only refuse, Writs, 2. 143.

Where one only suith required for land, and that land being sold to divers, suit is required of them all or some of them by distress, as intirely as if all were still in one; here he may have remedy against the rest, Old N. B. 143.

If many are infeoffed of any land, for which suit ought to be done, &c. Now if they agree among themselves, that one of them shall make the suit, and the rest shall hold him liable, and the one doth the service, and the rest do refuse to contribute; in this case he may have this Writ, and therein he must make mention of the agreement; and if there be no agreement, and one be charged for the rest with all the service, he may have this remedy, Writs, 2. 143.

If a Charge come upon a Hundred or Tything, and it be laid upon one alone, it seems he may have his remedy by this Writ, Fitz. Avarie 191. New Terms of the Law, 99. b.

If Dower of the Tenant voucheth the Heir in Ward to three several Lords, each of them shall be equally charged, Co. 3. 14. a.

If two, four, or more men be severally seised of Land, and they all joyn in a Recognisance, in this Case. If the Conusee extend the Land of any of the Conusers alone, he may have Contribution; for all ought to be equally charged, and not one alone without the rest, Idem Co. 3. 14. a.

If Judgment be given against two Disseisors in Assise for the Land and damages, and one Disseisor dieth, the Execution shall not lie onely on the surviving Disseisor, but the Heir and the Disseisor shall be equally charged, and Execution ought not to be Awarded against the surviving Disseisor, Idem Co. 3. 13. b.

See more of this in Statute, Numb. Where the Land of one is charged by a Statute, he shall have Contribution against the rest. But if two be bound in an Obligation, and one of them be charged with the whole, the other shall not have Contribution, unless it be by special custom as in London, Old Book of Entries, fol. 261. 126.

If a man hold ten Plough-Land, and by Fealty, and twenty shillings Rent of the King, and the Tenant let one Plough-Land to one man, another to another in Fee, and so the residue to others, and the Kings Officers distrain one of them for all therein, now he may have this remedy against all the rest. So if the Kings Tenant have aliened to divers, and hath some of the Land in his own hands, and he be distrained for all; if he did alien by the Kings License, he shall have remedy against the rest, F. N. B. 235. a.

And if a man that holdeth one hundred Acres of Land ought to repair a Bridge, by reason of his Tenure of these one hundred Acres, now if he alien in Fee twenty of these Acres to one, and twenty to another man, and after one of them alone is distrained to repair this Bridge, upon a Presentment made of it; in this Case he may have a special Writ, directed to the Kings Officers, that they shall not distrain him, but according to the rate of the Land he hath, Fitz. N. B. 235. B. See more in Taxes and Rates.

CHAP. XV.

Of Arbitrement.

Tis an Award, Determination, or Judgment, which one or more doth make at the request or agreement of two or more, for and upon some Debt, Trespas, or Controversie between them; for the ending and deciding of which, the parties have chosen and authorized them as Judg or Judges. It is a Judgment given by such as are elected by the parties unto the Controversie, for the ending and pacifying of the said Controversie according to the Compromise and Submission, and agreeable to Reason and Conscience.

Arbitrement.

And therefore they are called Arbitrators, Judges indifferently chosen by the parties that have power to give a definitive sentence in the matters of difference; and this Award or Sentence is called a Judgment.

Arbitrators.

This doth differ from an Accord herein onely, that this is made by the parties themselves, and that by the mediation of Friends.

The difference and agreement between Arbitrement and an Accord.

2. This is no Plea to an Action upon the things accorded, if the thing awarded be not done, for there be means to compel the doing of it; but that is a good Plea to any Action brought upon any thing put in Arbitrement, though the thing awarded be not done; if there be means to compel him to it, that was awarded to do it, 19 H.6. 37. Plow. 11. Kelw. 121. Dyer 75.

Umpire, what.

An Umpire is the same in effect with an Arbitrator: Judex honorarius, non à lege datus, sed ab iis qui litigant electum qui totius rei habet potestatem ad arbitrandum non ex lege & stricto jure, sed prout ipse æquum esse existimet. And he is by the parties to order the matter, if the Arbitrators cannot agree, or do not make the Award by the time set.

Submission or Compromise, what.

A Submission or Compromise, Compromissum est simultanea illa partium promissio, qua sua sponte ad alicujus boni viri arbitrium suam remittunt Controversiam: And this is sometimes in writing (which also may be made by the parties reciprocally, or to the Arbitrator) as by Obligation, Recognizance, Covenant, &c. or by word only, and both these are sometimes absolute, and sometimes conditional, as if the Award be made by a day, &c. and sometimes general of all matters, and sometimes particular of some one or more matters. And this is also express, or implied: For in an Obligation or Assumpsit to abide an Award is an implied submission, and upon a bare submission, an Action may be brought if the Award be not performed. If it be to pay money, &c. Co. 10. 131. 5. 78. 20 H.6. 18. Brown and Dennigers Case. Trin. 18 Jac. Cyprian Salters Case, p. 9.

Sett. 1:
1. The fruit and effect of Arbitrement.

The fruit and effect of an Arbitrement is this; That if it be a good and binding Arbitrement, and any thing be given or awarded for any wrong done in recompence, and it be either paid or performed; or if it be such a thing for which the party to whom it is awarded, hath means to come by it, or some thing in attendance for not performance of it, as where there is an Obligation or Assumpsit to perform it, it is an Extinguishment of the wrong and controverſie thereabout; so that the causes of Suit before, Transcunt in rem judicatam, inſomuch, That if the party sue again for any of those matters, whereupon the Award hath been made; that Award being pleaded to it, will be a bar to him in his Suit: As if he say, That they submitted to the Award of 7. 3. for that matter alone, or that with others; and that 7. 3. awarded him to pay 10 much money such a day, and that the day of payment is not yet come, (for an Arbitrement that one of the parties shall pay money, doth give an Action for the money:) Or if it be past, then that he paid, or at least tendered the money at the day (for so he must say.) But if the party pay not the money, then is the other party restored to his first Action; yet so as it is at his election, to have an Action upon the Award, or to sue upon the first causes; but if payment be made, the first wrong is altogether determined by the Award. And if the Submission be by Obligation, and the Award be that one shall pay the other money, the party may have an Action upon the Obligation, or upon the Award at his choice, 21 Ed. 4. 41. 33 H.6. But if there were a Submission, and no Award, or an Award that is not good in Law, which is all one with no Award, or there be onely a bare Submission without Bond or Assumpsit, and the Award be to do such a thing as for which the party to whom it should be done hath no remedy, being a collateral thing as to make a Feoffment, &c. or any thing else but payment of money: In these Cases the party shall not be barred in any Suit upon the matters put into Compromise; neither will any Action lie for the not performance of such an Award. Ex nuda submissione non oritur actio: But if the Submission be by Obligation, or an Assumpsit, and a Collateral Act be awarded to be done, and it be not done, the Obligation is forfeit, or the money promised to be paid by Assumpsit, if it were not performed, may be recovered, 6 H.7. 1. 11. Plow. 5. 49 Ed. 3. 3. 20 H.6. 41. 9 Ed. 4. 51. 6 H.7. 11. 8 H.6. 25. Dyer 75. Co. 5. 78. 5 Ed. 4. 7. 16 Ed. 4. 9. 9 Ed. 4. 51. 20 H.6. 12. 40. 5 Ed. 4. 7. 8 H.6. 25. 16 Ed. 4. 8. 49 Ed. 3. 3. 33 H.6. 2. 4 H.6. 1. 21 H.7. 28. 9 Ed. 4. 44. Plow. 6. 5 Ed. 4. 47. 19 H.6. 38. 19 H.6. 38. 20 H.6. 9. 5 Ed. 4. 7. 9 Ed. 4. 44. Co. 5. Samons Case.

But some hold that an Action lieth in some Cases for non-performance of an Award upon meer Submission, although it be to perform a Collateral Act as to make a release, and he shall declare upon a mutual promise to perform the Award, 20 H.6. 20. A. 10. Rep. 131. A. Trin. 18 Jac. B. B. le Roy, Brooms and Doring. Co. 8. 98.

The

The Award of a Personal Chattel, as if an Award be that 7. S. one of the parties shall have a Horse in question between them, doth alter the property, and give it to 7. S. so that 7. S. may have an Action of Detinue for it: And so also it seems it doth of a Chattel real; but in real matters which concern Free-hold, an Arbitrement can neither give a Title, nor binde a Right, Dyer 183. 21 H. 7. 29. 14 H. 4. 19.

An Arbitrement can give no Title concerning Free-hold, nor bind a Right.

But if the Award that is made be faulty in any of the particulars following, or there be never any Award made, then for not performing such a part of the Award, as is not good; no Action will lie upon the Obligation or Assumpsit to perform it, neither doth the Award in that Case where it is defective produce any effect; for no Action will lie upon it, Co. 10. 131. Hains versus Honeywood, M. 4 7 ac.

The Husband may submit himself to an Award for himself and his Wife, for the Goods and Chattels he hath in the Right, and by reason of his Wife; and this will binde the Wife, 21 H. 7. 29. 13 H. 4. 12. 10 H. 6. 14.

What persons may submit to an Award, and what shall be said to be good Submission in Law, and what not.

If an Infant binde himself to perform an Award by Bond, the Bond is void. So if a stranger binde himself, that an Infant shall perform an Award: the Bond is void, March. 111: pl. 189. & 141. pl. 215. For an Infant cannot submit to an Award, nor any body for him, March. 111. pl. 189.

If divers have done a wrong to one, and one of these, and he to whom the wrong is done may submit to the Award, and if an Award be made, the others that were no parties to the Submission, may take advantage of it to extinguish the wrong. 7 H. 4. 31. 20 H. 6. 12.

A Submission to an Award by a Deputy, as if the one party himself, and a Deputy for, and in the name of the other submit to an Award; this is a good Submission, and the Award that shall be made upon it will be good, Dyer 270.

If divers be parties to the Submission, and one submit at one time, and another at another time, it seems this is not a good Submission; but they must submit all at one time, 4 Just. Bridg.

Styl. 3.

If the Submission be of all Actions, Causes of Action are not contained within this, Co. super Lisl. 285.

But if the Submission be of one thing, within it may be included any thing incident to that thing; and of it an Arbitrement may be made within this Submission, 8 H. 6. 18. 19 Ed. 4. 1. 5 H. 7. 22.

How a Submission shall be expounded.

If the Submission be by Obligation with Condition to perform the Award, so as it be delivered utrique eorum before a day: Now by this it must be delivered to each of the parties, else it is not sufficient, Br. Condition, 46.

Though a Submission be by word or writing, and be naked, or cloathed and joyned with an undertaking by Obligation or Assumpsit, yet before the Award be made, it may be countermanded, and the Arbitrators discharged of the work, but with these differences.

Countermand of a Submission, where it may be, and where it shall be good, and where not.

1. That where there is a naked Submission by word, that may be revoked by word; but if it be in writing, the countermand must be by writing, for it must be eodem modo, as the Submission is.

2. If the Submission be naked, and either of the parties countermand it, and discharge the Arbitrators, the other hath no remedy against him: But if he undertake by Especialty, or Assumpsit to abide the Award of 7. S. and do countermand, and revoke it; though the Revocation be good, yet he is subject to Suit on the Especialty or Promise, for he hath broken his promise.

3. In both, and all these Cases, where the party will have his Submission revoked, he must give notice of his minde therein to the Arbitrators. But if there be two or more of the one side that do submit to the Award, one of them cannot revoke the Submission without the rest, especially if it be by Deed, Co. 8. 81. Fitz. Arbitr. 21. Co. 5. 78. 21 H. 6. 30. 3 Ed. 4. 3. 8 Ed. 4. 10. 8 Ed. 4. 11. 10. 28 H. 6. 6. 21 H. 6. 30.

5. The duty of Arbitrators, and how they ought to demean themselves.

When the parties have submitted themselves, the Arbitrators may either refuse to meddle with it, or accept the burthen of it: And if they will accept it, the parties are to notifie their Controversies to them, or else they are not to take any notice of it

(but they cannot enjoy any oath to Witnesses, and yet may take any evidence that any man will voluntarily by oath confirm) after they have understood the cause, and heard the parties and matters fully, they must make their Award Secundum allegata & probata, and they must do this themselves; for they cannot transfer their power to another, or make Deputies, (for an Award so made will not be good) because they are Judges of the matter by consent. After they have made the Award, if by the Submission it be provided for, that it shall be published or notified, then it must be done, and so done as the Submission is; as if the condition be, that it shall be by writing them so: If to all the parties, then so it must be, and till then it is no good Award. But if it be left to the discretion of the Arbitrators, and no order be taken by the Submission for the publication of it, the Arbitrators are not bound (but in honesty) to notify it, and the parties are bound to take notice of it; but if one be to do a thing that depends upon another thing first to be done by the other party, he must have notice of this, 8 Edw. 4. 10. 47 Edw. 3. 21. Co. 5. Samons Case, 8. 98. 8 Ed. 4. 11. 8 Ed. 4. 21. 1 H. 7. 5. Plow. 218. Co. 4. 82. 5. 103. 8. 82. 8 Ed. 4. 21. 20 Ed. 4. 8.

If the Submission be, that the Award shall be delivered to the party, &c. before a day if he desire it, if he desire it not, he must take notice of it at his peril, 8 Ed. 4. 18, 21.

If divers of the one side, and divers of the other, submit themselves to the Award of divers, the Arbitrators may make an Award for matters between them jointly, and for matters between them severally; and they may make an Award between some of the one part, and some of the other, and not meddle with the rest, unless the Submission be so, as they must meddle with all or none: For an Arbitrator may protest against meddling with some parcel, and make an Award of the rest, if the Submission will warrant it, and an Award made of that parcel which is within the Submission, is good, 2 R. 3. 18. 21 H. 7. 29. Plow. 289. 22 Ed. 4. 22. 19 H. 6. 6.

6. What Matters are Arbitrable, and what not.

Self. 3:

The most proper matters for Arbitrements, are personal wrongs, and uncertain duties, as Trespasses, and the like: But most things may be referred to Arbitrement, as differences about Land, and Estates therein: Chattels real or personal, choses in Action, Reckonings, Accompts, and the like. Dyer 183. Co. 5. 78.

But Arbitrators cannot dispose of Land by their Judgment (as the Chancery and a Judgment at the Common Law can do) yet they may Award, that one party shall enjoy it, and the other not disturb him; or, that the one shall give the other a Bond for quiet enjoying, or the like. And if there be any Especialty or Assumpsit, to perform the Award, and he do not; he may sue upon it. Freehold is not arbitrable, 9 H. 6. 60. B. Kelm. 99. b. 21 Ed. 3. 26. 14 H. 4. 18, 19, 24. Br. Abridgement, 5. 30. 8. Rep. 137. a. 3 Ed. 3. Waste 5. Contrary to Dyer 242. b. 14 H. 4. 19. a. per Skren, 8 R. 2. Annuity 55. 12 Aff. pl. 25. 12 Ed. 3. p. 24. And for Chattels they may dispose them, and give the property or interest to one or another as they please.

1. Debts due for expence about business are arbitrable. 2. So also it seems is a Debt on a Contract or damage certain, being joyned with Trespass, or other things uncertain; and all these are arbitrable, before any suit begin or after. A debt on a Contract alone seems also to be arbitrable. See Co. 8. Baspolis Case, f. 97. (1) Adjudge Sower versus Bradford, 37 Eliz. Co. B. (2) Finches Ley 181.

And therefore if a man demand five pound for divers businesses that he hath done for another; this is a matter arbitrable, adjudged. Trin. 37 Eliz. B. R. inter Sower & Bradfield.

Some Books say in some of these Cases, the Submission must be in writing, or else the Matters are not Arbitrable. Quere, how and what is meant by that.

But Debts certain due by Bond, or Bill, or Covenant, or on a simple Contract alone which is certain, are not arbitrable: Nor Debts upon arrearages of account before Auditors; nor things that are not in Reum natura, at the time of the Submission, though they after happen; nor Freeholds, Annuities, Waste, Detainment of Charters, or the like; yet so as before on Penalties or Assumpsits, to perform such Awards they be bound, or else must pay the money, 4 Ed. 3. 16. Dyer 51. 6 H. 4. 6. 4 H. 6. 17. 10 H. 7. 4. 9 H. 6. 60. 14 H. 4. 18. Co. 5. Samons Case.

But

But matters of Commonwealth, or of Marriage, it seems are not arbitrable at all, West. Symb. f. 146.

In every Arbitrement these five things are requisite as incidents, Dyer 217. 19 Ed. 4. 1. Ca. 10. 137. 10 H. 7. 4.

1. Matter of Controversie, and that must be Arbitrable.
2. A good Submission of the parties to the Award.
3. Parties to the Submission.
4. Arbitrators.
5. An Award; and if either of these be wanting, it can be no good Award.

Observe therefore, for the defects and faults of Arbitrements whereby they lose their force and become void; some of them are in something going before the Award it self, and some of them in the Award it self, and some of them in something coming after the Award it self, or ex post facto.

Before: As where either the persons are not able to submit, as Feme-Coverts, or the like; or have not submitted, as when the Award concerneth strangers, not privities nor parties, or the things referred, are not things that lie in Arbitrement, and there is no collateral security to bind the parties to perform it; or the submission be not legal; or being legal, it is determined by revocation before the Award made, Co. 4. 1. Kelm. 99. Co. 5. 78. 8. 98. 10. 131. 17 Ed. 4. 5. 12 H. 7. 5. 19 H. 6. 36. 13 H. 4. 12. 8 Ed. 4. 10. 10 Ed. 4. 8.

In the Award it self: As when either the Arbitrators pursue not the Authority given, by the submission; or they award somewhat to be done to, or by a stranger; or the Award is uncertain, or there is an apparent wrong, and they give no shew of satisfaction; or the Award is made all for one side, and nothing for the other, and it imply some wrong to him done also; or they award a thing the party hath no means to come by; or the Award is not final and definitive; or the Award is of a thing impossible or unlawful, or of a thing apparently unreasonable, or it is imperfect or insensible.

The common faults of Arbitrements.

After: When some due circumstance is not observed after; as publication or notice of the Award, according to the submission, or the like. For all or any of these causes, an Award may become void. As for examples:

If one sue for a Debt upon a Record or Specialty, and this be put to Arbitrement; and an Award is, that he shall pay all or some part of it: This is no good Award, for the matter is not arbitrable. See the Answer of this Question, in the four first Questions before: What persons may submit. Countermand. The duty of Arbitrators. Matters Arbitrable, 10 H. 7. 4.

Before the Arbitrement.

If there be divers Trespasses referred to Arbitrement, and the Award is, that the one shall make the other amends, and say not what; this is a void Award, 8 Ed. 4. 1. 39 H. 6. 9.

In the Arbitrement it self for uncertainty.

If an Award be, that one of the parties shall enter into an Obligation with Condition to do any thing, and say not of what sum the Obligation shall be, or that one shall give a Release to the other, and say not what Release, Co. 5. Samons Case. See March 18. pl. 42.

If the Husband only do submit, and the Award be, that he and his Wife shall do, have or take any thing; the Award as to the Wife is void, and so is it if it were of a stranger, any other besides his Wife. As an Award, that one of the parties and the Arbitrator, or any stranger shall do an act, is void as to the Arbitrator: So an Award, that the party and his wife shall enjoy the Land in question, or that either party shall make a Feoffment, or pay money to a stranger, is so void as to the stranger, that for not doing these things by or to the stranger, no Action will lie. An Arbitrement, that one of the parties shall do a thing wherein the Assistants of others that are strangers, and whom he hath no means to compel thereunto, is not good for so much as concerneth such stranger. An Award, that each party shall pay Five shillings for writing the Award to the Clerk; and it was agreed void, Brownl. 2 par. 100. Co. 10. 131. Kelm. 45. 18 Ed. 4. 28. Co. 5. 78. 19 Ed. 4. 1. 28 H. 6. 13. Trin. 9 Jac. Tydderlies Case, Banco Regis. 17 Ed. 4. 15. 5. 18 Ed. 4. 23. 19 Ed. 4. 1.

Self. 4.

For want of privity in such, by whom or to whom to be performed.

When a stranger is by the Award to do something, this is void for this cause also, because

For that which is not contained in the Submission, or in pursuance of the authority.

because it is out of the Submission. See the last Division. 19 Ed. 4. 1.

The Arbitrement that is made of a thing that is not contained within the Submission, is void: As if the Submission be for all Actions personal, and the Award be made of and about Actions real; & sic è contra. So if the Submission be on a Condition (which is usual) as when the Condition is to stand to an Award, so as it is to be made by a day certain, or be in writing, or under Seal, and delivered by a day, and the Arbitrators make it after the day, or do it not so as before, this Award is void. So if the Submission be for all matters between them until the tenth of May, and they award that a Release shall be given of all Actions until the twentieth of May, this is a void Award. So if A. on the one side, and three others of the other side submit to Arbitrement for all actions and demands between them, and the Award be made of some matters between them three of the one side only, this is not good. (2.) So if the Submission be of all causes depending between them ab initio mundi, &c. and the Award be of all causes à principio, omitting depending, this is void. So if a Submission be to four, and three of them make the Award. But if the Condition of an Obligation to stand to Award, be to stand to the Award of four, so as the Award of the said Arbitrators or any three of them be made &c. In this case an Award made by any three of them is good. So if the Submission be of divers particulars, with a Condition: For as an Award be made of the premisses, &c. if all the differences, or some be made known, and they do not make an Award of as much as is notified. But if the Condition were for all matters, or between divers persons; and some matters only, or all between some of the persons only are notified, an Award of them alone is good. And if the Submission be of divers things in particular, without any such conditional restraint or conclusion, an Arbitrement upon any of them is good. Vide plus supra & infra, 7 H. 6. 40. 19 H. 6. 36. 36 H. 6. 11. Pl. 306. 9 Ed. 4. 44. 8 H. 6. 18. p. 9 Jac. B. Regis, Scots Case, Dyer 242. Co. 8. 92. Co. 10. 132. v. Iels: Sule Marg. 2 R. 3. 18. 36 H. 6. 8: (2) Adj. Hayns, Perkins, Armisteed. Adj. vers. Cale, B. Regis. Co. 8. 58. Dyer 216. Cyprian Sallows Case, P. 9 Jac. B. Regis.

If the Submission be by Deed, and a time set, and the Arbitrators meet and prorogue it to a time after the day, and then do it, this is not good; but if it were without Deed, it seems otherwise. And if they make an Award one day, and after before the time make another; or make part one day, and part another, before the time set; or part before the day, or part after: In these cases, without a new Submission, these Awards are not good. But if they meet and agree only, and at another day within the time make the Award, this is good, 49 Ed. 3. 9. 22 H. 6. 52: 33 H. 6. 28: 39 H. 6. 12. 8 Ed. 4. 10. 19 Ed. 4. 1.

If the Submission be of all Suits and Controversies then depending, and the Award is made of a Controversie not in suit, this is good. Per Curiam, B. R. M. 10 Car.

See §. 4.
For that it is not satisfactory.

If the Arbitrement do not import satisfaction of the wrong that is put in Compromise, it is not good. As for Examples:

If the differences be about arrearages of Account, and this be referred, and the Award is, that the party in arrearages shall account: So if the Award be, that because one of the parties had the goods of the other, that he shall redeliver them. But if by that redelivery, the party to whom may have some special benefit, then the Award is good enough. So an Arbitrement, that one party shall have one part of the thing in question, and the other the other part, (c) if it be Debt in question, and the Award be, he shall pay part of the debt. (7) So if an Award be, that one that is supposed to have done a trespass, shall do his Law, and then be quit and discharged. (8) So if the Award be, that in recompence of the wrong, the parties shall enter-marry. (9) So if the Award be, that one of the parties shall do such an act such a day, and the day be past before the Award finished, Fitz. (2) Arbit. 27. (3) 12 H. 7. 15. 45 Ed. 3. 16. part only.

So if a Suit be put in Arbitrement, and the Award be, that the Plaintiff shall not proceed, or shall be Non-suited, or the like; it seems these are not good Awards,

An Arbitrement, that one shall pay money to the other, and then the other shall release all Actions, is good.

If between the Garnisher and the Plaintiff in a Detinue, the Award be that the Garnisher shall go quit of all quarrels and suits, had by the Plaintiff against him; and nothing be said for the quarrels of the Garnisher, had against the Plaintiff. So if all matters be referred between two, and the Award be, that the one party shall go quit of all Actions, that the other hath against him, and say nothing of the Actions he hath against the other; these are not good Awards. And yet if a man demand five pound of B. for busshesses he hath done for him, and this be referred to Arbitrement, and the Arbitrator Award that B. shall pay to A. four pound in full satisfaction of the same debt, and no more; this is a good Award. Sower versus Bradfield, adjudged. Trin. 37 Eliz. B. R. Co. 8. 98. 7 H. 6. 40.

If an Award be that one party shall pay ten pound to the other, and doth not say for what, or that the other shall go quit for the like; this is not good, and no Averment per Just. Berkley. R. R. 11 Car.

A. was indebted to B. and they both died. The Heir of A. for good consideration assumed to the Administrator of B. that he would pay to the Administrator the debt; and for not payment according to the Assumpsit, the Administrator brought an Action, and then they submitted to the Award of C. and became bound; and to the other, to stand to the Award accordingly; so that the Arbitrator make his Award of all matters, and controversies between them, before such a day. C. the Arbitrator before the day recited the Assumpsit, debt, as aforesaid, and ordered, That the Heir should pay the Administrator so much money, and published; and an Action of the Case was brought upon this Award, and Judgment, given for the Plaintiff. Brownl. 2. part. Co. 8. 98.

For want of means to obtain the thing.

If the Award be, that one of the parties shall have Land out of anothers hands, this is void; for this order doth not give the Frank-Tenement: But yet secundum quid, onely, for if there be any Bond or Assumpsit to perform the Award, and it be not performed; yet one may sue upon the Bond or Assumpsit, Plow. 11. 20 H. 6. 52. 5 Ed. 4. 7. 19 H. 6. 36.

An Arbitrement, that the parties or either of them shall do something by the advice of the Arbitrators, or one of them, is not good, 19 Ed. 4. 1.

Not definitive or final, or by words.

An Award, that if one of them will wage his Law, he is not guilty of the Trespas, that then he shall go quite, and the other shall release to him, is not good: So if the Award be, that the parties shall abide the Award of others, or of the Arbitrators themselves at another time, or shall do as another shall set down, or the like: So also if an Award be, that the Plaintiff shall be Non-suit, it seems this is not good, for he may then begin again, 46 Ed. 3. 17. Co. 5. 78. 47 Ed. 3. 20. Plow. 11. 19 H. 6. 36.

If a Submission were to Arbitrators; and after to an Umpire, and the Arbitrators make an Award of parcel, and the Umpire of the rest; this is not good, unless the Submission were so made; that the Umpire might make an Award of any part of it, 39 H. 6. 10.

An Award cannot be made part at one time, and part at another, 39 H. 6. 11. d. 8 Ed. 4. 10. b. 19 Ed. 4. 1. d.

If the Arbitrators make an Award between the parties one day, they cannot make another Award between the parties another day, 22 H. 6. b. 52. d.

So if the Award be made, but of part of that which is referred; as if the Reference be of nine Articles, and the Award be made but of six of them; this is void, Goldsb. 1. 5. pl. 14.

For that it is not made of all that is referred.

If a Debt of Twenty pound be in question, and the Award is, the party shall pay more then the debt, is not good, 9 Hen. 7. 16. Keble.

day of the Award, is unreasonable and void ; for then the Obligation or Assumpfit will be released also, that was made to perform the Award : So divers before for their unreasonableness in other particulars, are void, H. 6. 10. 21 H. 7. 28.

An Award that the one shall release to the other such a Suit he hath against him, when as in truth he hath no such Suit in being, 20 Ed. 4. 38.

An Award that one shall rob another, or disseise him of his Free-hold, or the like, are void.

If a Submission be of all the Lands descended, and the Award is of White-acre and Black-acre, an Averment may be, that this is all the Land descended ; and by this the Award may be good. per Just. Berkley, 11 Car. R. B.

If the Submission be made with Condition, so that the same Award be notified to the parties, or some of them by a day, and the Arbitrement be well made ; but it is not after published or delivered according to the tenor of the Condition, then is the Arbitrement void, and the Publication must be as the Condition is : If by such a time, or under Seal, &c. then it will not be good, unless it be so done : But if the Condition were so, that it be delivered to the parties before a day petentibus hoc, here they are not bound to deliver it till it be desired : If the Submission be by divers of both sides, Provisor it be delivered to the parties, or one of them : If he deliver it not to some, or one of them, the Award is void ; but if he deliver it to any, or either of the one, or the other side, it is a good Award. So if the Submission be by two, so that the Award be delivered to either, or utrique eorum before Michaelmas, and it be delivered but to one, it is not good. See this question before above in the Negative question. 8 Ed. 4. 21. 11. 1 H. 7. 5. Dyer 218. 37 H. 8. Br. Cond. 46.

An Award that a thing shall be done by the advice of a stranger that is not party, or privy to the Award, is good enough, 8 Ed. 4. 11. 14 Ed. 4. 1.

An Arbitrement that the party shall do a Judicial act, is good, though it cannot be done without the help of strangers, 19 H. 6. 38. 19 Ed. 4. 5 5 H. 7. 22.

If the Submission be of things personal, and the Award is, that one of the parties shall do an act, that is, of a thing real in satisfaction of the personal wrong, & se è contra : So if the Submission be of one thing, and the Arbitrement of any thing incident to, or depending necessarily upon that thing, it is good. So if the Submission be of all Actions real and personal, and the Award be onely of matters personal, or of the matters real, it is a good Award ; for so much especially, if no other matters were notified to them. But in that case, if the words or manner of the Submission be Conditional, that the Award must be of all matters or none, there it may be otherwise : So if the Submission were of the Right, Title, and possession of Land, and the Award be made of the possession onely, and nothing said of the Right ; yet it is good for so much. So if A. on their side, and three others on the other side, do submit to the Award of W. and he do Award some matters that are between the three and A. jointly ; or matters that are between any of the three and A. this is a good Award : So if a Submission be of all Suits, and the Award be, that the one shall release to the other all Suits, Debt, &c. except one Obligation in particular ; this is a good Award : So if there be divers Suits and Controversies about Tythe, and other matters between two, and they submit these to Arbitrement, and he Award that all Controversies between them shall cease, and the one shall pay to the other twenty pounds in recompence of all wrongs ; this is a good Award for the Tythe, adjudged. Ingram versus Web, Trin. 18 Jac. B. R. And if the difference is between a thing severable, and a thing entire, as the making of a Release in the Case Supra ; for there if the Award exceed the Submission, it is void for all : So if A. and B. 1 Maii submit themselves to J. S. for all matters from the beginning of the world unto the date of the Submission ; and in June following they make an Award, that A. shall pay to B. ten pounds, &c. and that B. shall make him a general Release, and that this shall be an end of all matters between them from the beginning of the world, until the date of the Award ; this is a good Award, adjudged ; but if other matters be shewed in pleading to be between the parties, between the date of the Submission, and the date of the Award, *Contra. 9 Ed. 4. 44. 8 H. 6. 18. 9 H. 7. 15. 7 H. 6. 40. 36 H. 6. 11. If an Award be, that he that hath done the wrong, shall give the other a Quart of Safflower Wine, or ever so little recompence for the satisfaction of the wrong; it is good enough: So where divers of the one party, and the other submit, and the Award is, that one of the one side, shall pay to another of the other party so much, and give nothing to, or from any of the rest; this is good enough: So an Award, for that the wrongs are equal from either party to the other, therefore either of them shall go quit against the other; so if it be that either of them shall release to the other; so if it be, that either party shall go quit against the other; and the one shall pay the other so much, because his wrongs he did were more; so if two have suits each against other, and they be referred, and the Award is, that they shall each of them be Nonfuit, or discontinue their suits, and not sue again for those matters, or enter a Retrait, are good, 43 Edw. 3. 33. 9 Edw. 4. 44. 22 Edw. 4. 25. 19 Hen. 7. 37. An Arbitrement, that one shall release to the other all his right in the Land in question, is good; if it appear by the Award, that he to whom the Release was made, were in possession of the Land, 9 Ed. 4. 44. 21 Ed. 4. 40.

If the Controversie referred, be about a debt of ten pounds due by a Contract, and the Award is, that he shall pay forty shillings costs, it is good; for hereby he is discharged of the debt that doth pay it. So if divers Trespasses done by one of the parties be referred, and the Award be, that he that hath done the Trespass, shall pay ten pounds for the Trespasses, and say nothing of the other, this is good; for hereby the other is discharged of any Action for those Trespasses: So if the Award be, that whereas one of them hath received twenty shillings of the other, and hath done him divers Trespasses, as also the other hath done to him divers Trespasses, that the one therefore shall pay to the other his twenty shillings, and that they shall go quit one against another: So where divers matters be of both sides, when the Award is, that they shall be friends, and all Controversies and Matters shall cease, and the one shall pay the other twelve pence: So if there be divers of both sides, and the Award is, that one, or some onely shall pay to one, or some onely of the other side, Co. 8. 98. 22 Ed. 4. 25. 20 H. 6. 19, 12. Gales Case, 7 H. 4. 31. If an Award be, that one shall levy a Fine, make a Feoffment, enter a Retrait by Nonfuit, or discontinue his Action, or make defaults in a precipe quod reddat: In all these Cases, though the concurrence of the Acts of others be necessary, yet it seems the Awards be good, 5 H. 7. 22.

If a stranger had drawn an Award before, and the Award be, that the parties shall perform that Award, it is good. 8 Ed. 4. 10. 39 H. 6. 10.

If the Arbitrators meet, and commune one day of the Award, and make it after another day at a new meeting, within the time given them, this is good; but they cannot meet, and make a part of the Award one day, and meet after, and make the other part another day; it seems this is not good, 39 H. 6. 12. 8 Ed. 4. 10. 19 Ed. 4. 1. 3 H. 4. 1.

Award that the parties shall be bound, or shall make assurance by advice of Council, or that an Action shall be sued between the parties by advice of A. is good. 18 Ed. 4. 22, 23. 8 E. 4. 1, 4.

If the Arbitrement be, that the party that hath done the wrong shall pay a greater sum in value then the wrong is that he hath done; this Award is good. 8 Ed. 4. 21.

An Arbitrement, that one shall give the other a thing he hath not, is good, if it be to be had, and he must provide it. 19 Ed. 4. 1. 9 H. 7. 16.

An Arbitrement, that one of them shall give security for the performance of a thing to be done, is reasonable and good, 8 H. 6. 18. 19 H. 4. 1.

An Award that the one party shall pay to the other ten pounds, and release to him all Trespasses, and that the other shall release to him again is good, yet he cannot compel him to release; but he may sue him or the Bond, or Assumpsit, 20 H. 6. 18.

After the Award, or for

If one be bound to stand to the Award of four of all Actions, &c. So that the same be made in writing, and delivered such a day by the Arbitrators, or any three or two of them: If any two of them deliver it, it is good enough, Sallars Case.

If the Submission be with Condition, so that the Award be delivered before such a day, and the Arbitrators deliver it by word of mouth, it is a good Award; but if the Condition had been, that it should have been delivered in writings, Contra. And if in this Case the Award be made in one County, and delivered in another, yet it is good enough, Dyer 218. 5 H. 7. 7.

If the Submission be by divers on both sides, with Condition that the Award be delivered to the parties, or one of them. If the Arbitrators deliver it to both, or all of one side, or to one of either side, it is good enough, Dyer 218.

If the Submission be with Condition, that the Award be delivered before Michaelmas; if it be delivered the last day before after Sun-set, it is good enough, adjudged. Parkers Case. M. 37, 38 Eliz. Co. B.

8. The Exposition of an Award, and how it shall be taken.

Though an Arbitrement be a Judgment, yet it is not like to other Judgments that are taken more strictly; for this shall be taken according to the intent of the Arbitrators; if the intent will stand with Law, else the parties shall perform it according to these words; in such sense as they will agree with Law, 17 Ed. 4. 3. 21 Ed. 4. 39. 19 H. 6. 36.

If an Award be, that one shall pay to the other twenty pound at Michaelmas next coming, provided, that for security the Extents and Leases shall remain in force: And if he pay not the twenty pounds at the day, nor put in security such as the Plaintiff shall like of, then the Leases and Extents shall remain in force. This is an absolute Award for the money, and the words (nor put in security) shall refer onely to the saving of the Leases, adjudged. Dightons Case. M. 2 Jac. B. Regis.

How an Award shall be performed.

The parties are bound to do all that they can to perform their Award, and it must not be done in part onely, but part may be at one, and part at another time, 21 Ed. 4. 39. 8 Ed. 4. 10. 6 H. 7.

If the Award be, that the one shall pay to the other ten pound for all wrongs, and then that the other shall release all Actions, &c. Now in this case the other shall not be bound to release, till the other pay him the money; and so in all like cases, when another is to do an act before the party is to do his act; if the other do it not, he is excused. But if the Arbitrement be, that one shall pay money, and that the other shall release without any such reference of time, then or the like; either must perform his part at his peril, 21 Hen. 7. 28. 10, 36 Hen. 6. 15. 5 Edw. 4. 7. 21 H. 7. 28.

If no time be set by the Award for the doing of a thing, the party shall have a reasonable time to do it, 20 Ed. 4. 8. 21 Ed. 4. 41.

If a thing be ordered to be done, which may be done two ways, in one whereof the concurrence of a stranger is necessary, in the other it may be done by the party himself; it shall be done that way in which the party may do it himself, 21 Edw. 4. 40.

If an Award be that one shall make and seal a Bond or Release, &c. He that is to do it, must get it made, and must seal it at his peril, Brown and Donugors Case, Trin. 18 Jac. B. R. Co. 5. 77. In Margent.

Request.

The Defendant was to pay to the Plaintiff upon Award eight pounds or three pounds, and costs of Suit expended in such an Action, between the Plaintiff and Defendant, as should appear by a note under the Attorneys hand of the Plaintiff, &c. In this Case the Plaintiff is not bound to cause his Attorney to give notice thereof, or make tender of the note to the Defendant, but he ought to seek the Attorney, and request it, March, 108. pl. 186. & 156. pl. 225.

If Arbitrators Award one party to pay to the other money, and say not what day, he must pay it without demand at his peril, Goldsb. 63.

9. Where an Arbitrement is a good plea,
and where not.

Arbitrement is a good plea in all Actions personal, though the Submission be not by Deed; so also to all Actions that are grounded on an Especialty, when no certain duty doth accrue by the Deed tempore confectiois; but a wrong and a default subsequent, together with the Deed, gives Action to recover damages, as upon a Covenant to repair; or that he hath power to Lease a Term, and such like. Co. 6. 44. 14 Ed. 4. 18. Co. 9. 60.

It is a good plea also, in an Action of Debt on a Lease for years, or on a Contract; also in an Account of a Receipt per auter mayne; also in a Farger de faux faits; also in a Ravishment de gard; also in mixt Actions, if the Submission be by Deed: And in all such Actions, wherein an Accord with satisfaction is a good plea; also it is said an Arbitrement is a good plea in an Action upon the Statute of Laborers; also in a Writ of Annuity, if the Submission be by Deed, Broo. Arbitr. Dyer 75. 26. 19 H. 6. 36. 14 H. 4. 34. 6 H. 4. 6. Fitz. Arb.

But in Debt upon an Especialty, or Arrearages of Account before Auditors, or in a Controversie grounded on matter of Record: In all real and mixt Actions, Arbitrement is no good plea, Co. b. 44. B. R.

He that pleadeth an Arbitrement, must shew that he hath performed his part, and how, and wherein; or that he tendred, and the other refused, for this will excuse, or say he is ready to perform it: And if divers things be to be done on the one part, in some of which the Award is void, and thereupon other things are to be done by the other side; if he shew he hath performed the Award, so far forth as it is good, the other must perform his part; and he that will sue upon an Award, must say he hath done all that is to be done on his part, and wherein in particular the other hath broken the Award, Co. 10. 131. 7 H. 4. 31.

It is sometimes taken for an agreement between two or more, that intend the levying of a fine of Lands one to another, how and what manner the Lands shall be passed (for which see Fine.) But here it is taken for an Agreement between two or more, to satisfy and make amends to another for some offence done to him; which being performed accordingly, though he give not the tenth part of the damage, it is a Bar in any Action brought for the same offence: And this is either Absolute and Executed, or Executory. That which is executed, is such an Accord as is performed according to the Agreement. Executory is that which is not yet done, but agreed onely to be done, Plow. 5. 6. Dyer 356. 39.

To the making of a good Accord that may be a Bar in an Action for any wrong done, these things must concur.

1 The thing given and received, must be valuable, and satisfactory, a charge to the giver, and a benefit to the receiver.

2 It must be perfectly and compleatly finished and executed, and satisfaction made according to the Agreement before any Action brought.

3 It must be in the life time of him that did the wrong.

4 The party to whom the wrong is done, must accept the Amends according to the Agreement; for it seems notwithstanding the Accord, he may refuse it, and Tender of Amends without an Acceptance thereof is no plea in any Action, but being accepted is: For as wrongs and injuries cause discord and variance, and beget Suits; so by an Accord between the parties, this may be recompenced, and this recompence begetteth peace. Dyer 356. 6 H. 7. 11. Fitz. Accord. 4. Dyer 75. 17 Ed. 4. 2. Co. 9. 79. 5 Ed. 4. 7. Old Books of Entries, f. 6. Dyer 356.

In a forger of false Deeds, If the Defendant give to the Plaintiff a Pottle of Wine in satisfaction of the Trespass, and he agree to it; this is a good Accord, and a Bar in the Action, 19 H. 6. 29. Fitz. Bar. 26.

If divers do a Trespass, and one make a good Accord, this will discharge, and be a Bar to all the rest, Co. 9. 79.

If a stranger, as one of the Parents or Friends of the Trespasor, give the Amends in recompence: It seems this is as good, as if the party himself did give it, Barre 166.

In Detinue for a Chest and Charters therein, by the delivery of the Plaintiff: The Defendant pleads an Accord, that he should keep the Chest until the Plaintiff come to Bristol, and there it shall be opened: And if any Deeds be there that do concern a house, of which the Plaintiff had Enfeoffed the Defendant, that he shall keep it still, and saith, That he never came to Bristol, and it was awarded a good Concord. But Querr. Fitz. Accord. 2. 7 Ed. 4. 23.

Sec. 9.

How an Arbitrement may be pleaded.

10. Accord and Concord: What Agreement shall be an Accord, and what shall be a sufficient Accord and good Bar in Action.

The Qualities of a good Accord.

If one be amerced for a private Nufans or Trespass done to the Lord in his Leet, and he receive the Amercement, though it be Extortion, and he could not have recovered it; yet it seems, if he after bring an Action for this Nufans, this acceptance of the Amercement may be pleaded in bar, Fitz. Bar. 187. 222. Br. Trespass. 195. 61, 66.

Self. 10.
What not,
For default of the value.

If one plead, that whereas there were divers Trespasses committed by each of them, one upon another, and by mediation of Friends, they agreed one should go quite against the other; this is no Plea, neither will it bar in the Suit: So in an Entry on the Statute of Richard That the Plaintiff shall re-enter, and have his Land in peace, and that he shall deliver him the writings that he hath, that do concern the Land, Dyer 356. 16 Ed. 4. 8. 9 Ed. 4. 19. Fitz. Accord. 3.

So if it be in Trespass for Goods taking, and the Defendant plead an Accord made, that he should have his Goods again, 9 Ed. 4. 19. 30 H. 4.

So if it be, that the Defendant should do his endeavor to make the Plaintiff, and another who was at odds with him, agreed; or (as it seems) to shew that he did make an Accord between him and the stranger, unless he shew wical, that he was at some charge to do it, Fitz. Accord.

Execution.

If the Defendant plead an Accord, that he must make Windows, and pay ten pounds at a day to come; and he set forth, that he hath made the Windows, but he doth not set forth that he hath paid the ten pounds; this is no bar, 6 Hen 7. 10.

In Trespass, the Defendant pleaded an Accord to pay six pence to the Plaintiff, and to give him counsel when he shall require it; this is no good plea, 17 Ed. 4. 2.

Tender of money without payment, is no good plea in bar of any Action, Old N. B. f. 122.

If the Accord be between the parties, and be executed by the Heir or Executor of the Trespassor; this is no bar where any Action may lie against the Executor, Dyer 356.

For other cause.

In a Writ of false Imprisonment, the Defendant saith. That it was agreed between the Plaintiff and him. that he should bring the Defendant to such a place, which is the same imprisonment and it seems this was no good plea, Fitz. Bar. 14.

11. In what Actions Accord shall be a good plea.

In all Actions wherein an Arbitrement is a good plea in Bar, an Accord executed is a good Bar: As in all personal Actions founded on a wrong, wherein damages only are to be recovered; as in Actions of Trespass, and upon the Case, Sur Assumpsit, or otherwise, Attaints, Appeal of Maytime, Covenants to repay, or the like: Maintenance, Conspiracy, Waste in the Tenet, Forger of Fairs, Ravishment of Gard, Debt upon a Contract: In all Actions also wherein Chattels real or personal are to be recovered, as Ejectione Firmæ, Quare ejecit infra terminum. Waste against a Lessee for year, Detinue of Goods or Charters, which concern Freehold; and in all Actions wherein the wrong is supposed to be Vi et armis, and wherein Capias & Exigent doth lie at Common Law, Co. 6. 44. Dyer 76. Old Book of Entries, fol. 6. 19 H. 6. 52. per Curiam, Trin. 7 Jac. B. Regu. Co. 4. 1. 13 H. 7. 20. Co. 9. 78. 6. 44. 40 Ed. 3. 25. 35 H. 6. 6. Brownl. 2. part. 128.

In all Actions real for any Freehold or Inheritance, or mixt, as Assise or Waste in the Tenet; this is no Bar (but in some Cases where certain Statutes make it a Bar, as in a Joyncture) and therefore an Accord with satisfaction, is no plea in those Actions: So likewise in all Actions founded on a Record, or a Specialty, as an Obligation, or Debt on a Lease for years, or in an Account before Auditors, but where it is founded partly on a Record or Specialty, and partly on a Deed; there it will lie as in Attaint, and some of the Cases above, Co. 9. 79. 4. 16. 44. 13 H. 7. 29. 10 H. 7. 4. 13 Ed. 4. 5. See Liver. Condition 181. Debt. 122.

Where an Accord or Agreement, to take one thing for another, shall binde, where
not.

If one be bound in a Statute or an Obligation to do a Collateral Act, as to make a Feoffment, Account, or the like; here an Accord with Execution for any other thing as money, or the like, is no plea to save the Forfeiture of the Obligation: But if the Condition of the Deed, by the Original Contract of the parties, be to pay money, there by agreement between the parties, any other thing may be given in satisfaction of it, whether the money in the Condition be a Collateral sum, or parcel of the Obligation, Dyer 1. Co. 9. 79. 12 H. 4. 23. 9 H. 7. 4. See Agreement, Acceptance. If

If one be bound in two hundred quarters of Corn, in condition to pay twenty pounds, the Obligor may by agreement between them pay him a Horte for it: But if the condition were to pay fifty quarters of Corn, he cannot give money, or any other thing in satisfaction of it by an Accord to save the Obligation, Co. 7. 9.

Of Artificers, Tradesmen, and Arrow-heads.

Hese are such, whose Calling and Employment is, and doth consist especially or chiefly of their bodily labor. As the Calling of Tanners, Shoo-makers, Girdlers, Sadlers, Cord-wainers, Laborers, Burchers, Brewers, Bakers, Glasiers, Lime-burners, Brick-makers, Tile-make, Mummers, and such like, which are called Crafts, Feats, Trades, Mysteries; or Occupations, which are opposed to those Employments, wherein the minde is chiefly occupied; as the Employment of a Divine, Lawyer, Physician, and the like, which are called Professions, Stat. 2. 3 Ed. 6. 15.

No Butchers, Brewers, Bakers, Cooks, Poulterers, Colstermongers, or Fruiterers, shall conspire, promise, or swear, that they shall not sell their Victuals but at certain prices, Stat. 2. 3 Ed. 6. 15.

Conspiracy de Artificers.

No Artificers, Workmen, or Laborers, shall so conspire, promise, or swear, not to do any work but at certain prices; nor to do that another hath begun or not to do more then so much work by the day, or not to work but at certain hours, Stat. 2. 3 Ed. 6. 15.

He that transgresseth either of these Branches, shall suffer for the first offence ten pounds; or if he pay not that within six days after conviction, twenty days imprisonment, to be kept with Bread and Water: For the second offence twenty pound, if he pay it within six days after conviction, or else the punishment of the Pillory. And for the third offence forty pound if he pay it within six days after conviction, or else the punishment of the Pillory, and the loss of one of his Ears and to be ever after taken infamous, for his sayings or depositions. And if it be the Company or society of Victualers that offend herein, and the greater part of them be present at, or do consent to the conspiracy, their Corporation shall thereby be dissolved.

The punishment of this.

All Justices of Assize, and Peace, Majors Bailiffs, and rewards of Leets, may hear, and upon proof, by witness or confession, punish these offences, Idem.

Who may punish this.

Such as have been Apprentices, and may exercise their Trades in one place, may work in any place, unless the Orders and Ordinances of the place (as in divers Corporations they do) hinder them. And if those extend onely, and will restrain (as it seems) to such as are dwelling within the Corporation and not strangers; for strangers cannot be let to work there, if any man will retain and hire them. See the Statutes of the 2. 3 Ed. 6. & 3. 4 Ed. 6. 10.

Where Tradesmen may work, or not.

Of Arrow-heads.

All Heads for Arrows, and Quarrels, must be well boiled or brazed, and hardened at the points with Steel, in pain to forfeit them, be imprisoned and be fined at the Kings pleasure.

These Arrow-heads must be marked with the proper mark of the Maker:

Justices may punish defects herein, Stat. 7 H. 4. 7.

CHAP. XVII.

Of Assets.

Sett. 1.
Assets, what.

Assets is in two kinds, either Intermaines, which is where one dieth indebted, and maketh his Executors: Or dieth intestate, and the Executors or Administrators have sufficient in Goods or Chattels, or other profit, to pay his debts, or some part thereof. These Goods or Chattels are called Assets Intermaines, (i. e.) Enough in their hands; and they shall be chargeable for so much as they have come to their hands by any Creditor, or Legatee: And if they waste it, or lose it; or pay Debts or Legacies, in any other order then the Law doth set down, they must answer it out of their own Estate, Terms Ley, Co. 6. 46. Dyer 271. Or it is by Descent, and that is also in two kinds, 1. Where a man bindeth himself and his Heirs, by some especialty or writing to do something, and die leaving Land in Fee-simple, to descend to his Heir: In this case he shall be charged for his Land, to perform this as far as the Land will extend upon a Suit. And if he take not care in his pleading, he may be charged for his own Land, that he hath by any other means. 2. It is where a Man hath Land in Tail, or in the Right of his Wife, and alieneth the same with Warranty, leaving as much other Land in Fee-simple to descend to his Heir. Now this will be a Bar to the Issue in a Formedon, or a Sar cui in vita, whereby else they would have recovered the same Land. Broo. 199. 42 Ed. 3. 10. Co. 5. 34. 8. 52. In both these cases, this is said Assets per Descent in the Heir, Quod tantundem valet.

Sett. 2.
Quosimplex.

Where and what shall be said Assets to an Heir, to bar him in an Action, or
not.

Assets therefore is either Intermaines, or by Descent. Intermaines also is in facti. i. e. When one hath enough indeed in his hands; or in Law, i. e. When though he hath it not indeed, yet the Law doth charge him as if he had it. By Descent is either to charge him on a Deed, or to Bar him in an Action, Stat. 33 H. 8. 19.

That Assets that must make a Lineal Warranty, a Bar must have six qualities:

1. It must be Assets, i. e. of equal value or more at the time of the Descent.
2. It must be by Descent, and not by purchase or gift.
3. It must be Assets in Fee-simple, and not in Tail, or for another mans life.
4. It must Descend to him as Heir from the same Ancestor that made the Warranty.

5. It must be of other Lands or Tenements, Rents or Services valuable, or other profits issuing out of Lands or Tenements, and not Personal Inheritances, as Annuities, or the Reversion of the same Land, or the like.

6. It must be in Estate or Interest, and not in use or right of Actions, or right of Entries; for they are not Assets, until they be brought into possession; and when it hath all these qualities, it is a Bar, though the Issue have done the same away by Alienation: But then the Issue of the Issue shall not be barred. But if the first Issue were barred in a Formedon, and then after alien the Assets, then the Issue of the Issue is bound also, Co. super Littl. 374. 4 Ed. 3. Gard. 63. Fitz. Assets 4. 43 Ed. 3. 9. 7 H. 6. 3. 11 H. 4. 20. 24 Ed. 3. 47. Co. super Littl. 384. Perk. Sett. 270. Dyer 139. Plow. 110. Co. 3. 78. 10. 38.

If a Rent in Fee-simple issuing out of the Land of the Heir, descend to him whereby it is extinct; yet this is Assets. And for this purpose, in Judgment of Law, hath continuance. And therefore, if the Father be Tenant in Tail, and seized of a Rent-charge, issuing out of the Lands of the Son in Fee, and discontinue the Land tailed with a Warranty; this Rent descending shall be said Assets, Fitz. Assets 5. Co. 3. 31. Fitz Recovery in value 17. Co. super Littl. 374. Perk. Sett. 270.

A Seignior in Free-Almoigne is no Assets, because it is not valuable; and so also of a Seignior of Homage and Fealty. Fitz. Mesne 7. Register 293. Co. idem.

An Advowson is Assets, and it shall be recovered after the rate of twelve pence for every pound or mark the Church is worth, Co. super Littl. 374.

If the Tenant in Tail maketh a Lease for life, or gift in Tail rendering Rent, and the Reversion descend; this is no Assets to bar. Non potest adduci exceptio ejusdem rei, cuius petitur dissolutio, Fitz. Gar. 35. Co. super Littl. 384. 20 Ed 3. 221.

All the Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments, that do descend to the Heir immediately from his Ancestor, that made the Specialty in possession, or in Reversion after any Estate for life or years, shall be Assets in the hands of the Heir; but no Execution shall be of the Reversion, till the Tenant for life be dead: Also Rents and Services that are valuable, and Tyths and an Advowson are Assets, Dyer 373. Perk. 348. Co. super Littl. 374. D. & St. 111. 4. Trin. 42. Q. C. B.

If a Manor descend to the Heir, and after a Tenancy Escheat; this Tenancy shall be Assets, because it comes in lieu of the Services, 6 H. 4. 1.

If the Heir enter into Land for a Condition broken, this Land shall be Assets in his hands. And if one seized of Land in Fee, make a Lease for years on Condition, That if his Heirs pay ten pound, the Lease shall be void, and the Heir do after pay the ten pound; it seems, that not onely the Reversion after the Lease, but the whole Estate of the Land shall be Assets in the Heirs hands, Broo. Assets 8. Opinio Bridgman Just. Co. super Littl. 159.

If one and the same man have an Estate Tail in Land, and the Reversion after; this Reversion in his Heir by descent, shall be Assets. So if an Estate be made to A. for life the Remainder to B. in Tail the Remainder to the right Heirs of A. this is a Fee-simple in A. and therefore will be Assets in the Heir of A. Co. 6. 42. Co. super Littl. fol. 54. Finches Ley 73.

But a Copihold of Inheritance of Land, or a Freehold descendable, shall not be Assets to charge an Heir in Debt, upon a Bond made by the Ancestor, Co. 4. 42. 10. 98.

Personal Inheritances, as Annuities, and the like, or such as are not valuable, as Services in Frank-Almoigne, or of Homage and Fealty, though they do descend in Fee-simple, are not Assets in the Heir. So neither is a Reversion of Land after an Estate Tail in another person, any Assets in the Heir, Co. super Littl. 374. Broo. Assets 26. D. & St. 76. Co. 6. 42.

An Estate Tail that comes to the Heir by descent, is no Assets to charge him upon any Especialty of any of his Ancestors, Dyer 124.

The Lands and Tenements in Fee-simple descended are not Assets neither, if they be bona fide, aliened and fold away before the Writ purchased against the Heir, upon the Especialty, though the Heir do after repurchase them again before the Writ brought, Dyer 124. Broo. 27.

What shall be Assets in the hands of Executors or Administrators. See Executors. And see more of this here in Heyre Devastavit, Extinguishment and Warranty.

CHAP. XVIII.

Of Assignees, Assise of Bread, &c.
Attachment and Attaint.Assignee, what the kindes.

He word Assignee, doth sometimes signifie the person to whom a thing given or granted, shall be afterwards granted or conveyed by him that bath the thing. And sometimes the person to whom a thing is to be done, that is not done at the first. And in both these senses, they are either in Fait or Deed, which are those Assignees that are indeed appointed to receive the thing; or in Law, which are such as are named by Law, to have or do the thing as Executors, For the knowledge whereof take these Cases.

1. If one Covenant to do a thing to J. S. or his Assignees, or to J. S. and his Assignees by a day, and before the day J. S. die; in this Case it must be done to his Assigns, if he before the day name any Assignee, otherwise it must be done to his Executor or Administrator, which is an Assignee in Law, 27 H. 8. 2.

2. If one make a Lease for years, and grant that the Lessee and his Assignees, shall have twenty load of Wood yearly; in this Case he to whom the Lease is assigned is Assignee. So if one make a Feoffment of Land to J. S. and warrant the Land to him, his Heirs, and Assigns, and he assign over the Land; in this Case the Assignee may take the benefit of it, and vouch upon the Warranty. So if I sell a Horse on condition, that if I pay forty shillings to the Vendee, or his Assigns; in this Case his Assignee is he to whom he shall sell the Horse.

3. Where I am bound with condition to make a Feoffment to one and his Assigns; in this Case the Assigns are such as he shall name to me, and to them must I make this Feoffment. See for these things, Plow. 287, 288. Co. upon Listl. 210. Perk. Self. 100.

4. Grantees of Reversions shall have like advantage against Farmers and Lessees (by Action onely) for any Covenant in the Deed, as the Lessors their Heirs or Successors might. What Assignees shall take advantage by this, see Covenant. Numb. 8.

5. What Assignees may take advantage of a Warranty, is to be seen in Warranty. Numb. 12.

6. The Remedy of Entry, in case a man be put out of his Land, taken in Exchange, doth not go to an Assignee. See for this in Exchange, Numb. 2.

7. A Feme sole conveys a Term in Trust, and marries, and then the Husband assigns it away; in this Case, the Trust doth pass, but not the Estate. Marsh. 88. pl. 141.

of the Assise of Bread, and other things.

Assise of things,
what.

Assise, this word hath many significations in our Law; but in this place it signifieth nothing, but the setting down and regulating of the price, and quantity of Bread, and Beer, and other things to be sold.

For the Assise of Bread and Beer, see Stat. 5 H. 3. Ordinance of Brewers, cap. 2. 5, 6. Two Statutes, Incerti temporis, Crumpr. jur. 225. 12 Ed. cap. 6. 3 H. 8. 8. See Clerk of the Market.

And for the Assise of Fuel, 43 Eliz. 14. 7 Ed. 6. 7. See Quantity. For Paper, Parchment, Tile, Timber, Leather, Lead, Hops, Beef, Cheese and Butter, Herrings, Salmons, Eels, Wool, Hemp, Sugar, Spice, Iron, Glass, Linnen-cloth, how it shall be measured and accounted, see Dalt. Just. of Peace, 185. See cap. 29.

Of an Attachment.

TO attach, in our Law, is to take hold by commandment or Writ of a mans person or goods: If it be applied to the person, it doth not differ at all from an Arrest. So an Attachment is sometimes to take the person of a man, and sometimes to take his goods, and sometimes to take both together. In the one sense it is said, a man may attach a Cow, or that a man may be attached by a Cow, or by an hundred Sheep.

Attachment and Attain, what.

There is an Attachment of Privilege; and it is in two cases: Either to give power to arrest a man in a place privileged; Or it is to arrest a man by virtue of his Office and Privilege to come into that Court to which he himself belongeth, and in respect of which he is privileged. And there is an Attachment to arrest a mans person for some Contempt to a Court, or other misdemeanor. For which see Contempt.

Attachment of privileged, what.

There is a Process also called a Foreign Attachment, which is used to attach the goods of Foreigners found within any Liberty, for a Debt due to another man. Also there is an Attachment used in the Forrest-Courts; and there is a Reattachment, which is a second Attachment of him that was formerly attached, and dismissed the Court without day.

Foreign Attachment, what.

Reattachment, what.

Of an Attaint.

IT is a Writ that is given to relieve a man that is hurt by a false Verdict. As if in a Civil cause, after another be pleaded to Issue, a Jury of twelve men, thereupon impanelled, give a Verdict against their Evidence given unto them therein, shew themselves to be partial, and thereupon Judgment is given; then the party that is hurt and grieved by the Judgment, may have this Writ against the other party, (whether he be Plaintiff or Defendant in the first suit) and against the Jurors or such of them as be then living; and then it shall be tried by twenty four sufficient Gentlemen of the Countrey, whereof twelve at the least must be of the Hundred where the Land lieth, whether the Verdict be true or false, after the same Evidence was given which was given to the Petit Jury, (for no more, nor no other Evidence may be given to this last Jury then was given to the first;) and if it be well done, or so much as is well, shall be affirmed. But howsoever, if the grand Jury newly chosen do affirm it, though it be false, the party hath no remedy. And if the twelve Jurors be found guilty, then Judgment shall be given that the first Judgment shall be reversed, and the party restored to what was given from him thereby; That the party for whom the first Verdict was given, shall be fined and imprisoned; That the Jurors for the first Verdict shall forfeit each of them twenty pounds apiece, if the matter were above forty pounds; if under, then one pound: And then are they called Attainted, and accounted as perjured and defamed, and they for ever disabled to serve in any Jury, or give in Evidence in any Cause in any Court of Record again. But if the Petty Jury be acquitted by the Grand-Jury, and they do adjudg as the first, then shall the Plaintiff in the Attaint not only lose the Land, and be fined, imprisoned and ransomed at the Kings pleasure, but also pay damages to the parties molested; and although the matter be never so false, yet is there no remedy after this in Chancery nor elsewhere, Crompt. Jur. 49. And if it be the Plaintiff in the first Action that brings the Attaint, and he have Restitution, then he hath his Title and Action as before. *Fortescue, cap. 26. Attaint:

The trial and proceedings therein.

These Writs are seldom put in ure: For, Gentlemen will hardly be drawn to appear to this end; and when they do, unless the corruption be very apparent, they will not attaint them; and if they do, the Judge is not willing to give sentence but deferreth; and then if the parties agree, or die, the Attaint ceaseth.

This word hath also another signification; for when a Judgment is given against any any man in Treason or Felony, then he is said to be attaint or attainted. For which see Attainder.

What persons may have an Attaint, and where not, and against whom.

Any one that is hurt by the false Verdict, whether he be party to the first Suit, or not, may have this Writ; and if the Verdict were about a matter of Land, then this remedy runneth commonly with the Land, so that any party or privy shall have it; as an Heir or Executor, or he in Reversion on a Recovery against the Tenant for life or years, Dyer 1. Co. 11. 5. 18. Kelw. 119. Co. 3. 4. Stat. 91 R. 2. 3. Co. super Lit. 294.

If a Trespass be done by divers, and one have pleaded to Issue upon a Declaration against him, and the Jury upon the Trial have assessed unreasonable Costs; the other Trespasgers may bring an Attaint, for they be bound by those Damages, Co. 11. 5. F. N. B. 10. Co. 10. 119.

If Trespas be against two, and Damages excessive, they may join in Attaint, Co. 11. 43.

But such a one as is neither party nor privy to the Suit, may not have this Writ; neither can the King, or an Informer have this Writ, Kelw. 119. Plow. 439. Broo 479.

Whereit lieth, and where
not.

And this Writ lieth against parties or privies, Heirs, Executors, and any other for the most part that hath the thing that was recovered by the first Judgment, Dyer 201.

It lieth in all real, personal, and mixt Actions, in case where any material falshood is found, though there be some truth found with it. As in real Actions, where in a Writ of Entry the demand is of twenty acres, when he should have but ten, and the question be about the quantity, and they find he disseised him of twenty acres: If they find a man guilty of many Trespasges, when he is guilty but of one; or give excessive Damages in a Trespass, or the like. But it lieth not on a false Verdict given upon an Enquest of Office; nor for any falshood found, when the thing found is out of their charge and impertinent to the issue; nor upon any falshood in a Writ of Right; nor upon any thing found in a Quare impedit de plenitudine ex cuius presentatione, si tempus semestre transierit, and about the value of the Church by the year, Co. 644. Westm. 1. 37. 1 Ed. 3. 6. 28 Ed. 3. 8. Dyer 30. Co. 11. 6. 10. 119. 11. 13. Dyer 134. Kelw. 119.

Attaint lieth after the death of many of the Petty-Jury, 2 H. 4. 18. a. 16 Ed. 3. Judgment 109.

Pleas in At-taint.

There be divers Pleas may be pleaded to this Writ, as a Release, Arbitrement, Accord, and the like; also, That all the Jurors be dead but one. But one cannot plead another Attaint depending, Joint-tenancie, or that the Plaintiff is a Feme-Covert; Non-tenure is no plea for the first Tenant; but if he enfeof a stranger, the stranger may plead it, Co. 6. 44. Dyer 5. 75. Broo 8. 11. CHAP. XIX.

Of Attorney.

N Attorney is a substitute or servant that is set or appointed in the turn, stead, or place of another, to do any business for him. And he is of two sorts. 1. Publique and by Record, as are the constant and general Attornies at Law, in the Courts of Record. Qui vicem gerit Clientis apud Judicem, whose Warrant from his Master is, Ponit loco suo talem Attornalium suum. He also is general, or special. And the other is an Attorney that is private or by Deed, is such a one as is made and appointed now and then for any particular business, and upon any special occasion, who are so then only at that time, and in that thing. And in both these cases, when any thing is done by another as an Attorney, it is as if he did it by himself: Qui per alterum facit, per seipsum facit. Co super Lit. f. 51, 52. Stat. 7 R. 2. cap. 14. 7 H. 4. 13. See for such Attornies, Stat. 4 H. 4. 19. 18 Westm. 2. 10. 33 H. 6. 7. 3 Jac. 7.

Warrant of a publique Attorney.

The private Attorney is commonly made and appointed by Letters, or a Deed of Attorney, which is usually called a Warrant of Attorney, which is a Writing or Instrument, authorizing the Attorney to do that for him that doth make him his Attorney, that he would have him to do. And their duty then is to pursue their Authority; from which if they vary, they make all they do void and of no effect. For which see Self. 1. The making and office of a private Attorney.

Authority, & infra.

The publique Attorney is to be made, appointed, and sworn by the Judges of the Courts wherein they be Attornies, and they ought to choose and appoint none but men of Learning and Virtue, and such as have been brought up in the same Court, or otherwise well practised in soliciting Causes, and have approved themselves able and honest therein; and for misdemeanors, they may remove, or otherwise punish them by their discretion. And then he is chosen by the Client, who makes his choice amongst the Attornies made by the Court, of which he will, and he may make his Attorney in general, for all matters to do and receive for him; or special, in one or some particular matters or things. Stat. 4 H. 4. cap. 18. 3 Jac. 7. 7 R. 2. 14. 7 H. 4. 13.

Warrant of a private Attorney.

By the Common-Law, all that were commanded to appear by the Kings Writ, were to appear in person, and then after appearance the Judges were used to allow them an Attorney: But if the Judges and Court were not such as did not hold plea by Writ, they could not allow him without a Writ of Attornato faciendo; and the Justices in Courts of Record and else, would not suffer any to appear by Attorney, whether he were Plaintiff or Defendant, Co. 8. 56. F. N. B. 26, 27. Stat. 10. H. 3. 10.

Where and in what cases one may have and retain a publique Attorney, and where not without a Writ out of the Chancery, or other allowance.

But at this day in most cases where one doth sue, or is sued, he may make his Attorney without Writ of Allowance from the King; as in Debt, Trespass, Formedon, Account, Appeal of Murther, or Death, in Suits in a Hundred, Tything, County, Wapentake, or Court of the Lord; in a Plea to the return of a Rescous by the Sheriff, Dyer 361. 5 H. 4. 8. Glou. cap. 3. Merton capio, West. 2. cap. 10. 3 H. 7. 1. Dyer 212.

In an Information or Suit upon a Penal Statute, the Defendant being a Denizen may appear by Attorney of the Court, and shall not be compelled to put in Bail, Dyer 346. 9. 29 Eliz. 5.

In a Writ of Affise, Attaints, & juvis utrum, after the Tenants have once appeared, he may make his Attorney to sue for him if he will, 3 Ed. 1. 41.

If any person be outlawed or waved, and is so impotent as he is not able to come in person to reverse it; this being examined and found by the Judges, they may in their discretion allow him an Attorney; but not in the case of a Writ of Capias ad satisfaciendum, 7 H. 4. 13.

In Pleas of Trespals in the County-Court, where an Appeal lieth not, the Defendant may make an Attorney, 6 Ed. 1. 8.

Any of the Petit-Jury, Defendants in Attaint, may appear and answer by Attorney, 23 H. 8. 3.

But in a Pramunire, the party may not appear by Attorney, without a special Writ, notwithstanding he be a Lord of the Parliament, Stat. 14 H. 4. cap. 14. 9 Ed. 4. 2.

It seems that by this Writ which is called Attornato faciendo, the King may command the Justices to allow an Attorney to the party, Plaintiff or Defendant, in any Action or Cause; and the Justices must allow him, as in a Quid juris clamat, against a woman great with child, or any impotent person; or in prison, the Defendants may have a Writ to allow of an Attorney directed to the Judge, F.N.B. 25. l. Dyer 175. Dyer 135. p. 15.

By a Writ out of the Chancery, or other allowance.

They which shall depart the Realm with the Kings licence, upon request to the Chancellor, he with advice of the Justices may grant to them to make their General Attornies to make answer, do and receive for them in any case or matter, Stat. 7. R. 2. cap. 14.

Every Free-man which oweth Suit to the County, Tythings, Hundred, and Wapentage, or to the Court of his Lord, may freely make his Attorney to do those Suits for him: And this must be allowed him upon a Writ of Attornato faciendo, 20 H. 3. 10. Fitz. Attorn. 106. F.N.B. 156.

St.B. 2.

But in Writs of Entry and Right, the Justices will not admit of any Attorney on the Tenants side unless he come in and acknowledg him before some Justice, or have a Writ out of the Chancery to testify it, F.N.B. 26.

And a Retraxis cannot be entred in a Court by an Attorney, but the party must appear in person and do it, Co. 8. c. 8.

Where and what things may be done by Attorney.

Most things that a man may do by himself, he may do by another: as, make a Feoffment or Lease, or the like; make Livery of Seisin, Entry, Claim, Demand of Rent, or the like, or pay money: One may receive money, take Livery of Seisin, take a Deed, take a Copihold-estate by an Attorney; also one may revoke an Administration, surrender a Copihold-estate, sue for Debts, and such like by Attorney, Co. 9. 75. Dyer 283. Br. 89. Co. super Lit. & Lit. sect. 153. 14 H. 4. 1.

What by a naked authority cannot be done by an Attorney.

But if one have a naked authority only, coupled with a confidence, as Executors that have power to sell Land have, he cannot do this by Deputy or Attorney. So if one have only a particular power and authority in respect of some special interest; as if there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in tail, and the Tenant for life hath power to make a Lease for one and twenty years, this cannot be done by Attorney: So if there be a special custom in a Manor, that the Tenants may surrender to any two of the Tenants out of Court, this cannot be done by Attorney, unless the Custom will warrant it, Co. 9. 75, 76.

What personal things cannot be done by Attorney.

Also there be some personal things that cannot be done by Attorney, but must be done by ones self; as the doing of Homage, Fealty, Suit of Court, or the like, 7 H. 4. 19. Co. super Lit. Co. 9. 75.

None but such as are honest and skilful, and have been accustomed to sollicite, or have been trained up in the practice of the Courts where they are to be Attornies, ought to be admitted by the Judges into that Office; and any one of those Attornies that are allowed by the Court, may be Attorney for his Client, whom the Client will choose, 4 H. 4. 18. 3 Jac. 7.

No Steward, Bailiff, or Minister of Lords of Franchises which have Retorns of Writs, shall be Attorney within the Franchise or Bailiwick in any Plea, whereof he is or shall be Officer or Minister, 4 H. 4. 19.

Private.

Any person almost may be a private Attorney, or do a thing for another, yea, such as might not do such a thing for themselves; as an Infant, Feme-Covert, person Attaint, Excommunicate, Outlawed, a Vilain, an Alien. A Feme-Covert may be an Attorney to deliver Seison to her Husband, & sic à contra: And he in Remainder mainder may be an Attorney to deliver Seison to the Lessee for life, Co. super Lit. fol. 52.

They must demean themselves honestly and justly according to their Office and Oath, not moving nor exciting men to Suits, especially forein and untrue ones, for small trespasses and little offences, and small Debts, whose Actions are triable in Courts-Baron, 4 H. 4. 18. 3 Jac. 7. 39 H. 6. 7.

The duty and office of an Attorney.

If he have given any Fee to any Serjeant or Counsellor at Law, or any sum of money to Clerk or Officer, in any Court of Record at Westminster for Copies, he must have a Ticket subscribed with the hand and name of the same Serjeant, Counsellor, Clerk or Officer, witnessing how much he hath received, and at what time; and he must give a true Bill to his Client, or some for him, of all other charges concerning the Suits, which they have for them subscribed with his own hand and name, before such time as he shall charge his Client with any of these same Fees or Charges, 3 Jac. 7.

Publique.

He must enter his Warrant of Attorney on Record, the same Term the Exigent is awarded, under pain of Forty shillings for every time: And the same Term he pleads to issue being for the Debt, or before, or else he is to forfeit ten pounds, and be further punished by the discretion of the Judges of the Court, Stat. 18 H. 6. 9. 31 H. 8. 30: 18 Eliz. 13.

And they must not make any suit in a forein County, nor willingly begin untrue and forein suits, 39 H. 6. cap. ult.

They must not willingly delay their Clients suits for gains, nor demand in their Bills any other sums of money or allowance on his Accounts of any money which he hath not laid out or disbursed; and if he do, his Client may have an Action against him, and shall recover treble damages, and the Attorney shall be put out of his Office for ever, 3 Jac. 7.

They must not admit any other to follow any Suit in their name: If they do, each of them, the Attorney and Solicitor, forfeit twenty pounds apeece, and the Attorney is to be put out of his Office for ever, Stat. 3 Jac. 7.

Sec. 3.

They must not be Under-Sheriffs, Sheriffs Clerks, nor Receivers, nor Sheriffs Bailiffs whilst they be Attornies; and therefore if they take upon them any such Office, they must cease that while and discontinue the practice of an Attorney, Stat. 1 H. 5. 4.

If a private Attorney do anything, he must do it in the name of his Master for whom he doth it, and not in his own name: As if he have power to make Leases for years, it must be done in his name from whom he hath his power, unless there be some necessity to the contrary; as where an Executor hath power to sell Lands, they must do it in their own names; or it be in some special case, as where the Authority is so given, that he may do it by himself or a Deputy: But if the Authority be indefinite, and he do the thing in his own name, all is void that he doth, Co. 9. 76. Curia, Underhills Case, M. 7 Jac. B. Regis.

Private.

Also such Attornies must take care to pursue the Authority given them, expressed by the Dreed and implied by the Law, Co. lib. Instit. 1 par. fol. 52. See for this, Feoffment.

The power and authority.

He may bring an Action of Debt for the Charges expended, and his Fees against his Client; or if he be dead, against his Executor or Administrator: But he must then first give a Note of the Charges to his Client, in manner as is above set forth, Stat. 3 Jac. 7.

Publique.

They may not meddle in the Sheriffs office, and execute the office, or practise as Attornies at one time, Stat. 1 H. 5. 4.

Such an Attorney cannot do more then his Master: Derivativa potestas non potest esse major primitiva. And therefore the Attorney of one that is disseised cannot make a Claim of from the Land, if the Disseisee himself durst to have gone to the Land. The Bailiff of a Disseisor shall not say, that the Plaintiff never had any thing in the Land, for the Master himself might not say so, 34 Ass. p. 4. 2 Ed. 4. 16.

The

Warrant of Attorny.
Publique.

The Warrant for the publique Attorny is, Ponit loco suo talem Attornatum suum: And this ought to be entred carefully by the Attorny. See the Statutes supra el stat. 18 H.6.9. el 32 H.8.30.

The Husband may make an Attorny for his Wife, and she cannot disavow him, 33 H.6.43.

Private.

The Warrant of the private Attorny is made by an Instrument or Writing, ut supra.

The Principal in an Obligation may give a Warrant of Attorny for the rest for appearance; and this is as good as if the rest did give Warrant for themselves, Dyer 361.

CHAP. XX.

Of an Attornment.

1. What.

AN Attornment is the agreement of the Tenant to the grant of the Seignior, or of a Rent, or the agreement of the Donee in tail, or Tenant for life or years, to a grant of a Reversion, or of a Remainder made to another. As where the Lord, or one that hath a Rent out of Land, doth grant over his Seignior or his Rent to another; or one that hath a Reversion or a Remainder after an estate for life or years, doth sell or give the same away to another: In these cases the Tenant of the Land must have notice of this sale or gift, and of the alteration of the party to whom he must attend in his services, and he must give his consent to the same gift or grant, or else generally the same is not good. And this yielding of consent is called an Attornment; and it is either actual, or verbal, or actual and verbal both. Co. super Lit. 309. Terms of the Law. Plow. 25. Lit. sect. 551.

2. The kinds.

That which is actual, is either implied and in Law, or expressed and in Fact. Of all which there are divers Examples hereafter following.

3. The effect of it.

The end, effect or fruit of this Agreement, is to perfect a Grant, and to make a good Conveyance of an Estate: For where this is needful, no Rent nor Reversion will pass without it; neither can the Grantee of the Seignior, Rent or Reversion, bring any action of Waste for waste done in the Land, nor distrain for any Rent or Service upon the Land before this is done. But this is but a bare assent, and therefore it shall not nor will enure or work to pass any Interest, to make a bad Grant good, to enfranchise a Villain, nor to give a man a Tenancie by disseisin, intrusion, or abatement, neither shall it work by the way Estoppel. And therefore if a man gain a Rent issuing out of Land by Cohersion of Distress or otherwise, and the Tenant of the Land attorn to him, this will not amend his estate. But otherwise a Grant and the Attornment of the Tenant do as effectually pass the Freehold and Inheritance of the Reversion of Land, as a Feoffment and Livery of Seisin of Land doth pass the Possession of Land. Lit. sect. 551. Co. super Lit. 302. Lit. Bro. sect. 267. 129. 379. 39 H.6.24. Co. super Lit. 323. 315. Lit. sect. 6:8.

4. Where and in what cases the Attornment of the Tenant is necessary, or not; and how, and to what intents.

In most cases where the Grantee hath means to compel the Tenant to attorn, there the attornment of the Tenant is at least to some purposes needful. For howsoever it be true, that if a Seignior, Rent, Services, Reversion, or Remainder be granted by Fine, in this case the Rent, Seignior, &c. doth pass, so as the Grantee may enter for a Forfeiture upon the alienation of the Tenant being Tenant for life, years, by Statute or Elegit, or upon an Escheat of the Tenant; or seize a Ward or Heriot, if it happen before any Attornment be made. And if the Reversion of a Lease for years be granted by Fine, and the Lessee be ousted, and the Lessor disseised, the Conusee may have an Assise; and therefore as to all these purposes the Attornment ment of the Tenant is not needful. But the Grantee, his Heir, or Assignee cannot distrain the Tenant for Rent, or bring any Action that doth lie in privity between him and the Tenant, as Waste upon a waste done by the Tenant, Writ of Entry ad communem legem, or in casu proviso, or in consimili casu upon the alienation of the Tenant, Escheat upon the dying of the Tenant without Heirs, or Ward upon the death of the Tenant his Heir within age, or Writ of Customs and Services, until he have the attornment of the Tenant; and therefore as to all these purposes the attornment of the Tenant is necessary. And hence it is that the Conusee of a Fine hath means appointed him by the Law to compel the Tenant to attorn; for in case where the Lord doth grant his Seigniorie to another, and the Tenant will not attorn, the Conusee, before the Fine be ingrossed, may have a Writ called a Per qua servitia, and thereby compel him to attorn. And in case where a man doth grant a Rent to another, and the Tenant of the Land out of which the Rent doth issue will not attorn, the Conusee of the Rent may have a Writ called Quem redditum reddit, and thereby compel him to attorn. And in case where a man doth grant a Reversion or a Remainder of his Tenant for life to another, and the Tenant will not attorn, the Conusee of the Reversion or Remainder may have a Writ called a Quid juris clamat, and thereby compel the Tenant for life to attorn. And if the Conusee of the Fine die in these cases before he have the attornment of the Tenant, his Heir, albeit he come to the thing descended by act of Law, yet shall be in no better case then his ancestor was. And if the Conusee of a Fine, by which he hath a Reversion granted to him, before he hath gotten the attornment of the Tenant, bargain and sell the Reversion by Deed indented and inrolled, the Bargainee shall be in no better case then the Bargainor was. And if a Reversion be granted by Fine, and the Conusee before attornment enter and make a Feoffment, and the Lessee reenter; in this case the Feoffee cannot distrain for the Rent. And yet if there be Lord Mesne and Tenant, and the Mesne grant the Services of his Tenant by Fine to another in Fee, and after the Grantee die without Heir, and by this means the Services of the Mesne escheat; in this case the Lord may distrain for them without any attornment of the Tenant, Lit. sect. 579, 580, 581. Co. 6. 68. Co. super Lit. 309, 314, 320. Old. N. B. 170. Co. super Lit. 252. Idem. Idem. Co. super Lit. 310. Co. super Lit. 321. Co. 6. 68. Lit. sect. 584, 583.

Per qua servitia.

Quem redditum reddit.

Quid juris clamat.

In these following cases, Attornment in Law or in Deed is absolutely and to all intents necessary, viz. Where one doth make a Lease for life or years to one, and after doth grant the Reversion or Remainder after the same Lease ended to another by Deed in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life or years; in this case the Lessee for life or years must attorn. So where the Lord doth grant his Seigniorie, or the Services of his Tenant by Deed in Fee-simple, or otherwise in Fee tail for life or years to a stranger; in this case the Tenant must attorn. So where the Lord of a Manor doth make a Feoffment of his Manor; in this case the Services of the Tenants will not pass without their attornment. So if another man have a Rent-service, Rent-charge, or Rent-seck issuing out of my Land, and he doth grant this Rent to a stranger; in this case I must attorn to this grant to the stranger. And if in these cases the Tenant do not attorn, the grant of the Reversion &c. is meerly void. Co. 2. 66. Lit. sect. 551, 567, 571. Co. super Lit. 316. Lit. sect. 551. Co. super Lit. 315. Perk. sect. 636. Co. 6. 68. Doct. & Stu. 55. Lit. sect. 553. Co. super Lit. 312. Lit. sect. 572.

If a Reversion be granted after an Estate of a Tenant by Statute-Merchant, Staple, or Elegit, or after an Estate that any one hath until debts be paid, or the like; in these cases these Tenants must attorn, or this grant will not be good, Co. super Lit. 315.

If one make a Lease for years of Land rendring Rent, and after he doth grant the Reversion to another for years, to begin after the death of the Grantor; in this case it is needful that the Lessee for years in possession do attorn to make this grant good: But if one make a Lease of his Land to one for Ten years, and after make a Lease of it to another, To have and to hold from the end of the said term of Ten years, for the term of Twenty years; in this case it seems it is not needful that the first Lessee do attorn, but that the grant is good enough without it, Co. 2. 35. Lit. Br. sect. 98. Dyer 307. Co. super Lit. 312. Lit. Br. sect. 151, 379. Br. Attor. 59. Dyer 26. Lit. Br. 349.

If one make a Lease to another for twenty years, and he make a Lease over to a third for ten years rendring a Rent, and then doth grant the Reversion to a stranger; in this case it is needful that the Lessee for ten years do attorn: But if the Lease for ten years be made without any reservation of Rent, contra. For it is a rule, That where there is no Tenure, Attendance, Remainder, Rent or Service to be paid or done, there Attornment is not necessary. And hence it is, that where one doth grant Common of Pasture appendant or appurtenant, or Estovers out of Land, that there needs no Attornment of the Tenant to make this Grant good. And if a Rent or Common be granted to one for life, and after the Reversion of it be granted to another; that in this case there need no Attornment to make this second Grant good. And if one make a Lease to one for ten years, and then make a Lease to another for twenty years; in this case the second Lease is good for the ten years to come after the first ten years ended, without any Attornment of the first Lessee. And so it was agreed in M. 37, 38 Eliz. B.R.

If a Lord exchange the services of his Tenant with another for Land; in this case the Attornment of the Tenant by whom the Service is to be done, is necessary to perfect this Exchange, Perk. sect. 249, 259.

If there be Lord and Tenant in Fee-simple, and the Tenant doth make a Lease to another man of the Tenancie for life, and the Lord doth grant the Seigniorie to the Tenant for life in fee; in this case the Tenant in Reversion must attorn to the Tenant for life upon this Grant of the Reversion, or the Grant is not good, Lit. sect. 562.

If I be seised of a Reversion after an Estate for years, and I grant it to the use of my self for life, and after to the use of another and his heirs in Fee, and after I grant my Reversion for life to another; in this case it is needful that the Tenant for years attorn to this Grant, Hil. 8. Jac.

If a Lease be made to I.S. for his life, and afterwards another Lease is made of the same Land to I.D. for his life; in this case it seems that I.S. must attorn to this second Grant, or that the Grant will not be good, Dyer 118.

An Estate of a Seigniorie cannot be gained by a Disseisin, Abatement, or Intrusion without an Attornment. And therefore if one disseise another of a Manor which is part in Demesne, and part in Services, the Services are not gained until the Tenant attorn, Lit. sect. 587.

In all cases for the most part where there is no means provided by Law to compel the Tenant to attorn, there their Attornment in Law or in Deed is not necessary unless there be some special default in the Grantee. Quod remedio destituitur, ipsa non valet si culpa absit, Co. 6. 68. Lit. sect. 580, 583, 586. Co. super Lit. 321. 314.

And therefore an Attornment is not necessary in these cases following, viz. Where one doth grant a Rent, Reversion, Remainder, Service, or Seigniorie to another by way of Devise by a last Will and Testament, or by Letters-Patents from the King, or where such things are granted by matter of Record from a Subject to the King, F.N.B. 121. m.

So when the thing granted doth pass by way of use, and doth vest by force of the Statute of Uses: As if one that is seised of Land in Fee, doth make a Lease of it for life or years to I.S. and after levieth a Fine, or doth covenant to stand seised of the Reversion of this Land, (or of the Land it self, which is all one) to the use of another, or doth bargain and sell the Reversion in Fee, or for years; in these cases the Tenant need not to attorn, Co. 6. 68. super Lit. 321. 2. 35.

But if A. grant a Reversion to B. to the use of C. and the Deed is not inrolled, or the use arise not upon consideration of blood, &c. in this case if the Tenant do not attorn, the Reversion will not pass. Agreed in the Court of Wards, Hil. 18 Jac.

If one by a Common Recovery suffered, grant a Reversion to the use of himself, his wife, or children; in this case there needs no attornment of the Tenant by the Statute of 7 H. 8. 4. Calvins Case, Pasch. 7 Jac. B.R.

So where one doth come to any such thing by title or Seigniorie paramount, as by Escheat, Surrender, or Forfeiture, or by Descent; in all these cases, and the rest before before, the Attornment of the Tenant is to no purpose, neither to pass the thing as to the Estate, nor to make a privity to distrain or bring action of Debt. And therefore if there be Lord, Mesne and Tenant, and the Mesne grant the services of his Tenant by Fine to another in Fee, and after the Grantee dieth without heir; in this case the services of the Mesnalty shall come to the Lord paramount, and he may distrain for them, or bring any Action that lieth in privity for them without any Attornment. So if Lessee for life of a Manor surrender his Estate to the Lessor, there needs no Attornment of the Tenants of the Manor to make this Estate to pass. So if the Reversion of a Tenant for life be granted to another in Fee, and the Grantee die without heir, so that the Reversion escheat; in this case the Lord may distrain or bring any action of Waste, &c. without any attornment. So if a Reversion descend to an heir from his ancestor; in this case it will vest in the heir without attornment; and attornment in this case is not necessary. So if the Conusee of a Statute Merchant extend a Seignior or Rent for debt, the Seignior or Rent shall be vested in him without any attornment of the Tenant, Litt. sect. 583. 5 H. 7. 18, 19. Co. super Litt. 321.

So in all cases when the thing doth move by act of Law: As if a Lease for years rendering Rent, be assigned for Dower, or granted by Elegit for the moyetie upon the Execution, Brownl. Rep. 1 par. 33. 2 par. 291. And so also it is where a Manor or Reversion of Copiholds is granted, the attornment of the Copiholder is not necessary, Brownl. 1 par. 179.

If a Copiholder in Fee make a Lease for years by licence of the Lord rendering Rent, and after surrender the Reversion to the use of I. S. in this case it seems an attornment of the Tenant is not needful, but I. S. shall have the Rent without any attornment, Per tres Just. Trin. 4 Jac. B.R.

If one grant the Reversion of Copihold lands for life or years, or grant the Seignior of Copihold lands of inheritance; in these cases there needs no attornment of the Tenants to make the grants good. And so also is the Law for an Estate at will by the Common Law, Curia M. 37, & 38 Eliz. B.R. Co. 2. 35. super Lit. 311.

If a Lease be made to one for life, the Remainder to another in tail, the Remainder over to the right heirs of the Tenant for life, and the Tenant for life doth grant his Remainder in Fee; in this case there needs no Attornment of the Tenant in tail, but the Remainder will pass by the Deed presently without any Attornment at all, Litt. sect. 578.

If one lease for life the Remainder for life, and after the Lessor release all his right in the Land to him in Remainder for life; in this case there needs no Attornment of the Lessee for life to perfect this Release, Litt. sect. 575.

If two Joint-tenants or more make a Lease for life rendering Rent, and one of them doth release the Rent to the other; in this case there needs no Attornment to make the Rent to pass, Litt. sect. 574.

In all cases where the Grant is in the Personalty, there needs no Attornment. And therefore in Grants of Annuities which do charge the Person of the Grantor only, and not his Land, there needs no Attornment; and in all cases where there is an Attornment in Law, there needs no Attornment in Deed. Agreed in Curnacks Case, M. 3 Jac. Co. B.

Tenant for life must attorn upon a Fine levied by Tenant in tail, Goldsb. 5. pl. 9.

If there be Lord, Mesne, and Tenant, and the Lord grant the Fee of the Seignior; in this case the Mesne, and not the Tenant must attorn, Litt. sect. 555.

If one make a Lease for life, and then grant the Reversion for life, and the Lessee attorn, and after the Lord grant the Seignior; in this case it seems the Grantee, and not the first Lessee for life must attorn, Co. super Lit. 319.

If there be Lord and Tenant, and the Tenant make a Gift in tail, or Lease for life of the Land, and after the Lord grant the services to a stranger; in this case the Tenant for himself, and not the Tenant in tail or for life must attorn: For it is a Maxim in Law, That no man shall attorn to any Grant of any Seignior, Rent, Service, Reversion, or Remainder, but he that is immediately privity to the Grantor.

S

But

s. By whom an attornment may and must be made, or not.

But to the Grant of a Rent-sock or Rent-charge, issuing out of such Land as before, the Under-Tenant in Tail, or for life, and not immediate Tenant himself must attorn, Littl. Sect. 554, 556. Co. super Littl. 311.

If there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in Fee, and the Lord grant the Services to a stranger: In this Case the Tenant for life, and not him in Remainder, must attorn, Littl. Sect. 556.

If there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in Tail, and he in the Reversion after their Estates doth grant his Reversion to a stranger: In this Case, if either of them need to attorn, it must be the Tenant for life, Idem.

Husband and Wife.

If a Woman that hath a Husband be to attorn, the Husband may and must do it for her, and the Attornment of the Husband for the Wife, whether it be expressed or implied, will binde the Wife, Co. super Littl. 312. Littl. Sect. 558:

If one make a Lease for years of Land, the Remainder for life, and after the Lessor doth grant the Reversion: In this Case, the Tenant for life or years, either of them may attorn, Littl. Sect. 571. Co. super Littl. 316, 317.

If a Rent-charge be issuing out of Land, and the Tenant be disseised of the Land; in this Case the Disseisor must attorn. But in case of the grant of a Rent-service, the Disseisee may attorn if he will; for the privity is between the Lord, and the Disseisee only, Co. super Littl. 312.

If a man make a Lease for life to 7. S. of Land, and after grant a Rent-charge out of it to 7. D. and after he grant over this Rent to another; in this Case the Lessor, and not 7. S. must attorn, Idem.

The Tenant in Dower, after she hath assigned over her Estate, and not the Assignee must attorn to the grant of the Reversion; and yet some hold that the Assignee also may attorn. The same Law is also of the Tenant by the courtsey; but it is not so in other Cases; for if the Reversion of Lessee for life be granted, and Lessee for life assign over his Estate, the Assignee and not the Lessee must attorn, Co. super Littl. 316. 8 Ed. 4. 10.

If Lessee for life assign over his Estate upon Condition, and then the Reversion is granted; in this Case the Assignee, and not the Lessee for life, must attorn, Co. super Littl. 316.

If a Tenant in Fee simple, that ought to attorn to a grant of a Seignior, or Rent, die before he make an Attornment, his Heir must attorn, and an Attornment made by him is good. So if he grant away his Land before he make Attornment, his Grantee may attorn, and an Attornment made by him, will be good enough, Co. super Littl. 315. Perk. Sect. 231.

If a Lord of a Manor, make a Lease of his Manor for life or years, and the Free-holders and others do attorn to the Lessee, and after he grant away the Reversion of the Manor to a stranger; in this Case the Lessee for life or years must attorn, and this will binde all the Free-holders, Co. super Littl. 311.

If there be Lord and Tenant by Homage, Fealty, and Rent, and the Tenant is disseised, and then the Lord granteth the Rent to another; in this Case the Disseisor and not the Disseisee must attorn; but if he grant the whole Seignior, the Disseisee may attorn, Idem.

Infant.
Non compos
mentis.

A voluntary Attornment where it is needful, may be made by an Infant, or one that is deaf and dumb, (who may do it by signs.) But one that is non compos mentis, cannot make an Attornment, Brownl. 2. part. 84. 1. part. 46. Co. super Littl. 315.

6. To whom an Attornment may and must be made; or not,

The Attornment must always be made to the Grantee of the Reversion, Rent, &c. according to the Grant, whether the Attornment be express or implied. But if divers do take by the Grant, the Attornment may be made to one of them, and this shall avail the rest; as if a Reversion or a Rent be granted to two or more, and the Tenant attorn to one of them; this is good to vest and settle the thing granted in them, all according to the Grant. And if a Lease be made by Deed of a Reversion to A. for life, the Remainder in Fee to B. and the Tenant attorn to A.; this is a good Attornment to settle the Remainder in B. But if the Tenant attorn to B. during the life of A., this is not good for A.; howbeit if the Tenant for life die before the the Attornment be made; in this case the Attornment may be made, and this shall be sufficient to perfect the Grant of the Remainder to B. Co. super Littl. 310, 311. 20 H. 6. 7.

If I grant a Reversion to one man, and before the Attornment of the Tenant had to perfect the Grant, he doth sell this Reversion to a third man; in this case the Tenant may attorn to the second Grantee, and this will make the grant good to him. But if the Attornment be made to both the Grantees, it is void for Incertainty, Co. 6. 68. 11 H. 7. 12.

An Attornment may as well be made to Cessuy que use of a Reversion, as to the Grantee of the Reversion himself. And it seems it must be made to him, and not to the Grantee of the Reversion. For it was agreed in the Court of Wards, Hil. 18 Jac. That if a Reversion be granted to B. to the use of C. that the Attornment must be made to C. and not to B. who is but an Instrument, Co. super Littl. 310. Hardings Case.

In all Cases regularly where Attornment is necessary, it must be made in the life time of the parties Grantor and Grantee, or Exchangor or Exchangee, for if either of them die before the Attornment be made, the grant or exchange is void. And therefore if a Manor be granted, and Livery of Seisin be given upon the Demesns thereof, and one of the Tenants die before Attornment be made by him, his Tenement will not pass, and the Grant, as to that part, will be void; for in this case all the Tenants, but Tenants at will, must attorn. And albeit the Grant of the Reversion be to begin at a day to come, and after the death of either of the parties; yet must the Attornment be made in the life time of the parties, or otherwise the Grant will not be good. And yet an Attornment may be made after the death of the Tenant by his Heir, and after the Conveyance of the Tenant by his Assignee, Co. 1. 151. super Littl. 310. Littl. Sess. 551. Perk. Sess. 263. 231. Co. super Lis. 315. 2. 35.

7. When and at what time the Attornment must be made.

If a Lease be made of a Reversion, to begin at a day to come; in this case the Attornment may be made before or after the day, so it be made in the life time of the parties, Co. 2. 35.

If one grant his Reversion of White-acre or Black-acre, and the Tenant attorn to the Grant, before the Grantee have made his Election, which Acre he will have; this is a good Attornment, Co. super Littl. 310.

If a man grant his Reversion by Deed to one, and after and before the Tenant do attorn, he levy a fine or make a Feoffment of the Land to another; in this case it seems the Attornment after comes too late: But if the fine or Feoffment be but of part of the Land granted before in Reversion; in this case the first Grant after Attornment, shall be good for the residue. And if a Woman sole grant a Reversion, and after and before Attornment she marry with a stranger, and after the Tenant attorn; in this Case the Attornment comes too late, for the marriage is a Countermand of it. And if a Reversion of an Estate for life or years be granted, and the Grantor before Attornment doth confirm the estate of the Tenant for life or years, and so change the Estate, and after the Tenant attorn; in this case the Attornment comes too late, Co. super Littl. 309, 310. 8. 82. 4. 61. Kelw. 163.

To the making of a good Attornment, where it is needful divers things are required.

1. It must be made by the person that ought to make it.
2. It must be made to the person that ought to take it.
3. It must be made in time convenient.
4. If it be an express Attornment, the Tenant must first have notice of the Grant of the Reversion, Rent, &c. to which he must attorn; but otherwise it is of an Attornment in Law, for there notice in all cases is not necessary.
5. And it must be done in that manner the Law doth prescribe.

And for this it is to be known, that it may be made by words or by Deeds, and without any writing, or by Deed or Writing (and this is the safest way to do it.) And any words written or spoken by the Tenant, that do import an assent and and Agreement to the Grant of the Reversion, Rent, &c. in such manner as the same is made after notice given to him of the Grant, whether it be in the presence or the absence of the Grantee of the Reversion, Rent, &c. will make a good Attornment in Deed. And therefore, if the Tenant after knowledge of the Grant, use these words following, or any others to the like effect, to the Grantee, viz. I do attorn, or turn Tenant to you according to the Grant; or, I become your Tenant; or, I agree to the Grant; or, I am well content with the Grant; or, God send you joy of it: These are good exprefs Attornments, Co. super Littl. 309, 310, 315. Littl. Sett. 551. Plew. 344.

8. The manner of making an Attornment. And what shall be said a good Attornment; or not.

And if the Tenant after knowledge of the Grant, pay, do, or deliver all, or any part of the Rent, or Service, before, or at the time when the same is due, to the Grantee, or give a peny or farthing, an Ox, or a Knife, or any such like thing, or any other valuable thing, in the name of Attornment, or in the name of Seisin of the Rent; this is a good exprefs Attornment, and that Attornment which is made by words and Deed, or sign both, is the best; for that doth leave a more deep impression in the minde of the Witnesses. But if one have a Rent-charge issuing out of my Land, and he grant it to a stranger, and I give him an Ox to put him in possession of the Rent; it seems this is no good Attornment. See Brownl. 2. part. 51. Littl. Sett. 563, 551. 513. Co. super Littl. 315. 49 Ed 3. 15.

If a man grant his Reversion of my living to J. S. and his Bailiff that doth use to gather his Rents, saith to me, That J. S. hath bought it, and I must hereafter pay my Rent to him, and I tell him I am glad of it; this is a good Attornment. And that albeit it be in the absence of J. S. M. 2 Car. In the Court of Wards. Co. super Lit. 310.

And it is not material whether the stranger know of the Grant or not, so the Tenant know of it. And an Attornment made to the Lords Steward in the Court in the absence of the Lord is a good Attornment. For it is sufficient if the Tenant have notice, that he attorn to the grant in the presence of any whomsoever. Tenant for life was, the Remainder in Tail, he in the Remainder granted his Remainder; the Tenant for life having notice of the Grant, saith to a stranger in his absence, That is the party, I am well pleased that the Grant is made to him; it was adjudged to be good. Curia B. R. Hil. 11 Car. B. R. Hiltons Case.

If a Reversion be granted to one for life, and after the same Reversion be granted to him for years, and the Tenant attorn to both the Grants at once; this Attornment is void for Incertainty. So if one grant his Seigniorie to J. S. Bishop of London, and his Heirs, by one Deed, and grant the same to J. S. Bishop of London, and his Successors by another Deed, and the Tenant attorn to both Grants at once; this Attornment is void for Incertainty. So if a Reversion be granted to two several persons, by several Deeds, and the Tenant attorn to both the Grants at one time; this Attornment is void for Incertainty, and neither of the Grants are perfected by the Attornment in these Cases. The implied attornment which also doth amount to an exprefs Attornment is made divers manner of ways. For if the Tenant after notice of the Grant of the Reversion pay his Rent to the Grantee, or surrender his Estate to the Grantee, or pray in aid of the Grantee, or accept a Grant of the Reversion or Remainder from him that hath it; this is a good Attornment in Law. But if the Tenant after the Grant of the Reversion, not having notice of the Grant, pay his Rent to the Grantee as a Receiver, Bailiff, &c. this is no good Attornment. And therefore if the Bailiff of a Manor shall purchase the Manor, or the Reversion of one of the Tenements and the Tenant not knowing of this purchase, pay his Rent to him as he was wont to do; this is no good Attornment in Law. So if a man seised of a Seigniorie levy a fine of it, and then taketh back an Estate in Fee, and the Tenant having no notice of all this, doth pay his Rent to the Conusor as he was wont to do; this is no good Attornment in Law, to perfect either of these Grants, Co. super Littl. 310. 11 H 7. 12. 14 H 8. 15. 34 H 6. 41. Co. super Lit. 312. Calvins Case, Adjudged. Pasche, 7 Jac. B. R. Co. super Littl. 309. Co. 2. 67. Dyer 302.

If there be Lord and Tenant, and the Tenant let the Land to a Woman for life, the the Remainder in Fee, and the Woman doth take a Husband, after the Lord doth grant the Services to the Husband in Fee; in this case this Acceptance of the Deed by him that ought to attorn, is a good Attornment in Law. So if in this case the Tenant Lease to a man for life, the Remainder over, and the Lord grant the Services to the Tenant for life, and he accept thereof; this is a good Attornment in Law, Littl. Sess. 558, 560, &c.

If the Lord by Deed grant his Seigniorie to the Tenant of the Land, and to a stranger, and the Tenant doth accept of this Deed; this is a good Attornment in Law, to extinguish a moyety, and to vest the other moyety in the other Grantee. So if one make a Lease to J. S. for life, and after confirm his Estate, the Remainder over to J. D. and the Lessee for life, doth accept of the Deed of this Confirmation and Grant; this is a good Attornment in Law, and doth vest the Remainder in J. D. Co. super Littl. 313. Co. super Littl. Sess. 573.

If there be Lord and Tenant, and the Tenant take a Wife, and after the Lord doth grant the Services to the Wife, and her Heirs, and the Husband doth accept of the Deed of this Grant; this is a good Attornment in Law, Littl. Sess. 559.

If the Conusee of a Fine of Services sue a Scire facias to have Execution of the Services, and hath Judgment to recover; this is a good Attornment in Law, Littl. Sess. 564.

If a Woman grant a Reversion to a man in Fee, and after marry with the Grantee; this is a good Attornment in Law to perfect this Grant made to the Husband, Co. super Lit. 310.

If a Lord grant his Seigniorie, and there be twenty manner of Services, and the Tenant with what intent soever it be, pay or perform in Deed any parcel of the Services to the Grantee; this is a good Attornment in Law for all the Services, Littl. Sess. 561.

If I be seised of Land in Fee, and make a Lease for life or years of it, or it be extended by a Statute or Elegit, and then I make a Feoffment of this Land; and give Livery of Seisin upon it, and so put out the Tenant, and after the Tenant (or one of the Tenants, if there be many) re-enter; this is a good Attornment in Law. And so also it seems in the Law, if the Lessee for life recover in an Assise. But if a man make a Lease for life, and then the Lessor grant the Reversion for life, and the Lessee attorn, and after the Lessor enter and make a Feoffment in Fee, and so disseise the Lessee for life, and then the Lessee re-enter; this is no good Attornment in Law by the Grantee for life. And if the Conusee of a Reversion by fine disseise the Lessee for life, and make a Feoffment in Fee, and the Lessee re-enter; this is no good Attornment in Law to the Feoffee to enable him to distrain, &c. Littl. Sess. 576, 577. Co. super Littl. 319. Dyer 212. Co. 6. 68. 5. 113.

If one grant the Reversion of a Lease of a term of years, and before any Attornment made, the Lessee for years doth grant his term to the Grantee of the Reversion; in this case this is no good Attornment in Law to make the Reversion to pass, Hil. 8 Jac.

If one have Land, and a Rent issuing out of other Land, both in one County, and he grant both by Deed, and give Livery of Seisin of the Land, in the name both of the Land and of the Rent; this is no good Attornment in Law to make the Grant of the Rent good, Perk. Sess. 231.

If Lessee for life or yeers, subscribe his name as a witness to the sealing and delivery of the Grant of the Reversion made by the Lessor to a stranger; this is no good Attornment in Law, for he may do this, and not have notice: But if he have notice of the Grant, and then put his hand to it; this is an Attornment, Curia. B. R. Hil. 11 Car. So was it held in Brokenbury and Martials Case. 5 Eliz.

If a Reversion be granted of two Acres, or for forty years, or if Services be granted, and the Tenant doth attorn for one Acre, or for part of the forty years, or for part of the Services; this shall extend to all, and is a good Attornment for both the Acres, all the forty years, and all the Services. And that albeit the Tenant say expressly, it shall be good but for a part, and not for the whole; and so also it is of an Attornment in Law. And therefore if the Grantee by fine of Services sue a part of the Grant good for the whole.

Scire

Scire facias, to have Execution of any part of the Services, and have Judgment to recover any part, or a Lessee of three Acres surrender one of them to the Grantee of the Reversion of all the three Acres; this is a good Attornment for the whole. But if one attorn for part of the Land, or for part of the Services in case of the Grant of a Reversion of Land, or the Grant of Services, and have no notice of the Grant of any more; this Attornment is not good for any part, but void for all, Co. 2. 68. super Littl. 297. 314. 309. Littl. Selt. 564.

Attornment to
others.

If a Seignior, Reversion, or the like, be granted to two or more, and the Tenant after notice thereof, doth attorn to one of them; this is a good Attornment to perfect the Grant to both or all of them. But if one die before Attornment, and the Tenant attorn to the Survivor or Survivors; this shall not avail the Heir of him that is dead, but it is good to perfect the Grant to the Survivor or Survivors, to whom it is made, Co. super Littl. 297. 2. 68. 67.

If a Reversion be granted to Husband and Wife, and the Tenant attorn to the Wife in the absence of the Husband; this is a good Attornment to perfect the Grant to them both. But if a Reversion be granted to two men, and the Tenant have notice onely of a Grant made to one of them, and he attorn to him onely; this Attornment is void, and not good to perfect the Grant to either of them, Calvins Case. Pasche, 7 Jac. B. R. Co. 2. 68.

Attornment by
others.

If two Joynt-tenants be for life, or years, and the Reversion of their Estate is granted to a stranger, and one of them attorn to the Grant of the Reversion; this is a good Attornment for both of them. The like Law is for Tenants in common; Co. 2. 66. 67. Littl. Selt. 566. But if A, B, C and D, be Lessees for years, and C and D be outlawed, so as they forfeit their parts to the King, and the King become Tenant in common with A and B, and after the Reversion is granted to a stranger, and A, B, C and D attorn; this is no good Attornment to perfect the Grant of the Reversion; for C and D cannot attorn, and the Attornment of A and B for the King and themselves, is not good, 6 Car. In the Lord Brook's Case in the Court of Wards.

9. Who shall be compelled to attorn; or not; and where.

In all Cases for the most part where Attornment is needful, the Tenant whether he be Tenant in Fee simple, for life, years, by Statute, Elegit, or as Executor until Debts be paid, shall be compelled to attorn. And albeit the Tenant be an Infant, and come to the Land by purchase or descent, yet may he be compelled to attorn, but then in this case his Attornment shall not prejudice him; for when he is of full age he may disclaim, or say he doth hold by less Services. Co. 6. c8. 9 84. super Littl. 315.

If there be Tenant in Tail of a Reversion, and he grant this over to a stranger; in this case the Tenant in possession may be compelled to attorn. But if the Reversion upon the Estate of the Tenant in Tail, or upon the Estate of the Tenant in Tail, after possibility of Issue extinct be granted, such a Tenant may not be compelled to attorn; and yet such a Tenant may attorn gratis if he will. And the Assignee of the Estate of such a Tenant in Tail after possibility, &c. is compellable to attorn. And if one make a gift in Tail, the Remainder in Fee, and the Seignior, or a Rent-charge issuing out of the Land, is granted in Fee by Fine; in this case the Tenant in Tail may be compelled to attorn, Co. super Littl. 316, 318.

In all cases, for the most part, where Attornment is not needful, there is no means to compel the Tenant to attorn. And therefore the Tenant cannot be compelled to attorn to him that comes to a Reversion or Remainder by Elcheat, Forfeiture, &c. Co. 6. 68. super Littl. 318.

If one grant his Reversion of Land in Mortmain without a Licence, the Tenant may not be compelled to attorn, until there be a Licence had from the King, Co. super Littl. 318. 3. 86.

Also it is a general rule, that when the Grant by Fine is defeasible, there the Tenant shall not be compelled to attorn. As if an Infant levy a Fine, this is defeasible by Writ of Error during his minority, and therefore the Tenant shall not be compelled pelled to attorn. So if the Land be holden in ancient Demefn, and he in the Reversion levieth a Fine of the Reversion at the Common Law; the Tenant shall not be compelled to attorn, because the Estate that passeth is reverfable by a Writ of Deceit. Co. super Littl. 318. 3. 86.

If the Grant be absolute, and the Attornment be on condition; yet this shall enure according to the Grant. So if the Attornment be but to part of the things, or part of the time granted; this shall enure to perfect the Grant for all. So if the Attornment be made but to one of the Grantees, it shall enure to the rest. So if the Attornment be made to the particular Tenant, it shall enure to him in the Remainder to perfect his Estate also, Co. super Littl. 309, 310. 297. See before.

10. How an Attornment shall enure and be taken.

If the Estate of the Tenant be with a privilege annexed, as without impeachment of waste, or the like, and the Tenant attorn generally without any saving of his privilege, if the Attornment be gratis and voluntary, whether it be an Attornment in Law, or in Deed; this shall not enure to extinguish his privilege: But if the Attornment be made by the Compulsion of a Writ in this manner, and without this saving, he hath lost his privilege for ever. Co. super Littl. 320.

If a Reversion, &c. be granted to two several men one after another, and he that hath the latter Grant, get the Attornment of the Tenant to his Grant, before the other; in this case this shall enure to perfect the latter, and the first Grant now cannot be made good, Co. super Littl. 310.

If a Reversion be granted to a Man and Woman unmarried, and before Attornment made they entermary, and then the Tenant attorn; in this case they shall have the Estate by Moyeties, Idem.

An Attornment as to the Parry-Grantor shall have relation to the time of the Grant, to make the thing to pass out of the Grantor ab initio, albeit it be made many years after the Grant; and therefore all acts done by him, after the time of the Grant, and before the Attornment to the prejudice of his own Grant, as granting of Rents, entering into Statutes, or the like, are void, as to the Land to charge it: And hence it is, that if a Reversion be granted to an Alien, and before the Attornment of the Tenant, he is made Denizen; in this case the King upon Office found, shall have the Land; and yet it shall not so relate as to make the Tenants chargable to the Grantee for any mean Arrearages, or for any waste in the Lands, from the time of the Grant to the time of the Attornment. But in respect of a stranger it shall not relate at all. And therefore if two Deeds be of a Reversion at several times, and he whose Deed was made last, gets Attornment first, the Reversion doth pass to him; and though the other get Attornment afterwards, yet this will not help him by relation; and albeit the former grant of the Reversion be in Fee, and the latter for life onely, yet the Law will be all one in both cases. Idem.

11. How an Attornment shall relate.

CHAP. XXI.

Of Audita Querela.

Audita Querela.

T is a Writ lying where one is bound in a Statute-Merchant, Staple, or Recognizance, or where Judgment is given only for Debt or Damages, or the party in Execution, and he hath a Release or some other sufficient Discharge for all or part of the duty, but hath no day in Court to plead it, nor means to make use of it, then he may have this Writ to relieve himself, Co. super Lit. 290. Dyer 56: Finches Case, 14 Fitz. 23.

And this sometimes is to be brought against the Prosecutor himself, and sometimes against him and others that ought to bear part of the burthen with him. Kelw. 25. Br. 38.

The Process
herein.

If it be brought before Execution by the party or his Heir or Executor, the party may have a Superfedeas to stay Execution upon a Surmise of good cause for the Audita Querela, and upon Bail given to prosecute and stand to the Judgment of the Court: But when the party is in prison, it seems there is no Bail put in till the Comisee answer in the Audita Querela: But after Execution done, it seems no Superfedeas lieth. And the Process besides are before Execution, a Venire facias with an Alias; and then if he come not in, it seems that the party that is in prison, upon motion may be discharged: And a Distingas; and upon a default after appearance and a Plea pleaded, a Distingas ad audiendum Judicium; for by such default Judgment shall be given against him: And after Execution, the Process is a Scire facias, when the party is in prison on a Cap. sat. But when he cometh in gratis, contra. Dyer 339: 22 H. 6. 56. 2 H. 7. 12. 25 H. 6. 34. 43 Ed. 3. 28. 12 H. 4. 6. 15. 15 Ed. 4. 5. Fitz. 5. 6, 7.

It seems also that a stranger, as he that is a Purchaser of Land of a Cognizor of a Statute, shall not have a Superfedeas. See Fitz. 8. 9.

And if one Purchaser sue to have Contribution of another, and that other have a Discharge by Release, a Scire facias shall go against the Cognizor that made the Release, to try that Deed, Fitz. 19.

And in case where a man puts in Bail, he shall not be discharged of his Bail, but must continue it, until the Suit by the Audita Querela be determined; for though the Plaintiff present not after the appearance of the Debt, yet the party must continue in prison or stand upon Bail, Fitz. Aud. Qu. 2.

If a man be Nonsuit in one Audita Querela, yet he may have another; but he shall have no Superfedeas to stay Execution in the second, as he may in the first, Fitz. 11.

Against whom it lieth.

This Writ lieth against the Ter-tenant, without naming him Party or Privy, F.N.B. 104. c. 12 H. 4. 16.

If an Obligee have Judgment against an Heir of the Obligor, and his Land in extent, and the Obligee assign his Estate to a stranger, and after the Heir get a Release from the Obligee of this Judgment, he may have this Writ against the Assignee, Adjudg. Flower and Elgars Case, Pasch. 7. Car. B.R. Co: 4. 430. 3. 44.

In what case
this Writ lieth to avoid a Judgment or Execution.

In all Cases where this remedy is given, there are these three Incidents in the Case.

1. There is a charge and burthen come, or coming upon him that is to have it;
2. It is such as by Law he ought to be discharged of in all or in part.
3. It is in such a case where he hath no other remedy to relieve himself. As in all these Examples following:

St. B. 1.

(a) If a Judgment be against me, or Judgment and Execution, and the Plaintiff make me a Release in Fact, and I be released in Law, so as the same or any part of it is released, and yet he sueth Execution. (b) So if a Widow of a Copiholder in Fee,

Fee, that claimeth Dower by the Custom of a Manor, recover the same in the Lords Court, and Fifty pounds in damages, where in truth there is no such custum, and the recovery is erroneous; the party grieved may have this remedy to prevent Execution, and to be restored to his damages if they be taken, (a) 36 H.6 24. Plow. 72. Dyer 286. 20 H.7.30. Co. 8.153. Dyer 50. (b) Co. 4.30.

So if Executors have sued and recovered by Judgment, after the Testament is revoked and annulled, in this case the party against whom the Judgment is, may get it certified by the Bishop, and then have an Audita Querela against the Executors, Co. 8.144. Dyer 203. p.73.

So if one be in Execution, and the Sheriff or the Plaintiff deliver him out and set him at liberty, and after take and imprison him again, he may have this remedy; for by this the Debt is discharged, Co. 8.21.

So if one have a Judgment against a Sheriff upon an Escape, and after the first Judgment, from the Execution whereof the Escape was, is reversed for Error, the Sheriff may have relief by this Writ; but till it be reversed, though there be Action, he cannot. So if the party be taken after the Judgment reversed, Co. 8.142.

So if in a Detinue for a Statute, the Defendant prays Garnishment, and the Plaintiff recover against the Garnishee by an Erroneous Judgment, and thereupon the Defendant deliver the Statute to the Plaintiff, and he hath Execution after the Garnishee reverse the Judgment; it seems though Execution cannot be avoided, yet the party may have this Writ, Co. 5.90.

So if one have a Judgment against two Joint-trespasors, and one is taken, and he is satisfied by him, and after sue to have Execution of the other, he may be relieved by this Writ, Trin. 3 Jac. B. Regis.

So if one have Judgment against two, and one is taken in Execution, and released or discharged by the party, the other shall have the advantage thereof, Monk against Brown, P. 40 Q. Com. B.

If he that is in Execution purchase a Manor, to which the Plaintiff is a Vilain regardant, wherein there is a Discharge in Law, he may have this Writ, Fitz. 19.

If an Obligee have a Judgment and Land extended of the Heir, and assign it over, and after the Assignment release to the Heir; in this case he may have this remedy against the Assignee, Flowers Case, P. 7 Car. B. R. Adjudg. M. 36. & 37 Ed. 2: Co. B.

If the Conusee of a Statute or Recognizance purchase part of the Land the Conusor had at the time or after, and another another part, and the Conusee sue the Execution on the other Purchasor, he shall have this Writ to discharge him altogether; for in this case he shall not have Contribution, or any part of him, Charnock vers. Sir Tho. Gerrard.

If after the Scire facias sued upon the Statute, the Conusor get a Release from the Conusee of all or part of the Debt, and yet he go on to sue Execution; the Conusor may have this remedy: For if it be before the Scire facias sued that he had the Release, he might have pleaded it, Finch 114. Dyer 50. p. 6:

To avoid a Statute or Recognizance:

If one enter into a Statute that hath some defect in him, and is not good, and yet the Conusee sue Execution, the Conusor hath this remedy.

Or the same be voidable by some Law, as if the same were made upon an Usurious Contract, or the like.

Or there were a Defeasance upon it, which have been kept, and he notwithstanding hath sued Execution upon it.

Or the Statute were delivered up (which is a Release in Law) and the Conusee happen to come by him again, and sue upon him, Dyer 35. Corles vers. Sir Rowland Lacy, P. 7 Jac. B. Regis. Dyer 297. Br. Co. 31. 43 Aff. p. 18. Br. 29. 22 Aff. p. 44.

If the Conusor after Execution tender the money due upon the Statute to the Conusee,

Conusee, and he refuse it; or part were paid at the day, and he tender the rest in Court, Fitz. 4. & in 1010.

Stil. 2.

If a Conusee or a Statute after Execution of Body and Land, purchase parcel of the Land of the Cognizor, or part of it descend to him, he may have this Writ to discharge his Body of Execution, Plow. 72.

If the Statute were delivered to a stranger to keep till certain condition, and he deliver him the Conusee, or he recover him by Covin from him, before the Conditions performed, he may have this Writ, Fitz. 15, 16.

If the Statute were entred in per dures, it seems by this it may be avoided by an Andita Querela, Fitz. 927.

To prevent a Judgment.

If one binde himself and his Heirs by an Especialty, and the party Obligee sue the Heirs, and recover of them, and then after sue the Executors for the same cause; or E converso after he hath recovered against the Executors, sue the Heirs; the Heir or Executor may have this Remedy, for he cannot plead it in Bar. So if, a Lessee Covenant for him and his Assigns to repair the Houses, or otherwise; and after he hath assigned away his Estate, he remains liable to an Action of Covenant still; so as the Lessor may sue either: If he sue and recover against one, and then sue the other, he may have this Remedy, Plow. 439. Dyer Broo. 74.

If divers be bound by an Obligation or other Especialty, Conjunctim & divisim, and the Obligee hath Judgment and Execution, and is satisfied the debt of one, and yet after sue another: Now this other in this case may be relieved by this means, Co. 5. 87.

So if in the interim between the Verdict and Judgment, the parties have put themselves into Arbitrement for the Suit, or the Defendant hath gotten a Release from the Plaintiff, and yet the Plaintiff sueth Execution notwithstanding, for after the Verdict he cannot plead it; but there it seems Judgment must be given before the Writ brought, 21 H. 7. 33. 11 H. 7. 10. Fitz. 7. 13.

So if one have had once Judgment and Execution for a thing, and then sue for the same cause, and recover again, Br. 25. 9 Ed. 4. 50.

So if one take any Goods from me by any delivery, and another take them from him; if one of us sue him, and recover for them (as we may both) and then the other sue, he shall be relieved by this, 5 H. 7. 15. Dyer 232.

For Nonage.

If an Infant have entred into a Statute, he may avoid it whiles he is in his minority by this means, but after he cannot: And the course to avoid it, is, when he is in prison, for some of his Friends to have this Writ to the Justices, and thereupon a Writ to the Sheriff to bring the Infant into the Court to be seen by the Judges; and then if they adjudge him within age, he shall be discharged out of prison, after Proces sent to warn the Conusee to come into the Court, Fitz. 26.

To have Contributions.

If one alone be charged, or about to be charged upon a Judgment, Statute, or Recognizance, and others ought to contribute, or bear part of the burthen, he may have relief by this Writ. As if one enter into a Statute, and after sell his Land to divers Purchasers: Or a Judgment be had against a man, who doth leave his Land to divers Heirs; or one binde him and his Heirs by an Especialty, and leave his Land to descend to divers Heirs: If one of the Purchasers in the first case, or one of the Heirs in the last cases be charged alone, he may have this Writ against the rest. And if any one of them have a Release, or other good discharge, this (as it seems) will discharge all the rest. See more in Contribution and Statute. 48 Ed. 3. 5. Fitz. 38. Co. 3. 44. 12. Co. 6. 13. Fitz. 3. An. Querela.

Where not.

If one have such a Release of the Judgment, or Duty, as by Law is not sufficient to bar the Execution; in this case he shall have no benefit by this Writ. The same Law is if it be to discharge a Statute, Broo. 37.

To avoid a Judgment or Execution.

If one have good matter of discharge, and have a day and time to plead it in Bar, and do not, as when a Scire Facias is sued out upon a Judgment, and the party have then a Release, or other matter of discharge, and do not plead it; now he shall not afterwards have any relief by this Writ: But if he had no warning of the Scire facias, then he may have this Writ, as when the Sheriff returns him Nihil. Finch 314. Fitz. 25.

If

If a Prisoner escape against the will of the Sheriff and party, and the Sheriff take him again, he cannot have this Writ, for the taking is lawful, Co. 3. 44. 8. 141.

If one have a Judgment against a Sheriff upon an Escape, and there be Error in the Proceeding of the Suit wherein the Judgment is, but the Judgment is not reversed, yet the party can have no remedy by this Writ, until the Judgment be reversed for Error, Co. 8. 142.

Seal. 3.

If one be outlawed after Judgment, and imprisonment upon a Capias Utlagatum, and the Sheriff doth let him go at liberty, and the Plaintiff taketh out another Capias Utlagat against him, upon which the Sheriff doth return Non est inventus, and the Defendant finds Error in the Exigent, upon which by sentence of the Court it is annulled: After the Plaintiff takes Execution of the first Judgment, in this case the party cannot have this Writ; but if the Exigent had been well awarded, contra. Co. 8. 142.

If an Administration be granted to one, and he sueth a Debtor, and hath Judgment, and after another covenously sueth out an Administration to him and the first Administrator, and he alone releaseth to the Debtor, yet he shall not discharge himself by this Writ, for the Release was not good, Dyer 339. Co. 6. 19.

If a Conusee purchase part of the Land of the Conusor before Execution, and after sue Execution, the Conusor shall have no remedy by this Writ, for the Statute is not hereby discharged, Plow. 72. To avoid a Statute.

If the Sheriff in Execution of a Statute deliver the Lands of a stranger in Execution, as some of the Lands which were in the hands of the Cognizor the time the Statute was made, or after; Now he shall not have relief by this Writ, but by an Assise, Fitz. Aud. Qu. 6.

If a Conusor of a Statute surmise, or that the Conusee and he have agreed, and that the Conusee hath delivered him the Statute for an Acquittance, and because he hath him not to shew cancell'd, the Conusee or the Corporalis hath counterfeited the Statute, and so doth sue Execution; this is no good cause to maintain the suit: But if he had the Statute to shew cancelled, then it seems this suit were maintainable, Fitz. 9: 10. 22.

If one that is sued by the King get a Charter of Pardon, or any Release in the mean betwixt the Verdict and the Judgment, and after the Judgment is had, he cannot have relief by this Writ, but he may plead it after Judgment, 11 H. 7. 10. To prevent a Judgment.

After a suit is begun, and so far gone, as there is no time to plead, it seems no Audita Querela lieth until the Judgment be given, Fitz. 13.

If an Infant have entred into a Statute, and be sued upon it after he is of full age, he shall not then have any remedy by this Writ, Dyer 231. For Nonage.

If one after he hath entred into a Statute or a Recognisance, do convey away some of his Land to divers persons, but keep some in his hands, and the Conusee sue Execution only upon the Land that he hath in his hands against him, or his Heir after his death; in this case neither he nor his Heir shall have this Writ to have Contribution of the Purchasors: But if Execution had been sued upon one of the Purchasors, he might have had him against the rest. See more in Statute, Co. 2. 91. Dyer 322. To have Contribution.

CHAP. XXII.

Of an Averment.

Averment,
what it is.

Se^{ct}. 1.
In what case
an Averment may be had, and how, or not, upon or against a Deed.

Averment in this place is taken for an affirmation or denial of something that doth not appear, which one doth offer to prove, and being allowed to him shall be put to Trial, Terms of the Law.

For answer to this Question, these things are to be known.

1. That any Averment may be had upon a Deed in writing, to alter, qualifie, or abridg the operation of it, if there be any apt words in the Deed whereupon to ground it. As if a Deed be to A. the son of B. and he hath two sons of that name, or a Grant be of the Manor of S. and he have two Manors of that name; in these cases an Averment will lie; which Son, or which Manor was intended by the Deed. But no such Averment can be against the words of a Deed. And therefore if the Estate limited by Deed were to J. S. and his heirs, you shall not be admitted to say the meaning of it was, that it should be to him and the heirs of his body. So one may not aver upon a general Release, that it was intended it should reach only to some particular: And yet if the first words be general, and joined to particular words, and restrained all to a particular, contra. So when a Deed is said to be delivered in one place, you may not be admitted to say it was delivered in another place: And when a Deed doth express a Consideration, you may not aver that there was no Consideration given. (a) So if a Lease be made without impeachment of waste, you may not aver that it was intended or agreed that he should not do waste, Co. 8. 155. 5. 68. Clark's Case, 155. Plow. 7. 31 H. 6. Dyer 169. (a) M. 8 Jac. Curia.

Of another consideration.

Se^{ct}. 2.
Of another
use.

2. A man may aver a Consideration upon a Deed that is besides, but not that is against the express Consideration of the Deed, Co. 1. 176. 11. 24. Dyer 146.

3. No Averment lieth of another use against, or besides the express uses of the Deed. But where there is no use expressed, or where uses are expressed, but they are doubtfully and incertainly expressed; in this case an Averment shall be admitted, and may serve for addition or explication. So also it will be admitted to reconcile a Fine, and the Indentures to lead the uses thereof, Co. 2. 75.

4. When a Deed is utterly and altogether so uncertain, that it is void for incertainty, no Averment shall be admitted to make it good. And therefore it is, that a limitation of an Estate of Land by Deed to two persons & heredibus, (i.) to the heirs, and doth not say to their heirs, or to the heirs of one of them, is void. And so is a grant of goods to one of the sons of J. S. and he have divers sons, no Averment shall be admitted which of the sons is meant, Co. 8. 155. 11 Ed. 4. 2. 22 H. 6. 15.

5. If an Estate be made to a woman that hath a husband, before or after the marriage, by Deed or Fine for her life; in this case it may be averred to be made for her Jointure, albeit there be another Consideration expressed, Dyer 146. Co. 4. 4.

6. If a peece of ground be antiently called by one name, and it is of late turned to Tillage and called by another name, and it be granted to me by this new name; in this case an Averment shall be admitted, That it is all one thing; and this will make it good, Dyer 37. 44.

For this Averment against, or upon a Record, these things are to be known.

Se^{ct}. 3.
Upon or against a Record.

1. That no Averment shall be admitted of any thing that is against or besides a Record, or any thing that is within it. And therefore if a Recognisance taken before a Justice of Peace do mention that it was taken at Dale, you may not aver that it was taken at Sale, and not at Dale, though it be true that it was so. For this cause a man shall not be suffered to say, a Verdict is false. But such an Averment as may stand with the Record, may be admitted. And therefore if a Fine and Inrolment be both in one Term, an Averment, That the Fine was before the Inrollment shall be received, Co. 10. 92. Plow. 493. Dyer 311. Plow. 434. 2. An Averment lieth of Uses upon a Fine, or Common Recovery. So if a Fine be levied to A. the son of B. and he hath two sons of this name; or a Fine be levied of the Manor of D. and he that doth levy it, hath two Manors of that name; an Averment lieth, which Son or Manor is intended, Co. 8. 155.

2. Where a Fine is levied upon a Grant, and render, no other use can be Averred, but what is expressed within the Fine, Dyer 311.

3. Hence it is, that no Averment may be received against such Certificates, as are a Definitive Tryal of the thing certified; as when the Bishop did certify Excommunication, Bastardy, or lawful Marriage, &c. Broo. 312. Coos. 7. 14. 9. 31. But an Averment doth lie, and shall be received against a Certificate, which is onely to give Information, and in the nature of a Tryal. So it will lie against a Certificate, upon a Commission out of any Court. So it may be received against the Certificate of Commissioners that affirm a Man to be a Bankrupt, Co. 7. 14. 8. 121.

Against a Certificate.

4. The same Law is for a Return, if it be such a Return as is a Definitive Tryal of the thing returned, no Averment lieth against it. As the Return of a Sheriff upon his Writs, the Return of the Major, Aldermen, and Sheriffs of London, upon a Writ of Habeas Corpus sent to them, and the like. But if it be such a Return as is not Definitive, as upon a Rescous, or the like; in these cases an Averment may be had, and upon this it may go to Tryal. So also if it be a Return to endanger a mans life, or his Inheritance; an Averment may be had against it, Dyer 348. 177. So also it lieth against the Returns of the Bailiffs of Franchises, so that the Lords be not prejudiced in their Franchises thereby, Stat. 1 Edw. 3. 3. Goldsb. 139. 129. pl. 23.

Upon a Return.

For the Averment against a Will, or Administration, or against, or upon any thing within it; these things are to be known.

1. That an Averment lieth against a Testament, or Letters of Administration, although they be under Seal of the Court; and it shall be tryed by the Country.

2. Any Averment may be upon a Will, or any part of it that may help to expound a Will; and of such a thing as may stand with the Will, and may be collected out of the words thereof. As if a Man have two Sons of one name, and one of them long absent, and thought to be dead being the eldest; and he give his Land to his Son, in general, and the eldest is alive; in this case an Averment doth lie, That it was intended to the yongest, and not to the eldest Son; and upon a Tryal the Jury may finde it so, Co. 8. 31. 41. Plow. 277. Dyer 244.

3. But an Averment will not lie of any thing that is against, or besides that which is expressed in the Will; nor of any thing that cannot be gathered to be the minde of him that made the Will, by the words thereof; nor of any thing that doth not cohere with the Will, especially if the Devise be about Lands. And therefore if one Devise to A. and the Heirs of his body, the Remainder to B. and the Heirs Males of his body, on condition, that he or they, or any of them shall not Alien, &c. In this case no Averment shall be taken to prove by Witnesses, that it was the intent of the Devisor to include A. within this Condition, by the words, He or they, &c. So neither can an Averment be taken, that the intent was to give it to another, besides the Devisee, Co. 5. 68. 4. 4.

An Averment may be had against any part of the Rolls, or Records of County Courts, Hundred Courts, or Courts Baron; as that there is no such Record, or it is not so as it is certified, 34 H. 6. 42. 9 Ed. 4. 4.

If the matter contained in an Award, and the matter contained in the Submission, do not agree; it will hardly be supplied by Averment, Dyer 242. 52.

No Averment or Proof is to be admitted against Common Presumption of Law; as that when any Acquittance is made of the last Rent, that yet there was more Rent then behinde, Co. upon Littl. 373. Nor against common Reason, as that Land doth belong to a Messuage, &c. Plow. 170.

An Averment may be of an use upon any Feoffment, Fine, or Common Recovery. See for this and the rest, more in my Book of Common Assurances, Chap. 3. Numb. 4.

Where Averment is necessary, or not.

If the Defeasance of a Recognisance be dated before the Recognisance, if in this case use be made of it, it must be averred to be delivered, at or after the time of the Recognisance entred into, Perk. chap. 147.

The Executor of a Grantee of a Rent, or Reversion, Expectant upon an Estate for life, cannot Avow his desires without Averment; that the Arrearages incurred after the death of the Tenant for life, Adjudged.

But things that are apparant, or necessarily intendable by Law, need not be Averred: Manifesta non probatione indigent, quod constat clare non debet verificare. Co. 111. 25. Plow 8.

See more of Averment in Actions of the Case, throughout; in Contract, throughout.

CHAP. XXIII.

Of Ancestors.

Self. 1.
Ancestors, what.

Ancestors are our Forefathers, or Predecessors that went before us, who in relation to them, are called their Successors. But this word in the Law, hath special relation to such a Successor as is an Heir also to his Predecessor, and is especially applied to Inheritances that descend from one man to another.

An Action-Auncestell, is such an Action as is brought when as a stranger hath entred upon him after the dying, seised of his Ancestor.

It is a Writ which lieth where Land descendeth from the Grand-father to his Nephew, the Son or Daughter of the Son of the Grand-father, the Father being dead, before any Entry made by him; and one that hath no right abateth, (i.) Entreth, then the Heir may have against him this Writ, New Terms of Law.

Besaille, what.

It is a Writ that lieth where Land descendeth from a Great Grand-father, or Grand-mother, and a stranger entreth first, and keepeth out the Heir, then he may have against him this Writ, F. N. B. 231.

Cofinage, what.

It is a Writ, and lieth where the Great Grand-father, the Grand-father's Father, or other Cousin dieth, seised in Fee-simple, and a stranger abateth, (i.) Entreth into the Lands, then the Heir may have against him, or his Heir (if he be dead) or his Alienee, or against whomsoever after, that cometh to the Lands, Terms Ley.

Self. 2.
Mort-Daunces-ter, what.

It is a Writ, and lieth where the Father, Mother, Brother, Sister, Uncle, or Aunt die, seised of Land in Fee-simple, and a stranger entreth into before the Heir, then he may have this Writ, Terms of the Law.

Nuper obiit, what.

It is a Writ, and lieth where a Man hath many Heirs, either Daughters that be Parceners, or Sons in Gavelkinde, and dieth, seised, and one entreth into all, and keepeth the other out; in this case, he or they, that be kept out, may have this Writ against the Coheir that is in, Terms of the Law.

Rationabili Parte, what.

Rationabili Parte is a Writ, and lieth where an Ancestor was once seised, and made a Lease for life, and dieth, and after the Lessee for life dieth; so that the Ancestor did not die, seised of the possession, but of the Reversion, and one of the Heirs entreth into all, and keepeth out the rest, then he or they that are kept out, may have this Writ. Terms of the Law. See more hereof in my second Part of the Marrow of the Law, Pag. 192.

CHAP. XXIV.

Of Ancient Demesne.

Ancient Demesne is a certain Tenure, or holding of Land in the nature of Soccage of divers Manors within this Countrey, which are entered in Doomsday Book in the Exchequer, under the Title of Terra Regis. Terms of the Law.

Ancient Demesne, what.

Burrow English is a kinde of Tenure in the nature of Soccage, whereby some Burroughs of the Kingdom, do hold of the King or some other great Lord, paying onely a certain Rent, F.N.B. 6.

Burrow English, what.

Gavelkinde is a Tenure, and holding of certain Land in Kent, in the nature of Soccage, where by their Custom they have many Privileges that men elsewhere have not. Terms of the Law. See for these three things in my Second Part of the Marrow of the Law, pag 19.

Gavelkinde, what.

This came from Gavelkinde, and it is a special and ancient kinde of Cessavit used in Kent, where the Custom of Gavelkinde is. By which the Tenant forfeits his Lands to the Lord, of whom they were held, if he with-hold his Services, Fitz. Cessavit. 60.

Gaveler, what.

This is a Writ, lying where the Lord distraineth a Tenant in Ancient Demesne, for other Services then are due; then he may have this Writ to prohibite him, F.N.B. 14.

Monstraverunt, what.

CHAP. XXV.

Of Avowry.

Avowry is where one doth distrain another for Rent, or other cause, and the party distrained, sueth a Replevin against the taker, and then he doth in his Plea the lawful taking of them, shew why he took them; this is called an Avowry, Co. 9. 135. Westm. 2. 2.

Set. 1. Avowry, what.

Replevin is, where a man distraineth another mans Goods and Chattels, then the party distrained, upon giving security to the Sheriff, or his Deputy, that he will pursue the Action and return the Beasts again, if the taking shall be judged lawful, may have this Writ to the Sheriff. And if it be in a Franchise, the Sheriff may send to the Bailiff of the Franchise to do it, Terms of the Law, Co. upon Littl. 145. See Stat. Marlb. 31. Westm. 2. 2.

Replevin, what.

Gage Deliverance is, where one hath sued a Replevin, and yet hath not the Goods delivered, and the other avoweth: Now he may shew this in pleading, That the Defendant is still possessed of the Goods, and pray, that he may put in pledges for the Deliverance, which when they come to Issue, or Demurrer shall be granted him, and then a Writ shall go to the Sheriff, to deliver them. But where the Avowant doth claim property in them; this is not grantable. Terms of the Law. Finch. 120.

Gage Deliverance, what.

Retorno Habendo is, a Writ that lieth after a Replevin is brought, the Plaintiff maketh default, being non-suit, before Declaration, or the like, or Judgment is given against him; then he that distrained the Beasts, may have this Writ, and thereby have the Beasts delivered to him again. *Terms of the Law. taken, doth Esloyn the Cattle, or carrieth them out of the County, or keep them in some Castle; so that the Sheriff cannot make a Replevin or Retorno Habendo (as the Case is.) In this Case the party grieved, may have this Writ to the Sheriff, commanding him to take so much of the parties own Goods who hath done this, instead of them: And he may take the Posse Comitatus, and break it, and replevie them.

F. N. B. 73.

Second Deliverance and Return Irreplevisable, what.

This Second Deliverance is, a Writ lying where one doth remove a Plaintiff out of the County-Court or Court-Baron, by Pone or Recordare, into the Common-Bench, and after the Plaintiff in the Replevin is non-suited before any Avowry made; this notwithstanding the party that distrained, may have again the same Distress by this Writ, which is onely to revive the first Suit, and the Defendant cannot have a Recaption in this case, for a double Distress; and after this Writ had, and tryal thereupon, or that the Plaintiff be again Non-suit before Declaration Return Irreplevisable, must be awarded to the Avowant.

Recaption, what.

Recaption is a Writ lying where a man is distrained for any Service, and hanging this Suit, he is distrained again for the same cause; in this case, albeit it be for services due, after the first Distress, yet he cannot distrain again till the first Suit ended, and if he do, the party grieved hath this Remedy.

Proprietary Probanda, what.

Proprietary Probanda is a Writ lying where the Sheriff is coming to make a Replevin, by Writ or without Writ, before or after Gager de Deliverance, and the party who distraineth, doth claim some property in them; so that the Sheriff can go no further in the Replevin, till this point be decided, which must be by this Writ. But for all this, and the rest within this Chapter, See in my Book of the Marrow of the Law, i Part. Chap. 35. And see Distress in this Book.

CHAP. XXVI.

Of Authority.

1. Authority.

It is a power to do something; and this power in some Cases is by the Common Law: As power is given to a man to enter orderly into an Ale-house or Inn; to demolish Houses in a City, to prevent the increase of a Fire, or to fortifie it in a time of Siege. And in some Cases it is by the Statute Laws; as power is given to a Tenant in Tail, or in right of his Wife, to make Leases for three lives, or one & twenty years: So power is given to a Tenant in Capite to Devise two parts in three parts of his Capite Lands, Dyer 36: 12 Ed. 4. 8. Perk 191. Co. 1: 111. 173. Plow. 290. a. So to Arrest in divers Cases; for which see Imprisonment.

This power also is sometimes given by one man to another. And this is sometimes by word, and sometimes by writing; that which is by writing, is either by Precept, Writ, Warrant, Commission, Letter of Attorney, Provifo in a Deed to make Leases, revoke Uses, or the like. See the Examples.

2. The Nature of it.

The nature of this is such, 1. That it is not grantable over by him that hath it. 2. It must be strictly pursued. 3. It dieth with the parties, and doth not go to Executors; for which, see the Cases beneath, Co. 81. 46.

3. Licence.

This hath much affinity with the former; for it is defined to be, A leave and liberty to do, or commit something that otherwise ought not to be done; or omit something, that otherwise ought to be done, but now by this means is become lawful and justifiable, and may be pleaded in defence and excuse of the Commission or Omission, if the party be questioned for it. And it is distinguished and regulated much like to the former, and therefore the Rules and Cases of one, are in many cases applicable to the other; this therefore is also sometimes said to be given by the Law:

As

As for a Traveller to enter into an Inn or Ale-house; a Lessor to enter into the House leased, to view the Reparations and Decays, and sometimes it is given by the party, by one man to another; and that sometimes in writing, and sometimes by word onely.

And both these ways it is sometimes general, and sometimes special. There seems then no real difference between Authority and it, but that they may be (as they seem to be) confounded and taken one for another: Howsoever, Licence is most commonly applied to an act done, that otherwise had been unlawful; and by this the party that did it, is excused, but Authority to acts that are lawful, which thereby are justified by the doer; and this in some cases is more compulsoy then the other. Bro. Trespass 97. Co. II. II. 9 Ed. 4. 4. Bro. Licence 79. Fitz. Trespass 92.

The Licences that are had from the Lord Protector, especially those that are to privilege a man from the danger of a Penal Law, are called Dispensation; for a Dispensation is a kinde of Licence to transgress, or exemption from the danger of a Penal Law, which the Lord Protector in some special cases, to avoid inconvenience, by his Prerogative doth and may give or grant to some person. Also the Licences of Ecclesiastical Persons that were somewhat of this nature, and they had it by a derivative Prerogative from the King, were sometimes called by this name. But the most proper and peculiar term to set forth this kinde of Dispensation is a Faculty, which is defined to be a privilege or especial Power or Licence granted unto a man by favor, indulgence, and dispensation to do that which by the Law otherwise he could not do: As to eat flesh upon the days prohibited; to hold two or more Benefices, or the like. And that Dispensation which is granted to a Clerk, that being uncapable, is made capable, and de facto admitted to it, is called a Perinde valere, which name it had from the words which make the faculty as effectual to the party dispensed with, at the time of the Admission: And for the granting of these Faculties, there was a special Officer appointed under the Arch-Bishop of Canterbury called the Master of the Faculties, Co. II. 86, 88. Stat. 25 H. 8. 21.

Dispensation.

Perinde valere:

An Authority given by the Sheriff to his Bailiffs to arrest, is good, though it be an Authority derived out of an Authority: An Authority or Power however set up, if it be unlawful, is not good. And therefore in 16. 17 Car. II. it is enacted, That no new Court that hath the like, that the High Commission pretended to have, shall be hereafter erected. And that all such Jurisdictions, and all Acts, Sentences, and Decrees made by colour thereof, shall be utterly void.

A Verbal Authority from a Justice of Peace to any man, to apprehend another to finde Sureties for the Peace, when he is there present, and doth break the Peace before him, is good.

What Authority shall be said to be good.

The King in some cases may authorize a man to do a thing, which is Malum prohibitum onely, and not Malum in se, 1 H. 7. 3. 3 H. 7. 15. 11 H. 7. 11, 12. vide infra.

Where a Justice of Peace by word, commands one being present to arrest another, which is also in his presence, this is good, and is reputed as an arrest made by the Justice himself, 14 H. 7. 8, 9.

Arrest.

In Case of Ryotors, a Justice of Peace may by word, command his servants to arrest them in the absence of the Justice, 14 H. 7. 9, 10.

Grant.

A man that hath his Authority by Record, cannot grant it over without writing, unless it be to arrest a person that is present; as in the cases before, 10 H. 7. 17.

An Authority given by a Bailiff to another Bailiff to arrest a man, is not good: So if one have a power to make Leases, and grant it to another, this is not good: For regularly, neither Licences nor Authorities are grantable over. Poulton de Pace 19.

Seisin.

A Verbal Authority onely to surrender the Lease for years, is not good, though he deliver him the Lease also. Sleigh versus Bateman, Hil. 17. Eliz. B. R.

A Verbal Authority to deliver Seisin, is not good without writing: Neither is an Authority in writing, to deliver Seisin after the death of either of the parties good, for it is against Law, Co. super Littl. 52.

An Authority given to another to do that which he himself cannot do, is not good. Quod per me non possum, non per alium. Co. 11. 87.

A Verbal Authority by a Justice of Peace to a Gaoler, whereby a Prisoner is sent to Gaol, it seems is not good. It is safe for Justices of Peace to send their Warrant in writing, and therein to insert the cause of the commitment. Wodden, vide Baker.

An Award that the parties shall obey the Arbitrement of an other, is void; for power cannot be assigned, 8 Ed. 4. 19.

A Verbal Authority to receive Seisin, is not good without Deed, Co. super Littl. 48.

Arrest.

If a Capias be directed to the Sheriff to arrest a man which doth dwell within a Franchise, the Bailiff of the Franchise cannot arrest him without a Warrant from the Sheriff in writing, Vide Commandment infra.

6. When an Authority is well pursued,
or not.

Although it be a rule of Law, that every Authority that is given by Act of Law, or act of the party, must be strictly pursued, or else it is said to be done without Authority; yet when more is done, or when it is done by more persons then be in the Authority; in many cases it is good enough, and it shall be said a sufficient pursuit of the Authority notwithstanding: As whereby the Statute of 32 H. 8. the Tenant in Capite hath power to Devise two parts in three parts of his Land; yet if he Devise all, it is good for two parts. An Assignment of Debt was to the Queen, provided, That if the Lord Treasurer, or the Barons of the Exchequer, or any two of them do revoke, &c. And after three Barons do revoke it, this is good. Omne majus continet minus, Plow. 393.

make Leases.

If a greater number of persons do a thing then are appointed by a Statute (unless the Statute do purposely restrain the number) it seems it is well enough done as where more do sit in the Star-chamber, then are mentioned in the Statute of 3 H. 7. 1. Quando plus fit quam fieri debet, videtur & id fieri quod fieri debetur.

If a Statute give power to make Leases, so as they do not exceed three lives, or twenty one years (as the Statute of 32 H. 8. is.) In this case, if one Lease for two lives, or for ninety nine years, if three lives so long live, this is a good pursuit of the Authority: But if the word of the Statute be, that they shall make Leases for three lives, or twenty one years; in this case, a Lease for twenty years, or two lives is not good, Co. 6. 33, 35. 8. 70.

If one make a Lease for life, and a Letter of Attorney to deliver the possession to the Lessee, and the Attorney deliver possession to the Attorney of the Lessee; this is a good pursuit of his Authority. Finches 66.

If a Deed be made of two Acres, and a Letter of Attorney to deliver Seisin in both Secundum formam chartæ, and the Attorney enter into one Acre onely, and give Seisin Secundum formam chartæ; this is a good pursuit of the power, and a good Livery for both, and that though he did not deliver it to one in the name of both: So when a Feoffment is to two or three, and the Warrant to give Livery so, and he do it to one Secundum formam chartæ; this is good to both, and yet the absent party may waive the Livery, Co. super Littl. 52.

If one Devise his Land to his Executors to be sold, and one of them die, the surviving Executor may sell it, Co. super Littl. 181.

If a Venire Facias be sent to four Coroners, to impanel and return a Jury, and one of them die, and the Survivors execute it, it is good. Idem.

If the Sheriff upon a Writ make a Warrant to four Bailiffs joynly, or severally to arrest, and two or three of them arrest the party; this is a good pursuit of the Authority, Pasc. 45 Eliz. B. R. King and Hobbs.

Self. 2.
To Claim.

If one give another an Authority to make a claim, and he come to any part of the Land, and there make claim, &c. in the name of his Master &c. this is good. So if the Master say to his Servant, that he dares not come to the Land, or any part of

of it, to make his claim, &c. And that he dare approach no neerer to the Land, then such a place called Dale, and command his Servant to go to that place, and there make his claim for him; this is good, although it may be the Servant durst to have gone further. So if a man be sick, and not able to go out of doors, and have cause to enter, and he command his Servant to go to the Land, and make his claim for him; and the Servant fearing, &c. dareth not go to the Land, but goeth as near as he can or dare, and there claimeth for his Master; this is good. Impotentia excusat legem. Littl. Sess. 433, 434.

And for the most part it is true, where a man doth that which he is authorized to do, and more; there it is good for that which he had Authority to do, and void for the rest, Co. super Littl. 252.

And therefore if a Letter of Attorney be to make Livery to one, and he make Livery to two; it is good to him to whom the Warrant extends, and void to the other, Perk. 39. a. To make Livery of Seisin.

So if it be to make Livery of Warrant, and he makes Livery of Warrant, and Bargain; it is good for Warrant. Ibid.

If a Letter of Attorney be to deliver Seisin to two, and one of them dieth, and he makes Livery to the other; it is good to him for the whole, Ibid.

If a Letter of Attorney be thus. I make A. and B. my Attorney and Attorneys for me, and in my name to enter on the Land, and there to deliver the writing as my Deed, ratifying and confirming whatsoever my Attorneys, or either of them, shall do concerning the premises, and one of the Attorneys doth, and it was held good by two Judges in 11 Car. B. R.

Regularly when a man doth less then the Commandment or Authority committed to him, there (the Authority being not pursued) the Act is void, unless it be in some special Cases, supra. So where he doth it otherwise, then his Authority doth direct him; and therefore an Authority cannot be apportioned: As where the Statute of 32 Eliz. 34. doth give a man power, that is seised of Soccage and Capite Land, to Devise or dispose two parts for the benefit of his Wife, &c. And a man being seised of two Acres of Capite Land, and one in Soccage, dispose his two Acres to such purposes: Now he cannot Devise the other Acre at his death, and if he do, it is void. Co. super Littl. 258. Co. 3. 34. 2. 26. Apportionment.

So likewise is the Law for the power of Commissioners upon the Statute, 13 El. 7.

If two Attorneys have a joynnt power to do any thing, and one alone doth it in the name of the other, and him; this is not good. As if a Letter of Attorney be made to two joynntly to take Livery of Seisin, and one of them doth take it; this is void. Co. 5. 24. 95. & super Littl. 49. b.

If an Authority be given to three, to do any thing joynntly or severally, and two of them do it in the absence of the third; Norths Case, M. 4 Jac. B. R. Or one of them and a stranger do it; this is not good, Co. 5. 90. Dyer 51.

If one willeth that A. B. and C. his Feoffees shall sell his Land; and one of them die, and the Survivors sell it; or if he willeth it shall be sold by the advice of A. and A. die, and they sell it without advice; this is not good. Dyer 177. 190. 214.

If in the Star-Chamber, the Chancellor, Treasurer, and Gardian of the Privy-Seal, or two of them, had not taken with them a Temporal Lord, a Bishop, and the two Chief Justices, according to the Statute of 3 H. 7. 1. Their Judgments had not been good, 3 H. 7. 1. 8 H. 7. p. ultimo. 16. 233.

If one Auditor commit a man that is an Accomptant to prison, upon the Statute of Westm. 2. cap. 12. This is not good nor warrantable, Plow. 394.

If a Commission be to eight persons joynntly to hear and determine, seven of them cannot do it, Ibid.

If a Warrant be to an Attorney to deliver Seisin generally, and he do it in view; this is no pursuit of the Authority, and therefore void, Co. super Littl. 52.

If a Writ be to the Sheriffs of London to do any thing, and one of them be dead, the other cannot execute it.

If any Authority be to deliver Seisin to V. or S. and to make Livery to V. and S. This is not good, nor pursuant of the Authority, 11 H. 7. 13. Feoffments, B. 6. 43.

If I command one to make a Feoffment in my name in Latine, according to a Copy shewed him, and he make it in Englisch or French; this is not good, 10 H. 7. 9.

Felony.

If one Sheriff be commanded to hang a man, and he behead him; this is not good, but Felony in the Sheriff, 35 H. 6. 38.

A. is disseised of Bargain and Warrant, A. makes a Warrant of Attorney to B. to enter in both, and to make, Livery there, if B. enters in Bargain onely, and make Livery Secund. Form. Chanc. It is a void Livery, Co. super Littl. 52. a.

If a Letter of Attorney be to make Liveries after the death of a stranger, and he makes Livery in his life, it is void, 40 Aff. p. 38.

If a Letter of Attorney be to deliver Seisin to H. upon condition, and the Attorney deliver it absolute, this is void, 11 H. 4. 3. a.

If a Letter of Attorney be absolute, and the Attorney delivers Seisin upon condition, this is naught, 12 Aff. p. 24. Adjudged.

7. Where an Authority is revocable, and when it shall be said to be determined, and when not.

All Authorities for the most part are revocable, and may determine by the Act of God, (i.) the death of him that gives it, or the death of him to whom it is given; or the Act of the party that doth give, (i.) when he doth actually revoke it himself before the thing be done. And therefore if an Authority be given to two or more joyntly to do a thing, and one of them die, nay in this case the Authority is determined. And if I deliver money, or other thing to J. S. to deliver over, or to give away, and before it be done, I forbid him to deliver; in this case his Authority is determined, Dyer 190. Co. 5. 90. Dyer 190.

But if there be an interest coupled with the Authority, there it will not, nor can be countermanded by any such Act of God, or the party: As where one doth Devise his Land to his Executors, until his son be of full age, and that they shall sell it; in this case they, or some of them die, yet the rest may sell it, and so in all like cases.

If one make two Executors, and Devise that his Land shall be sold by his Executors, and one of them die, it seems the other cannot sell; otherwise it is where an interest is devised also.

If one make a Letter of Attorney to two to give Livery, and one of them die, the other cannot do it; no more then where an Office of Stewardship is granted to two men, can one of them execute it, Goldsb. 2. pl. 4.

So where an Authority is once executed, it cannot afterwards be revoked by any means, Dyer 210. 24. Perk. 105. Co. 5. 90. b.

An Authority also may determine by other Accidents: As if an Administration be granted to me during the minority of four Infants, and one of them become of full age, it seems in this case the Authority is determined, Co. 5. 9.

Self. 3.
Notice.
Countermand.

See more of this point in Countermand; and note that always in case of Countermand of Authority, there must be notice, otherwise the Countermand is not good. And therefore if a Factor, Attorney, or the like, or any other Arbitrator or Commissioner, have a Countermand made them, whereof they have no notice; this doth not determine their Authority, Co. super Littl. 55. b. Co. 8. 82. 21 H. 6. 29.

1. Commission.

It is the Warrant or Letters Patents from the Lord Protector, testifying, that one or many have some Authority in a matter of Trust committed to their charge: As to hear and determine any Cause or Causes, to examine Witnesses, Purvey, and take up provision for him, or the like. And they that are thus trusted, and in Authority, by vertue of this Commission, are called Commissioners, Terms of the Law, 11 H. 4. cap. 28.

Quotuplex.

8. Where Commissions are grantable, and what things may be done by Commission, or not.

By Common Law.

And some of these are to hear and determine offences, and other matters, and require no Return. And some are to enquire, or examine, and to certify what is found, and they must be returned. And some are to seise Lands, Goods, &c. Stat. 4 H. 4. cap. 9.

By the Common Law, Commissions are grantable in divers cases, and almost in any case by those Courts, that proceed by that course of Examination of matters by Commissions: Also all the great Officers, Judicial and Ministerial of the Realm, are made by Commission. By this means, are and may Treasons, Felonies, and other offences be examined, discovered, heard and determined. By this means may be, and are are Oaths, Conu fance of Fines, Offices found, Subsidies and Fifteenths be taxed, and many other things be done as occasion shall require, as to examine Witnesses, take Answers, and the like, Bro. Commiss. in toto, Stat. 35 H. 8. 2. 2 & 3. Pl. & M. 1. 10 R. 2. 1.

But Commissions may not be granted against Law, as to take and imprison mens bodies, to enter upon their Lands, or take their Goods without order of Law, and if any such be granted, they are void, and do create no Authority, Bro. Commission. 3. 15. Just. 6.

By Statute Laws also, Commissions are grantable in diuers cases, and diuers things may and are to be done by Commission. As the finding of Offices after the death of the Kings Tenant, Stat. 1 H. 8. 8. By Statute Law.

To enquire of the employment of Lands or moneys, that have been given to publick and charitable uses, and to set down orders for it, 43 Eliz. 2. 4.

To examine parties and witnesses for any sums of money, that have been gathered for Houses of Correction, or Stocks to set poor on work, and to get it into their hands, 39 Eliz. 4.

To hear and determine Policies of Assurances made amongst the Merchants, 43 Eliz. 12.

To enquire of misdemeanors of Purveyors in taking of Provision, 36 Ed. 3. 4.

To enquire of a Riot that hath been done, and the neglect of the Justice of Peace, and Sheriff therein, 2 H. 5. 8.

To enquire of Servants that imbezel their Masters Goods after their death, and to make Proclamation that they appear and answer it, 33 H. 6. 1.

Also a Commission may be had to grant Licences, and Faculties in some cases, 25 H. 8. 21.

Also Commissions may, and must be had to determine Appeals from the Admirals Court, 25 H. 8. 19.

Also to hear and determine Offences done upon the Sea, 28 H. 8. 15:

And Treasons done beyond the Seas, 35 H. 8. 2. 5 Ed. 6.

And to hear and determine Offences confessed before the Council, 33 H. 8. 23, & 11.

And to enquire of the Account of the Officers and Accomptants of the Lord Protector, which they have made in the Exchequer, whether the same be right or no, 6 H. 4. 3.

And to enquire, hear, and determine of all matters, against true and safe Conducts upon the main Sea, 2 H. 5. 6.

For Reformation of Weers and Banks, and to prevent the inundation of great Waters; a Commission may be had out of Chancery, called the Commission of Sewers, Co. Io. 138. Commission of Sewers.

The form whereof, and all that doth concern it, and the execution of it, See in Stat. 6 H. 6. 5. 8 H. 6. 3. 23 H. 6. 9. 23 H. 8. 5. 3 & 4 Ed. 6. 8. 13 Eliz. 9.

Also Commissions are grantable, and have been made and had. To enquire and compound for first Fruits. To enquire of the value of each living Spiritual, and the deductions and payments out of the same. And to enquire of Chantry Lands. And to end Suits for small debts in the City of London. Stat. 5 Eliz. 1. 26 H. 8. 3: 26 H. 8. 3. 1 Ed. 6. 13. 3 Jac. 15.

But no Commissions of general Inquiries within Seigniories shall be had or sued forth, Stat. 34 Ed. 3. 1.

No Commissions shall be granted by Temporal Judges, to enquire of the proceedings by Spiritual Judges, Stat. 18 Ed. 3. 6.

All the Commissions for the great Offices of the Realm, are made by the Lord Protector under the Great Seal of England. So all Commissions of Oyer and Terminer of the great Offences by the Common Law. And so all other Commissions to examine Witnesses, take the Cognizance of a Fine, or to do any other matter for the furtherance of Justice in any matter whatsoever comes in the Lord Protectors name, though it be grantable by the Court, where the matter is depending Ex Officio. See the Commissions. 9. By whom they must be granted, or not.

Sec. 4.

All the Commissions come in the Lord Protector's name: The Commissions for finding of Offices come out of the Chancery: The Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaster, for the Lands within the Dutchy, under the Seal of the Dutchy: The Lord Chancellor under the great Seal of England doth grant Commission for charitable Uses: The Lord Chancellor of England doth grant the Commission out of the Chancery to enquire of the money gathered for the Poor; to also he doth that for the policy of Assurance: The Commission against Purveyors is granted, as other Commissions are, out of the Chancery; and so also is the next about Riot: The Commission against Servants for goods of their Masters imbezeled, is granted by the Lord Chancellor, with the advice of one of the chief Justices, and chief Baron, or two of them: The Commission for granting of Faculties is granted as other Commissions are granted; so likewise the Commission to determine Appeals: In all the three cases of the tryall of Offenders, the Commission is granted by the Lord Protector, as other Commissions are: The Commission to examine the Accompts of his Officers, it seems is to come out of the Exchequer: And the Commission for safe Conducts is granted by him and the Admirall. See the Stat. before Cap. 97. a.

10. To whom they may, and must be granted, or not. And who may be Commissioners.

The Commissions for the great Offices, and for Oyer and Terminer of Officers, are grantable to any person that is not disabled by some special Law, to whom it please the Lord Protector: And other commissions out of the Courts in their ordinary proceedings, are grantable to whomsoever the Courts will appoint, Stat. 3. fac. 5. See Stat. 42 Ed. 3. 4.

Any may be Commissioners, unless by some Statute they be restrained. In case of finding of Offices, none may be Commissioners, but such as have forty Marks per Annum of Land: In the Commission for charitable Uses, the Bishop of the Diocels if there be any, and his Chancellor, and other sufficient persons whom the Lord Chancellor shall name, so that there be four at least: In that for the enquiry of Money gathered for stocks to set the Poor on work, whomsoever the Lord Keeper will name may be Commissioners: In that for the policy of Assurances, the Judge of the Admiralty, the Recorder of London, two Doctors of the Civill Law, two common Lawyers and eight grave Merchants, or any five of them, must be Commissioners, and may execute it: In the Commission against Purveyors, one of the Lord Protector's house, and two others sufficient men, shall be Commissioners, and any two of them, and they may execute it: In the Commission to enquire of the Riot, &c. any may be Commissioners whom the Lord Protector or his Chancellor will appoint: The Commission or writ against Servants is to the Sheriff of the County: In the Commission for granting of Faculties, two spirituall Prelats or others the Lord Protector shall name, must be Commissioners: In the Commission for tryall of Appeals, there must be such Commissioners as the Lord Protector will name: In the Commission for tryall of Offenders: in the first case it must be to the Admirall, his Lieutenant or Deputy, and three or four such as the Lord Chancellor shall name: And in the second and third case, to such persons as the Lord Protector shall appoint: The Commission to examine the accompts of Accomptants, is grantable to whom the Lord Protector, or his Barons of the Exchequer will name: And the commission for safe Conducts, may, and must be granted to the Conservator of the Truce, and to two men learned in the Law, See the statutes before.

All Commissions to enquire of Articles, shall be made to the Justices of the one Bench or the other, or Justices of Assise, or of the place, and other worthy men of the Country, Stat. 42 Ed. 3. 4.

In every Commission of the peace for Gaol-delivery, there must be two men of the Law of the County-Commissioners to deliver the prisoners, Stat. 17. R. 2. 10.

11. The power authority and duty of such Commissioners so made. Charitable Uses.

The power of Commissioners is to do what by their Commission they are commanded to do, and therein also is included authority to doe all that without which that other thing cannot be done: And their duty is first to receive the Commission, and then to execute it; and therein to pursue the authority and direction of the Commission, and faithfully to perform the effect of it; and then to make a due and a true Certificate or Return thereof when the Commission doth so require: But if the Commission be against Law, the Commissioners are not bound to accept or obey it; vide vide supra. And if they doe any thing they have not authority for by their Commission, it is void, and for so much it is as if no such Commission were, Co. super Littl. 157 b. Co. 2. 25.

The authority of Commissioners by statute Laws, is such as the statutes give them, and their duty such as the Statutes prescribe: As in the case of finding of Offices, they are to sit in open places, and let every man to give evidence that will: In the case of charitable Uses, they must by a Jury, and all other ways they can, having the parties and witnesses before them, labour to search out the matter, and set down Orders for the employment of the Gift, and certify their doings in Chancery; and if any be grieved by their Order, he must complain there: In the last case of charitable Uses, they may compell by Attachment of their Goods or Bodies, any to accompt; they shall suspect to have any such Sums in their hands, and force them to pay to them what they finde by sale of their Goods, or imprisonment of their Bodies. In the case of Assurances between Merchants, they may hear and determine the matters, and for that purpose call, and compell the parties and their witnesses before them, and imprison them who will not obey their Orders; and if any be grieved by their Order, he must complain in Chancery: In the case against Purveyors, they may and must examine their doings, and punish their faults: In the case of the Riot and neglect of Officers, they are speedily to enquire of the Riot, and of the neglect of the Justices or other Officers in their duties, and to certify the same into the Chancery: In the commission against Servants for imbezeling, the Sheriff is to make open proclamation according to the direction of the same Commission, and to return the same: In the Commission for granting of Faculties, they may and must grant Faculties under their Seal, in such manner and order as the Archbishop ought to grant them: In the case of Appeals, they are to hear, and definitively to determine them: In the case of Tryall of Offenders, the Commissioners are to proceed against the Offenders by Indictment, arraignment, and such an Order of Tryall as by Law in ordinary cases is used: In the Commission for to examine the accompts of Officers, they must enquire, and certify to the Court the Receipts and Disbursements: In the commission of safe Conducts, the Commissioners may, and must hear and punish all Offences great and small, done against the Truce and safe conducts upon the main Sea, out of the body of any county. See the statutes before.

Stat. 5.

Commissioners in divers cases have power to make Bargains, Sales, Feoffments, and Leases of other mens Lands, and their acts therein are good and binding. For which see stat. 13 Eliz. 7. 2 & 3 Phil. & M. cap. 1. 1 Ed. 6. 14. 23 H. 8. 2. 5. 34 H. 8. 4. 43 Eliz. 2. 3, 4.

The faults of Commissioners in generall, are the omission or commission of any thing against their duty set down before:

12. Their faults and punishments.

1. To refuse a Commission being sent unto, and offered them, unless it be in case where a man is authorized by a speciall Law to refuse it, as the statute of 1 H. 8. 8.

2. To do any thing against or besides the contents thereof, or to neglect to doe any thing commanded and required by it.

3. Not to return or certify it when it is executed, and where the nature of it is such as it doth require a Return, Co. 2. 17. 25. 80 9. 77. stat. 7 H. 4. 11. so was it held in 2 Jac. B. R. stat. 4 H. 4. 9. 1 H. 8. 8. 7 H. 4. 11.

If a Commissioner to examine witnesses, will not suffer a witness to declare the whole Truth of matter pertinent to the question, and pursuing the Interrogatory; or if after he begin to examine, he have secret conference with the party, and take new direction from him: or before publication discover to either party any thing which is deposed on either side: or take gifts to encline to either side; or return not the true Depositions: or make not return of them at all: All these, and such like, are misdemeanors punishable, Co. 97. 1. 40 A. St. 33. F. N. B. 110. Moors case, 2 Jac. B. R.

Deposition: Examination.

And for all these defaults and misdemeanors in Commissioners, where by the Law there is no certain punishment set down, the Offenders were punished by Fine and Imprisonment in the Star Chamber; or in some cases in the same Court out of which the commission did issue: And where they do exceed their authority, in most cases they they may be punished, so as if no such commission were made, Coo. 9. stat. 4 H. 4. 9. Moor versus Foster.

For Actions of Trespass, or some other Action (as the case is) may be brought against the Commissioners, and such as act under them, as if no such Commission had been granted. So men have been sued, that have acted under the Commission of Bankrupts, under the Commission to Justices, to hear and end matters of Tithes, if they keep not within their compass, and act in an Arbitrary way.

But where any Statute doth set down any certain punishment, there the offender must bear that also: As a Commissioner to finde an Office, if he have not forty Marks per annum of Land, loseth twenty pound. And if he sit in secret places, or hinder the free giving of evidence, he loseth forty pound, and so of others. 2 Jac. B. R. Stat. 1 H. 8. 8. 25 H. 8. 10.

13. When a Commission shall be said to be determined, or not.
By a new Commission.

A Commission that is well made and granted, may determine and become void by divers means and ways: As sometimes by the granting of a new Commission, and that may be when it granted to the same persons; or when it is granted to others: As if a Justice of the Common Pleas be made Justice of the Upper Berch, though it be but for one time, and he surrender it the morrow after, the former Commission is determined: But if such a Justice be made Chief Baron, Justice of Oyer and Terminer, or of Gaol-delivery; this doth not determine the Patent. Littl. Broo. Sess. 498. Stat. 13 Eliz. 9.

If the Lord Protector grant to a Major and Communalty, and their Successors, to be Justices in such a place, and after grant to others to be Justices there; or if the latter Commission be granted to such as are dead, or it be void for any other cause; in these cases the former Commission doth continue: But if the latter Commission be granted but to one, and the first to four; or it be onely hac vice, it doth determine the former Commission, Litt. Broo. Sess. 569.

Notice.

If a Commission of Oyer and Terminer be granted to some persons, and after a Commission of Gaol-delivery is granted to others, this latter doth not determine the former, for these may stand together; but when the latter is contrary to the former, the former is determined. As if there be a Commission of the Peace, is granted to some, and after another Commission of the Peace granted to others; this doth determine the former: But in all these, and such like cases, there must be notice, Litt. Broo. Sess. 474. 509. and Broo. Commission 2. See Notice.

By Supersedeas.

If a Commission be granted to some persons to do a thing, and before execution, another doth come to countermand this; this is a Supersedeas to the first, if there be notice given of it, and whatsoever the Commissioners do upon the first, is void. And it seems the Lord Protector may determine an Authority given by a Commission under the Great Seal by a Privy Seal. Also he may at his pleasure by a Writ of Supersedeas out of the Chancery, determine any such Commission, and discharge the Commissioners, Broo. Commis. 13. Just. 24. Stat. 13 R. 2. 2. 23 H. 8. 5.

By death of the King.

By the death of the King, all Commissions and Patents of Officers, who were made onely by Patent, and had but a naked Authority, did determine, and were at an end; but such Officers as are made by Writ, and such as are so by grant: As if the King had granted to a Major and Communalty, and their Successors to be Justices; it seems these Patents do not determine, for in the last case it is not revocable. 4 Ed. 4. 44. Littl. Broo. 509.

By default of Adjournment.
By acceptance of a Dignity.

If the Justices sit by Commission, and do not adjourn it, the Commission is determined, Littl. Broo. Sess. 509.

If one be the Lord Protector's Steward by Commission, to keep his Courts, and after be made Justice; this doth not determine his first Patent: Yet if a man be Forester by Patent, and after be made Justice of the same Forest; this latter Patent doth determine the former, Broo. Offices 47.

If the Lord Protector's Remembrancer in the Exchequer be made of the Barons there; it seems this doth not determine his Patent before, Dyer 197. 47.

Sess. 6.

But if a Commission of the Peace be granted to J. N. and others, or J. N. be Justice of the Bank, and after he is made Knight; this doth not determine the Commission, nor his Authority, or Office in either case: So if a man learned in the Law, be be put in Commission, and after he is made Sergeant at Law, yet he doth remain in his Authority. Litt. Broo. Stat. 287. 309.

If any being Justices of Gaol delivery, Assize, or the Peace, or being any other of the Lord Protector's Commissions and fortune to be advanced to the Dignity of Duke, Archbishop, Marquis, Viscount, Baron, Bishop, Knight, Justice of the one Bench, or of the other, Sergeant at Law, or Sheriff, their former Commission shall continue notwithstanding. 1 Ed. 6. 7. Dyer 205. 209.

For other Commissioners, (i.) all the Officers of the Realm, and others. See Officers, Courts, Purveyors, Bankrupts, Fines, and other Titles.

This word is diversly applied; for sometimes it is applied to the Mandat of the Lord Protector, as in 14 Ed. 3. 14. The Justice shall not delay to do right and Law for any Commandment that shall come to them from the King, under the Great or Privy Seal, but shall proceed notwithstanding. By which Mandat, the King of his mere motion castrer a man into prison, and sometimes to the Mandat of Justices. And this is either absolute (i.) when of their own Authority, Wisdom, and Discretion, they commit any man to prison for a punishment; or Ordinary, when they commit one rather to be safely kept then for punishment; and in this last case the party committed is bailable. But this word doth most commonly signifie the offence of him that willet another man to do any thing contrary to Law, as Murder, Theft, &c. And is also frequently applied to any Commandment whatsoever; and so in many cases it serveth to give and make an Authority. Crompt. Jur. 91. 6. Terms of the Law, Stamps. Pleas of the Crown. f. 72. 73.

To make a Commandment good to Warrant the doing, or excuse the not doing of a thing; these things must concur.

1. He that doth it must have power in the thing.
2. The thing commanded to be done must be lawful.
3. The Commandment must be given in that manner, and order that Law requireth. 2 H. 7. 14.

A Verbal Commandment in most cases is sufficient, and as good as a Commandment in writing, unless it be in some special cases: As where it is given and made by a Corporation (for which see Corporation;) or where the Sheriff doth make Warrant to a Bailiff of a Franchise, or other Bailiffs to arrest a man: And some such other special cases, whereof see some in Authority, supra: Fa. Imprisonment 3. Subpena 1. 13 H. 7. 17. Broo. Trespas 288. Dyer 102. 83. 319. 12.

Any thing (for the most part) that a man may do by himself, he may do by another; and therefore the Commandment to do such a thing is good, and may be obeyed without danger: As to enter into or claim Land, seize Goods, demand Rent, or the like: Arresting of mens Bodies, attaching of their Goods, or the like, and this Commandment will excuse them: But if the thing commanded be unlawful, as when one doth command another to kill a man, or to seize another mans Goods: These are unlawful, and therefore such Commandments will not countenance such actions. And therefore if one doth command another to kill a man, or dispossess a man, or do a Trespas, both he that gives, and he that obeyeth the Commandment, shall be punished as all alike guilty. (See Patience Criminis.) See Dyer 102. 83. 173. 15. Kels. 89. 2 H. 7. 14. Doff. & Stu. 18.

By Magistrates and Officers that have power, a man may be commanded to arrest mens Bodies, Goods, &c. As if the Sheriff in doing of Execution commandeth me to help him; or an Officer to help keep the Peace; or a Justice of Peace to arrest Ryoters, or the like; these are good Commandments, and these all men must obey, or expect punishment for their refusal: And if I command my Servant to impound another mans Cattle, or drive them out of my Ground, I may command another to cut down my Trees upon mine own ground; these are good Commandments, and may be obeyed without danger of punishment; for this Commandment shall excuse, Fitz. Faun. Impr. 3. Trespas 253. Avowry 260. Broo. Trespas 53.

If I have a Warrant or Commission to Purvey for the Lord Protector, I may command another to do it, and it seems good. Fitz. Bar. 259.

If I being an Executor command another to seize the Goods of the Testator, and after I refuse, and another doth administer, yet the Commandment is good, and will excuse him against the Administrator. Fitz. Administ. 2. If I have cause to enter into, or make any Claim to any Lands, I may command any other to do it: And in this case, and such like of things done by another, the rule is, Qui per alium facit per seipsum facit. And in the case of Entry any man where the Entry is lawful, may of his own head, in the behalf of him that hath right of Entry, although he be an Infant that hath the cause of Entry, without any Commandment enter for him. 10 H. 7. 12.

The Commandment of an Infant in most cases is void, but he may at full age agree to a thing done before, which is ratum, for the Rule is, Omnis ratio mandatum equiparat: If he in Reversion command the Tenant for life to dig Clay or Gravel in the Land of the Tenant: This will not warrant nor excuse him, if I bring an Action of Waste for it. Perk. 3. 2 H. 7. 14.

If I suspect a man for Felony, and command another to arrest him; it seems this is not good, unless I be a Justice of Peace. See False Imprisonment. Br. False Impr. 14.

If I command one to take the Goods of J. S. and J. S. die, and make me his Executor; in this case I may sue him, for the taking of these goods, and my Commandment will not excuse him: So that, as in the case before, matter Ex post facto would not make a good Commandment void; so here it doth not make void Commandment good, 2 H. 7. 14.

And so generally, where an Authority had by a Commandment is good, there the Commandment is good, Et sic contra. See Authority, supra.

If a Lease be made of a House on Condition, that the Lessee shall not suffer any Woman great with child to abide in the house six moneths after warning given: Now if the Lessor contrary to this Condition, command the Lessee to suffer her there, he is not to obey it; for though he do it, by his Commandment, yet it will not excuse him: So if one be bound to me in an Obligation, with Condition to pay me money at a place and day, and I command him not to go there, to pay the money, if he do not, he forfeiteth his Obligation; but if I in this last case, or the Lessor in the first case, use any violence to keep him from coming thither, or to keep the Woman in this house, this will excuse. Fitz. Bar. 163. Covenant 31. Kelm. 60. If one be bound to pay me Rent on his Lease, and I command him to repair, and lay out some of the money, yet he must pay me the whole Rent, and this Commandment will not excuse him. But Fitz. Bar. 65. Fitz. Bar. 45. If one be bound in an Obligation with Condition to pay me money at the day, and I command him he shall not pay it to me; or that he shall keep it for money I ow him, it is said this will excuse him, and will be a good Plea in Bar to an Action upon the Obligation: So if I command him to pay it to another, to whom I ow money, some say this will excuse. But then I must plead payment to him by the hands of that other. Kelm. 60 b. Perk. 145. Broo. Condition 181.

Where a Court hath Jurisdiction of the Cause, and doth proceed inverso ordine, or erroneously, there the party that doth sue, and the Officer that doth execute the Process or Precept is excused: As if a Capias come out of the Common Pleas, and there is no Original; or a Sheriff send a Precept to a Bailiff, and hath no Writ; or a Justice of Peace make a Warrant to arrest a man that is not indicted. But if the Court have no Jurisdiction of the matter, and all the proceeding is Coram non iudice; here the Precept will not excuse, but it is as if there were no Process: And so it is if there be an Appeal of death in the Common Pleas, or a Capias come out of a Court Baron, or the like. Co. 10. 76. Plow. 394. Kelm. 66.

It is the lawful power and authority to execute and minister Laws; or the extent of the Authority of every Court. And this is either Ecclesiastical (i.) that which is limited to certain spiritual and particular cases, and the Court wherein these causes are handled, is called Forum Ecclesiasticum which is governed for the most part by the Civil and Canon Laws; or else it is Secular and general, and the Court wherein these causes are handled is called Forum Seculare, which is governed by the Common and General Law of the Realm. And for the deciding of all controversies, and distribution of Justice within the Realm, the Law hath provided these two distinct Jurisdictions, which it doth take care also to preserve and keep distinct and entire; and therefore it taketh order, they shall keep their bounds, and that one shall not incroach upon another. It doth not therefore permit the Temporal or Secular Courts to meddle with Spiritual matters; nor the Spiritual Courts to meddle with Temporal matters. If the Temporal Court meddle with Spiritual matters, as matter of Divorce, or Marriage, or the like, the Defendant in the suit may in some cases in the beginning of the suit, take exception thereunto, and desire of the Court that he may not be suffered to proceed in that matter which is not within their Jurisdiction, and thereupon it shall be staid; or if it go further, the proceeding is afterwards avoided as erroneous. And if the Spiritual Court meddle with Temporal matters, the party grieved may have a Prohibition out of the Secular Court, and by that means stop their proceeding there; for which look Prohibition. And in some cases, both the party that doth prefer the Suit, and the Judge of the Court that doth receive and allow it, be in danger of a Premunire; for which, see Premunire. Co. (super Lit. 96. a. b. 44 Ed. 3. 5. Cromps. Jur. 100. Fitz. & Broo. Jurisdiction in toto. 18 Ed. 3. 6. Co. 10. 76. Doff. & Stu. cap. 55. & cap. 31. 5 Ed. 4. 6.

The Secular Courts have also their limits which they must not pass. And therefore if a Suit be begun in one Court, the Consuance whereof doth properly belong to another; the party sued by exception in time may abate the suit and stay the proceeding there. And in some cases although he do not so, yet is the proceeding erroneous, and may be afterward for error avoided. And in some cases one of these Courts do by Writs or Commandments in the nature of Prohibitions, stop the proceeding in another. See Broo. & Fitz. Jurisdiction in toto Stat. 13 Rich. 2. 1.

And in some cases it doth fall out, that albeit, the Court have Jurisdiction of the matter, yet by reason of some Plea the Defendant hath pleaded, it is ousted of the Jurisdiction, and cannot proceed. As if in the Court of a Corporation, the Defendant plead a Foreign Plea that cannot be tried there. See Court and Officers.

A Licence is much of the nature of Authority, and the Rules of both, have much affinity.

For as of Authority, so of Licence: There is a Licence in Deed, and a Licence in Law. The Law gives one leave to go into an Inn for his refreshing. If a Butcher buy a Calf, the Law gives him leave to take him out of the Close where he is, but not to drive the Cow out of the Close. By Baron Denham at Gloucester Assises, 1654. And therefore for this he must have License by Deed, or he will be a Trespasser. 1. For Regularly a Licence is not grantable, nor transmissible; it is a thing of a personal nature, it doth for the most part die with the person. 2. It is subject to Revocation, especially if it be in matter of pleasure. 3. It must be strictly pursued, especially if it be in matter of pleasure; for if I Licence one to hunt in my Park, walk in my Orchard, or eat at my Table, he must not bring any other with him: But if it be in matter of profit, it is more largely. And therefore if one Licence me to go over his ground with my Plough, or to cut down a Tree in his ground; in this case I may rake as many with my Plough, as is needful, and as many to cut and take away the Tree as is requisite. And if a man exceed in a Licence given by Law, he is a Trespasser ab initio, and so shall be punished, but not so in case of a Licence given by one man to another, for there he shall be punished for the exceeding onely. Co. 8. 146. 23 Eliz. 447. 21 Ed. 4. 75. Broo. Licence, 25. 13 H. 7. 13.

It is a general Rule, that the King by his Prerogative may dispence with a Penal Law when the forfeiture is popular, or given to the King alone, Propter impossibilitatem providendi de omnibus particularibus; but this is limited to Malum prohibitum onely, and doth not extend to that which is Malum in se. In all such cases therefore, and where the Statute it self doth not take this Prerogative from the King, and conclude him to grant any such Licence; the Lord Protector by a grant with a non obstante, may make that lawful to a man by his Licence, that otherwise were unlawful and a Trespass. Hence it is that the King may Licence a man to coyn money without offence, and he that hath such a Licence, may then do it lawfully: So also to transport Corn, Wool, &c. albeit Transportation be in general prohibited. See Transportation, Co. 11. 86, 88. Dyer 34. 17. 11 H. 7. 11. b. See divers presidents in Writ 362, &c. Sess. 2. Phil. and Mary. 5. Eliz. 5. Eliz. 8. Ph. & M. 14.

The Lord Protector also may grant a Licence to do any thing which by the express words of any Statute he is enabled to do. As he may Licence any of his own Chaplains to have plurality of Benefices of his own gift, and to be Non resident, &c. by the Statute of 21 H.8. 13.

The Lord Protector may also Licence the doing of Acts prohibited by the Common Law, as to depart out of the Realm, &c. 176. p.30.

Or an Officer to neglect his Office, &c. Co.9. 101.

But if the thing be malum in se, for the doing or not doing, whereof the Licence is granted; as if it be to kill a man, or to do a Nuisance, or to break a Recognisance for the Peace, or the like; this will not serve to excuse the doer thereof from blame, or free him from punishment, 11 H.7. 11. Co. 11. 88.

So if the thing be but malum prohibitum onely, yet if the King be restrained by the Statute it self, and there be express words therein, that his dispensation shall not be granted; or if it be, that it shall be void; in this case the Lord Protector's Licence will not help: And so it is in the Statute of 33 H.8.6. against Shooting. See the Statutes.

And of 1 Eliz. 2. Phil. & Mary 4 against Egyptians; and of 21 H.8. 13; against plurality of Benefices; and of 1 Jac. 22. against Tanners, &c. In all which cases, no Licence or Dispensation will help any breach or transgression of any branch of the said Statutes.

So if the Lord Protector dispence with the breach of a Statute before it is made, this is void. As if he grant a Licence to transport Bell-mettal, notwithstanding any Statute hereafter to be made, and a Statute be after made, this Licence will not dispence with, nor excuse the breach of the Law; but if it be in a thing that doth concern the King alone, As if he grant a man shall be free from all Customs and Taxes, &c. this may be a good Exemption, Dyer 52. 1.

By Faculty.

A man may have a Licence to eat flesh on days prohibited, to hold two or more Ecclesiastical Livings, the Son to succeed the Father in a Benefice, or any such like thing as this; and in such cases where they have been used to be granted, and which is not contrary nor repugnant to the Word of God. Stat. 21 Jac. 13. 25 H.8. 21. 3 Eliz. 5. 1 Jac. 27.

But a man may not have a Licence to do any thing which is malum in se, or contrary to the Word of God; as to commit Adultery, live in Incest, break a lawful Oath, and the like, such as the Pope did heretofore grant. But all such Licences are void; nor to allow any thing expressly restrained by any Statute: As to dispence with any other Pluralities of Benefices, and non residence, then such as is tolerated by the Statute of 21 H.8. 13.

By others Licences.

By Licence from the Lord Chancellor, any man may convey Butter and Cheese to any other place beside the Staple, by the Statute of 3 H.6. 4.

By Licence a man may practise Physick and use Surgery in London, and within seven miles thereabouts, by the Statute of 3 H.8. 11.

By Licence of the open Sessions, a man may continue a Cottage against the Statute of 31 Eliz. 7.

By Licence a man that is a householder, and hath lived three years in the County, may be a Drover of Cattle, Badger, Lader, Carrier, Buyer, Seller, or Transporter of Corn, Grain, Butter or Cheese; and by apt and special words in such a Licence, may buy any Corn out of an open Fair or Market to sell again, and buy Cattle where they have used, and sell them again forty miles from thence, or more, at any Fair or Market, at reasonable rates: But without Licence no man may do so. Stat. 5, 6 Ed. 6. 14. 3 Eliz. 12.

By Licence, Knights of the Parliament or Burgesses, may depart, but not otherwise, by the Statute of 6 H.6. 13.

By Licence, a Soldier may depart from his Captain, but not otherwise; for then it is Felony, by Statute of 18 H.6. 19.

By Licence, poor people of any place, may travel to Barbe or Buxton, but without such Licence they may not by Statute, 39 Eliz. 4.

So also by a Testimonial and a Licence of the Justice of Peace, next to the place where a Sea-faring man landeth, that hath suffered Ship-wrack, he may beg the next way way home, keeping the way and time set him by the Justice of Peace, 39 Eliz. cap. 4.

But no Licence to beg in any other case, unless they be made by the King himself, will excuse Soldiers, Marriners, or any going to the Bath or Buxton to beg: Neither may Tinkers, or petty Chapmen be licenced to wander up and down, and use their Trade in the Country, by Statutes of 39 Eliz. 4. 3, 6 Ed. 6. 21. 22 H. 8. 12. 2, 3 Phil. & Mary. 5.

By Licence any man may sell Ale as a common Ale or Beer-seller, and not otherwise, by Statutes of 5, 6 Ed. 6. 25. 4 Jac. 4.

Any man that may justify the shooting in a Gun, by the Statute of 33 H. 8. 6. may by Licence in writing, authorise his Servant to carry such a Gun to be attended. So a Master may Licence and allow his Servant to play at any unlawful game, with him and in his company without danger of the Statute of 33 H. 8. 9.

And regularly by the Common Law, I may by Licence of another man do, or not do any thing to or touching his Body, Lands, or Goods; for the doing or not doing whereof, he might otherwise have an Action of Trespass of the Case, Waste, or the like against me; as imprison his Body, Wife, or Servant, suffer Escapes, kill his Cattle, break his House, ride his Horse, impound his Cattle, or go over his Ground with Horses, Wayns, Carts, or otherwise, kill his Game in his Park, or the like, depart out of his Service, and the like; and this Licence will excuse me, if he sue me for it: But then I must take heed I plead it, and do not plead nor guilty. Broo. Licence in toto. Co. 11. 48. Fitz. Bar. 81, 89. 253.

By Licence of the Lord a Copiholder may alien for longer time then one year, although such alienation without Licence would be a Forfeiture of his Estate. See Copihold.

But if the Omission or Commission be Malum in se, prejudicial to the Commonwealth, or to others, or a thing out of my power; in these cases Licence will not excuse, nor make the thing lawful. And therefore if a man Licence him to kill him, or cut off his arm, or a Lord will Licence a Parson that is bound by Tenure to say Divine Service, not to say it, a Steward that is bound to keep Law-day not to keep it; it seems all these Licences are void: So if my Parker Licence one to kill my Game, or my Shepherd Licence one to kill my sheep, or I having a Reversion of Land, Licence a stranger to take the Profits, or cut down the Trees, this is void; for this is more then I can do my self. Broo. Licence 20. Fitz. Bar. 83. Curia, M. 18 Jac. B. R.

See much of this question in the last Division. And when the Kings Tenant that holdeth of him in Capite would alien, he must have the Kings Licence. See Alienation.

A Licence from the Bishop, or one of the Universities, was needful for him that would Preach, or teach School.

He that would make a Warren, must have the Lord Protectors Licence for it.

An Appropriation cannot be made without Licence. See Adyson.

An Alienation in Mortmain, cannot be without Licence from the Lord Protector: See Mortmain.

A Bishop could not be chosen without the Kings Licence, called Conge Declier.

An Elect Suffragan Bishop could take no profit of, or have any jurisdiction by his See, but such as had been given him by Licence of the Archbishop, or Bishop of the Diocese. See Suffragan. 26 H. 8. 14.

In cases of Dispensation with Penal Laws, none but the Lord Protector may grant the Licence: And he may not give liberty or power to another to dispence with others, or to give Licence or Toleration to do or use any thing against any Statute or Common Law, or make any Warrant for such Dispensation, or compound for the Forfeiture of any Penal Law; neither may he grant or promise the benefit of any Forfeiture that shall be due upon any Statute, before Judgment be thereupon had, and if he do, all such Grants shall be void, 21 Jac. 3.

In all cases where the Archbishop or any other Bishop, might have granted Licences, it seems the Lord Protector himself may do the same immediately: But the Archbishop bishop of Canterbury, or his lawful Deputy, or Commissary: And in some case where he did deny him, some other Bishop might; and in this case the party may, and if the cause be great, must have the confirmation of the Lord Protector's Broad Seal, 25 H.8. 21. 28 H.8. 16.

And in case of necessity of sickness, the Bishop of the Diocese, or Parson or Vicar of the Parish, may give Licence for the eating of any flesh besides Beef, Veal, Mutton, or Bacon; but unless it be in case of necessity, the Licence is not good, 5 Eliz. 3. 1 Jac. 27.

But neither the Pope, or any other may give or grant any such Dispensations; neither may any sue for them from the Pope, under a great penalty. See Premunire and Treason. 25 H.8. 21.

Other Licences.

The Licence for Butter and Cheese, must be made and had from the Lord Chancellor: The Licence to practice Physick and Surgery from the Bishop of London, or Dean of Pauls, with the advice of three of the Doctors of Physick there: The Licence for the continuance of a Cottage from the Justices of the Sessions; the Licence for Drovers, and the rest, must be by the general and open Sessions, and three Justices hands to it; the Licences of Knights and Burgesses of the Parliament, must be from the Parliament, and must be enrolled there; the Licence of the Soldier must be from the Captain; the Licence of the poor that travel to Bath or Buxton, must be by the two next Justices; the Licence of the Seafaring-man to beg who hath suffered Shipwrack, must be by the next Justice of the place where he landed; the Licence to sell Ale or Beer, must be by the open Sessions of the Peace, or by two Justices of the Peace, whereof one must be of the Quorum: And the rest of the Licences must be made by the persons before set down. See the Statutes before.

The Licences to excuse at Common Law, must be made from the party himself whom the thing doth concern, or some other under him: For if my Wife or Servant do by my appointment, Licence a man to do any such thing, it is as good as if I did it, and shall be pleaded as my Licence: As if I bid my Tenant give the Hawk there to whom he will, and he Licence a stranger to take them, this is a good Licence: And my Bailiff may Licence one to ride my Horse, milk his Kine he hath in custody, or the like. But none other person may give any such Licence in any of these cases. Fitz. Bar 36. 10 Ed. 4. 4. 12 H. 7. 25. Fitz. Treas. 125.

23. How and in what manner the Licence shall be made.

The Lord Protector's Licence or Dispensation is, and must be always by Patent under one of his Seals, Dyer 54. 17.

The Archbishop must have granted his Faculties under his Hand and Seal by writing, and in some cases (as before) the Kings Confirmation was requisite. So if any Bishop had granted any Licences, it must be in writing under their Hand and Seal. See the Statutes and Cases above.

If the Licence be made and given by a Corporation, it must be in writing, and cannot be by word onely. See the Statutes.

If it be made upon a Statute, it must be according to the Statute: As that which the Master doth give his Servant for the carriage of a Gun, must be in writing: But that which is given to the Servant, to Licence him to play at unlawful games with his Master, may be by word. All the rest of the Licences upon all the Statutes it seems must be in writing.

And in all the cases at Common Law of Omission and Commission, for the most part a Verbal Licence without any writing, is sufficient. Co. 9. 99. Fitz. Bar. 30. 89.

See H. 10.

But if a Licence be to take Common, as if I have Common Appreder in another mans Ground, and I Licence another man to take this; or if a Licence be claimed, as annexed to an Estate of Inheritance, it must be by Deed, and cannot be by word; or if it be to have a thing for life, as if I claim a Licence from a man to go over his Ground, during our lives; it seems this is not good without writing. 22 H. 6. 32. Dyer 281. 19.

24. When a Licence shall be said to be pursued, and when not.

The Licence in Law is then pursued, when we do as much as the Law doth authorize, and no more: As for a man to go into an Inn, and there to behave himself orderly; for him that hath a Reversion to go into his Land, and view it, and be gone; gone, &c. But if a man that goeth into an Inn or Tavern, shall then take away a Bowl with him, or break the windows, or the like: Or the Lessor that comes to view the reparations of the house shall break the windows, or stay there all night: Or one that distraineth Cattel, Kine, or Oxen, shall milk the Kine, or labor the Oxen: Or if it be Corn, if he thresh it out: Or if a Commoner that hath power to take his Common, shall cut down the Trees upon the Common: Or a Purveyor that taketh Cattel by vertue of his Commission, shall afterwards sell them; in all these cases he doth exceed the power or leave the Law doth give him, and therefore the Law doth judg all that he doth unlawful, Bro. Licence 17. Co. 8. 146. Perk. sess. 190.

Licence in Law

The Licence of the party is then pursued, when he that hath it doth what he had Licence to do, and no more, and in some cases when he doth less then that. As if the Lord licence his Tenant to alien for twenty years, and he alien for three years, this is good. But if a Lord licence his Tenant to alien from Michaelmas last for twenty one years, and he alien it from Christmas next for twenty one years, this is an exceeding of the Licence, and a forfeiture of his Estate. Bro. Licence in toto. M. 37. Eliz. 38. Eliz. Adjudg. Trin. 36. Eliz. Co. B. Jacksons Case, 13 H. 7. 13.

Licence in deed by the Party.

If I licence a Nobleman to walk in my Garden, or hunt in my Park, and he come there with a reasonable company of Attendants, this is no exceeding, but a pursuit of the Licence. So if I licence a man to go with his Plough over my Close, or to cut down a Tree, there he may take a reasonable company to do it. So if I licence a man to take two Horses out of my Stable, and he do take but one, this is a good pursuit.

So if I licence any man to kill a Buck in my Park, and he take a reasonable company to do it, this is a good pursuit of the Licence.

But if I licence another to ride my horse three miles, and he ride him four miles: Alien.

Or I licence him to take my black or white horse, and he take both: Or I licence an ordinary mean man to hunt in my Park, and he take other company with him: Or I licence a man to go into my house to fetch somewhat there, and he takes away somewhat else, or breaks the windows, or the like: Or I licence one to go into my Close, and deliver the Cattel there to I. S. and I. S. go into the Close also: In all the first cases it is an exceeding in them that had the Licence, and in the last by I. S. And therefore they are all punishable accordingly for the exceeding only, Bro. Licence 17. Fitz. Trespass 139. 242. 18 Ed. 4. 14.

All Licences for the most part (be they made by King or subject, word, or deed) are revocable, so that if either the party doth countermand it, or either of the parties dye, it is determined. But herein there are differences taken between Licences of pleasure, and Licences of profit; and Licences for a time certain, and Licences for a time uncertain. For generally all Licences of pleasure onely, as to hunt or walk, &c. are revocable, and by any act whereby an Authority is countermanded, will be determined; and so likewise if it be a Licence of profit, as to dig clay in my ground, or to take the profits of my ground, if there be no certainty in the time of the granting of the Licence, or if it be granted onely during his pleasure that doth grant it, this will also determine as the former. But if the Licence be of matter of profit, or be mixed therewith, and be for a time certain, then no countermand in Deed or Law will determine it, for then in many cases it doth amount to a Lease for a time certain, which cannot be recalled, neither will death determine it. If a Licence therefore be made in writing to go over a mans ground during both their lives, it seems this is not revocable, Bro. Licence 7. 9. 15. Per Inst. Glom. 9. Jac.

25. Where a Licence is revocable, and when it shall be said to be determined, or not.

If the King grant Licence to Alien land held of him, and after dye before it be done, it seems the Licence is determined; but if he grant Licence to Alien in Mortmain, or grant a Licence to a man to go beyond Sea, and stay there for a certain time set down in the licence, or to stay there for all his life, or the like; in these cases, the death of the King will not determine the licence. But in other cases the Kings Licence may be determined by the act of God, or the King himself, as other mens: Dyer 92. p. 17. 54 p. 27. 92. p. 17. 117. p. 22. 176. p. 30.

Dispensation. Trespasses.

If I Licence a man to cut down Trees, or to do any other thing that may be done by

by Licence, and before it be done, I forbid him to do it, or he die, or I die, or if I be a Woman, I take a Husband; in these cases the Licence is determined. But if I give a man leave to come into my house (as rigore juris, I must, if his coming into my house, be lawful,) and when he is in, I bid him go forth, if it be such a tempest, or there be any such case that he cannot go forth without danger, he may stay a little while, and so long he may justify as the necessity doth last. 39 H. 6. 7. 20 Ed. 4. 4.

23 H. 7. 13.

So if I Licence one to leave a Rick of Hay in my Close, until he can conveniently take him away, and after I sell the Close to a stranger; this is a determination of the Licence, and the Purchaser may put in his Cattle, and eat it up if it be not fenced, without giving him notice. Adjudged. Hill. 17 Jac. B.R. Shirel Wibi Case.

And in all these cases where the Licence is determined, the act is done without Licence, and then the party that doth it, is an offender, and may be punished as if such Licence had never been made.

But if an Estate be made for life, or years, or condition, that the Lessee shall not Alien without Licence of the Lessor in writing, and he by his Deed in writing do grant a Licence to Alien, and after die, or revoke it by his own act before the Alienation; yet this is not determined, neither is this Licence revocable, for it differeth from all the cases before; and this Licence is of another nature.

CHAP. XXVII.

Of Badgers and Drovers.

Badgers and Drovers:

Badgers are those that buy Corn or Victual in one place, to carry into another. And Drovers are those that buy Cattle in one place, to sell in another place. Touching whom these things are to be known.

1. None may be a common Badger or Drover, or take that course that is not a married man and householder thirty years old, or above; and being so, that is not licenced, in pain of five pounds.

2. This Licence must be in open Sessions of that County, where he dwelt three years before, under the Hands and Seals of three Justices, at least, (one of the Quorum.) And this Licence shall be in force but for one year, from the date of it; and all other Licences are void.

3. The Justices may, if they will, take Recognizances of them, that they shall not forestall, ingross, &c. See Chap. 40.

4. But a Badger duly licenced, may notwithstanding, 5 Ed. 6. 14. against ingrossing, &c. sell and deliver, in open Fair or Market, within one moneth after the buying thereof, to any Victualler or other person, for the provision of their Houses, all such Corn, Butter, or Cheese, as any such person shall buy of them.

5. And yet unless he hath special words in his Licence so to do, he may not buy Corn out of a Market or Fair.

6. But they must take heed of forestalling, &c. in their buying and selling. Drovers also may buy Cattle in such places where they have used to buy Cattle, and sell the same again. See the Statutes of 3 Eliz. 13. 13 Eliz. 25.

7. If a Drover go with his Cattle on the Lords day, he loseth twenty shillings. 1 Car. 1.

CHAP. XXVIII.

Of Bailment and Delivery.

IT is the delivering of things to another, whether Writings, Goods, or Stuff, either to be redelivered to him that delivered it, or to be kept by the other, to his use, or to be delivered over to a stranger, Terms Ley. Perk. 712.

Sec. 1.
1. Bailment.

And this is sometimes upon Condition (i.) to be redelivered when money is paid, and something is done, and then it is a Pledge; and sometimes it is simple without any Condition, then called a Simple Bailment, (i.) when one receiveth them to keep for another; whether it be for the Bailor to redeliver him again

(in which case he may retake them without request) or for a stranger to deliver them over to him (in which case before the delivery over, the Bailor may countermand and require the Goods again; and if the Bailee refuse to deliver them, he may have an Account, for the property is not altered.) And this Delivery is also sometimes to imploy, as when he hath the things delivered to use to anothers profit, as to sell, Meliori modo quo poteris. In which case, if he sell it for twelve pence, though it be worth a hundred pounds, and he might have had more, yet is the Bailor without Remedy, 5 H. 7. 18. Finches Leyen Anglois, 179. 1 Ed. 5. 2. 41 Ed. 3. 2. Co. super Littl. 286.

Note, that wheresoever I may have a Detinue for Goods, I may justifie the taking of them where I finde them: Sheaves of Corn to B. to deliver over to C. B. thresheth them, A. may seize the Corn threshed, as it was resolved in 38 R. B. Roy; for B. by his threshing may not alter the property of A. Littl. Sess. 498.

It is a Writ that lieth where a man hath Goods or Cattle of mine, either by finding, or by my Delivery to him, to keep or deliver over, and he doth refuse to redeliver them, or to deliver them over according to appointment, and detaineth, or hath lost or mis-imploied them; then by this Writ I may recover the thing it self, if it be to be had, or if not, damages for the thing and the detaining, 14 Ed. 3. 2. F. N. B. 138. Co super Littl. 286.

In this Action the thing demanded must be so certain, as it may be known and distinguished from others; for the Judgment is to recover the thing in kinde detained, with damage for the Detainer; or if the thing cannot be had, then damages both for the thing and Detainer also; or if it be to be had, it is at the election of the Plaintiff, to have the thing it self, or damages for it, 18 Edw. 4. 23. Kelsw. 64. 3 Hen. 6. 43. 39 Hen. 6. 44. Dyer 331. 22.

The Judgment thereupon.

This Writ lieth for any personal Goods or Cattle that is valuable, and whereof and wherein one may have a property: As for Cattle, Cloath, Household-stuff, Money in Bags or Chests, Corn in Sacks, Charters or Writings, Loads of Wood, Tuns of Oyl, or the like, Dyer 22. 1 Rich. 3. 2.

But it lieth not for Money out of a Bag, or Chest, or Corn out of a Sack, because it cannot be distinguished, 12 H. 8. 5.

In all Cases where this Writ may be had, these things must be in the Case:

1. The thing must be of that nature, as for which this Writ may be had, vide supra.

2. He that brings this Writ, must have right to, or a property in, the thing demanded, at the time of the Writ brought, or be chargable over for it to some other.

3. The thing demanded must have been once in the custody of him that is to be charged.

4. This custody and possession must continue, and not be removed by an Act of Law, as of Seizure, or the like, Co. 11. 89. 27 H. 8. 33.

If I deliver Goods to one, to deliver to J. S. and before they are delivered to J. S. I do

For Goods and Chartels.

I do forbid the delivery of them, and require them, and he refuse to deliver them to me, I may have this Action, 1 Ed. 5. 5. 5 H. 7. 18.

If Goods be delivered to one to my use, or to be delivered over to me, and the party do refuse to deliver them to me accordingly; I may have this Remedy, 5 H. 7. 18. F. N. B. 38. 21 Ed. 4. 51.

If Goods belong to me by Custom, as a Harriot, Heirlooms, or as rationabilis pars bonorum, and they be withheld or esloined from me, after the death of my Tenant or Ancestor, I may recover them by this Writ. Kelw. 184. 8 H. 7. 10. Plow. 90. 39 Ed. 3. 6. 9.

If I buy Cloth, or other Goods of one upon a good Contract, and he keep it from me, and will not deliver it; I may have this Writ, Dyer 30. 203.

If a Woman have Goods as Executrix, and her Husband continue the possession and die, and his Executor keep the Goods, she may have this Writ against him and recover them. Dyer 331.

If I deliver one my Goods as Pledge, and at the day the money is tendred, or thing done, and yet the party refuse to re-deliver it to me; in this case I may recover it by this Writ. Co. 4. 84. 29 Aff. p. 28.

If I leave my Goods with another man to keep, and he take them into his house, although he be to have no recompence for the keeping of them, yet he must answer them; and I may recover them by this Writ. Co. 4. 84. 29 Aff. p. 28.

If one finde my Goods and have them in his custody, I may recover them by this Writ. 39 H. 6. 2. 12 Ed. 4. 8. 27 H. 8. 13.

If I deliver my Goods to J. S. and he deliver them to W. S. it seems I may have this Writ against either of them, and recover them. 12 Ed. 4. 8.

If Goods be given in free marriage to a man and woman, who are after divorced; in this case after the Divorce, she may recover the Goods by this Writ. F. N. B. 139.

If I deliver one a Box of money to keep fast locked, or otherwise made fast; or deliver or lend a man my Horse to ride, or deliver a Tailor my Cloth to make a Garment, or deliver Goods to a Common Carrier, or my Horse to a Common Hostler. And the party break the Box, and use the money, or ride my Horse further, and do not re-deliver him, or the Tailor spoil, sell, or mar my Cloth, or the Carrier lose, or spoil my Goods, or the Common Hostler abuse or detain my Horse. In all these cases for the Detainer I may have this Writ; and for any voluntary abuse done to the thing delivered, an Action of the case also. Co. 4. 95. 18 Ed. 4. 23. D. & St. 102. 2 H. 7. 11. 12 Ed. 4. 8.

For Charters.

If a man keep my Charters from me which concern the Inheritance of my Land, if I know the certainty of them, and what Land they concern; or if they be in a Bag sealed, or a Chest locked, though I know not the certainty of them, I may recover them by this Writ: And herein it is policy, if I can, to declare of one Charter in special, for then the Defendant, shall not wage his Law. 41 Ed. 3. 2. 8 H. 6. 18. 3 H. 6. 19. 9 H. 6. 18. Co. super Littl. 286. Co. 1. 2. 4 H. 7. 7.

As if Lands be given to me, and J. S. and my Heirs, and he die, and another get the Deed, I may have this Writ against him: So if one be out-lawed that is an Oblige, the King may have this Writ for the Obligation. So if the Tenant in Tail give away the Deed of Intail, and die, his Issue by this Writ shall recover the Deed. 38, 39 Eliz. 2. B. R. Kelw. 8. Sock's Case.

Where and in what case not.

If I deliver one Money, or Coyn, or any such like thing, which cannot be known nor discerned from other of the same kinde, and it be not in a Bag, Box, or Chest; this Writ lieth not in this case, but rather an Account. Dyer 22, 29. 12 H. 8. 3. 6 Ed. 4. 11.

For Goods and Chattels.

If one take my Goods or Cattle by wrong as a Trespassor, or distrain them for Rent, or for Damage-feasant, I cannot have this Writ for this. Co. 11. 89. Broo. Dr. 111. 242.

Self. 2.

If one deliver Goods to me, and I bid him take his Goods again, and he refuse to do so, and thereupon I distrain them Damage-feasant, he cannot have this Writ against me. 43 Ed. 3. 21.

If a man take Cattle of mine upon his Pasture, and there they die or be stolon; in this case I shall not have this Writ: But the opinion of Justice Hutton at Sarum Assizes, 21 Jac. was, That if they be stolon, the owner of the Pasture must answer them; of which I must doubt, Quere therefore. See Co. 8. in Caleis Case, by Just. Bridgm. 7 Car.

If a man take any Goods of mine in a special manner (i.) to keep as he keepeth his own, or the best he can, or if they be lost that it shall be at my peril, and they be stolon from him, he shall not answer them, neither doth this Writ lie; or if he bring this Writ, the Defendant may plead this in Bar, Co. 4. 84. 3 H. 7. 4.

If I finde Goods, and I sell them, or they be stolon from me before Action brought, there it seems this Writ will not lie, but that an Action of the Case, Trover and Conversion will lie, 27 H. 8. 13.

If I deliver one a Coffer locked, and something be taken out of it, if I keep the Key my self, I shall not have this Writ; but if the whole Coffer be taken away, there it seems I shall have this Writ, at least for the Coffer, Co. 4. 83.

If a Bailiff of a Sheriff distrain a mans Beasts in Withernam, and after do deliver them to the party from whom he took them, or otherwise; this Writ lieth not for him for whom they were distrained, Broo. Condition 34.

If the nature of the Goods be altered, as if it be Leather and made into Shoos, or if Parchment and Paper, and made into Writings; no Detinue will lie for it, Per Just. Fenner, M. 38 Eliz.

If a Woman great with Childe by her deceased Husband, keep the Charters from his Daughter and Heir, that do concern the Land, whilst she is so with Childe; this Writ lieth not against her, 41 Ed. 3. 11. For Charters.

If two Executors be, and one deliver an Obligation to the Debtor, and die, the other doth survive, cannot recover it again by this Writ: So if a Tenant in Fee-simple give away his Deed, his Heir cannot recover him by this Writ. So it seems if one Lessee for years, give away his Lease, that his Companion is remediless, and yet nothing doth pass by the gift of the Lease, M. 38, 39 Eliz. B. R. Relsack vers. Nicolson.

It is a good Plea in Bar to say, That the things were delivered to be delivered over to another, and that he did deliver them accordingly, if there were no Countermands; and so it seems it is, though the delivery over were after this Writ was brought. 5 H. 7. 18. F. N. B. 138. 12 Ed. 4. 8. 4. Where, and what matters are Pleas good in Bar to this Action, or not.

If the Detinue be brought for a Horse lent, it is a good Plea to say, That the Horse was sick of divers diseases at the time of the delivery, and that he died thereof before any request was made for re-delivery. 21 Ed. 4. 55.

It is a good Plea to say, That he delivered or offered to deliver the thing for which the Suit is, before the Writ brought. 12 Ed. 4. 8.

It is a good plea to say, That after the party delivered the Goods, he gave them to the party to whom they were delivered. 21 Ed. 4. 55. 12 Ed. 4. 8.

It is a good plea to say, That after the Goods taken and delivered, the party that delivered them was out-lawed, and the Goods seised for the King, or that they were taken in Execution: 12 Ed. 4. 8.

If the Writ be against a Tailor, it is a good plea to say, That the party would not pay him for making his Garment. If against an Hostler, to say, That he would not pay for his Horse-meat, for they may justify the detaining till payment. 5 Ed. 4. 2.

If the Writ be for Goods that were pledged, and that the party would not deliver; it is a good plea to say, They were stolon before the money tendred, or the time of redemption: But if the money were tendred at the time, and the party refused to deliver them, and after they are stolon; this is no good Plea. Co. 4. 21. 20 Aff. p. 8.

If the Writ be brought for Goods found, it is a good Plea to say, he delivered away the Goods before the Writ brought, and hath not the possession of them, 27 H. 8. 21.

If the Action be brought for goods delivered, to be re-delivered, or delivered over to another; it is a good plea to say, He took charge of them specially (i.) to keep as his own, &c. vide supra, and that they were afterwards stolon: So if he take charge 3. R. 31 charge of them generally : So if they were Cattle at Pasture, it is a good Plea to say they died, or were stoln, vide supra, Co. 4. 84. 10 H. 8. 21.

If a man have Goods of mine in his House, in a Coffer, and q. keep the Key, and they be stoln, it is a good Plea that q. had the Key, vide supra.

If A. bail Goods to B. generally to be kept by him, and B. takes them without having any thing for them ; if the Goods be stoln from him, he shall not be charged in a Detinue, 29 Aff. 28. 3 H. 7. 4. b. 10 H. 7. 26. a. & Acc. per Just. Dodd. H. 16 Jac. B. R. Entr. 4. Rep. 83. b. Doff & Stu. 130. a.

Garnishment.

It is where a Detinue is brought for Charters, and the Defendant saith, they were delivered to him by the Plaintiff, and another upon certain Conditions ; and therefore he prayeth that the other may be warned to plead with the Plaintiff, and shew whether the Conditions be performed, yea or no : And hereupon a Scire facias shall go forth of the Court, to warn him to come into the Court for this purpose ; and this is called Garnishment : And when he cometh, he shall plead with the Plaintiff, and this is called Enter Pleader : And then upon the Enter Pleader, if the Garnish cannot bar the Plaintiff, the Judgment shall be given against the said Defendant for the Deeds : and against the Garnishee for the damages ; and so shall the Execution be likewise ; and if the Garnishee made Default, the Plaintiff shall recover the Writings against the Defendant, but no damages ; and a Distress shall go forth against the Defendant to require him to deliver the Writing ; and if Judgment be given against the Plaintiff, the Garnishee shall recover Damages : This word also is taken in another sense ; for which see 2 Ed. 3. 17. Terms Ley. Co. 5. 90.

6. Where and how a man shall be charged for another mans Goods delivered to him, or not.

If a man lend me Money, Corn, or such like thing, he cannot expect the same again, but the like, or so much : But if one lend me a Horse, or the like, he must have the same again restored ; and if the thing be used to any other purpose, or otherwise taken to that end, for which I borrowed it, he may have an Action of the Case against me for it, though the thing be never the worse : But if the thing borrowed be lost (though it be not by any neglect of mine) as if I be robbed of it, or it be impaired or destroyed by my neglect, albeit I do put it to no more service then I borrowed it for : As if I put a Horse I have borrowed in an old rotten house ready to fall, and it doth fall and kill him ; in these cases I must make them good : But if such Goods delivered to me, perish by the act of God in the right use of them ; as if I put a Horse I have borrowed in a strong house, and it fall and kill him, or it die by a disease, or by the default of the Owner, without any neglect of mine ; in this case I shall not be charged with them. And if any man deliver me his Goods to keep, and I take them, I must answer for them, and see them safely restored ; and if they be stoln, or as it seems burnt or drowned by inevitable Accidents, albeit I do neither undertake to keep them safe, nor promise to restore them : And if a man deliver Goods to a Carrier for hire, and he be robbed of them, yet he must answer the Goods : But if a man deliver Goods as a pledg, and they be stoln before tender of the Money ; he that had them for a pledg, shall not answer for them, but after tender of the Money he shall, 5 Germ. lib. 2. c. 38. 2 H. 7. 11. 2 Ed. 4. 5. Co. 4. 38. Co. super Littl. 89 a. 29 Aff. p. 18.

CHAP. XXIX.

Of Bakers, Brewers and Victualers.

IN London the Fishers, Butchers, Poulterers, be they Aliens or Denizons, may sell to whom they will: But the Major and Aldermen may redress the faults of them, as they do of the Bakers, Brewers, and Vintners. And all Vintners, Victualers, Fishers, and others that come with Victuals to the City of London, shall be under the Governance and Rule of the Major and Aldermen there. 31 Ed. 3. 10. 7 Rich. 2. 11. 6 Rich. 2. 10.

Victuallers shall have reasonable gains according to the discretion and limitation of the Justices, and no more. 13 Rich. 2. 8.

Butchers, Fishers, Regrators, Hostilers, Brewers, Bakers, and all others that sell Victuals, shall sell their Victuals at a reasonable price, as the prices of the time go; and having respect to the distance and place, whence the same came, under pain to forfeit double so much as he taketh excessively. And Majors and Head-officers must enquire and punish it; and if they be negligent, they shall be punished by the Justices. 33 Ed. 3. 6.

The Assise of Bread and Beer, (i.) that proportion and rate of payment for it which is reasonable, and set down, is to be kept, and the breakers thereof to be punished by the Common Law; and he that doth break it, is to be punished; and when the Law appointeth a corporal punishment, it must not be changed for a fine or sum of money. And Majors and such Head-officers of Towns, &c. are to look to search and view, and punish the breach thereof, 51 H. 3. 31. 13 Rich. 2. 8. 12 Ed. 4. 8.

Hostilers or Inn-holders that dwell in any City Corporate or Market Town, where is a Common Baker that doth sell, and hath served the Trade seven years, shall not make Hors-bread in their Hostern without; but Bakers must make it, and the Assise must be kept, the weight reasonable. And the prices of their Hay, Hors-bread, and Provender, shall be reasonable, having respect to the places adjoyning; and they must take nothing for their Litter, under pain to suffer the first time a fine, secondly, a moneths imprisonment, thirdly, Pillory, and fourthly, to be forejudged for keeping an Inn. And Majors, Justices, and Stewards of Leets, may hear and punish these offences, 21 Jac. 21.

Upon Complaint of Inhanfing of prices of Victuals, the Lords, Chancellor of England, Treasurer, President of the Kings Council, Privy Seal, Steward, Chamberlain; and all other Lords of the Kings Council, the Treasurer, and Comptroller of the Kings House, the Chancellor of the Dutchy of Lancaster, the Kings Justices of either Bench, the Chancellor, Chamberlains, under Treasurer, and Barons of the Exchequer, or seven of them at the least, whereof one of the first four Lords to be one, may set down prices how it shall be sold, in gros, or by retail, and to set forth Proclamation thereof in the Kings Name, under such pains as they think fit; and he that shall not submit thereunto, shall forfeit the penalty appointed by the Proclamation, 23 H. 8. 4.

Also Justices of Peace, Majors, Bailiffs, and such Officers may Tax and Rate as they have been used to do. And if Brewers sell their Ale or Beer at other Rates, then they set down, they forfeit for every Barrel six shillings, half a Barrel three shillings four pence, Firkin two shillings, &c. 23 H. 8. 4.

No Brewer of Ale or Beer to sell, shall use the Trade of a Cooper, or making Vessels, but the same shall be made by Coopers, under pain to forfeit three shillings four pence for every Vessel so by him made. The Coopers also that make Barrels for Ale and Beer must make them of Seasonable Wood, and mark them, and of such Contents, and sell them at the prices in the Statute of the three and twentieth of Henry the Eighth, cap. 4.

If Victuallers, as Butchers, Bakers, Fishers, &c. sell any Victuals that is corrupt or unwholsome for mans body, or Bakers and Brewers sell at unreasonable prices, or keep not the Assise, they are punishable in the Leet for it. And if a Victualler refuse to sell his Victuals, being offered ready money for it, as much as he demands; this (it seems) is punishable there also. See Leet.

No Hostler, Brewer, or other Victualler, may take other mens Goods, under colour of Letters Patents for Purveyance, when it is for their own advantage. See 28 H.6. 10. 2, 3 Phil. & Mary, 6. Purveyors and Patents.

Victuallers may buy Butter and Cheese, and sell it again in their houses, notwithstanding the Statute of 3 Ed.6. 21. for Brewers. 31 Eliz. 2.8.

CHAP. XXX:

Of a Bankrupt.

Sec. 1.
Bankrupt, what it is.

Bankrupt is such a one that doth use the Trade of Merchandise by way of Bargaining, Exchange, Bartry, the Visance, or otherwise in gross, or by seeking his living by buying and selling, or that makes a Trade of buying and selling, and gets his living thereby, or one that doth use the Trade of a Scrivener, receiving other mens Money or Estate into his hands or custody; if he shall depart the Realm, begin to keep his house, or otherwise absent himself, or take sanctuary, or suffer himself to be arrested willingly for any debt, or other thing not grown, or due for Money delivered, or Wares sold, or any other just or lawful cause, or good consideration or purpose; or if any suffer himself to be Out-lawed, or yield himself to prison, or depart from his dwelling house, to the intent or purpose to defraud or hinder his Creditors of their due debt, or willingly or fraudulently procure himself to be arrested, or his Goods, Money, or Chattels, to be attached or sequestred, or make any fraudulent Grant or Conveyance of his Lands, Rents, Goods, or Chattels, to the intent, or whereby Creditors may be defeated or delayed the Recovery of their Debts: Or shall by himself or others, by his procurement, get any Protection, other then such as are lawfully protected by Privilege of Parliament, or shall prefer to the Lord Protector, or any of his Courts, any Petition or Bills against their Creditors, to desire or endeavor to compel them to take less then their just and principal Debts, or to get longer time of payment then is upon the original Contract; or being indebted to any one a hundred pounds or more, shall not pay or compound for the same within six moneths after it shall be due, and the party arrested, or within six moneths after an original Writ brought, and notice thereof given to him, or left at the house where he last dwelt, or being arrested for debt, shall lie in prison two moneths or more for that, or any other arrest or detention of prison for debt; or being arrested for the sum of one hundred pounds or more, just debt, shall after escape out of prison, or get out by putting in common or hired bail, he shall be accounted a Bankrupt. And the Lord Chancellor may grant a Commission for the sale of such a persons Lands and Goods, and the commitment of his person to prison, and to see the Debts paid as far as the Estate will go.

And for the farther opening and clearing of these Statutes, these things are to be known,

1. A Brewer that brews his own Beer, and utters it to his own guests in his house, is no Bankrupt: So a Farmer that doth buy and sell Cattle, is not a Bankrupt; nor is he that doth buy and sell Land within the sense of the Statute. So neither is an Inn-holder as an Inn-holder, but happily if an Inn-holder buy and sell all that he spends, and hath it not of his own, he may be within the Statute.

2. It is said, That he that liveth by buying or by selling, and not by both, shall not be accounted within the Statute.

3. It is said, That every buying and selling will not bring a man within this Statute. But he that shall be reputed a Bankrupt within this Statute, must be such a one as doth get the greatest part of his living by it, and doth live chiefly or altogether by it.

See 1.

4. Such Creditors only as do come in and make known their Debts to the Commissioners, and not such as shall obstinately refuse, or carelessly neglect, shall have benefit by these Statutes, Vigilantibus & non dormientibus subveniunt Jura Co. 2. 26. And yet if certain Creditors sue a Commission forth, and after within four moneths, or more, and before the distribution. Other Creditors come in and make known their Debts, and tender their parts of the charge; they must be admitted to have a part with the rest of the Creditors.

5. But if any distribution be made of any part of the Estate, the Creditors that come after this is done, come too late. Rugles Case. Hobb. Rep. pl. 374.

6. Any sale of Lands or Goods by the Bankrupt, before his trading, is without question good; so before he becomes in debt. And so also (it seems) it is for all that he doth, before he begins to appear a Bankrupt; otherwise all that ever he hath done is avoidable; and who shall Trade in safety with any man? Crisps Case. March. Rep. f. 34.

7. Copihold-Land may be sold; and if a man purchase Land after the time of his trading, and his being in debt fraudulently in the name of his Wife, or his Children; this will be liable to Sale. But if it be purchased before he becomes a Merchant, it seems otherwise; and therefore the case was this, A. purchased Copihold to him and his Son for their lives, the Remainder to his Wife in Fee, and after this becomes a Merchant and a Bankrupt; it was adjudged that this Land cannot be sold. Crisps Case.

8. If a man be a Merchant, and not in debt, and he purchase for another, or give to another, and there be no fraud in it to deceive the Creditors; this is good. March. Rep. f. 34.

9. If the Commissioners do not make an equal distribution to all that do come in and make known their debts, and desire relief; all their doings will be as without authority, and void. Co. 2. 26. And the party grieved may upon a question in Law, allege, That he is not Bankrupt, albeit the Commissioners have found him so; and upon a traverse it shall be tried.

See for these things, and for the authority and proceeding of the Commissioners, and the rest that doth concern this point, my Second part of the Marrow of the Law, Page 267: And the Statutes of 13 Eliz. cap. 7. 1 Jac. cap. 15. 21 Jac. cap. 19. 34 H. 8. cap. 19.

CHAP. XXXI.

Of Bargain and Sale, and of Contracts.

1. Bargain and Sale, what.

His word Bargain and Sale, doth signifie the transferring of the property of a thing from one to another, upon valuable Consideration. And herein onely it doth differ from a Gift; that this may be without a Consideration, or Cause at all, and that hath always some meritorious Cause moving it, and cannot be without it. This word also is sometimes applied to the Assurance or Conveyance, whereby this is done, and made, which is called a Deed of Bargain and Sale; for this may be done with writing, or without writing. Terms of the Law.

Plow. 301.

The kindes.

And sometimes this is, and may be of Lands, Tenements, and Hereditaments; and to this the term is most properly applied: And then it is said to be, where a Recompence is given by both parties to the Bargain. As where one doth Bargain, and sell his Land to another for money; in this case the Land is a Recompence to the one for the money, and the money to the other for the Land. And this now also is become one of the Common Assurances of the Nation; so that such an Assurance may now be averred to be fraudulent within the statute of 27 Eliz. as well as any other Assurance. A Rent may be reserved upon it, or a Condition made by it, as well as by any other kinde of Assurance. And sometimes this is, and may be of movable things, as Trees, Corn, Grasse, Oxen, Kine, Household stuff, and the like, the property whereof is, and may be altered by this kinde of Conveyance, as well as by Gift or Grant.

Fraud.

Rent.

Condition.

Contract, what.

And this kinde of Bargain and Sale, is that which is commonly called a Contract: Which largely taken, is an Agreement between two or more concerning something to be done, whereby both parties are bound each to other, or one is bound to the other. But strictly it is, the Buying and Selling of some personal Goods, whereby the property is altered Plow. 301. Co. 2. 35, 54.

Bargainor.

Bargainee.

And in the Cases of Bargain and Sale, he that doth sell is called the Bargainor, and he to whom the Sale is made, is called the Bargainee.

The kindes of Contracts.

These Contracts are of divers kindes; for some of them are in Fait or Express, and some of them are in Law, or implied: those in Fait, are some of them Absolute, and some Conditional. And both these also are sometimes in writing (of which see in Leases, Obligations, and Covenants,) and sometimes by word onely: And these also are sometimes accompanied or clad with a Consideration, and have Quid pro quo in them, which is the material cause of the Contract, when some Recompence in Fait or in Law is given, which maketh it binding, and actionable. And such a Contract is defined to be a Covenant or Agreement with a lawful Cause or Consideration; for an Agreement concerning personal things, is a mutual assent of the parties, and ought to be executed with a Recompence, or otherwise to be so certain as to give Action, or other remedy for Recompence. And sometimes they are alone, and without consideration, and then if it be by proof, and not in writing under Hand and Seal, it is defined to be Nudum pactum, a naked Covenant, (i.) When there is no Consideration or Cause, but the Covenant it self, Ex quo non oritur actio, out of which no Action ariseth. They are also real (i.) When they are about, and concerning Land: As when a Lease is made of Land for years, for Money, or Rent, or I covenant to make a Lease of my Manor for twenty pounds to be paid me: And sometimes personal, (i.) When they are of, and about a personal thing: As when one doth sell an Horse for money. They are also executed as an Accord with satisfaction (which see in Accord) or they are executory; as when something is to be done or paid at a day to come; and this is an Assumpsit. For which see more in Plow. 138. Br. 458. Pl. 1. Dyer 30. 14 H. 8. 19. Some of them also are simple and absolute; some conditional and with reference.

Those that are Contracts in Law, or implied, are such as do not arise from the special Agreement of the parties, but are made by the Act and operation of Law. As where an Ostler giveth my horse meat, or a Tailor maketh my garment; that the one shall be paid for his meat, and the other for his work: And therefore the one may keep the horse, and the other the garment, till they be paid, if they will; or deliver him, and bring his Action. So where another findeth my goods, he is chargeable to me by reason of his possession. So he that receiveth money to my use, or to deliver over to me, is chargeable as a Receiver. So if one entrench into an Infants or anothers land, and take the profits, he is chargeable as Bailiff. So if a Liberate be delivered to the Clerk of the Hamper who hath Assets in his hands, an Action of Debt lieth against him. So it doth upon every Judgment. So if a man come into an Inn or Tavern, and call for Victual, Wine or Beer: And in this case some hold, the Inn-keeper or Taverner may detain the body of the man until he pay his shot, (But I much doubt this.) And so it was agreed in Trin. 3 Jac. B. R. Finches Ley, f. 180.

Self. 1.

The effect of this is to transfer the Property; and this it will as effectually do, as any other kind of Conveyance whatsoever. And therefore the Bargainee of a Reversion, howsoever he may not have benefit of a Condition upon the demand of a Rent, without giving notice of the Bargain and Sale to the Lessee: And howsoever if a Conusee by a Fine of a Reversion, before Attornment of the Tenant, bargain and sell the Reversion to B. that B. cannot distrain for this Rent, until he can get an Attornment of the Tenant; yet the Bargainee shall have benefit of a Condition as an Assignee within the Statute of 32 H. 8. And it seems he may vouch by force of a Warranty annexed to the Estate of the Land, because he is in partly in the Per, and partly in the Poss. Co. 8. 94. 5. 113. 3. 62.

4: The effect of it.

Assignee.

Condition.

Distrain.

All things (for the most part) that are grantable by any other way from one man to another, are grantable, and may be transferred by way of Bargain and Sale from one to another. And therefore Lands, Rents, Advowsons, Commons, Tythes, Profits of Courts, and the like, may be granted by way of Bargain and Sale in Fee-simple, Fee-tail for life or years. And all manner of Goods and Chattels, as Leases for years, Wardships, Cattel, Corn, Household-stuff, Wood, Trees, Merchandizes, and the like, are grantable by way of Bargain and Sale. But it seems Estovers and such like things de novo, and that have not essence before, are not grantable by way of Bargain and Sale, as they are by way of Grant or Lease; and therefore that a Bargain and Sale of such things is void, 6 Jac. B. R. Adjudged, 21 7. 6. 23.

5. Of what things a Bargain and Sale may be, or not,

If one do bargain and sell his Land to me for money, to have and to hold to me generally, and do not say to me and my heirs; by this I have but an Estate for life, and no more, Co. 1. 87. and upon Lit. 10. Dyer 169.

6. How a Bargain and Sale shall be taken, Of Lands.

If one in Consideration of Ten pounds paid by me, doth bargain and sell his Land to me and my heirs, To have and to hold to me to the use of the Bargainor for life, the Remainder in tail to me, the Remainder to the right heirs of the Bargainor, this Habendum in this case is void, and I and my heirs shall have the Land for ever, Dyer 155.

Use.

If one in Consideration of Ten pounds sell me Land for the Term of Twenty years, and doth not say when this Term shall begin; in this case it shall begin presently. See more in Exposition of Deeds, Chap. 63. in toto. Co. 6. 33.

If any Estate of Freehold or Inheritance be made of Land by way of Bargain and Sale, the same must be made by a Writing or Deed indented, and cannot be made by word of mouth only, as a Lease for years, whether it be created de novo, or be in esse before, may be. But Lands in London, by a special Proviso within the Statute, may be bargained and sold by word of mouth without any writing. The Brother was Tenant in tail, the Remainder to his Sister in tail; the Brother by Deed, which was indented in parchment, but made in the first person, and no mention of Indenting in the Deed, and was inrolled within the three moneths, and after Livery of Seisin

6. What shall be said a good Bargain and Sale, and what things are requisite to make such a Bargain and Sale, or not. Of Lands:

Discontinuance. was made, it was adjudged a good Bargain and Sale, and that the Land should pass so, and not by way of Feoffment, and therefore no Discontinuance to the Sister, Stat. 27 H. 8. 16. Co. 8. 94. 7. 40. 2. 36. Brownl. 2 part, 291.

2. The very words Bargain and Sell, are not necessary to a good Bargain and Sale; for words equivalent will suffice to make Land pass by way of Bargain and Sale. And therefore if a man seised of Land in Fee, do by Deed indented, and by the words Alien or Grant, sell them to another; or if such a man Covenant to stand seised of his Land to the use of another, and these Deeds are made in Consideration of money, and the Deeds be after enrolled; these will amount to good Bargains and Sales. And if a man by a Deed indented and inrolled, in Consideration of Ten pounds paid to him, by the words Demise and Grant, pass his Lands to another for Twenty years, this is a good Bargain and Sale, Co. 8. 94. 7. 40. 2. 36. Brownlow, 2 part, 29.

3. There must be some good Consideration given, or at least said to be given for the Land. And therefore if A. [for divers good Considerations,] or [in Consideration that the Bargainee is bound for the Bargainor, and for divers other good causes,] or [for divers great and valuable Considerations] bargain and sell his Land by Deed indented and enrolled to B. and his heirs, Nihil operatur, it worketh nothing. But if in these cases in truth there be money, or other good Consideration given, albeit it be not expressed upon the Deed, the Bargain may aver it, and being proved, the Bargain will be good. And if the Deed make mention of money paid, as in Consideration of an Hundred pounds, or the like, and in truth no money is paid, yet the Bargain and Sale is good; and no Averment will lie against this, which is expressly affirmed by the Deed. And if the Deed mention and say, [for a certain sum of money,] or [for a certain competent sum of money,] these are good Considerations.

Livery of seisin.
Attornment.

4. There needs no Livery of Seisin or Attornment in this case: And therefore if one bargain and sell a Reversion by Deed indented and enrolled for good Consideration, the Reversion will pass without any Attornment of the Tenant: And if it be only a Lease for years of a Reversion that is granted, there needs no Attornment nor Inrolment. And so it was adjudged in Smalman's Case, Hil. 7 Jac. Brownl. 2 part, 291. Where the Case was: A man made a Lease for life rendring Rent, and after the Lessor by Indenture, for Fifty pounds, demised and granted the Reversion, To have from the day of the date for Ninety nine years, rendring a Rent also, which was less then the first Rent: It was agreed good by way of Bargain and Sale, and that the Reversion and Rent did pass without Attornment.

Sell. 2.

Trespass.

And in case of a Bargain and Sale, the Bargainee is in actual possession before any Entry, so that the Lessee may attorn to the Grant of the Reversion, as hath been Ruled in Mittons Case, Mich. 18 Jac. in Cur. Ward, by the two Chief Justices and the whole Court. And yet I think he hath not such a Possession, as to bring any Possessory Action for Trespass, or the like, until an actual Entry. For where the Statute of 27 H. 8. of Uses provides, that the Actual Possession shall be adjudged according to the Use; yet it ought to have a Circumstance which is requisite by the Common Law, viz: an Actual Entry indeed. But there must be an Inrolment of the Deed in case where any Freehold doth pass: For it is provided, That no Lands (except in some Corporations only) shall pass from one to another by any Deed whereby any Estate of Inheritance or Freehold shall be made or take effect, in any person or persons, to be made by reason only of any Bargain and Sale thereof, except the same be made and done by Writing indented, sealed and enrolled in one of the four Courts, (the Chancery, Kings Bench, Common-Pleas, or Exchequer,) or else within the same County or Counties where the Lands so bargained and sold do lie, before the Custos Rotulorum, and two Justices of the Peace, and the Clerk of the Peace of the same County or Counties, or two of them at least, whereof the Clerk of the Peace to be one: And the same Inrolment to be within six moneths next after the same Writing or Deed is dated.

7. Inrolment, where necessary, and how it must be done.

And this Statute was made in the same Parliament, wherein the Law of transferring of Uses into Possession was made; to the end that mens Lands might not suddenly and and privately pass upon payment of a little money in an Alehouse, or the like. And herein these things must be observed.

1. The Inrolment upon such a Deed, as to make this Estate to pass, must be in Parchment; for an Inrolment in Paper is not good.

2. The Deed inrolled must be Indented; for if it be but Poll, the Estate will not pass.

3. It must be inrolled within six moneths of the Purchase or Sale. And this Account must be, 1. From the date, and not from the time of the delivery of the Deed. 2. After twenty eight days to the moneth, and no more. 3. The day of the date to be taken exclusive, and for none of the days of the six moneths. And yet if a Deed be inrolled the same day it bears date, it is good. 4. If it be inrolled any part of the last day of the six moneths, it is sufficient. And thus the Deed may be inrolled within the six moneths, Brownl. Rep. 1 par. 33. albeit either of the parties die within the time. And if the Deed be not thus inrolled, it is of no force at all. So that if one bargain and sell his Land to me, and the Trees upon it; in this case albeit the Trees might have been sold alone by Deed without Inrolment, yet now being not inrolled, because the Sale is not good for the Land, it shall not be good for the Trees also. And no subsequent Act will help in this case: For if one by words of Bargain and Sell only, without any other words in the Deed, grant a Reversion, and the Deed be not inrolled, and after the Tenant doth attorn; hereby nothing doth pass, neither shall it enure as a Confirmation. But yet this must be noted, That in some cases where a Deed will not enure by way of Bargain and Sale for some of the causes aforesaid, it may enure to some other purposes, Dyer 90. Coz. 40. 8. 94. 5. 112. St. 27 H. 8. 16. Co. 5. 1.

But a Bargain and Sale may be made of Goods and Chattels without any such solemnity as before: For it may be by word, as well as by writing; with, or without any words of Bargain and Sell, as well as by those words; by a Deed poll, as well as by a Deed indented; and that without any Inrolment at all, and without any delivery of any part of the things sold, or of any piece of money (as the manner is) in the name of Seisin. Of Goods and Chattels.

But in this case also some respect is to be had unto the cause and consideration of the Bargain, as well as in the case of the Bargain and Sale of Lands. For howsoever perhaps in the case of a Grant or Bargain, and Sale of Goods or Chattels by Deed in writing, the Consideration is not material; and that if a man do by his Deed under his hand and seal bargain and sell Timber-trees or any other thing, without any Consideration at all, the same may pass well enough: Yet if the Contract be by word, or by Writing sealed and not delivered, if there be no Consideration, or no good Consideration of it, it is of no effect at all. And therefore if a man by word of mouth sell to me his Horse, or any other thing, and I give him, or promise him nothing for it, this is void, and will not alter the property of the thing sold. But if one sell me an Horse, or any other thing for money, or any other valuable Consideration, and the same thing is to be delivered to me at a day certain, and by our Agreement a day is set for the payment of the money, or all or part of the money is paid in hand, or I give Earnest money (albeit it be but a penny) to the Seller, or I take the thing bought by Agreement into my possession, where no money is paid, Earnest given, or day set for the payment: In all these cases there is a good Bargain and Sale of the thing, to alter the property thereof; and in the first case I may have an Action for the thing, and the Seller for his money; in the second case I may sue for, and recover the thing bought; in the third I may sue for the thing bought, and the Seller for the residue of the money; in the fourth case, where Earnest is given, we may have reciprocal remedies one against another; and in the last case, the Seller may sue for his money. Property altered.

If A. sell Cloth to B. for ten shillings, and B. takes away the Cloth against the will of A. in this case A. shall have an Action of Trespass against B. And if A. sell Cloth to B. for ten shillings, in his election to make it a Bargain, or not, and if he will he may keep his Cloth till the other pay him; and if A. say nothing, but doth suffer B. to take it away, he may make it a Bargain if he will, and bring an Action of Debt Sed. 3.

8. How Contracts about Goods or Chattels shall be taken.

Debt for his money. If I offer money for a thing in a Market or Fair, and the Seller agree to take my Offer; and whiles I am telling the money as fast as I can, he doth sell the thing to another; or when I have bought it, we agree that he shall keep it until I can go home to my house to fetch the money; in both these cases, especially in the first, the Bargains are good, so as the Seller may not sell them afterwards to another; and upon the payment and tender, and refusal of the money agreed upon, I may take or recover the things, Dyer 218. Co. 11. 48. Plow. 308. Dyer 29. 30. 14 H. 8. 19. 9 H. 7. 21. 10 H. 7. 6. 21 H. 7. 6. Plow. 432.

In these Contracts the Law doth not so much respect the form of words, as the substance of the Agreement, and the minds of the parties, Kelm. 87. 27 H. 8. 14. And therefore,

If one sell Tods or Pounds, Bushels, Yards, Ells, or Pearches of any thing, it shall be accounted, measured and reckoned according to the Custom of the Country and place, and not of the Statutes, or of any other Country, Plow. 140. 41.

If the Bargain were for Twenty Pieces, and say not of what, it shall be expounded of Twenty pieces of Gold of Twenty shillings a piece, by common intentment.

If a Contract be made for Twenty Barrels of Ale, or for Ten Pottles or Cups of Wine; the Buyer shall not have the Barrels also in the first, nor the Pottles or Cups in the next case: But if the Bargain were for Firkins of Wine, there it seems he shall have the Firkins also. If it were for an Hogsheaf of Wine, he shall have the Hogsheaf, Com. 86. a. Bro. Contract 4. 27 H. 8. 276.

If one agree with another to make him a Lease for years indefinitely, and say not when it shall begin, it shall begin presently, Co. 6. 33.

If one for Ten pounds promise to make good such an House by a day, this is a good Contract, and it shall be taken that he shall repair it. So if one owe me Twenty pounds, and I say I will sue him, and L.S. prayeth me to forbear till Michaelmas, and he will make it good to me, Ket. vers. Michel, M. 21 fac. B.R.

If one sell all his Trees in such a Wood, and it is agreed that the Vendee shall not cut them until Michaelmas, and in the interim Hawks do breed in the Wood, it seems the Vendor, and not the Vendee shall have the Hawks, 27 Aff. 29. Co. 11. 58. q. Semble, see all contrary.

If one lease Land excepting the Trees, and Herons or Hawks breed in the Trees; now in this case the Lessor shall have them, not the Lessee, and so also the Acorns of the Trees, 14 H. 8. 11. Kitch. 264.

9. How Contracts in Writing shall be taken.

In Contracts and Agreements that are in Writing under hand and seal, as Bills, Bonds or Covenants, the Cause or Consideration is not material; for whether it be with or without Consideration, it bindeth the party, and an Action may be brought upon it, (unless it be in case of Bargain and Sale of Land, as before.) As if a Carpenter by Writing delivered under his hand and seal, promise to build an House, or to pay another Twenty pounds, although there be no Consideration for it. (a) But if it be a Writing under his hand only, and not sealed and delivered, it bindeth no more then a bare verbal promise: So also if it be sealed, and not delivered, Plow. 308, 309. 11 H. 8. 4. 33. Dyer 90. 336. 21 H. 7. 43. Fitz. Dibs* 126. Plow. 309. Br. Aff. sur le case, 40. (a) Trin. 18 fac. B.R. per Curiam.

10. Where it is, what makes a perfect Parol-Contract, upon which an Action may rise, or the Property of the thing be altered.

Communication.

These things only seem to be necessary to the making of a good and binding Contract, such an one as to produce an Action.

1. That the person contracting be not disabled for Infancie, Coverture, or the like.

2. That there be a good Consideration, (called) Quid pro quo, in the Agreement.

3. That the Contract be consummate and perfected: For if there be only a party, and no perfect agreement, that is no such Contract as on which to ground an Action, and it is called a Communication. But if it be about the Sale of any thing to alter Propriety, a fourth thing is requisite, That the Seller have an ownership in the things sold, or power to sell them; or else that they be truly and without Covin sold in a Market overt. For which see Property. Co. 5. 83. Plow. 302. 479. Dyer 98. For the opening whereof, take these Cases following.

If

If I make a Lease for years to another, and he in consideration hereof promise to pay me a sum of money in gross, or a Rent by the year; this is a good Contract, upon the failure of performance whereof I may have this Action; and for the Rent, I may have an Action of debt every year, Lit. Br. selt. 452. Fitz. Debt. 129.

If I sell a man my Land for Twenty pounds to be paid me on a day certain; in this case after the day, if the money be not paid, I may have an Action for the money, though the Land be not assured, for he may compel me to make an Assurance, 3 H. 7. 14. 2 H. 7. 12.

If one in consideration of a Pint of Wine promise to assure me of Land by a day, and do not, I may have Action, and that this is a good Consideration: But in this case it is probable the Jury will give but small damages. Adjudg. Friends Case, Trin. 7. Jac. B. R.

If A. be in debt to me, and deliver goods to B. to pay it, I require it of B. and he pray me to forbear it three weeks, and he will pay me; this is a good Contract, on which an Action will lie. Williams Case, M. 7 Jac. B. R.

If I promise to one, if he will marry my daughter, kinswoman or servant, that I will pay or give him Twenty pounds, or Twenty pounds with my daughter in marriage, and he do so; now he may recover this Twenty pounds on this Agreement, and sue for his money in the Temporal Court. And this is done daily, notwithstanding all the Opinions to the contrary. Plow. 305. Fitz. Prohib. 2. 22 Ass. p. 70. 45 Ed. 3. 24. 14 Ed. 4. 6. 15 Ed. 4. 32. 17 Ed. 4. 5.

If I promise money to a Physician to cure a poor man, or to a Labourer to amend an High-way; this is a binding Contract, on which Action will lie in respect of the nature of the works. 17 Ed. 4. 55. Doct. & Sr. 105. Plow. 305.

If a Ter-tenant of Land promise to do a thing to me that have a Recognisance, wherewith his Land is chargeable, in consideration that I do assign to him the Statute by way of discharge; this is a good Contract and Consideration on which Action lieth. But if the Assignment of it were to a stranger, that were not good, for it is Maintenance. Adjudg. Pasch. 38 Eliz. Fitz. Barrow vers. Green.

If one be in Debt to me Twenty pounds by Bill, and I promise to deliver him the Bill, and he promise me to bring two sufficient Sureties, and give Bond for the money by a day; he may sue me, and I him, and there needs no Averment of the performance of the one side to enable the suit: And so in all such like reciprocal Promises. But if the Promise were conditional, contra, Adjudg. M. 38, & 39. Eliz. Gower vers. Capper.

If I buy an Horse of another for Corn, it is a good Contract, and I must pay so much Corn as is agreed upon, and not money. Fitz. Debt. 68.

If one promise to me Ten pounds, when I have done such a work; now this is a good Contract, and when I have done the work, I may sue for the money, Plow. 5. 44 Ed. 3. 22.

If a Contract be to pay for a thing Five pounds, or a Gown such a day, this is good; and if one be not paid at the day, an Action may be had: And before, and at the day, he that is to pay hath election; but after he to whom it is to be paid, 9 Ed. 4. 39. Fitz. Debt. 89. See Election.

If a man take my money, and promise in consideration thereof to build me an House by such a day, this is a good Contract, and I may sue for breach of it, Kelw. 69.

If I be seised of Land in Fee, and make a Lease thereof for life, and after in consideration of a certain sum of money demise and grant the same Land to another for Fifty years, to begin presently; this is a good Contract, and Bargain and Sale to pass the Reversion and the Rent, Co. 9. 2. 35. 4.

If one make a Lease for years in consideration of a Rent, there is in this Quid pro quo, and the Consideration is good on both sides to raise an Action, Kelw. 69.

If I lend one money, and thereupon he enfeoff me of Land, and by Agreement I am to have the profits of the Land till he pay me my money; this is a good Contract, and it seems I can bring no Action for the money whiles I have the Land, Fitz. Debt. 100.

If I agree with another to give him so much for his Horse as I. S. shall judge him to be worth; when he hath judged it, the Contract is compleat, and an Action will lie upon it; and the Buyer shall have a reasonable time to demand the Judgment of I. S. and if I. S. die before Judgment, the Contract is determined, Plow 6. 14 H. 8. 19. But then it seems the Horse must be delivered, or money paid, ere the Property will alter, or Action lie for the money.

So if an Agreement be, that the Buyer shall go and see the thing, and if he like it shall give so much for it; and he, when he seeth it, doth once declare his liking of it; and thereby his Bargain is perfect, he cannot afterwards disagree to it; and then Actions will arise on both sides, 18 Ed. 4. 16. And if he once dislike it, hereby the Contract is determined, 18 Ed. 4. 16.

If the Contract be to pay part of the money presently, and the rest at a day to come, and the Seller give him time till that day to refuse it; in this case, if he agree before the day, the Contract is compleat, and reciprocal Actions will lie for the things and money, Dyer 99.

If the Agreement be, that he shall see the thing; and if he like it when he hath seen it, for so much money he shall have it; in this case when he hath paid the money, and agreed to have it at the rate, the Contract is perfect, and Action will lie, 17 Ed. 4. 1.

If a Contract be made for Twenty Bushels of Corn at a price, and that the Buyer shall pay for them as he doth fetch them; this is a good Contract, and the party must pay for it as he doth fetch it, or the Seller may refuse to deliver it, Dyer 30.

If the Contract be to have for Cattel sold Ten pounds, if the Vendor do such a thing, else Twenty pounds; this is a good Contract and certain enough, and Actions will lie accordingly, Perk. sett. 712. 714.

If I sell one Ware for Twenty pounds, to be paid when they are delivered; this is a good Contract; and when they are delivered, and not before, the Action will rise, Fitz. Debt 56.

Sett. 5.

If I sell a thing to another, and no price is agreed upon, and he take the thing into his hands, yet the Contract it seems is good; and if it be Wine, or any such like thing, the certain price whereof is known and set by Law, the Seller may sue for so much money in certain. But in other cases he must in his Action surmise that he promised to pay as much as it was worth, and aver it was worth so much in certain, Trin. 3 Jac. R. R.

Uncertainty.

Parson.

If a Parson agree with me, I shall keep my own Tythes this year; if this be after I have sown my Corn, this Contract is good. So some say, if a Parson contract with me by word for the keeping back of my own Tythes for three or four years, this is a good Bargain by way of Retainer: But if we agree for the Tythes of another man, though but for one year, it is not good but by a Deed, Brownl. 2 par. 11. But some hold, that if the Contract be before the Corn is sowed, or for more years than one, that this is not good. And this seems to be agreed, and to be good Law; That a Contract made by word of mouth with a Parishioner, for the keeping back of his Tythes for so many years as he shall be Parson, is not good: And the Contract with the Parishioner is not good but by way of Retainer, Brownl. 2 par. 11. & 17.

Retainer.

If one bargain and sell his Land, and the Trees upon it, but the Deed is not enrolled, and the Land doth not pass, in this case the Trees will not pass neither, Co. 11. 48. If a Tenant in Fee-simple for good consideration sell his Trees upon the Land, the Sale is good, and the Buyer may cut and take them away, although the Seller be dead. But otherwise it is of a Tenant in Tail; for there the Buyer must cut them in the life-time of the Seller, or he cannot take them after his death, Co. 11. 50. Perk. sett. 58.

If I sell my Horse to one first, on condition that he pay me Five pounds at a day, and before the day I sell him to another; this second Contract, it seems, is void, albeit I be not paid my money, and I do afterwards seise my Horse again, Plow 432.

If a Contract be for any thing at a price, but withall it is agreed that the thing must be delivered to the Buyer at such a time and place; this is a good Contract to alter Property, if it be delivered accordingly, Fitz. jurans defaite, 144. And so if it be to give so much as I.S. shall set down, when he doth set down, and the thing is delivered, the Property is altered, 14 H.8.20. So if it be that he shall see it, and if he like it, and take it away, he shall give so much, and he take it away. And so in all such like cases the Law is alike, 18 Ed 4.16. Dyer 99.

If two lay money on a Wager, and put it into the third mans hands, he that wins it may have it, and he that loseth it hath no remedy for his money again. Agreed at Sarum-Affizes, 9 Car. And if a Contract be about a Horse-race, if it be certain, it may be good and binding: But the Law doth not favour such vain sports, nor the Contracts that are made about them. By Baron Thorp, at Gloucester-Affizes, 1654.

If one owe me Twenty pounds, and I buy of him Goods to the value of Five pounds, and it is agreed he shall keep up this Five pounds towards his Twenty pounds; it is said this is no good Contract, nor pleadable in bar, if he sue me for the Five pounds, Fitz. Debt 56. Quare.

If one promise me that I shall retain a Rent I owe him, for money he is to pay me; it seems I cannot plead this in bar to the Rent, but I may bring my Action upon the Promise, if there be Consideration for it, M. 9 Jac. B.R. Jarvis Case:

If the Contract be to pay part of the money presently, and the rest at a day, and the Seller gives him leave to refuse until such a day: Now if he agree before the day, the Contract is compleat, and reciprocal Actions lie for the things and the money, Dyer 99.

If an Agreement be made in this manner between I.S. and my self, That if he deliver me Twenty pounds worth of Clothes, or assure me such a piece of Land, that I shall pay him Twenty pounds: Now this is good, and after the performance of the Condition (though not before) he may have an Action for the money. So in the like cases: As if I promise to make new Pales, so I may have the old, 33 H. 6. 43. 27 H. 8. 34. Perk. sect. 7. 13.

If a Lessee for years lease over his Land, on condition that the Lessee shall get the favor of the Lessor, and pay so much as I.S. shall arbitrate: This is a good Contract; and when he hath gotten his favor, and the other hath arbitrated how much, the Contract is perfect and binding, 15 Ed. 4. 2. Dyer 76. 14 H. 8. 20.

If the Agreement be, that the Buyer shall go and see the thing, and if he like it he shall give thus much for it, This is good; and when he seeth it, and doth once declare his liking, the Bargain is perfect, he cannot dislike it, 18 Ed 4. 16.

If one sell Cattel upon condition, that if the Vendor do such a thing, he shall have Twenty pounds for them, else but Ten pounds; this is a good Contract, and the same will be more or less, as the Condition is, or is not performed, Perk. sect. 712. 714.

If I buy Wares of one for Twenty pounds, to be paid to him when he delivers it me, it is a good Contract; but if he never deliver it, I shall never pay for it, Fitz. Debt 56.

If I lend one money, and thereupon he enfeoff me of Land, and by Agreement I am to take the profits of the Land until he pay the money; this is a good Contract, and it seems I cannot recover the money whilst I have the Land, Fitz. Debt 100.

If a Contract be for an Horse at a price, but withall that the Seller shall bring and deliver him at such a place, This is a good Contract; but this must be done also, or the Action will not rise, Fitz. 144.

A Contract may be bad and void, either for some defect in the Cause and Consideration, or for default in the Promise it self. In the Cause, when either there is none, or no good Consideration, (i. e.) when there is no benefit to the party to whom, nor prejudice, loss or trouble to the party by whom the Contract is made; for then it is but Nudum pactum, a naked Covenant. Or when the Cause and Consideration is unlawful.

3c. 6.

2. In the Promise it self it may be defective, either for uncertainty, (i.) when it is either altogether uncertain, or else so uncertain, as it cannot by any means be made certain. Or when it is imperfect, (i.) when it is only in inchoation, and but a Communication only, and not perfect and compleat. Or it may become void by matter Ex post facto. In either of these a Contract may become void, as in the Examples following. Co. 10. 102. 76. Dyer 356. 17 Ed. 4. 4. 9 H. 7. 21. 10 H. 7. 6.

Nudum pactum.

If I promise to pay another Twenty pounds, because he is my Kinsman or Acquaintance; he can have no Action upon this, for it is Nudum pactum only, Plow. 309. 302: So if I contract with my Son, that because he is of my blood, I will give him Ten pounds; this is Nudum pactum.

If one buy of me an House, or other thing for money, and no money is paid, nor Earnest given, nor day set for payment, nor the thing is delivered; here no Action lieth for the money, or the thing sold, but I may sell it to another if I will, for it is but Nudum pactum, a naked Covenant, Plow. 309. 302. 11 H. 4. 33.

If one promise to give or do to another somewhat for that which is past, as because he hath builded an House, or because he hath let his Friend have Wares, or because his Friend doth owe the other money, That if he do not pay him, he will; this is but Nudum pactum. This hath been often adjudged, Doll. & Str. 105.

If I promise to one, That in consideration he will deliver me Twenty crowns, I will deliver them to him again; this is a Promise upon which no Action will lie, unless he had delivered them to me first, and thereupon I had promised to redeliver them: Adjudg.

If I promise to one without any cause to give him Twenty pounds to make his House anew, or towards his losses by fire, or the like; this is such a Promise as will not yield an Action, 17 Ed. 4. 4. Plow. 308.

If I. S. owe me Ten pounds, and another comes to me and tels me he will be my Pay-master for the Ten pounds, and pray me to take him for Debtor, and nothing is given by me for this; now no Action will lie for this, Fitz. Debt. 126.

If I promise to another, in consideration that he will make me a Lease generally, to do such a thing; this is but Nudum pactum; for he may make me a Lease at will, that may end as soon as it begins; Pasch. 39 Eliz. Co. B. Lurking's Case, Adjudg.

If one promise to me in consideration that I will relinquish my Suit, to do such a thing; this is no good Consideration, for he may relinquish it, and begin again, Pasch. 39 Eliz.

If the Cause of the Promise be to do an unlawful thing, as either that which is malum in se, or malum prohibitum, (i.) Evil in it self, or evil forbidden, there the Contract is void: But if part of the Consideration be lawful, and part unlawful, there it may be good: But if it tend wholly to Maintenance, or the like, it is all naught, Co. 12. 102. Dyer. Onleys Case, Churches Case, Pasch. 7 Jac. B. R.

If I come into the Market; and ask the price of any thing, and the Seller set a price, and I go home to my house to fetch the money as fast as I can, and he sell it the while; now in this case I have no Action for this, neither was the Property changed, for the Sale was not perfect, 14 H. 19.

If one bargain and sell his Land, and the Trees upon it; but the Deed is not inrolled, and so the Land doth not pass, nor the Trees will not pass neither, Co. 11. 48.

If I sell and deliver my Horse to one first, on condition that he may pay me Five pounds at a day for him, and before the day I sell him to another; this second Contract, it seems, is void, although I have not my money paid, and I sue him again, Plow. 432.

If I prize Wares, and the Tradesman say so much; now the Bargain is not perfect until the money be paid, unless a day be agreed, it is imperfect and void until then, 17 Ed. 4. 1.

If the Promise be to do a thing either malum in se, or to do a malum prohibitum, (i.) Evil in it self, or Evil forbidden, (although the Consideration be good) or to do do any thing contrary to Law, it is void and will not bind, no more then where the Consideration is naught; for Law will not work with such unlawful Contracts. (See more in Obligations and Covenants.) Also a Contract that is Usurious, is against Law and void. See for this Usury. Co. 10. 102. Dyer 356.

A Bishop hath the First-fruits of the Clergy within his Diocess; and if a Parson pay him part, and promise him the rest by a day, but doth not pay it; the Bishop can have no Action, because the thing is meetly spiritual, Co. on Lit. 162. b.

Sess. 7.

If an Agreement be between another and me for ten pounds for such a parcel of Wood, if he like it when he seeth it, and he when he seeth it doth dislike it; now by this the Contract is become void, and he cannot after by his liking make the Agreement good, 18 Ed. 4. 16.

If an Agreement be between me and another, that one shall go and see my Corn in such a place, and if he like it when he hath seen it, for so much money, that he shall have it: Now the Contract is not perfect, until he hath paid the money and agreed to take it at the rate. See more of these matters in Assumpsits, 17 Ed. 4. 1. and Agreement and Properties.

If one make a Lease for years rendring Rent, and the Lessee be evicted by title Paramount, the Contract is discharged, and he shall pay no Rent: So if the Lessor had nothing in the Lands at the time of the Lease, the Lessee may plead it and avoid the Rent, Bro. sess. 52. 135. Lit. sess. 58.

11: Where a Contract is extinct or determined, or not,

If one sell an Horse or other Wares for money to be paid at a day, and before the day the true Owner thereof take his Horse or Goods, the Debt is not discharged, but the Seller may have an Action to recover the money notwithstanding, Finches Ley, f. 45. Co. 3. 22. a. 18 Ed. 4. 6. a.

If one have a Debt due to him by a Contract, and he do after take an Obligation for it, or any part of it; now hereby the whole Contract is determined. So if he sue upon the Contract, and recover and get a Judgment, the Contract is determined, so if he sue upon the Contract, and recover, and get a Judgment; the Contract is determined, 3 H. 4. 17. Co. 5. 45. 9 Ed. 4. 54. Dyer 21. F.N.B. 121.

If I be an Artist, and one promise me Ten pounds to teach him in such an Art seven years, and I die before the money paid or seven years expired; now the Debt is gone, 21 Ed. 3. 11. But if I take a Writing indented only, or indented and sealed also, of a Contract made to me, but it is not delivered and made an Especialty, this doth not determine the Contract. So if a Debt on a Contract be due to me, and I take an Obligation from a stranger (and not from the party) for it; this doth not determine the Contract. So I take an Obligation from the party, and it be void, or it become void by matter ex post facto, this will not determine the Contract, Dyer 130. Fitz. Debt 68. 3 H. 4. 17. 21 H. 7. 5.

If I contract with J.S. that if he lay me into my Cellar three Tuns of Wine before Michaelmas, that I will bring into his Garner twenty Quarters of Wheat before Christmas, and before the days they agree to dissolve the Contract, this doth determine it; but after the first day of the two days is come, it cannot be dissolved, but it may be released by word or deed. And so of all such like Contracts.

If one promise me Eight pounds to teach him in my Art seven years, and he pay me the money, or give security to pay it by a day, and I die before, yet the money must be paid, and it seems the other hath no remedy, 21 Ed. 3. 41. See more in Apportionment, sess. 4.

12: Where a Contract may be divided, or not.

A Contract cannot in any case be apportioned, but either the duty must be all paid, or all lost: As if a Lease be made yielding Rent, and the Lessor enter upon part of the Land leased, the whole Rent is suspended. And if a stranger enter by title Paramount upon a part of the Land only, the whole Rent shall remain, 9 Ed. 4. 1. Bro. 52.

If the Husband sell the Trees upon his Wives Land, and the Vendee take part of them, and after before he take the rest she die: Now though he cannot take the rest of the Trees, yet he must pay all the money upon the Contract. But if a day were set to cut them, and not before; and she die before the day, there if he had cut part of the Trees, he should not pay any of the money, 18 Ed. 4. 6. Bro. Contract 26.

Sess. 8.

If one make a Lease for years, and sell Goods, all by one Contract, for one sum of money, and the Goods be took away from him before the money be paid, yet the Buyer must pay all the money. So if one sell two Horses for Ten pounds, and one Horse is the Horse of another mans, and he take his own again, he must pay the whole Ten pounds, (but he may have remedy against the Seller.) Et sic fuit opinio Just. Dodd. Tr. 14 Jac. B.R. 7 H. 7. 4. Bro. Contract, seq. 52. 135. Lit. Bro. 12 H. 8. 13. 9 Ed. 4. 1.

If an Abbot had made a Contract for Goods, and part of the Goods had come to the use of the House, and part not, yet the Successor was chargeable with all, 38 H. 6. 28. a.

If a Bond be made to secure money lawfully lent, and money upon Usury, it is void for all. See more in Apportionment, numb. 4.

13. Where one shall be charged or bound by the act of another, and where not. Husband and Wife.

If a Feme-covert do sell the Goods of her Husband by authority precedent from him, or if he do afterwards agree to it, or it seems if he do not disagree to it in his life-time; this shall bind the Husband. Qui tacet, consensire videtur. So if she buy any thing by any authority general or special, or without any authority, if it be for her necessary Apparel, the Husband shall be charged, (Vide Baron & Feme.) But if she buy Goods for her Husband, or to his use, without his authority general or special, he shall not be charged for it (although it be spent in his house,) unless he do afterwards agree to it, 27 H. 8. 25. 21 H. 7. 40. 20 H. 6. 22. Old N. B. 62. So where she is used to buy and sell for the Husband, or the things sold be things fit for the Wife to sell, as Butter, Cheese, Milk, Eggs, and the like, the Contract is good.

Servant.

If I give my Servant authority to buy for me, or he be my common Bailly and buy for me, I shall be charged, though they never come to my use, and though I never have notice of it, 21 H. 7. 40. F. N. B. 120 g. See Master and Servant.

If a Purveyor, Clerk of the Market, or other that taketh up for the King, buy any thing for the King; after he hath made his Accompt to the King and is allowed, he may be sued and charged for it, but not before, unless he made a promise to pay for it, for then he may be charged before his Accompt, 11 H. 4. 28. 2 H. 4. 28.

14. What shall be said a good Bar in Debt upon a Contract, and what not.

If a Servant buy for his Master, and promise to pay the Seller, and do not, the Seller may charge him in an Action of the Case; and if he had an authority from his Master, he may charge him in an Action of Debt. Arbitrement is a good Bar in Debt upon a Contract, 4 H. 1. 17. 6.

So a Bond made by the Debtor to the Creditor for the Debt, or any part of it; for by this all the Contract is determined, Dyer 21. b. S. N. Br. 121. M. 3 H. 4. 17. b. 11 H. 4. 79. b. 9 E. 4. 50. b. 29 H. 8. Br. Contract 29. 21 H. 7. 5. b. 6 Rep. 45. a. Otherwise if the Bond were made by a stranger, 29 H. 8. Br. Contr. 29. Goldsb. 153. pl. 84.

A Judgment had upon the Contract, is a good Bar in Debt upon the Contract, although Execution be not done, Dyer 21. b. 39 H. 6. 34. b. 9 Ed. 4. 54.

To an Action of Debt upon a Contract, payment is a good Plea, 41 Ed. 3. 7. a. by Thorp. Br. Debt 29. 9 H. 6. 9. b. by Passon. But yet by 1 H. 5. 6. b. per Cur. 40 Ed. 3. 24. b. 41 Ed. 3. 7. a. by Candish. 46 Ed. 3. 6. a. Payment is no good Plea in such case, without shewing an Acquittance.

And Martin in 9 H. 6. 9. b. saith accordingly, because (saith he) he may wage his Law.

If the Plaintiff hath brought an Action of Debt upon the Contract, and hath been barred by Wager of Law, and now he brings an Action of the Case for the same Debt, the Defendant may plead this, and bar the Plaintiff, Fitz. 116. Action for the Case, 109.

If I be bound to you to pay you a certain sum of money, and a stranger deliver you a Horse by my assent for the debt, this is no satisfaction. So if I be indebted on a simple Contract, and a stranger make an Obligation for this debt, this doth not determine the Contract, Brownl. 57. pl. 14.

CHAP. XXXII.

Of a Barretor.

Barretor or Common Barretor, is a Common Mover or a Barretor, whad Common Stirrer up or Maintainer of Suits, Quarrels or Parts, either in the Courts or out of the Courts in the Country. And in the Courts, either of Record, or not of Record, as the Country Court, Hundred Court, or other such like Courts: And out of Courts it is three ways.

1. In disturbing of the Peace; secondly, in taking or detaining of possessions of Houses, Lands, or Goods in question, either by force, or subtilty, and deceit, and usually in the suppression of right, and truth. Thirdly, by false Inventing, and serving of Calumnies, Rumors, and Reports, to make Discord, and Debate between Neighbors.

The punishment of such a person may be by Articles or Information upon Oath before one, or more Justices of the Peace; and hereupon he may be bound to the Good-behavior, or he may be indicted for it at an Assizes, or Sessions, and there fined for it at the discretion of the Judges, or Justices of the Peace, before whom he is found guilty of it. And for this see Co. 8. 36, 37. and Littl. 308. Westm. 2. 36. And my Book of Justice of Peace. The punishment of it

CHAP. XXXIII.

Of Bastardy.

Bastard is one that is born of any Woman, so as his Father is not known by order of Law, and he is called Filius populi: Co. 8. 102. 6. 65: Super Littl. 244. Bastardy.

Cui Pater est populus, Pater est sibi nullus, & omnis: Cui Pater est populus non habet iose Patrem.

Mulier is one lawfully begotten and born: And this word is used always in comparison with, or opposition to a Bastard, to shew the difference between them: For, Filius natus vel filia nata ex iusta uxore appellatur in legibus Anglia filius mulieratus, seu filia mulierata. Co. super Littl. 243. b. Mulier.

If a Woman have a Childe before the Espousals (by whomsoever it be) it is a Bastard, for that is born out of lawful marriage: And if the Childe be begotten by him that doth afterwards marry her; yet it is in Judgment of the common Law a Bastard, but this the Church doth hold legitimate. Stat. 20 H. 3. 9. 1 H. 6. 3: Co. Super Littl. 244. Where, and what Issue shall be counted a Bastard.

If one marry his Cofin, Infra gradum maritaggi, and have issue by her, and after they be divorced in their life time, their Issue is a Bastard. 48 Ed. 4. 28. Broo. Sect. 48.

If a Man or Woman marry a second Wife or Husband, the first being living, and have Issue by that second Wife, or Husband, such Issue is a Bastard. 39 Ed. 3. 14. 7 H. 4. 9. 18 Ed. 4. 26. Where not.

If one marry a Woman, and die before night that he lie with his Wife, and she have a Childe after, it seems it shall be accounted his Childe, and Legitimate. See the English Lawyer. 117.

If a Woman elope with a stranger in Avowtry, and hath a Childe, her Husband being infra quatuor menses; this is legitimate, and shall inherit his Land when he dies, 44 Ed. 3. 10. 7 H. 4. 10.

No Devise made after the death of the Father and Mother, can make the Issues Bastards. Broo. Bastard 23. 39 Ed. 3. 32.

If a Woman elope from her Husband, and live in Avowtry, her Husband being beyond the Sea, that he cannot come at her, and she have Issue in this time, it seems this is a Bastard: But by the Common Law, if the Husband be within the four Seas (i.) within the jurisdiction of the King of England; if the Wife have Issue, no proof is to be admitted to prove the Childe a Bastard, unless there be an apparent impossibility in the Husband of Procreation, as if he be but eight years old, or under the age of Procreation; for in that case, such Issue is a Bastard, albeit he be born within marriage, 43 Ed. 3. 19. 7 H. 4. 9. 7 H. 5. 9. 44 Ed. 3. 10. 1 H. 6. 7. 19 H. 6. 17. Co. super Lisl. 244.

If a Childe be born within the usual time, which is within the tenth Solary moneth, (accounting the moneth thirty days) after a mans death; it shall be reputed a Mulier, and the Childe of him that is dead; but if not, it shall be reputed a Bastard, unless the Woman be married to another Husband; but the most natural time is eight and twenty days, nine Solary moneths and ten days; which is forty weeks, but some come sooner, and some stay longer, as occasions be; and therefore it is held by the Doctors of Physick, that any day in the tenth Solary moneth, the first or last is natural enough. But the breeding and travail is sometimes longer or shorter, according to the weakness or strength of the Mother, or Childe, or other matters, Co. super Lisl. 123. Arfops case, M. 17 Jac. R. B.

This Case was: The Husband died the three and twentieth day of March, after his death his Wife (being known a leud Woman) was in travail five weeks, and in the midst of her travail, was turned out of doors, so that she was not delivered until the fifth day of January, which was one and forty weeks, yet was adjudged that this Childe was legitimate, Arfop versus Botrel, M. 17 Jac. B. R.

But if the Issue be born within a moneth, or a day, after marriage, between parties of full, lawful age; the Childe is a legitimate Issue, and no Bastard, albeit it be apparent it was anothers Childe, and not his that married the Woman; and he must Father him; for whose is the Cow, his is the Calfe, 18 Ed. 4. 28. Co. super Lisl. 244.

If a marriage be infra gradum maritagii, and they have Children, and one of them die, and after a nullity and divorce is made of the said marriage, yet the Issue between them are no Bastards, but Muliers. 39 Ed. 3. 32. Broo. sect. 48.

If a Divorce be well made of a former marriage, causa pracontractus, and either of the parties marry again, and upon this second marriage have Children; these Children are legitimate, and not Bastards, Co. 4. 29.

All Children that are born beyond Sea, whose Parents at the time of their birth be of the Faith and Legiance of the King of England, shall be legitimate, and have the same advantages as others born within the Realm, 25 Ed. 3. de natis ultra mare Dyer 224.

A Bastard the Elder and Mulier. Where possession of the Elder Issue which is a Bastard, dying seised, makes his Son his Heir, where not, and although the younger Son occupy the Land with the elder.

If one have a Son or a Daughter by a Woman before marriage (which is a Bastard) and after he marieth the Woman, and they have another Son or Daughter (which is a Mulier) and the Father die seised of Land, the second Son or Daughter shall have this Land, and not the Bastard; and if the Bastard enter upon it, the Mulier may oust him: But if the Bastard shall enter first, claiming as Heir to his Father, and shall occupy the Land all his life-time without any entry, or continual claim made by the Mulier all the life-time of the Bastard, and he have Issue and die seised of such Estate in Fee, and the Land descend to his Issue, and his Issue entreth, &c. In this Case the Mulier which is lineal, as also the Collateral Heir is remediless, and the Issue of such Bastard shall have it, notwithstanding the Mulier be an Infant, or Feme Covert, and notwithstanding the Issue of the Mulier enter before the Issue of the Bastard; and notwithstanding the Issue of the Bastard endow the Wife of the Bastard, and notwithstanding the Bastard after his entry, enter into Religion, and thereupon the descent be, and notwithstanding the descent be of Rents, Services, Reversions, expectant upon upon Estates in Tail; whereupon Rents are reserved, Littl. Sett. 399, 340. Co. super Co. 17 Ed. 3. 15. 20 Ed. 3. 16. 14 H. 4. 9.

But if the Mulier do make continual claim during the Bastards life; or if the Mulier do once enter, and be after disseised by the Bastard, or if the Bastard die without Issue, and the Land Escheat, or if the entry of the Bastard were by a stranger, without any commandment, precedent, or assent subsequent of the Bastard; in these cases the Mulier is not barred. Co. super Littl. 243, 244.

If one have Issue two Daughters, and one is a Bastard, and the other is a Mulier, and they enter and occupy together all their lives, and the Bastard die seised; the Law will adjudge the moyety in her Heir, Co. super Littl. 214.

A Bastard may purchase Land, or buy and sell Goods or Chattels, as another man may: Also he is capable of Land by Devise from his Father, or any other, by that name whereby he is commonly called, Perk. Sett. 48. 505.

But he cannot inherit Land as Heir to his Father, neither can any inherit Land as Heir to him, but one that is Heir of his body; but it will rather Escheat, Littl. Sett. 401. Fitz B. 20.

If he be a Bastard born in Adultery or Incest, it seems he is not capable of any benefit from such Incestuous Parents, more then for necessities onely, Swinb. in wills.

It seems he may do all Acts, as give, or grant, or sell his Lands, Goods, or Chattels, by act executed in his life, or by his Will at his death, as any other man may, by the name whereby he is commonly called; but he cannot bring a Writ of Detinue, or the like, as Heir to any man, Perk. Sett. 26. Co. 6. 65. 35 H. 6. 9.

Bastardy is pleaded and alleged sometimes generally (i.) when one saith that another is a Bastard, but sheweth not how, or specially (i.) when he doth shew how: In the first case it was to be tried by the Certificate of the Bishop, albeit the Issue were born beyond the Sea; and this had bard the parties, and all others: But if the Bishop had certified he is a Mulier, this was examinable and traversable. In the second case, when it is pleaded, it is to be tried by the Country, not by the Bishop. For which, see the Statutes of 9 H. 6. 11. 40 Ed. 3. 39. Plow. 74. 25 Ed. 3. de natu ultra mare.

If one marry a Virgin with Childe, and it be born during the Espousals, he must Father it, let it be whose it will: And if she be a Widow, and with Childe visibly by her first Husband at the time of his death, and take another Husband, and be delivered during the next Espousals; in this case it shall be reputed the Childe of the former Husband: But if she were so privily with Childe at the time of her latter marriage, as it cannot be discerned, it shall be reputed the Childe of her latter Husband, if by possibility of nature, it may be so, 21 Ed. 3. 39.

If A. marry B. and die, and within ten days after his death she do marry C. and hath Issue D. eleven days after the usual time of forty weeks, from the death of A. this shall be reputed the Childe of C. and not of A. So it seems if the Childe come eleven days before the usual time, it shall be reputed the Childe of C. not of A. 18 Ed. 1. Com. Bedf. Case, R. 13. B. R.

Bastardy is an offence against the Spiritual Law, and therefore was punishable in the Spiritual Court: It is also offence against the Common Law, and punishable in the Temporal Courts; and two Justices of Peace, whereof one to be of Quorum that are next to the place where the Bastard is born, may examine the matter, and punish the parties offending according to their discretion: And if it be a Bastard that may charge the Parish, the Justices may send the Mother to the House of Correction: As also for the keeping of the Bastard to discharge the Parish where it is born, and to charge the Mother and reputed Father: And if they refuse to obey the Order made by such Justices, or to give good bail to perform the said Order, or to appear at the next quarter sessions, they are to send them to Gaol, there to abide without bail or Mainprife. 18 Eliz. 3. 7 Jac. 4. 3 Car. 4.

It is murder in a Woman to conceal the death of her Bastard, unless she prove by one witness (at least) that it was still born. 21 Jac. 17. See Justices Office in my Book.

8. All Primmers used in the times of the Kings, are to be suppressed, Act July 24. 1651.

9. None may demise, or let, or being within his dispose, suffer to be held or used, any House, Vault, Cellar, or other Room whatsoever, for a Printing-house; but before he let it, he must give notice thereof to the Master or Wardens of the Stationers for the time being thereof, Sub pena five pound. This they must enter into their Register Book, Sub pena five pound.

10. No Joyner, Carpenter, or other, shall make any Printing-Presse, Rolling-Presse. Nor any Smith forging Iron-work for a Printing-Presse; nor any Founder cast any Printing Letters for another; nor any person Import from any part beyond Sea, into this Country, any Printing-Presse, or any such Letters, but he must first acquaint the Master and Wardens of the Company, for whom the same work is to be done, under pain of five pound. This the Master and Wardens must enter in their Register Book, under pain of five pound.

11. No Printers nor Printing, shall be but in London, and in the two Universities, York, and Finsbury, under pain of twenty pound, and to have all their Printing-Presses, Letters, and Materials defaced, and be for ever disabled to be a Master Printer, and owner of a Printing-Presse.

12. None may Print, but such as have served seven years with some lawful Printer in England.

13. Then he must use the Trade in his own house, not elsewhere, under pain of forty pound.

14. They must in every thing they Print, in the Title-page of each Book, prefix the Authors own name, with his quality and place of Residence, or at least the Licenses names, where Licenses are required; and his own name and place of Residence at length, under pain to forfeit for the first offence ten pound, and to have all the the Printing Materials defaced; and for the second offence, to be disabled from any more Exercise of his Trade of Printing.

15. None shall Print or Reprint out of the two Universities, any Book, or part of any Book legally granted to the said Company of Stationers, for the relief of their poor, without the License and consent of the Master, Wardens, and Assistants of their Companies.

16. None shall Print or Reprint any Book or Books, or part of Books, which shall be duly entered in the Register Book of the Company, for any particular Member of the said Company, without the License and consent of the owners thereof.

17. None may counterfeit the Name, Mark, or Title of any Book, belonging to the said Company, or particular Members.

18. Nor shall any person Binde, Stiche, or put to sale any such Book or Books, upon pain of forfeiture of the sum of six shillings and eight pence, for every Book Printed, Stitched, Bound, or put to sale contrary hereunto.

19. None may sell News-Books without leave of Parliament, or some appointed by them.

20. To Print, publish, or utter, or cause to be Written, Printed, published, or uttered any Scandalous or Libellous Books, Pamphlets, Papers or Pictures, under pain of ten pound, or imprisonment forty days, or until he pay the money. The Printer to forfeit five pound, and be imprisoned twenty days until he pay it; to have his Press and Implements of Imprinting, broken and seized. The Book-seller and Stationer forty shillings, or be so imprisoned ten days, or pay the money; and he that buyeth it, and doth not within four and twenty hours give notice of it, and of the party that sold it, to a Justice of Peace, under pain of twenty shillings.

21. Such Hawkers and Sellers, and the like, as go with Scandalous News in Ballads, and the like, are to forfeit the Books and Ballads, and be by the Constable carried to the House of Correction to be whipt as Common Rogues, and the Keepers must take them and whip them; or if no House of Correction be, then to the Constable of the place to be whipt there by him as a Rogue.

22. That no Drifats, Packs, Maunds, Chests, or Fardels of Books, be permitted by the Officers of the Excise or Customs, to be opened, or conveyed, until before notice given to, and view made by the Master and Wardens of the Company, or such as they shall appoint, so they do it within eight and forty hours after notice given (the Lords day and days of Humiliation excepted) Sub pena five pounds. And this the Officers must do, under pain of five pound to be forfeit by them. See Act July 24. 1651. 10 Sept. 1649. 22 Nov. 1650. 5 Jan. 1652.

23. For turning the Law into English. See Act. 22 Nov. 1650.

CHAP. XXXV.

Of Boatmen and Bargmen.

Or this these things must be known.

1. Overseers of them are to be in Thames, between Gravesend and London.
2. They must order Watermen, set down their names, and oversee their Boats.
3. Allow one of two that Row in Boats:
4. No singleman, but one that hath been in service, is to be a Waterman.
5. Their Boats must be of such a length and breadth.
6. They may not take more for their Fare, then is set down.
7. No man hinder their passage on Severns, or require money of them for their passage.
8. The Watermen may take Apprentices, or Servants.
9. They may not Transport Offenders into, or out of Wales, or Corn to the Ships.

CHAP. XXXVI.

Of Brass, Latten, Copper, Pewter, Bell-Mettal and Burning.

Or this thing all these things are to be known.

Brass, Pewter, Latten, Copper, and Bell-Mettal Transportation.

Making a Merchandising of it.

1. None may carry away, or convey by Water, or otherwise, any Brass, Latten, Copper, Bell-Mettal, Finmettal, Gun-Mettal, or Shroff-Mettal beyond Sea, under pain to forfeit the double value thereof, neither may it be carried by Sea from one part of the Land to another, before the party hath given Bond to the Customer of the place, where it is carried by Sea, to discharge it at that place within the Realm, where he pretendeth to carry it. See the Statutes of 23 H. 8. 7. 2, 3 Ed. 6. 37.
2. No Pewterer, or Brasier, may sell or change any Pewter or Brass, new or old, at any place, but in open Fairs or Markets, or in their own dwelling Houses, unless the Buyers desire it; otherwise Sub pena ten pound for every default. Stat. 19 H. 7. 6.
3. All Pewter and Brass Vessels, cast and wrought, must be of good Mettal, such as they are bound to cast in London, under pain to forfeit that which is not so cast; and the Ware that is hollow must be made after the Assize they are bound unto in the City of London; and the maker of the Ware must set his mark upon it, under pain to forfeit the Ware, that is otherwise. 5 H. 8. 7. 25 H. 8. 9.
4. None may use any false Beams or Weights about the selling and buying of Pewter and Brass, Sub pena twenty shillings. And if the party cannot pay the money, he must be put in Stocks and on the Pillory. Ibid.
5. Majors and Justices, may and must appoint a searcher in every place to look to these things. Ibid.
5. None may buy or take by Exchange for other Wares, any Wares made of Tin, as Platters, Dishes, Sawcers, Pots, Basons, Flagons, Goblets, Salts, Salt-sellers, Spoons, under pain to forfeit the same, and the value thereof also. 25 H. 8. 9.

7. No stranger born may work any Pewter or Tin, neither may a Pewterer teach his Trade in a foreign Country. See the Statutes at large, 33 H.8. 7. 2 & 3 Ed.6. 37: 4 H.8. 7. 19 H.7. 6.

Of Burning.

For Burning, these things are to be known.

1. It is Felony to burn a Dwelling-house, or a Barn full of Corn, or any Outhouse adjoining to such House or Barn. See Brown. But to burn a Frame of an House, is not Felony now, 37 H.8. 6.

2. To burn any Heaps of Wood prepared for Coals, Bitles, or Talwood, is not Felony, but a great Trespass, for which a man shall pay treble damages to the party wronged, and forfeit Ten pounds to the Lord Protector, 37 H.8. 6.

3. If my Neighbor, his Servant, or any other that shall come into his house by his good will and agreement, shall wilfully or through negligence burn his house, and thereby my house is burnt, I may have relief against him for this loss by Action of the Case: But if it be by Gods hand, and without negligence, it is otherwise, 3 H. 4. 28. Brownl. 1 part, 197.

CHAP. XXXVII.

Of Butchers.

Or Butchers, these things are to be known.

1. No Butcher or other may buy any Cattel in a Market or Fair, and sell them again alive in the same Market or Fair during the time thereof, under pain to forfeit the double value thereof: Neither may they buy any Oxen, Steers, Redds, Kine, Heifers, Calves or sheep, and sell the same again alive under pain of forfeiture of the Cattle, Stat. 4. Ed. 6. c. 1. 3 Car. ch. 4.

Butchers, Buying and selling of Cattel.

2. Butchers must kill no Beasts within any walled Town, or Cambridg, 4 H. 7. 3.

3. But there is now no Law in force to restrain Butchers from killing a Calf weaned before two years of age, or from buying Cattel out of an open Fair or Market, or from killing of Calves between the tenth day of January and the first of May; for those Statutes are ended.

4. If he sell Swines flesh muzzled, or dead of the Murrain: For the first offence amerced; the second, Pillory; third, Imprisonment and Fine, &c. See St. 24 H.8. 9. 21 H.8. 2. 31 Ed. 1. Stat. of Bakers and Brewers. See Cattel.

CHAP. XXXVIII.

Of Butter and Cheese, and Cable-Ropes.

Butter and Cheese.

As to this, these things are to be known.

1. None but Victuallers and Inholders, for their House-provision, may buy to sell again any Butter or Cheese, unless he sell the same again by Retail, i. a Weight of Cheese, or a Barrel of Butter, or a less Quantity, in open Shop, Fair or Market, and not in gross, under pain to forfeit the double value thereof, Stat. 3 & 4 Ed. 6.

Chap. 11. 21. 14.

2. None may get into his hands any Butter or Cheese to sell again, by unlawful ingrossing, 5 Ed. 6. 21. Jac. 22.

3. But the Traders of Butter and Cheese, Cheesemongers and Tallow-chandlers that have been seven years of the Trade, within the City of London and the Liberties thereof, may notwithstanding the said Statutes buy and sell again in open Shop, Fair or Market, 21 Jac. 22.

4. None may transport Butter and Cheese. See Transportation. St. 2 & 3 Ph. & M. 5.

5. A Weight of Cheese shall be 32 Cloves, and every Clove 7^l. 9 H. 6. 8. See more in Stat. 18 H. 6. 3. 21 Jac. 22. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. 14.

Of Cable, Ropes and Halters.

Cables, Ropes and Halters.

None may make Cables, Halters, or other kind of Cordage of any old or overworn stuff, which shall contain above seven inches in compass; nor Tar any Cordage of such old and overworn stuff, being of less assise, and after sell the same, 35 Eliz. 8.

No great Cables, Halters, Ropes, and other Tackling for Ships shall be made within five miles of Burport in the County of Dorset, nor Hemp sold which shall grow within five miles of that Town, in any place, but in the Town it self, Stat. 21 H. 8. ch. 12.

CHAP. XXXIX.

Of Capacity and Incapacity.

Capacity, or Ability.
Personable.Disability, or Non-ability.

It is an aptness or power to do, or have and receive, or retain something: As where one is able to give or grant, have or take Lands; or to sue, or be sued. And the person that is so capable, is said to be personable, inabled to grant, give, or take a thing granted or given. And this is opposed to Disability or Non-ability: which being taken largely, is defined to be an Incapacity, Incapability, or Impotencie of some persons for some causes, to have and enjoy some benefit, or do some act which another might have or do. As where one is not able, or not able but after such a manner to give or grant, have or take Lands; or to sue, or to be sued.

And in this sense Disability is sometimes Absolute; as of an Infant, Man attainted of Treason or Felony, or the like, who are utterly disabled by any way or means to make any Conveyance of their Lands, but that it may be avoided by some body. So the the son of such a person attain is utterly disabled by any means to inherit any Land from that father. And sometimes it is secundum quid only; as that of a Feme-covert, who cannot give or grant but by Fine, and is only disabled to give or grant by Deed: And that of the King, who is disabled to give or grant, or take or receive any thing but by matter of Record: And that of a Clergy-man that hath a Benefice of Eight pounds per annum in the Kings Books, who is incapable of another, unless he be first qualified according to the Statute.

It is also distinguished into Disability particular or personal, and temporal, as that which reacheth not unto any other person, and is but for a time only: And perpetual or universal, as that which reacheth to others, and is for ever. And this is caused sometimes by the act of God, as in case of the non-ability of an Ideot, and the like; and sometimes by the act of the Law, as in case of the disability of an Alien or a Monk: And sometimes by the act of the party, as when he is attaind of Felony, or Treason: And sometimes by the act of a stranger, as in case of the disability of an Heir by the Attainder of the Ancestor, Terms of the Law Kitch. fol. 214. Plow. 27. Fitz. N. B. 35. Co. 11. 77. 4. 127. 7 H. 7. 7. 16 H. 8. 1. Co. 8. 10. St. 33 H. 8. c. 29. § 6 Ed. 6. c. 13. Co. super Lis. f. 3.

StB. 1.

But Disability is taken sometimes more strictly, for an Exception taken against the Plaintiff or Demandant upon some cause why he cannot commence some Suit in Law, and the Defendant saith that the Plaintiff is not able to sue an Action, and demandeth Judgment if he shall be answered. And this is also sometimes Absolute, and sometimes secundum quid only. And briefly there are six causes of this Non-ability: As if he be, 1. An Outlaw. 2. Condemned in a Premunire. 3. Professed in Religion. 4. Excommunicate. 5. A Vilain. 6. An Alien. But in the last case the disability is only in real actions, and not in personal actions, F. N. B. 35. 95. Terms of the Law.

Note, persons capable are of two sorts:

1. Persons natural created of God, as J. S. and J. D. &c.
2. Persons incorporate or politique, created by the policie of man: And these be of two sorts. 1. Sole. 2. Aggregate of many. And these also are of persons capable, as Mayor and Commonalty, Dean and Chapter: Or of persons incapable, as Prior and Covent, &c. And some men have capacity to take, but not to hold; and some to take and hold, or not to hold at the election of them or others; and some to take and to hold both; and some neither to take nor hold; and some specially disabled to take some particular thing, Co. super Lis. f. 2.

If an Alien purchase Land in fee for life or years, after Office found, the King will have it, for the Alien is not capable of it to retain it, though he be able to purchase it: But such a person is capable of having and retaining both, a house for his habitation; and therefore he may purchase and hold such a thing. See for this Alien, Co. super Lis. f. 2.

StB. 2.

Where a man shall be said to be able to do or receive a thing or not, but he shall be said to be disabled or incapable, and how.

If a man commit Felony or Treason, and be attaind thereof, and after Attainder he sell any of his Lands or Goods, this is void, for he is disabled: And if he do it before Attainder, any sale of his Goods or Chattels is good against all men; but if he make any sale of his Lands, that may be avoided by the King or Lord to whom it doth belong by the forfeiture, but it is good against all others. And if a man commit Felony, and after purchase Land, and then is attaind; now though he were not disabled to purchase, yet he is to hold, for the Lord will have it by Escheat. And if a man be attaind of Felony, yet he hath capacity to purchase to him and his heirs, though he cannot hold it, for in this case the King shall have it presently. See Creon, Co. super Lis. 2. 49 Aff. 2. 49 Ed. 3. 11.

A Felon.

Attaind.

A sole Corporation, or Aggregate of many, either Ecclesiastical or Temporal, may grant or give away that they have in most cases, as persons Natural may; but they have not capacity to hold and retain Lands, as such persons may, without special licence from the King: And yet such Corporations may purchase; but after they have purchased Lands, the Lord may enter and have it. See Mortmain, Co. super Lis. 2. 6.

A sole Corporation.

Vilains:

Vilains and Bondmen may do and receive as other men, save only against the Lords; for if they purchase Lands, or buy Goods, their Lords will have them. See Vilains. Co. idem.

Infants or Minors.

An Infant or Minor, one under the age of Twenty one years, cannot give or grant away any thing they have, but it will be void or voidable. But such a one, without the consent of any other, hath capacity to purchase, and at his full age he may agree to it, or disagree, and waive it without any cause shewed. See more of this in Infant. Co. idem.

Ideots.

An Ideot, or man of non-sane memory, cannot give or grant away any thing he hath, but it will be void or voidable: But such a one hath capacity to purchase without consent of any other, and himself cannot waive it; but if he die in his madness, or after his memory recovered, without agreement thereunto, his Heir may waive it without any cause shewed. See more in Ideot. Co. idem.

Hermaphrodites.

An Hermaphrodite may give or grant, take or purchase as another person may do, according to that sex which prevailleth, Co. idem, & 3.

A Bastard.

A Bastard may grant or give, purchase or take, as another person may do, after he hath gotten a name by reputation, by that name so gotten. See more in Bastard. But if a Lease be to A. B. for life, the Remainder to the eldest Issue-male of I. S. and the Heirs males of his body, and I. S. have a Bastard, this Issue is not capable within this limitation. Co. idem & 3.

Persons deformed, &c.

Persons deformed, having humane shape. Lepers, Deaf, Dumb, and Blind men, it seems may take and give as other persons may. See more in Fair. Co. 3.

Grants void by incapacity of the Grantees.

No person but one qualified and fitted is capable of an Office: And therefore if the King grant an Office that doth concern the Administration of Justice or the Kings Revenue, or if he grant a Judicial Office to one in Reversion, or a Stewardship be granted to an Infant; these Grants are void, for they are or may be incapable, Co. 3 b.

Some are, capable of things to special purpose to give or grant, and not to use; so the King is capable of an Office, Idem.

Such as buy Offices or Benefices, are incapable thereof. See Offices, Advowsons, and Simony.

Where a man shall be said to be able to sue or to be sued, and where not, but he shall be said to be disabled, and how.A Vilain.*A person outlawed.*An Alien-Enemy and Amy.*Attaint in Premunire.*A man professed in Religion.*A person excommunicate.

Women covert may sue or be sued, but their husbands must be joined with them. See Baron and Feme:

Ideots, and men of Non-sane-memory, may sue or be sued; also such as be deaf and dumb.

Infants also may sue or be sued, and are not disabled: But if he sue, he must sue by Prochein amy; if he defend, it must be by his Guardian.

A Vilain is disabled to sue his Lord in any real or personal Action; but he may sue any other besides his Lord, Co. super Lis. 127 b.

An Outlawed person is disabled to sue any Action against any man in any Court of Law or Equity; but it seems any man may sue him, Co. idem 128.

An Alien-Enemy is disabled to sue any Action real or personal: An Alien-Amy to sue any real Action; but a personal Action he may sue, Co. idem.

A man that is attainted in a Premunire, may not sue in any Action, Co. super Lis. 129.

A man that is professed in Religion, cannot sue or be sued, Idem 132.

A man that is Excommunicate, is disabled to sue in any Court any Action whatsoever, unless the Excommunication were by the Defendant himself, Idem 134.

A man that is convict Recusant, is disabled to sue whiles he doth so continue. See more in Stat. 3 Car. 2. and of Recusants.

But note, that all these Disabilities continue only whiles the same Impediment doth continue. For after Infranchisement of the Vilain, Reversal or Pardon of the Outlawry, Pardon in the Premunire, Dearthment of the party Professed, and Absolution of the Excommunication, the Disability is gone, and the party may sue as another man: Also during that time he may sue in the right of another, as an Executor or Administrator; so the Vilain may sue his Lord, and the rest in the cases before. And therefore a Mayor and Commonalty in their Politique capacity may have an Action Action, though the Mayor be outlawed, Co. super Litem 128. 12 Ed. 4. 12.

And in a Writ of Error to reverse an Outlawry, Utlary in that Suit or any other shall not disable him in that case, Co. Idem.

Also Outlawries in Chester and Durham are not Disabilities to sue at the Court and London: See more in other places.

CHAP. XL.

Of Captives, Castle, and Cattel.

Or Redemption of Captives, and preventing their taking in time to come, See the Act, March 26. 1650. 16 & 17 Car. 24.

of a Castle.

A Castle doth sometimes signifie a strong House or place of defence; and sometimes it doth signifie one or more Manors, Castle, what.

Co. upon Lit. 5. For this,

1. What Purveyance, and in what manner shall be made to victual a Castle. See Stat. 9 H. 3. 19. 3 Ed. 1. 7.

2. What is to be, and by whom, for the erecting, maintenance and using of several Castles, Fortresses and Bulwarks, See Stat. 4 H. 8. 1. 2 Ed. 6. 16. 2 & 3 P. & M. 1. 28 Ed. 1. 7. 4 H. 4. 31. 33. 13 R. 2. 15.

Castelain was sometimes taken for the Owner or Captain of a Castle, who sometimes also was called the Constable of the Castle. Castelain, what Castle-guard is a Tenure or Imposition laid upon such as do dwell neer a Castle, towards the maintenance of such as keep Watch in the Castle, which was a kind of Knights service. For this, Castle-guard, what.

1. Who shall be bound to this Tenure, and for what time he may be discharged thereof, See Stat. 9 H. 3. 20.

2. The Tenants of the Castle of Dover that hold by this Tenure, are to pay their Rents at the Exchequer yearly, Stat. 33 H. 8. 18. See Westm. 17 Ed. 3.

of Cattel.

For Cattel, these things are to be known.

1. None may buy any Cattel, and sell them again alive, until he have fed them five weeks in his own house or ground, or where he hath Common, under pain to lose the double value thereof, Stat. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. 14.

2. None may buy any Cattel but in open Fair or Market, nor may he sell the same again any where in the same Fair or Market, under pain to forfeit the double value thereof, 3 & 4 Ed. 6. 19.

3. Any person may buy Oxen, Steers, Runts, Kine, Heifers or Calves, for their provision for Household, Teem, or Dairy, or otherwise, in any Fair or elsewhere as they please, 3 & 4 Ed. 6. 19.

4. Spiritual persons may not buy Cattel to sell again, but in some special cases, 21 H. 8. 13.

5. Drovers that buy and sell Cattel, must be licensed, and how. See Chap. 27. b.

6. Any man may keep upon his own Lands or Liberties of Foldage that he hath, any Estate in use, or possession of Inheritance, or for life, as many Sheep as he will. But Farmers and Renters of great Farms may not have or keep at one time above Two thousand Sheep, (120. to be accounted to the Hundred) of all sorts, besides Lambs

Lambs under a year old, under pain to forfeit Three shillings four pence for every Sheep, unless it be Sheep for the provision and expences of their houses: Or where one is made Executor, or is married to a Wife, where the Testator hath left, or Wife had more then Two thousand Sheep; and there they must dispose of the overplus by the space of a year: Or where Sheep are given to a Child by Will, and the Will is, they shall be kept for him, 25 H. 8. 13. See in the Statute an Order for the Fold-courses in Norfolk and Suffolk.

7. He that doth keep above an hundred and twenty Sheep the most of the year upon his own several inclosed grounds, (and not upon Commons fit for Milch Kine) shall, so long as he shall keep and feed them, for every sixty Sheep keep and feed yearly one Milch-Cow, and for every Hundred and twenty Sheep shall raise yearly one Calf, under pain to lose Twenty shillings for every moneth he shall not keep such Cows, and for not raising every year a Calf, Stat. 2 & 3 Ph. & M. ch. 3.

8. And he that shall keep and feed upon his Pastures above twenty Oxen, Rants, Shrubs, Heifers, or Kine, shall for every ten Beasts keep and feed yearly one Milch-Cow, and for every twenty so kept shall raise yearly a Calf, under the pain aforesaid. But the Sheep and Cattel men keep for provision of their houses, are not to be reckoned amongst the number.

9. The Statute of 2 & 3 Ph. & M. 3. shall also extend to Grounds, which since the said Act have been or shall be made several, St. 7 Jas. 7.

CHAP. XLI.

Of Causes and Effects, Certainty and Incertainty.

Causes and Effects.

He Law in most cases hath much respect to the cause, original, and foundation of things; and in some cases none at all. As if one whiles that he is a servant have an intent to kill his Master, and after depart out of his service, and then kill him, this is Petty-treason by Relation. So if a man de non sane memorie give himself a deadly wound, and after come to himself again, and die by that wound, he shall not be a Felo de se. So if a Covenant be to make a man a Lease for years, and the Covenantee die before the Lease be made, and then the Lease is made to his Executors, this shall be accounted Affets. Causa & origo est materia negotii. And for this cause it is, that an Outlawry in Felony, is a Forfeiture of a mans Land: And so it is not in Trespass; for albeit the not appearing be the next cause of both, yet in the first cause they do differ, Co. 1. 99. Plow. 292. Co. 2. 92.

Felo de se.

Affets.

Tythe.

If Timber-trees that are not tithesable become rotten and dry, non portans fructum nec folia in astate, nec existens macie minus; yet their privilege doth remain, and they are Tythe-free still. So if an Estate in tail become an Estate in tail after possibility of issue extinct, yet many of the Privileges annexed to the first Estate remain still. And hence appeareth, that effects do sometimes continue when their causes are gone. But for the most part these Rules hold, Sublata causa tollitur effectus, & cessante causa cessabit effectus: As when a Guardian in Socage dieth, the Wardship of the Infant shall cease, and not go to his Executor; So if one give Land or Goods with his Daughter or Kinswoman in Marriage, and after they are divorced, now she shall have all the Goods again that are not spent. So if one enter into Religion, and make his Executors, and after be arraigned, he shall have the Goods again that remain.

Guardine.

Husband and Wife.

Office.

If the King grant an Office at will, and also Forty pounds Fee to him for his life, pro Officio illo: In this case if he put him out of the Office, the Fee shall cease. If a Rent be granted for a Way, stop the Way, and the Rent shall be stopped.

If an Annuity be granted pro consilio, or pro servitio impendendo; if the Counsel or the Service be withdrawn, the Annuity is determined.

It is not a principal challenge to a Juror, that he hath married with the Mother of the party, if she be dead without issue; for the cause of favor is removed. Challenge.

If one give a man a wound the first of May, and the King the second of May pardon to him all Felonies and misdemeanors, and the third day of May the party dyed of this stroke; by this Pardon the Felony is discharged. But yet, Sublata una causa, si alia remanet, non tollitur effectus. Pardon.

In case of Soccage-Tenure, whereas in times past the Tenants did use to ear the Demesns of the Lord with their Ploughs, the which service was afterward changed into an Annual Rent by consent of the Lord and Tenants; in this case notwithstanding the Lord do alien his Demesns, and have no Land to plow, yet the Tenants shall pay their Rents yearly to the Lord.

Where one doth hold by Rent for Castle-guard, although the Castle fall, yet the Rent doth remain. And albeit the Religious Houses be dissolved and suppressed, yet the money that is paid in lieu of Proxies by the Owners of those Houses remain, Co. 11. 81. 48. 49. 1. 98. Pla. 293. Dyer 13. Co. super Lit. 204. 208. 5 Ed. 4. 8. Dyer 76. 9 Ed. 4. 10. 15 Ed. 4. 14. Dyer 2. Davis Rep. 1. 13 Ed. 4. 10. 14 H. 7. 2. 1. 401. Davis Rep. 3. Co. 4. 88.

A. leaseth White-acre to B. for life, B. doth make waste; A. doth grant the Reversion to C. B. doth attorn: A. cannot have an Action of Waste, because the Reversion in respect of which it is given, is out of him. So if there be Lord and Tenant, and the Tenant alien in Mortmain, and then the Lord grant the seigniority to a stranger, and the Tenant attorn; in this case the Grantor shall not enter for the Mortmain (albeit it be within the year,) because the Seigniority in respect of which the Entry is given, is out of him, Perk. f. 20. Waste. Mortmain.

Of Certainty and Incertainty.

Certainty is the plain, clear, and distinct setting down of things, and is said to be the mother of Repose; and is opposed to Incertainty, (i.) when a thing is so ambiguously and doubtfully set down, as one cannot tell how to take or understand it; and this is said to be the mother of Contention. And this Certainty is of three sorts. Certainty and Incertainty.

1. To a common intent; and that is sufficient in a Bar in pleading, which doth defend the party and excuse him; and this is sufficient in Deeds.

2. To a certain intent in general; and this is required in all Counts, Declarations, Replications, and Pleadings of the Plaintiff, and Indictments to convince the Defendant.

3. To a certain intent in every particular: And this the Law doth altogether reject; for Nimia subtilitas in iure reprobatu, et talis certitudo certitudinem confundit. Co. 5. 121. Plow. 25.

The Questions of Certainty and Incertainty grow upon Records; as Writs, Counts, Pleas, Replications, Verdicts, Offices, Retorns, Fines, Recoveries, and such like: And Writings; as Feoffments, Gifts, Grants, Leases, Wills, and the like, and Tenures, Warranties, and other things. But in all these things this Rule is admitted; Id certum est, quod certum reddi potest. And therefore if one lease his Land in W. rendering Rent for every Acre twelve pence; this is a good Render enough, for this may be made certain. So if one hold his Land of his Lord, to shear all the Sheep depasturing in the Lords Maner, this is a good Tenure, for here is a certainty in an uncertainty, Plow. 6. 7 Ed. 3. 8. Co. super Lit. 96.

A convenient Certainty is required in Writs, Declarations and Pleadings, and especially in Writs, more then is in Writings: For if a Writ be abated for Incertainty, the Plaintiff may have another Writ; but if his Deed be avoided for Incertainty, he cannot have a new Deed at his pleasure, Co. 11. 25. Co. 5. 21. Dyer 84.

If the King grant by Patent Cognizans de Plea, and say not ubi, nobiscum ipso, this is it seems void for Incertainty, Br. Patent 200.

2. When, and what Certainties require; and where Incertainty will hurt or defect. In Record.

In a Verdict. If an Action of Debt be brought against Executors, and they plead they have fully administred, &c. and the Jury find they have enough in their hands, and say not to what value; this Verdict is void and insufficient for Incertainty, 40 Ed. 3. 15. Co. 9 74. b.

In Writings. Writings are sometimes void for Incertainty in all, sometimes in part only; and sometimes not, but the Incertainty may be holpen and made certain by Averment or other means. And this Incertainty is sometimes in persons, and sometimes in things; as in a Grant, in the person of the Grantor, or Grantee. In the thing granted, either in respect of the place where it is, the quantity or quality of the thing, or name whereby it is called; sometimes in the estate, sometimes in the time, sometimes in the manner. As if I. S. by the name of I. (without any Sir-name) do grant, or give, or take by this name; this is void by Incertainty: So if the party be named by his Sir-name only, without any Christian name. So if a Grant be, To the Church-wardens of S. without any more; or, to God, to Church, or Poor, or to three or four of a Parish, not naming them; or to one of the sons of I. S. and he hath many sons; or to him that shall be the first son of I. S. and he hath then no son; or to the Monks of such an Abbey; or to I. S. or I. D. in the disjunctive: All Grants made after this fashion are void for Incertainty, Perk. sect. 39. &c. Plow. 6. Co. 8. 155. Perk. sect. 54. 55. 56. See Deed.

If I grant to one so much Wood in such a place, as I can spare, or can be spared; or if I have a Wood of an hundred acres, and grant to one ten acres of it; and do not say where, or what part of the Wood: Or if I have a Manor, and grant the ten acres out of the Manor, but do not say where: Or if twenty Tenants hold of me by the Rent of twelve pence apeece, and I grant ten shillings to perceive out of their Tenements, or ten shillings parcel of the twenty shillings: Or if I grant a Corody or Estovers, and say not where, nor what in certain; or if I grant Land, and say not in what County nor Parish: In all these, and such like cases, the Grant will be void for Incertainty, Dyer 91. 28. H. 6. 12. 9 Ed. 4. 11. Fiphol's Ley 13.

If I give a Horse to I. D. being present, and say to him, I. S. take this, and his name is I. D. this is a good gift, notwithstanding this mistake and miscalling. But so it had not been; if I had delivered it to a stranger to the use of I. S. when I meant I. D. So if I say to I. S. Here I give you the Ring with the Ruby, and deliver it with my hand, and the Ring bear a Diamond, and no Ruby; this is a good gift. And so had it been by word or writing, without the delivery of the thing it self, if I give the Ring with the Ruby, and have none such, but one with a Diamond. But I doubt this last Case.

If I grant to two men & hereditaries, and do not say [to their heirs:] And if I be possessed of a Term of years, and grant all the residue of my Term which shall be come at my death: In all these cases it is void for Incertainty, Co. 1. 55. Kely. 108. Plow. 520. Bro. 417.

3. When not, but may be holpen by Averment or Election. It is not necessary one should set down the Certainty of a thing in pleading, when either it is not possible so to do, or it is a thing out of his knowledg, or unto which he is a stranger that doth plead it, or of which in common presumption he can have no certainty, Plow. 128. Co. 4. 89.

If a Fine be levied to I. S. the son of M. S. and he have two sons of that name; this may be holpen by Averment, and is good enough.

In Writings. If the King by his Letters Patents grant to another all the Manors and Advowsons that did belong to the Priory of H. or all the Manors and Advowsons that were I. S. which were attaint, &c. These be good Grants, although it be not set down in what County it lie, 32 H. 6. 20. Co. 9. 47.

If the Duke of Buckingham by that name be Grantor or Grantee in a Grant, this is good and certain enough, without any Christian or Surname, Perk. sect. 36.

If the name of the Father be I. S. and the name of the Son I. S. also, and one of them grant by the name of I. S. without any addition or distinction, this is good enough, Perk. sect. 37.

If an Abbot had granted by the name of his Foundation, this had been good.

If a Grant be to the Bishop of Worcester, without any more, this is good enough, Perk. sect. 45.

If one grant to the first son of J. S. without any more addition, and J. S. have two sons, this is good enough. Perk. sect. 34.

If an Estate be granted to J. S. the Remainder to him that shall come the next morning to Pauls: If J. S. the Grantee do live til then, and one do come there that is capable, this is a good Remainder, and certain enough. So if the Remainder hath been limited to him that J. S. shall name within three days, if he do name, this is made certain. Perk. sect. 36.

If a Lease be made to a husband and Wife for One and twenty years, the Remainder to the Survivor of them for One and twenty years: Or a Gift in Tail be made to the Husband and Wife, and the Heirs of the Survivor of them; this is good enough. Co. 10. 51.

If one grant his Manors of A. and B. and say not in what County or Parish; or lease all his Land in the Parish of A. and say not in what County; or lease or grant all his Land descended to him from his Father, with more; or grant another a Robe, or a Rent of Twenty shillings, or one of his Horses in his Stable (having many there) or Twenty Loads of Ash, or of Oak in such a Wood; these Grants are good enough, and may be made certain by Election. So if one grant to another so many Trees in his Wood as J. S. shall say may be spared, Co. 9. 47. Plow. 191. Co. 2. 37. Dyer 91.

If I make a Lease to another for so many years as J. S. shall name, this is good, after he hath named. So if I make a Lease to begin after the Surrender, Forfeiture or other determination of a former Lease, this is certain enough. So if I make a Feoffment to one of Two acres of Land, Habendum the one for life, the other in tail, this is good enough. Plow. 6. Co. 6. 36. 8. 56. Co. 2. 37.

If one bind himself in an Obligation to pay me all such money as his Brother oweth me; this is certain enough, for that by Reference and Averment it may be made certain, Morgan vers. Johnson, B. R. P. 39 Eliz. See Dred.

CHAP. XLII.

Of the Chancery.

Conscience or Equity (as our Law takes it) is said to be Tacitum animi infallibileque facti nostri iudicium, à communi iustitia formula quam Deus insculpsit omnibus hominibus productum, per quod accusatur res mala, & defenditur bona. And this being a ded and assisted by the Laws of God, Nature, Nations, Reason, and our Country, is the Rule by which they go and proceed in their Courts of Equity, to allay, qualifie, and temper the rigor, severity and sharpness of the Common-Law in some special cases: Wherein, if it be strictly observed, it will fall out to be summum jus, and consequently summa injuria.

In these cases there are Courts of Equity appointed; and amongst these especially the Chancery, which is the chief Court, West. Symb. lib. 2. Doct. & Stu. in toto.

The Chancery is defined to be, A Court of Equity or Conscience, moderating the rigor of other Courts that are more strictly bound to the Letter of the Law, 3 Ed. 4. 15. 19 Ed. 4. 2. In this Court the Lord Chancellor or Lord Keeper was, now the Commissioners of the Great Seal are chief Judges: And herein they, and in their absence, the Master of the Rolls, do make Orders and Decrees. And under these there are many other Officers belonging to this Court; as the twelve Masters in ordinary, which are Assistants, the six Clerks, Examiners, Serjeant at Arms, and others: These Commissioners keep the Great Seal, and seal all Writs and Patents, Plowden, fol. 213. Crompton, Jurisdiction of Courts.

Self. 3.
Of the power of this Court in the general.

This Court is said to have a twofold power. Ordinary, as in cases of Traverse, Endowment of a woman, Scire facias, to repeal Patents, and the like; and herein the Court is limited and confined to the Rules of the Common-Law, Cary's Rep. 50. 71. And Extraordinary and unlimited, which is in cases of Equity, wherein relief is to be had by a Suit here in a way of Bill and Answer: And it is by the power of this Court, that Commissions of Charitable Uses, Bankrupts, and Sewers are issued forth: Also here in some special cases, a Superfedeas or Subpoena, or Privilege is granted to discharge a man out of Prison: A Subpoena may be had to force Witnesses to appear in other Courts, that have no power to call them in to testify their knowledge; as in London, when the man lives within its Jurisdiction, Car. Rep. 37. 43. 44. So here sometimes, and in some cases, Commissions have been granted to examine Wastes; To prove a Child legitimate; To set out meet ways for passages; To prove Customs; To examine Witnesses in perpetuum rei memoriam, Tot. in toto: Car. Rep. in toto.

By way of Bill and Answer it will give relief in many cases against, besides, and beyond the Rules of the Common-Law, in such like cases as these: As to enforce others to contribute to a Charge by the Common-Law put upon one alone, to the which others ought in Equity to contribute a part, Tot. 41. To relieve one against a man that hath falsified and broken his Trust with him. To relieve one against a man that holds him to extremity, upon an Engagement: As when the Engagement is unreasonable, dishonest, impossible, discharged, voluntary, and without any consideration; gotten by practice, fraud or force, or the like. To relieve one against the extremity of a Forfeiture, Tot. 26. 27. To enforce the performance of an Agreement, to which by Law a man cannot be compelled, Tot. 4. 69. To have the Tuition of a Child that doth belong to him, Car. Rep. 96. 97. To force an Enrolment of a Deed, if need be, Car. Rep. 97. To recover a liberty of common Fishing, or the like; and upon every Interruption, and an Affidavit thereof, an Attachment may be had, Car. Rep. 104. To restrain other Courts that take upon them a greater Jurisdiction than they have, and to remove the Suit into this Court, which may be by a Certiorari, Car. Rep. 60. 56. 48. 65. 68. 73. 74. 82. 84. 85. 89. 90. 92. 95. 96. 97. 99. 102. 109. 37. To stay the proceedings of other Courts, when they are unjust, Car. Rep. 73. To enforce obedience to the Decrees of the Provincial Councils, Court of Requests, and some other Courts, when by contumacie they are disobeyed. To reduce the general Customs of a Manor to a certainty between the Lord and Tenants, or the Tenants themselves, Car. Rep. 21. To recover and settle Land or Money given to charitable or pious uses, and mis-employed, Tot. 27. 28. To force a man to give his wife Alimony, (i.) Maintenance, Tot. 93. 94. To force Creditors to take a reasonable Composition of their Debtor, he being disabled, Tot. 47. To ascertain and find Common, Tot. 36. 37. To ascertain and set out a way, Tot. 23. To ascertain, to distinguish a mans Land when it is compounded and confounded with another mans, Car. Rep. 16. especially when it is to pay Debts, or the like, 14 Jac. So when Free-land or Copihold-land are confounded, it will distinguish; or if it be lost, give a recompence for it, Pickering's Case, 5 Car. To ascertain the Fines of Copiholders, Tot. 49. To force an Action to be tryed in any County, Tot. 1. To force Executors or others that have money in their hands, there to lie long to give security or interest for it, Tot. 6. To examine the Probate of a Will, especially if the Will concern Land, Tot. 139. To recover a Legacie, or force the performance of a Will, Tot. 24. To recover Tythes in Kind, or money for it in some cases, Tot. 68. 184. 185. To recover ones Land, Debt or Duty, although he have lost Conveyance or Writing, by which he should make his Title to it, or otherwise be without remedy at Law for it, Tot. 81. 6. To force a man that hath taken money for Land, assured by defective Conveyance, to make the same perfect and good, Tot. 14. 3. 42.

To

To force a Tenant to attorn to perfect an Assurance. To force a man to prove payment of money, agreed and acknowledged to be given upon a Sale of Land, Tot. 15. Dyer 59. And in these and such like cases this Court doth always, or for the most part give relief.

Also in some other special cases this Court doth exercise a power : As to prevent a Disinheritance of an Heir, or restore it, Tot. 42. 81. Avoid an Extinguishment or Suspension of Rent or Common, Crompt. Jur. 49, 50. Tot. 42. 188. 137. Prevent an Occupancy, Hunts Case, 17 Jac. Tot. 187. Avoid the Bar of an Action, by the Statute of 21 Jac. of Limitation, Tot. 53. 179. Order an Executor to pay a Debt out of course, Tot. 53. Make Inclosures of Land and Grounds that are common : Give relief against the turning of a Water-course from a Mill, so as there be any special circumstance in the case, otherwise it is very thie and tender of making Orders in them. But if the substance of the Suit by Bill and Answer, be to overthrow an Act of Parliament made for publique peace and repose ; or to overthrow a fundamental point of the Common-Law ; or to overthrow and take from other Courts their peculiar Jurisdiction, or the like : In such cases regularly this Court doth not give relief, Tot. 47. Crompt. Jur. 45. So likewise if it be such a case as wherein the Plaintiff hath his remedy at Common-Law for the very same thing, he shall not be relieved here. But if one promise to assure me Land for twenty pounds, I may either sue at Law for damages, or here for the Land it self So for a Nuisance, where the Law gives me damages, I may sue here to have the Nuisance removed, or the thing it self restored, 21 H. 7. 41. Cary's Case, 20. 53. 11. And yet there may be some special circumstances in the case which may make the Court retain it, Cary's Rep. 71. If the Suit be grounded on a Will Nuncupative, Lease-parol, or long Lease, to avoid Wardship, or to establish Perpetuities, or to defeat Purchasers, or for Brokage or Rewards to make Marriages, or for Bargain at Play or Wagers, for Bargains for Offices against the Statute of 2 Ed. 6. or upon Contracts for Usury or Simony ; or if it be for Land not worth Forty shillings a year, or for any thing else under the value of Ten pounds ; these are regularly disallowed here : And sometimes upon notice taken hereof by the Court, upon Motion or upon Affidavit only, before the Cause comes to hearing, it is dismissed : But if not, when it comes to hearing it is dismissed, Cary's Rep. 7. 8. 37. 24. 76. Yet circumstances may make these retainable ; as if the Suit for so small a matter be for the Poor of a Parish, or the like, Cary's Rep. 103.

And in these cases the matter being heard upon the Bill and Answer, and the proofs of Witnesses, the Judges are (without any regard to form or mispleading, so as the truth vis & modis may be discovered) to sentence it according to Equity and Conscience. But we shall descend to particular illustrations hereof.

All persons able in Law to sue or be sued, may sue, or be sued here : And for this see Chap. 3.

Relief may be, and is often given against, or for an Infant in this Court. As touching which matter these things are to be known First, as to Suits against an Infant,

1. An Infant was compelled to answer to a Bill in this Court, Hares Case H. 3 Jac. and Mores Case, 11 Car. Tot. 108, 109, 95, 97. And being but twelve years old, was bound by a Decree here, 37 Eliz. Wadhams Case ; and upon a Review decreed again, Cromwells Case, M. 7 Car. Tot. 70. And was committed to the Fleet for disobeying a Decree, 12 Eliz. Tot. 108. 139.

2. The Court may also, if it pleaseth, appoint an Infant defendant a Guardian to defend his Suit, Cary's Rep. 38.

3. A Copihold was surrendered to the use of an Infant, to the Infant, to pay an Annuity to another at his full age, which he refused : It was decreed he should pay it and the arrears thereof, Sawyers Case, 9 Eliz. Tot. 107.

4. Young purchased Lands in the name of Mason, in trust for himself and his heirs, and dies, not declaring any determination of this Trust, procures Mason to convey it to him, being of Kin ; he conveys it to Infants ; C. sues here as next heir, and the Court agrees, that if the benefit of the Trust did belong to C. that it shall be decreed to him during the Minority, and then that the Infants shall convey it, Cary's Rep. 30.

9. One made an Infant Executor, to prevent the payment of his Debts; and he was ordered by the Court to pay them notwithstanding, M. 9 Jac. Tothill 108.

Agreement.

10. An Infant in some special cases may here be concluded by his Agreement: But regularly, if an Infant be twenty years of age, and make a Contract never so much to his advantage, the Court will not conclude him; nor will the Court decree against him by his consent, or the consent of his Parents, but in some special cases upon the merit of the Cause, M. 8 Car. in Chancery, Tothill 109. 95. As a father was about to convey some of his Land to his younger son, and his eldest son promised to give the younger son an hundred pounds to forbear it; in this case the eldest son being an Infant, was ordered to stand to it. See Stiles Case, 2 Car. Tothill 95.

11. A Surrender was made of a Copihold by an Infant, to the use of J. S. for money paid, and no help could be had here, Hughs Case: Tothill 180.

12. If I take Bonds for my money in my childrens name that are Infants, I may release the Debts, and this Court will allow it, and forbid any Suit upon them, Simonds Case. Tothill 26.

For an Infant.

Secondly, As to Suits by or for an Infant. 1. He shall have the same Relief upon a Breach of Trust, Fraud, or the like, in this Court, as another man may have, notwithstanding his Minority, Tothill 108. 2. He may sue by himself, or by his Prochein-Amy or Guardian, as the Court will give leave and order, Woods Case, Hil. 2 Car. Tothill 9.

Husband and Wife, woman-covert.

Sect. 5.
Against her.
Answer.
Decree, Commitment.

Relief may be, and is often given here against, or for a woman that hath a husband, as touching which these things are to be known. First, as to Suits against her,

1. She shall be compelled to answer with, or without her husband. Batsons Case, 14 Car. Mores Case, 11 Car. and M. 5 Car. Palmer's Case, Caryes Rep 100. 101. Tothill 95, 96. especially if he be out of the Land, Tothill 97. 140. And she will be bound by the Decree of this Court, West deans Case, Tothill 93. and may be committed till she do obey it, Stywards Case, Tothill 92. West-deans Case, Tothill 93.

2. The husband sold Lands and Debts which were due to the wife before coverture, and took Wares for it; he dyed, she survived, and he released the Debts; it was ordered against her, Tothill 91.

3. The husband and wife were ordered to levy a Fine, and perfect Assurances, Tobill 93. 6. The husband was ordered to give security, that the wife should release her right to Land, Tothill 92.

Agreement.

4. An Agreement in some cases will here be ordered to conclude her, Stiles Case, Hil. 2 Car. Tothill 97. 95. where the merit of the cause requireth it. As if a man have two Tenements of his wives Land, and they agree with the Tenant, That if he will surrender one, he shall have three lives in the other; and he doth so, and the husband die; the wife was ordered to make it good, Irelands Case, 37 Eliz. Tothill 91. But regularly it is otherwise: And therefore where she hath Land with other Co-heirs, and she with the consent of her husband agree to take One thousand pounds to release her right; the Judges did certifie, she was not to be concluded, Trin. 7 Jac. Dockwrays Case, Tothill 98. Yet, 10 Jac. Randals Case was, That a single woman did agree, and after her marriage subscribed her name with her husband to a latter Agreement, and was concluded by this latter by the Courts Order, Tothill 96. But in Slaters Case, 37 Eliz. Tothill 92. she and her husband did article to forgo her

Jointure

Jointure for other recompence; and a Decree was made thereupon (but without her consent) in her husbands life-time; and after his death the Court would not bind her to this Agreement, Totbill 92.

5. A Lease of Land was made to friends to her use, to begin after her husbands, and they two levy a Fine of the Lands; this will bar them in Equity, Trin. 15 Car. Lifters Case, Totbill 84.9: A. made over his Lease for years to the use of C. his wife; after he and his wife sold the Land, and levied a Fine of it to D. The Court ordered, that the Purchasor should enjoy the Land against the wife after her husbands death, 2 Car. One was seised of Land to the use of a Feme-sole, who after took a husband, and the husband sold the Land; the wife had the money, and she and her husband desired the Feoffee in trust to convey it, and he doth so: Yet it seems this Court will not bar her of the Land after her husbands death. The Court ordered the husband and wife to levy a Fine of mortgaged Lands settled in her, Lord Griffins Case, 4 Car. To bring in Evidences, Kings College Case, 4 Eliz. Forbid her to make Waite, Totbill 92. 10. One did convey Land to the husband in trust, and he took the profit, and left it with his wife, and she marry again: They two were sued here, and yet neither as Executor nor Administrator to a first husband, Arklands Case, Totbill 106.

Trust barred.
Fine.

As to Suits by and for her,

1. In some cases she may sue her husband, as for Alimony and Maintenance, where they be parted: But ordinarily in other cases she may not sue her husband, nor her husband sue her, Simpsons Case, Tot. 94.97.

For a woman;
Alimony.

2. She hath been allowed to sue, without her husband, and without his privity, especially he being beyond the Sea, Tot. 95.94.97. The woman and her husband agreeing to part upon difference, and he giving her a sum of money for her livelihood, which was put into a friends hand for her; she was allowed to sue alone for this without her husband, Cary's Rep. 87.

3. She was admitted to sue here for a Duty released by her husband gone beyond Sea, Farewells Case, 32 Eliz. and Bakers Case, 5 Car. Tot. 95. As for her Jewels, 13. Earl of Derby's Case, Tot. 96. And yet she having goods she pretended to be her Paraphernalia, the husband devised them, and it was here allowed to be good, and she remediless, Davenports Case, 5 Car. Tot. 79.

Devise by her husband.

4. If a woman had goods at the marriage, and the husband doth use and dispose them all his life-time, and then giveth them away, or make an Executor; this Court it seems will give her no relief, albeit he leave never so great an estate besides; unless they be goods set apart and preserved for her livelihood, by some agreement, or the like. Totbil. 55.

5. A woman divorced from her husband Causa frigiditatis, sued here for her portion her father being alive, and recovered it, Barrows case Tot. 81.

Devise by her

6. The wife being parted from the husband, and having an estate to her self, was allowed by the Court to devise it by her will, M: 15: Car: Tot 97. Georges case.

7. If a feme sole, being possessed of a term, granteth it over, or a term be granted by another to her own use, and then she taketh a husband, and dyeth; in this case the Court ruled it to go to the Executor or Administrator of the wife, and not to the surviving husband. Pasch: 32 Eliz: Withnams case in Chancery, Coe: upon Litt: 351. Where the case was, A being possessed of a term, granted upon a marriage to be had between him and K S, to J. S her brother, to her use; and after marriage A dyeth; and she marieth again, and then she dyed; J. S the brother took out Administration of her goods, and got the Lease, and the second husband sued him in this Court for the Lease, but the Court would not relieve him, Withnam vers. Waterhouse.

Trust how ordered between husband and
wife.

8. A. being possessed of a Lease for years, granted it to B. and C. to the use of A. and his wife; and after A. granted away all his Interest to a stranger, and the Court would not order it against the wife, Dyer 369. Crompt. Jur. 65:

9. A. conveyed her Lease for years to Lessees in trust, to the use of her daughters and children lineally: A. had a daughter by one husband, who had issue, and it dyed, and the husband also; then she marries again; then the Lessees in trust convey the Lease to the mother and her second husband, and discharges the trust; she gives it to her her husband, and the heir sued for it : It was ordered, that the husband, and not the heir should have it, Baskervilles Case, Tot. 95.

10. A widow being about to marry, to prevent her husbands disposal of the Land, conveys it to friends in trust, who with the husband do sell it for valuable consideration, and she sued here : Decreed that the Purchaser should reconvey it to her, but should first deduct all his disbursements, Fitzjames Case, Tot. 43.

A Feme-sole.

A single woman, widow or maid, may sue and be sued here as another body ; wherein take these Cases.

Dower.

1. A widow of a Tenant in capite sued here for her Dower, and had a Commission to set it out, Wilds Case, 25 Eliz. Tot. 82.

2. But no woman shall recover Dower of a Trust here, M. 2 Car. Kemps Case, Tot. 99.

3. When she cannot tell who is Tenant to the Land, she may sue, albeit her Writ of Dower lieth at Law to discover the Tenant, to know against whom to bring her Action, Tot. 99.

4. A convey Land to B. and his heirs, to the use of him and his heirs in trust, for C. and his heirs, (B. having then a wife) B. die, and his wife sued for Dower of the Land : C. sued against her for relief here, but it was denied ; yet the wife of C. should not have had Dower in this case, for a woman shall have no Dower of a Trust, Herns Case, Tot. 99. So A. delivers B. Five hundred pounds to put to use for him, and B. doth buy Land with it, and makes A. believe it is for him and in his name, but it was in his own name : A. it seems satisfied herewith, B. dieth, and his wife sueth to be endowed of the Land ; and the Court could give A. no relief against this Suit, Trin. 6 Car. In the Court of Requests, if a woman-Executrix subject to a Devassavit, marry a husband, if he have not to satisfy, he shall be imprisoned by order here, Cary's Rep. 24. A Copiholder, it seems, may not be sued for the Land without the Lord, Cary's Rep. 57.

Heir.

An heir also here in some cases shall sue and be sued further then the Law bindeth him ; as in these cases.

1. An heir of an Estate in Tail having Lands in Fee descended from the Ancestor, in lieu thereof is bound by Decree to repay the Purchase-money, or let the Purchaser have the Free-land, Pierces Case, 8 Jac. Tot. 184. The mother and son bought tailed Land of Hearl, Ancestor to the Plaintiff ; some of the money due on a Bond which is lost : The Court thought fit to charge the mother and the son, because of the Land in their possession, Hil. 1 Jac. Cary's Rep. 25.

2. A dumb man was ordered to answer here, 14 Car. Tot. 40. And yet 22 Eliz. a man both senseless and dumb, was ordered not to answer, Tot. 92. It is then to be ordered according to his capacity.

3. The father sold his intailed Land, and suffered a Recovery, but had little for them ; it seems the Heir may compel the Purchaser here to give the worth, Tot. 182.

Agreement.

4. The father articulated for Land, the son no party, but consented to it, and it was agreed against him, Pools Case, Trin. 4 Jac. Tot. 69.

5. A Deed not enrolled was decreed against the Heir of the Land, Tot. 55.

6. The father conceiving his Land to be Freehold, gave part of it to a younger son, and it fell out there was an old sleeping Deed of Intail ; and yet it was ordered the younger son should have it, Pountneys Case, Tot. 54.

Executors.

Executors may charge or be charged in Equity further than the Law doth charge : wherein first as to Suits or Acts by them, take these things.

For them.

1. Here they may sue one another, Tot. 8.

2. One of them may sue an Executor of an Executor, if he have gotten the Estate into his hands, Breretons Case, 6 Jac. Tot. 87.

3. Two Executors be, one doth disagree ; the act of the other shall bind in Equity, as it doth in Law, Bacons Case, Tot. 87.

Against them.

Secondly, as to Suits against them, take these things.

1. One Executor alone without the rest may be sued here ; but he shall be charged for no more then he hath, Harbuge Case, 35 Eliz. Tot. 86.

2. An Executor shall be bound by a Decree against the Testator, Hil. 5 Car. Decree.
3. He must pay Costs adjudged here against the Testator, if he have Assets. Costs.
4. He shall not be charged here for a Trespass done by the Testator, Hollands Trespas.

Cafe, Tot. 87.

5. Nor may he be compelled here to give Bond to perform the Will, without special cause be shewed; as that he is decayed in his Estate, or hath broken the Trust already in some particular, or the like, Browns Cafe, 37 Eliz. Tot. 86.

6. He may here be ordered to pay a Debt by Word, before a Debt due by Specialty, Tot. 53.

One Jointenant, or Tenant in common, may here have relief against another. See Tenants in Common. Jointenants.

The father may have relief against his own son, in case of breach of Trust for a Lease, Pasch. 1597. Domers Cafe. The Cases wherein relief is to be had in this Court, follow.

A Use or Trust was, and still is, either of Land, or of Goods; and both these are either exprefs or implied.

Self. 6.
Upon a Trust or Confidence.
Of Lands.

A Use or Trust of Land, was a Trust reposed in another, that he should suffer him that did trust, to take the profit of it, and he that was trusted was to dispose the Land according to the direction of him that trusted him. As when a Feoffment was made to J. S. and his heirs, to the use of W. S. and his heirs; heretofore J. S. had the estate and property of the Land, but W. S. had, or was to have the profits in honesty and equity: So if one had agreed with W. S. for a piece of Land for twenty pounds paid, and had no assurance; yet the equity of the Land was in the Contractor.

The use of Goods is, when one man hath them in trust for another. The use of Goods or Lands expressed is, when the Trust or Use is expressed between the parties, upon the making of the Estate implied, when it is not declared upon the Agreement, but left to the construction of Law: As if I bargain and sell my Land, levy a Fine, make a Feoffment, or suffer a Recovery of my Land without money, and no Use expressed, this in Law is to my own use; but if it be for money, it shall be to the use of the Bargainee, Conusee, Recoverer or Feoffee: And if it be without consideration, that I conveyed my Land by Feoffment to J. S. to have and to hold to him and his heirs, to the use of his heirs; in this case J. S. and his heirs hath the Use in Law, Co. 1. 121: super Lit. 271, 272. D. & St. 95. Co. 2. 58. 9. 11. Dyer 18. 146.

A Use at the Common-Law, before the Statute was made, was, and where that Statute doth not take place, is nothing but a meer Confidence and Trust collateral to, and distinct from the Land annexed in privacy of Estate, and to the Person touching the Land to this purpose, that Cestuy que use should take the profit of the Land, and the Feoffee or Ter-tenant that was trusted should make Estates and otherwise dispose of the Land, as the Cestuy que use in his life or at his death by his last Will and Testament should direct and appoint: And if he made no disposition, then that it should go to the Heir. So that the Feoffee had the Freehold, or the sole property of the thing in him, and Cestuy que use had neither jus in re, nor jus ad rem; (for if he, against the will of the Feoffee, had entred into the Land, he had been a Trespasser) but a bare confidence or trust, for which the Cestuy que use had no remedy but in Chancery upon breach of the trust, and there to have the Feoffee imprisoned until he perform the trust according to the Order of the Court. And these Uses to some purposes were reputed in Law as Chattels, and therefore were devisable by Will; and to some purpose, as Hereditaments, and a kind of Inheritance, of which there was a possessio fratris, &c. And to some purposes neither Chattels nor Hereditaments, for they were not esteemed Assets in the Heir or Executor.

And to every of these Uses there were two inseparable incidents: Confidence in the Person, and Privacy in the Estate, expressed by the parties, or implied by the Law. And when either of these failed, the Use was either gone for ever, or suspended for a time at the least. And therefore if the Feoffee to Use upon good consideration had enfeoffed another of the Land that had notice of the Use, the Use had been gone for ever; because howsoever here was a Privacy of Estate, yet here was no Confidence in the Person. But if the Feoffment had been without Consideration to such a one; in

in this case the Use had remained still, because the Law did imply a notice. So also it seems the Law was, when it was made in consideration of Marriage only. And if a Disseisor, Abator, or Intruder had come to the possession of the Land whereof the Use was, albeit he had notice of the Use, yet the Use was suspended during their possession, and they should not have been seised to Use as the Feoffee was; for they come not to the Land in the per, but in the post. And if a Lord by Escheat, Lord of a Vilain, or one that had entred for Mortmain, or that had recovered in a Cessavit, &c. had come to such Land, and had notice of the Use, the Use had been gone for ever; for these came to the Land in the post, and above the Use: And the Tenant in Dower and by the Courtesie should not be seised to Uses in being; for all these wanted Privy of Estate. And if there had been Tenant for life, the Remainder in Fee to the use of another, and the Tenant for life had made a Feoffment in Fee to one that had notice of the Uses, this second Feoffee should not have stood seised to the first Uses. So if the Husband had made a Feoffment in Fee of the Land of his Wife upon Consideration, and without any Use expressed; the Wife should not have had a Subpoena, because the Feoffee was not in Privy of Estate of the Wife. And if Cessuy que use for life or in tail, the Remainder in Tail, with divers Remainders over in Use, had made a Feoffment to one that had Notice, he should not have been seised to the first Uses, causa qua supra.

But to open this a little further, we are to know, that by the Statute of 27 H. 8. 10. the Use or Trust, and the Possession of Lands for the most part, are now at this day united: And in all such cases where they are united, and the Use executed by that Statute, the Chancery doth not meddle, but send men to Law. And such is this, where one seised of Land in Fee, doth convey it to the use of one and his heirs, or heirs of his body, or for life, or to the use of one of his Executors and Administrators for years.

But there are some Uses and Trusts still that are not executed by the Statute; and these remain as they were before, and are in the consueance and order of the Chancery: As where Lands are conveyed without Consideration in Fee-simple, after this manner; That the Feoffee and his Heirs shall take the profits, and deliver them to the Feoffor and his Heirs; or that the Feoffee shall account and give the profits to the Feoffor; or that the Feoffee shall convey the Land to the Feoffor or to his Heir at his age of twenty one years: Or where it is conveyed to J. S. and his Heirs, on confidence that J. S. shall alien it to whom the Feoffor, or to whom W. S. shall appoint, or the like: Or where the Lands be conveyed to certain Uses expressed, and there to other secret Uses agreed upon between the parties: So where Land is conveyed without Consideration to one and his Heirs, without expressing any Use or Intent; this is to the use of the Feoffor, who may dispose of it as he pleaseth. But if it be to any intent certain, as to take back an Estate with Remainders to others, &c. here he cannot change it.

Where Leases for years in being before, are granted over in use or in trust: As a Lessee for years of Land grants it over to A. and B. and their Assigns, to the use of the Grantor and his Wife, for the term of their two lives; Or if one be seised of Land in Fee, and he bargain or sell it, or make a Lease of it to another in trust, and for the benefit of a third person: These and such like Uses and Trusts are not within, nor executed by the Statute, but they remain as they were before the Statute. For all the State is in the party trusted; and the Grantor, or he to whose use the Grant is, hath nothing but a Use, for which he hath his remedy only in Chancery, where all these matters are determinable. For it is a rule, That as the Questions of Uses and Trusts that are within the Statute, are to be decided and ruled by the Judges of the Common-Law; so all other Questions of Uses and Trusts that are out of the Statute, are to be ruled and decided by the Judges of the Chancery, Co 1. 138. Dyer 369, 356. Crompt. Jur. 65. 58, 59. And the Judges in Chancery, in ruling these Uses, do proceed much after the Rules they went by in the regulating of Uses at the Common-Law, before the Statute. It is needful then we give you a taste of these.

For this then, we are to know, that before the Statute these were the Laws of Uses.

1. The Feoffor was to take the profits of the Land; and he might have disposed it in his life time, or at his death to whomsoever he pleased; and his friends in trust were to settle it accordingly, or be enforced to it by Subpoena in this Court: And if he did not dispose it, the use was to go to his Heirs; and if he had died without Heir or disposition, it seems the Feoffees should have had the Land.

2. If the first Feoffee had conveyed it to a second Feoffee to the same use, or to a second Feoffee that had notice of the uses; in these cases the second Feoffee had it to the same uses. But if the Feoffee had sold it bona fide, or conveyed the Land to one that had no notice of the uses; in these cases the use had been gone, and he to whose use it was, remediless for the Land.

3. A Bruit of a trust, or ones saying there was a trust to another, I being about to buy the Land, because he would not have me buy it, it seems is not sufficient; But a Suit about it, and proof of it in Chancery, is sufficient notice to him that shall buy it.

4. If the cestuy que use had appointed the Land to be sold by his Feoffees, to pay his Debts, the Creditors might have compelled the Feoffee to sell it; If he in his life time, or by Will at his death, had appointed them to convey it to J. S.; J. S. might have compelled them to it, and so their Heirs.

5. The Feoffees (if any occasion had been) were to bring or defend any Action for the Land, and to plead such Pleas as the Feoffors should appoint, or be enforced in Chancery to it.

6. If the Feoffee die, and the Land descend to his heir, the party to whose use, as it seems, had no remedy against him.

7. If the Feoffee or Donee to use, sell to one that knows of the use, the Subpoena shall go against them both, otherwise against the party trusted onely, who must make a recompence for the breach of trust, if the Land be gone. And so where the party trusted had released to a Trespassor that knew of the trust; or a Statute or Bond was made to A. to the use of B. and A. release to the Obligor privy to the trust; the Subpoena shall be against them both, albeit some hold the contrary.

8. The Feoffor could not have disposed it, or medled with the profits in Law, without the Feoffees leave.

9. If cestuy que use had been attainted of Felony, the Lord could not have remedy by Subpoena for his Escheat.

10. If the cestuy que use had made no disposal, or had been barred by the corruption of Blood, it seems the Feoffee might have retained the Land for ever to his own use.

11. The Feoffees of the Feoffor, desired it were to do any Act with the Land for the good of the Feoffor, and if he require him to make any Estate to another, he must have done it: And if the Feoffor had appointed them to convey to A. for life, the Remainder to B.; if A. had refused, he must have conveyed to B. the Remainder, or B. might have compelled him thereunto in Chancery: But such Requests were to be made in writing, and could not be made by a Message, or upon desire by word onely.

12. If one had had four Feoffees of his Land in trust, and had sold it to J. S. and told two of them, that his Will was that all four of them should convey it to J. S. and they two notified his Will to the other two; the first two did Enfeoff J. S. the other two refused, as they might, without somewhat under his hand to prove his Will: The Feoffor after sold the Land to another, and required the other two Feoffees to Enfeoff it; it was said this second sale was the best. The Feoffees in trust might have given allowance to necessary Officers as Stewards, Bailiffs, and Receivers, and had allowance thereof upon their Account, but could not grant Annuities to their Council &c.

13. The Equity and use of the Land, being to go according to Conscience, the Subpoena for Relief herein in this Court is given accordingly.

These were the general Rules by which Uses at Common-Law were guided, and much after after this are uses not executed by the Statute, and Trusts of Lands and Goods ordered and guided at this day, as may partly appear in the cases following.

1. Of Inheritance and Freehold.

2. Of Chattels.

3. Of Goods.

Of Inheritance and Freeholds.

2. In respect of the Case. Cases of Uses and Trusts out of the Statute of Uses, and otherwise under the Survey and Order of this Court only.

If I without consideration Enfeoff one, and his Heirs of Land, to the intent that he shall take the profits thereof and deliver to me and my Heirs: Or to the intent he shall account to me and my Heirs for the profit thereof; or to the intent he shall re-convey it to me and my Heirs; or to my Heir at Twenty one years old; or to the intent that he shall alienate it to J. S. and his Heirs, or to whom I shall appoint; or I convey it to certain uses expressed: But there are other secret uses agreed upon between us. In all these and such like cases, which are out of the Statute of Uses, this Court, if any complaint be, will order the parties trusted to perform the trust.

But for the opening hereof further, take these cases

Se⁸. 7. Of Estates of Freehold.

First, If I without any consideration bargain and sell my Land by Indenture to one and his Heirs, to the use of another and his Heirs (which is a use upon a use) it seems this Court will order this. But if it were in consideration of money by him paid; here it seems the express use is void, both in Law and Equity. And if a Woman in consideration of Four hundred pounds paid her by her son, bargain and sell her Land by Indenture to him and his Heirs, to the use of her self for life, and after of the Heirs of her son; in which case by Law, the Fee-simple is to the son presently, and the use for life to the Mother void; nor is there (as it seems) any relief for her in this Court in a way of Equity, because of the consideration paid: But if there were no consideration given, Contra, Dyer 169. 155. Crompt. Jur. 55. 155. Totbil 188. 99. And yet if I Enfeoff A. in Fee of my Land, without any consideration to the use of A. and his Heirs, upon trust that he shall alien it to whom I shall appoint, and I do make no appointment: In this case A. shall hold it to him and his Heirs for ever, discharged of trust, Crompt. Jur. 58. 59. And if I Enfeoff B. and his Heirs to the use of B. and his Heirs, in trust for C. and his Heirs; it seems C. may be relieved here.

Secondly, If I deliver one money to buy Land for me, and he buy it for himself; I shall here recover the Land bought, or the money I delivered to him, Crompt. Jur. 48. So if I deliver one money to put out for me, and he buy Land with it in his own name, and tells me it is for me, and in my name, and I agree to it; the Court will order me the Land. If I give one money to purchase Land therewith to him and his Heirs, and to suffer one to take the profits thereof during my life, and he keepeth the profits from me; I shall be relieved here.

Thirdly, If I purchase Land with my money, and buy it in mine own, and a friends name, to prevent my Wife of Dower out of it, and my friend being requested, refuseth to release his right in the Land to me; I may compel him to it in this Court, Crompt. Jur. 54. 55. Castlings case. Fitz. Account 23. Yonges case.

The Defendant confessed the trust was ordered upon notice to convey it accordingly at the Plaintiffs charge, Caries Rep. 67.

Sale to pay a mans debts:

Fourthly, A voluntary conveyance was made to friends in trust, to the use of the mans own children, with a Remainder over; the Feoffor being indebted much money, the Court enabled him to sell part of it to pay his Debts, Grants case, Totbil 42.

Jointenancy.

Fifthly, If Land be conveyed to A. and his Heirs, in trust for B. and C. and their Heirs, and B. by his will deviseth his part of it; in this case the Court would not decree this Devise; but held that the trust was to go jointly as the Interest in Law doth, 6 Car. in Chancery.

So a man grants an Estate in trust to friends, to the use of three Daughters and their Heirs: The Court ordered all to the Survivor, Barrows case, 10 Car. Totbil 84.

Sixthly,

Sixthly, A. enfeoffed B. in Trust, and after he by Deed in which A. is a party, Imperfect Deed. makes a bargain and sale to J. S. to the use of A. for life, the Remainder to W. S. in Tail, the Remainder to J. S. in Tail, but is not enrolled; A. dies, W. S. dieth without issue, B. giveth out Speeches to J. S. that he hath no estate in the Land, and that if he will have any made good, it must be by him; whereupon J. S. being afraid, accepted of an Estate for his own life onely from him; And after sued in Chancery to have the Estate in Tail, executed according to the Trust; and it was denied, and said he had concluded himself, and that otherwise B. should have been ordered to execute the State, M. S. Car. Southwells case in Chancery.

Seventhly, If one Enfeoff me of Land, to the end, that I shall Enfeoff J. S. thereof, and I convey it away to another without his privity; if he do afterwards agree to this, it seems he is remediless, Totbil 186, 187.

Eighthly, If one that hath Land in Trust, convey it to one that hath notice of it, and he convey it to one that had no notice of it: In this case it seems he that had no notice is seised to the first uses, Totbil 186. Pills case.

Ninthly, If one convey his Land to friends in Trust, and after sell the Inheritance, The Trust in Equity goes to the Purchaser, Decreed, Totbil 44. 10. A. intending to purchase a long Lease of B. and the Reversion of C. be, to avoid latter incumbrances, purchased the Lease in a friends name, and the Reversion in his own name, and after made a Feoffment of the Land, with Livery of Seisin, to the use of himself, for life, and after of his first son, and then he granted his term (which was in his friend) to a second son; in this case the Court would not settle the use of the Lease upon the second son; but seemed it should go with the Inheritance, otherwise Purchasers shall never be secured.

Tenthly, If a man had been Enfeoffed to the use of a woman sole, who taketh a husband, and they both for money had sold this Land to B. and the money had been paid to the wife, and she and her husband had prayed the Feoffee to make the Estate to B. after her husband died; the wife in this case had Relief here, for it was Decreed that all she did was for fear of her husband, 7 Ed. 4. 14. Fitz. Subpœna 6. So then now, if a Feoffment be made to one and his Heirs, to the use of him and his Heirs, in Trust, for a woman sole; Equity it seems will rule it after the same Rule.

Eleventhly, If one sell his Land to B. for Twenty pound at this day, and this is with confidence that it shall be to the use of A.; in this case A. shall have no Remedy here, because there is an expresse consideration, Dyer 109. And yet if the Land be worth more then the money given by a great deal, it seems to me reasonable, that for the overplus the Chancery should order it according to the intent: But Regularly it seemeth such a consideration in an Indenture is not examinable, unless there be some fraud in it.

Twelfthly, If Land be mortgaged to A. and B. and A. onely pay the money, and the intention is, that B. shall take nothing; in this case B. shall be compelled to Release to A. 77 Eliz. in Caries Rep.

Thirteenthly, If one purchase Land for me with my own money in his name in Trust, that I may enjoy it during my life, and after that it shall go to a charitable use, and I after Repeal it and give it by Will to another, the charitable use it seems, is gone in Equity, Littletons case, Caries Rep. 29. If I make a Feoffment to the use of my Will, I may dispose this at my pleasure afterwards: But if it be to uses according to Articles annexed, it is otherwise, Caries Rep. 29. A Copihold was surrendered to the use of J. S. to the intent, that he should pay an Annuity to a third person, the which he refused; the Court ordered him to pay it, with all the Arrears. Totbil 107. If I purchase Lands in the name of another and his Heirs, and die without declaring the use, and of my kin procure him to convey the Land to him and his heirs, and he convey it to others, and my next heir sue, and the benefit of the trust is made appear to belong to him; the Court will order it to him, Caries Rep.

If I be seized of Land in Fee, and convey it to J. S. and his heirs to the use of W. S. Of Chatter's his Executors and Administrators for Twenty years, or for any other number of real, and years; in this case the use will be executed within the Statute. But in case Terms of where years.

where I be possessed of a Term of years in being, and grant it to friends, to any uses and purposes in trust; this is out of the Statute of Uses, or orderable in Chancery onely: Where, if the trust be broken, I must have remedy. But for the further opening hereof, take these cases:

Intail.

First, One possessed of a Term in years, conveys it to Friends in trust, to the use A. for life, and after of the Heirs-males of his body; in this case, the Court Resolved and Ordered, That A. so long as he hath an Heir, may dispose it; and that an Intail of a trust of, or out of a Chattel, is not good: But a Remainder, in Tail of a Trust, may be ordered in Equity, the Judges agreeing to it, Tattons Case, 7 Jac. Tothil 83.

Executors.

The General Trust of an Executor, is to pay Debts and Legacies, and for the surplusage, to account to the ordinary ad pios usus: But if he have any special Gift in the Will, then he may have it to a special use. But for the trust of Executors, see in other Sections, Caryes Rep. 21. Henry Earl of Darby conveyed certain Leased Lands in trust to Doughty his Servant, for payment of his Debts; and upon mediation of an end of Controversies between the Daughter of Ferdinand, Eldest Son of Henry Earl, and William his Yonger Son, now Earl. It was Ordered and Agreed, That William the now Earl should pay all his Fathers Debts; whereupon Doughty conveyed these Leases to William, and after the Creditors sued him in Chancery, but had no relief, and were ordered to pursue their Remedy against Earl William, Hill. 1 Jac. Caryes Rep. 25. The Suit was to be relieved on a Lease made to the Defendant in trust, to the use of the Plaintiff; the which appearing, it was ordered, That the Plaintiff should enjoy the Land against the Defendant, and all claiming under him that had notice of the trust; and if the Lease were sold to such as had no notice of the trust, then that the Defendant shall pay to the Plaintiff so much money as the Lease was worth, Rook v. Staples, 21 Eliz. Caryes Rep. 76. The Plaintiffs wife conveyed away her Estate to the Defendant her Son, before marriage, and after the Defendant conveyed it to his children: In this case the Court conceiving it to be done without any consideration, did Decree it for the Plaintiff, against the Defendant and his Children, Povyres Case, Tothil 93. A Widow being about to marry, to prevent her Husbands disposal of her Leases, made them over to Friends in trust, after marriage he and they for good consideration sold them; his wife after his death sued here, and had relief for them against the Purchaser, but disbursements were allowed. Fitz-James case, Tothil 43. A Female was possessed of a Term to her use onely, and she took a husband, and then died; the Court ordered it to the Executor or Administrator of the wife against the husband, Pasche, 32 Eliz. Withnams case. So A. being possessed of a Lease for years granted it to B. and C. to the use of A. and his wife, and during the marriage A. granted away all the Interest to a stranger; the Court would not order it against the wife, Dyer 369. Crompt. Jur. 65. A. being possessed of a Term, granted it upon a marriage to be had between him and K. S. to J. S. her Brother, to her use, and after marriage A. dieth, and she marrieth again, and then she died, J. S. took out an Administration and got the Lease; the second husband sued for it here, but could not be relieved, Co. upon Littl. 351. See before Self. 5.

*Of Chattels
Personal or Goods.*

If I deliver Money or Goods, or cause a Statute, Bond, or other Especialty, to be made to another, to my use, or to any purposes or intents in trust, and he perform not the trust: I may compel him to it, or to give me recompence for the breach of the trust here; and therefore if he dispose the Money or Goods to his own, or any other use then I appointed, or will not dispose it according to my minde, or release or discharge the duty; my remedy is by Subpoena in this Court: And if in these cases, the Goods or Money be taken from him, or he have any injury in them, he must sue for Remedy; and I may compel him to it here, 7 Ed. 4. 14, 29. 11 Ed. 4. 8. Crompt. Jur. 43. 62, 65. Broo. Feoffment 60. for the opening whereof, take these cases.

First, If I deliver Money or Goods upon any consideration to B. and C. for a marriage-portion for K. and to deliver to her at her day of marriage, and I do after countermand the Delivery, or B. and C. will not deliver them to her; it seems they may enforce them to it here: But if the Delivery be voluntary and without any inducement and consideration, Contra, Dyer 44. Crompt. Jur. 54. Dyer 49:

Secondly,

Secondly, Two hundred marks were delivered to A. to keep, and to deliver to B. to keep, and to be delivered to A. when he shall require it, and after the death of the owner, to deliver it to his Executors or Administrators: A. delivers it to B. and takes Bond for it, and then he makes an Executor, and dieth: In this case the Executor may in this Court compel A. to sue B. for this Money, if he refuse to do it.

Thirdly, If an Obligation be made to another to my use, and it be forfeit, and he will not sue; I or my Executor may compel him to it in this Court, Broo. Conscience 10. 2 Ed. 4. 2.

Fourthly, If a Statute be made to A. and B. to the use of A. alone, and the Conusor get a Release of it from B. alone; in this case A. shall have Remedy here against them both, as some say against B. only, and not against the Conusor, as others say, 11 Ed. 4. 8. 5 Ed. 4. 7. Caryes Rep. 14, 15.

There is now by the new Ordinance for the Regulation of the Chancery, Provided, That no Relief be given here upon any Trust or Agreement, made or declared after the Five and twentieth of March, 1655. Concerning Lands, or any other thing in the Realty, unless it be contained in writing, and so averred in the Bill, save in cases where the possession hath gone along with the party claiming the Trust.

Article 44.

One may here have Relief against a man upon his Promise and Agreement, further then by the law he can have: For opening whereof, know these things.

First, If I for Money purchase and contract for Land, with, or without writing, and have paid all, or any considerable part of the Money, or have given security for it, or am any way engaged to pay the money, or it be by way of Exchange for other Land, the which he hath entred upon; but I have no assurance of the Land: I may here compel the seller, or if he be dead, his Heir, or Executor, or Devisee, if he did devise it, that hath the Land, to assure the Land according to Agreement. And if the seller sell away the Land to another, that had notice of the first Contract with me, I may have my Subpoena against them both, 24 H. 7. 41. Crompt. Jur. 44, 45. Toshil 24.

Upon a Bargain, Agreement or Promise; and how it shall be taken and performed.

See §. 8. About Land.

Secondly, Articles of Agreement were briefly drawn between two, and their hands to it, for the sale and assurance of Land for Money; the seller refused, and upon complaint here, was ordered to make the Assurance according to the Agreement; the manner of the Assurance referred to a Master of the Chancery, Chivars case. Hill. 4 Car.

Thirdly, A Suit was here upon a Parol-Agreement, to execute an Assurance of Land upon a Marriage-Agreement, the case being thus: A. suitor to B. the Brother of A. comes to B. and tells her, That if she will marry his Brother, he will assure her of Twenty pounds a year Land for her Joynture, and she did marry him, and after he refused: It was Decreed in this Court and the Court of Requests both, That he shall be compelled to it.

Fourthly, It was said by Glanville, that heretofore the Chancery did not use to Decree Parol-Agreements for Assurance of Land; but it is now otherwise, for where there is any execution of it by payment of all, or any considerable part of the Money for the Land, there it doth Decree it: And where the Agreement is for selling Land by writing, albeit it be not sealed, or any earnest given, or money paid; yet this Court doth use to Order the Parry to assure the Land accordingly. Otherwise it is where the Agreement is for any other thing but Land. And in 19 Jac. in Briggs case, B. R. a Prohibition in this case was denied to the Council of the Marches of Wales, upon a Suit there to have Land assured upon an Agreement, because however it be, he hath Remedy at Law by Action of the Case; yet this is for damages only, and cannot force him to assure the Land: And in all cases Regularly, where Articles are under Hand and Seal, for the assuring of Land for Money, the Court here doth use to Order it to be done according to the Agreement.

Fifthly, But it seems the Law is not in all points, as Master Glanville before said; for in Hill. 9 Car. In the Exchequer, one sued by English Bill upon a Parol-Agreement, to have Land assured, and shewed, That he had provided Two thousand thousand pounds, the purchase Money, to his great loss, &c. and the other refused it, and to assure the Land; in this case, the Court would not Decree the Assurance of the Land, but Decreed he should pay the Plaintiff damages for his loss. So in 13 Car. Olivers case, The Agreement was to convey the Land as Council should advise, the Paper-book drawn, agreed, and to be ingrossed, and then the seller refused to proceed; in this case, the Court would not Decree it to be done, because no Articles nor Money paid, but a bare Parol-Agreement. And yet some special circumstance may make this binding; and therefore a Verbal-Agreement between Lord and Tenant, because the Tenant was an Ancient Tenant, and hath been at charge in building, was Decreed, Kings and Hunts cases, Tothil 65, 66.

Sixthly, A. Covenant with B. upon the marriage of his Daughter, to levy a Fine of the Land to D. and the Daughter being dead, and some Money unpaid, A. sold away the Land to others; in this case, he was Ordered for a Hundred Marks, to make the Estate good, Tothil 47, 48. Mich. 8 Car. Pages case.

Notice.

Seventhly, A Suit was in this Court upon a Parol-Agreement to assure Land, and the Agreement was Eighteen years before, and the Suit was against Purchasers that came in upon valuable consideration (to wit) the buying in of Mortgages, and paying of Debts and Fines and Proclamations, and Five years time without Claim were past; in this case, albeit it did appear, that the Purchaser had notice of the Agreement, yet it was dismissed by the Court to the Law; and in these and such like cases, where an Action lieth at Law, the Purchaser, or Party to whom the Promise is made, may use that and waive his Remedy in Chancery, 21 H. 7. 43.

Nudum pactum:

Eightly, If I and another man make an Agreement about any thing by word onely, and it hath quid pro quo in it, and I have no witness to prove it, I may sue him here, and put him to answer it upon his Oath: But upon a nudum pactum there is no more Remedy to be had in Chancery, then is at the Common-Law, 8 Ed. 4. 4; D. & St. 12. 154.

Ninthly, If it be agreed by Indenture of Feoffment of Land between me and another, That the Feoffee shall pay Ten pounds to a stranger by a day, or Ten pound a year; otherwise, that the stranger and his Heir shall enter on the Land; or that the Land shall be conveyed to a stranger, or the like: in these cases the stranger for not payment, cannot enter by Law. But some say the Feoffee may be compelled in this Court to execute the Estate according to the Agreement, D. & St. 94. But if by Agreement there be a condition to give a Re-entry to a stranger; this is not good in Law, nor will this Court execute it, for it is against a principle of Law, Crompt. Jur. 50. D. & St. 100, 101. Crompt. Jur. 49. Nor is the Feoffor when he doth enter, bound in conscience to give the Land to the stranger.

Tenthly, If I by Deed poll, and not by Indenture, make a Feoffment in Fee, Gift in Tail, or Lease for life, the Remainder over in Fee rendring a Rent; this Reservation is not good in Law: But I shall have Remedy upon the Equity of my case in this Court, D. & St. 2. 19.

Eleventhly, A Bill was preferred here, supposing Ten shillings paid, and Two thousand pounds to be paid for Land, to have the Lands assured, and upon a Demurrer it was over-ruled, because it may be to prepare for an Action of the Case: But it seems in this Case the Court would not decree the Assurance, Trin. 38 Elizabeth Williams case, Tothil 72.

Twelfthly, If any Agreement have been made by writing for the assuring of Land, or any thing else, and the writings are lost; the party grieved must have his Remedy in this Court.

Thirteenthly, If I make a Lease of Mills for years, excepting the profits thereof for my life; this exception is not held good in Law; yet it is thought I may have it allowed in Equity, because of the intent, Crompt. Jur. 64.

Fourteenthly, If a woman sole take a consideration for a Lease of Twenty one years, and then marry, and she and the husband make the Lease promised; after the Lessee doth surrender, and take a new Lease for another Twenty one years; the husband dies: In this case the wife is not to enjoy the rest of the first Lease, because cause the Surrender was voluntary, Caries Rep. 21.

Fifteenthly, One for Seven thousand pounds, whereof not a peny was paid, and yet an acquittance given thereof by the Feoffor, enfeoffed one in Fee of his Land, but took the profits thereof all his life; in this case the Feoffee shall not have this Land in Equity; and if he do go about to take it, the Feoffor shall be relieved here against him, Dyer 169. Crompt. 7^{ur}. 153.

Sixteenthly, The Customs of a Mannor were in question between Lord and Tenants, and Tenant and Tenant, and a general Agreement made by Deed indented and enrolled here, and a Bill to establish it, and nothing could be found but the Deed: And yet the Court would not alter it, albe it was objected the Lord was at the time of Agreement Tenant in Tail, and some of the Tenants Infants and Feme-coverts, Caries Rep. 22.

Seventeenthly, If one enter into a Statute to J. S. who doth afterwards by Indenture of Agreement, promise and agree with the Conufee, that in case the Conufor did fail of payment, execution should be done upon some certain Land onely: In this case, if after it he shall sue execution upon any other Lands, the party grieved may have relief here, and compel him to perform his Agreement, and have an Injunction also if he desire it, Polvertofts Case, Caries Reports 37. Injunction.

Eighteenthly, The Plaintiff sued to be relieved on a promise for a Lease of Lands and to stop a way; and exception was taken to the Bill because the Defendant had Remedy at Law and not allowed. So to remove a Nulance or the like; for at Common Law nothing can be recovered but damages; but this Court may order the thing it self to be done, Caries Rep. 20. 53.

Nineteenthly, The Plaintiffs Bill was, that he leased a house to the Defendant, and did Covenant to repair it, and then the Defendant did Covenant to keep it so, and that the Defendant, as well to make the Plaintiff break his Covenant, as to free himself from his Covenant, did interrupt and threaten the workmen so, that they durst not go on, and so the houses are decayed, and the Plaintiff without remedy; the Defendant demurred, pretending the Plaintiff had remedy by Law; but was overruled and put to answer, Caries Rep. 59.

Twentiethly, A Bill was brought upon a Promise by word, for leave to dry clothes in a Garden, and was dismissed for the smallness of the thing, 21 Eliz. Hambies Case, Caries Rep. 76.

One and twentiethly, The Bill prayed Relief against the Defendant as Brother and Heir, for that the Plaintiff had paid to his deceased Brother Thirty four pounds for a Lease, and he died before it was made, and therefore desired his Lease or the money, and was Relieved, Caries Rep. 77.

Two and twentiethly, One Joyn-tenant promised the other, lying on his death-bed, he would not take advantage of the survivorship, but suffer him to dispose of it by his Will, by which he devised part for the payment of his Debts, and the Survivor was ordered to make the Estate accordingly, Caries Report 81. Jointenant;

Twentieththirdly, The Plaintiff bought of the Defendant the Reversion of a Copihold, which he could not enjoy, as was confessed by the Defendants Answer; Ordered by the Court to shew cause why he should not repay the money back again, which he had received on the bargain, Caries Rep. 93.

Twentifourthly, Upon the hearing of the Cause, it appeared that the Suit was to be relieved upon a Promise made by the Defendant to the Plaintiff, to surrender a Lease upon the payment of a hundred marks; and because the matter was meet for the Common-Law, it was dismissed, Caries Rep. 95. 97.

Twentifistly, Bailiffs of a Town promised a Lease; the Court upon this, would not give Relief against any of their Successors, but against the same persons, as common persons, upon the promise, Caries Rep. 103.

What Agreement made by an Infant, or a Woman-covert will binde here. See before Sect. 4.

If

Sett. 9.
Upon a Mis-prision in a Conveyance of Land or other Deed.

If any mistake be in a Deed, that it be not made according to the intent and agreement of the party; it may be holpen here. For the opening whereof take these Cases.

1. If part of the Land bought and sold, be left out of the Deed, or the word Heirs, being in Fee-simple, or the like, be omitted; and the conveyance be made upon good consideration; this Court will rectifie it. See after for this, Caries Rep. 16. 17. Dean and Chapter of Bristol made a Lease, mistaking the name of the Corporation; and the Court held that for Leases made for reasonable time, and upon good consideration, there should Relief be given here, Caries Rep. 32. The Lessee in the Lease, was not named in the Premises of the Lease, but in the Habendum onely; Decreed to be good: And being referred to the two chief Justices and chief Baron, was by them certified to be good in Law, Butlers case, 22 Eliz. Caries Rep. 88.

2. A man by Bill here supposed; that he had conveyed more Land by the Deed, then was intended and agreed; in this case, because it appeared the Defendant was a Purchaser upon unvaluable consideration, the Court would not relieve the Plaintiff, Cliffords case, 4 Jac. in Chancery. And yet see a case where more Lands passed by a Fine, then was intended, and the party relieved here by the Judges consent, Caries Rep. 20.

Grant of a Term.

3. But if one possessed of a Term, grant it to one for life or in tail, and after to another for life or in tail; in these cases, where by Law it seems the first will take all, no relief shall be neither in Law, nor in Equity to him in Remainder: But if it were a Devise, after this manner it would go in Law and Equity according to the intent, Crompt. Jur. 64. Plow. 520. 539. Dyer 74. 253. 277. Co. 8. 95. 10. 47. So if I have a Term of years and grant so much thereof as shall be to come at my death; it seems this grant is void in Law and Equity. But if it had been by Will thus devised, relief might have been in Equity at the least, Crompt. Jur. 63.

Intail of a Term.

Devise.

4. Mistakes in the making of a Bond, in either of the parties names, may be holpen here, Colstons case, Totbil 27.

Power to make Leases.

5. If a Power be reserved to make Leases by a Covenant without a Transmutation of possession; no help can be here, because it is void in Law: And if it be upon Change of possession, and the Power be not precisely followed; that is doubtful, and rather more strong against help; for then the Estate works, and the power gone, and upon Wills no help, Caries Rep.

6. If one be bound to me for money, and the same day after the sealing of the Bond, I give him a Release for other things, and by mistake, whereby this Bond also is released: In this case I may be relieved here, and shall recover the money notwithstanding, Tops case, Totbil 27.

7. Haddon the Husband was ordered to procure his Wife to levy a Fine, and to enter into a new Bond of Five hundred pounds, because the old Bond was worth nothing, by the mistake of the Writer, 10 Jac. Totbil 140. See more Section 8. before.

But now by the new Ordinance for the Regulation of the Chancery, it is provided, That no Relief shall be there upon any Averment of any other intention of the Parties, to a Deed made after the Five and twentieth day of March, 1635. other then what doth appear in the Deed it self. Article 45.

Sett. 10.
Upon a Defective Assurance of Land to enforce the perfecting of
it.

If a Conveyance for Land be defective, and the Estate not well executed to the Purchaser, according to the intent of the Parties, for lack of words sufficient in the Deed, or for lack of Livery of Seisin, Attornment, Inrollment, or the like; and there were a good consideration given for the Land: In these cases the Purchaser may compel the party, in whose power it is to perfect the Estate, to do it; and this he must do in this Court, D. & St. 85. Plow. 302. Totbil 44. 48. 182, 183. 138.

For the further opening whereof, take these Cases.

1. If I for money sell Land to one, and the word Heirs is left out in the Habendum, I shall be compelled to amend it; and so when less is granted then was intended; and so for any other mistakes, Caries Rep. 16, 17. A Messuage was demised cum pertinentiis only: And because sundry Lands had been occupied therewith for the same Rent, and by Lease of the same words; the Lord Chancellor Bromley and the Judges ordered it should all pass, though perhaps they will not pass in Law by these words. But it seems in such like cases it is very considerable in Equity, what the value of the Land is, and what money is given: For if the House with the Appurtenances be sufficient for the money, unless the intent of the parties were to grant the whole, it seems to me reasonable that no Extent should be made further then the Law makes.

2. The Ancestor takes money for a Lease, and dies before it is made; the Heir must make it good, or repay the money, Car. Rep. 77.

3. If I buy a Rent de novo for money, and take a Grant of it by Word without Deed, (which is not good) I may compel him here to make me a Deed of it, Doct. & Stu. 86.

4. If one for money sell me Land by Deed, but Livery of Seisin is omitted; I may compel him afterwards to do it by the help of this Court. And if one for money sell me Land in two Counties, and have given me Livery only of the Land in one County; this Court will order him to make Livery in the Land in the other County, or pay back part of the money, Crompt. Jur. 49. D. & St. 37. Car. Rep. 17.

5. So regularly, if a Conveyance be imperfect for lack of Attornment of the Tenant, the Tenant shall be compelled to attorn by the power of this Court. And so it was in H. 3 Car. A. was Lessee for twenty one years, and leased to B. for ten years, rendering Rent: A. without the privity of B. did grant the Reversion to C. and B. refused to attorn, and C. thereupon sued B. in Chancery, to compel him to attorn; and in this case it was decreed by the Master of the Rolls, with the assent of the Masters of the Chancery, That he should attorn and pay the arrearages; Justice Whitlock, then Assistant, being utterly against it; and of his opinion were the two Chief Justices, Chief Baron, and Justice Dodridge: But they all agreed, the parties themselves to the Assurance may be compelled to make Livery. And it hath been often denied here to compel him to attorn, who is at liberty by Law; especially where the party quarrelleth at the Tenants Estate, or entreth into part of the Land, or hath covenanted for recompence in case of Not-attornment, Car. Rep. 4. Higham contra Lad. The party before Livery of Seisin, and before Assurance perfected, ordered to be perfected, Pash. 7 Car. Tot. 129.

6. But in all these cases, if the Conveyance be made without any good consideration, this Court will not give relief. And therefore if a Rent be granted without Deed, and nothing is given for it; or a Reversion is granted, and nothing is given for it; the Grantor cannot be enforced to perfect it, Crompt. Jur. 49. Doct. & Stu. 37.

7. An Estate was made by Covenant, not good by Law, and ordered here to be made good, Princes Case, 40 Eliz. Tot. 85.

8. A Deed not enrolled was decreed against the Heir of the Land, but agreed it should not bind any other Estate challenged by Survivorship or otherwise, Pawles Case, 14 Car. Tot. 55.

If I contract for goods, and have any wrong in it, that the party doth not perform with me; if I give quid pro quo, that there be a good consideration in it, I may have remedy here: But if there be no consideration in it, contra. Wherein take these Cases.

Sett. 11.
Upon an extremity used on a Mortgage or Statute, Bond or other Engagement. In a forfeiture of Land, Mortgage.

If one that hath any Engagement of me by Feoffment, Mortgage, Statute, Obligation or otherwise, take me upon any advantage upon any strict condition or agreement, and use extremity towards me; I may be relieved in this Court, where he will be compelled to accept of Reason. For the opening whereof take these Cases following.

1. If I make a Feoffment to another, upon a Condition to be done by me, and I do not perform it, and thereby lose the Land, I am remediless in Chancery, D. & St. L. 3. ch. 33. But if I convey Land to another only as a Mortgage, and for a Security for money he doth lend me; in this case, albeit the time of Redemption be past, yet upon the paying of the money, interest and damage, I may have my Land again, at any time, by Decree of this Court, D. & St. L. 3. ch. 33. And in 8 Car. in Chancery, between Coxwell and Gardner, Sir Robert Rich said, that it was the constant course of this Court, That if A. mortgage Land to B. for a Hundred pounds, and the Land is more worth, and it be forfeit; that A. notwithstanding this may assign it to C. to satisfy this debt, or mortgage it to another to satisfy this debt, or devise it to his children: And in these cases C. the second Mortgagee, or children, shall by Order here, upon payment of the money, interest and charge to B. his Executor, &c. have it decreed against them. Experientia, Higates Case, 14 Car. Tot. 78:

2. And yet when it hath continued long, as twenty years or upwards, this Court will not easily give back the Land. And if the Mortgager make a Feoffment of it to a stranger, and so extinguish the Condition, unless it be to the end to pay the debt, the Feoffee perhaps may not have this advantage, Car. Rep. 53. And in 39 Elizabeth Crowthers Case, Tot. 79. the Plaintiff being Heir to Lands in Tail, and likewise devised to him by his mothers father, and these being mortgaged, and redeemed by a stranger, having sold it again, with the consent of the father and mother, could not be relieved here.

Heir to Land entailed.

But now by the new Ordinance for the Regulating of the Chancery, there are some Alterations made: For thereby it is provided, (i.) from and after the said five and twentieth day of March, One thousand six hundred fifty and five, no Relief shall be given in Chancery on a Mortgage after three years forfeiture, or unless the Suit be commenced within one year after the Entry and possession of the Mortgagee continued, except upon some new Agreement between the parties themselves in Writing, and except in cases of Infancy, Coverture, Non sane memoria, or beyond Seas: In which cases the persons concerned shall commence their Suits within two years after the Disability removed, or in default thereof shall be debarred from any Relief afterwards. And in case of such new Agreement, the like Rule to be observed, after the time by such new Agreement limited shall be expired, Art. 49.

In case of Mortgages to be made from and after the five and twentieth day of March aforesaid, where the Mortgagee is in possession by Recovery at Law or otherwise, he shall not (except by special Agreement in writing) be put to account for the yearly profits accrued after such his Entry, before the Suit for Redemption be commenced; but the same shall belong to, and be retained by him without account, if by his Answer, or at the Hearing, he shall elect to take the same in satisfaction of the Interest of his money whiles he had the possession, except the Mortgager shall rather elect to be concluded by the Mortgagees Examinations upon Interrogatories concerning the profits by him received, Art. 50.

That such Mortgagee, before the Mortgager be admitted to redeem, shall be paid his whole Principal money with damages, and his full Costs incurred before his his entry, and also after the Suit commenced, to be taxed by the chief Clerks upon a Bill of Costs; wherein, and in all other cases of Mortgages to be made from and after the time aforesaid, the Mortgagee shall be charged (in case the Lands be let to Tenants) with no more than what he did, or might fairly have received without fraud or his own wilful default: And where the Lands are unlet, and kept in his own hands, with no more than four fifth parts of the true yearly value. But if after such Entry any casual profits by Fines upon Copiholds, Wood-sales, or otherwise shall be received by the Mortgagee above the yearly Revenue of the Lands mortgaged, then the same shall go in abatement of Principal and Interest due before such Entry. Provided, that where in the cases aforesaid an Account shall be, all lawful Taxes and necessary Disbursements and Allowance shall be allowed to the Mortgagee, Art. 51.

That where upon a Bill exhibited by a Mortgagee to enforce Redemption, or to have the Estate absolute, a Decree passeth, and is signed and enrolled, the time thereby limited for the payment of the Mortgage-money with damages shall not be enlarged without consent of parties in writing, Art. 52.

That no Injunction be granted to stay the Mortgagee from his Suit at Law till the final hearing of the Cause, except it be only to restrain the Mortgagee from the making of Waste upon the mortgaged Land, Art. 30.

3. A Purchasor of Land, bona fide, subject to a Recognizance, and the Heirs of the Recognizor or Obligor shall have relief against a Penalty also.

4. A Copiholder in Fee surrendered to the use of one and his heirs, upon condition of Redemption; after this he writes down his Debts, and doth will part of his Land shall be sold to pay his Debts: After his death one of the Creditors doth pay the money at the day of Mortgage; yet the Surrender was enrolled, and another Creditor sued him and the Heir here, and had a Decree that the Land should be sold to pay the Debts, and if any remained it should go to the Heir, 4 Eliz. Car. Rep. 7.

5. A sold Land to B. that was his Heirs, and mortgaged other Land, to the end the Heir should assure it when he came of age, before when B. dyed without any Heir known: In this case the Mortgager, to avoid danger, had relief here; where it was ordered, the Heir should convey the Land to two of the Six Clerks, there to remain till the Heir be known, Cuttings Case, Car. Rep. 29.

So Lessee for years rendring Rent, and two men strive for the Reversion; upon a Bill against them, and payment of his money Court according to his Lease, he had an Injunction to forbid them both to trouble him, Car. Rep. 46, 47. But regularly this Court doth give relief against them that take advantage upon any strict Condition, for undoing the Estate of another in Lands, upon a small or trifling default.

6. If the Conusee of a Statute extend the Land in the hands of one of the Purchasors, and spare all the rest, he may be compelled to do it on all, Car. Rep. III, 112.

7. If one grant a Rent-charge out of all his Land, and after sell it by parcels to divers persons, and the Grantee force one only to pay it; he may here be relieved, and force the rest to contribute, and the Grantee to take no more of him than his proportion: But then he must make all that are chargeable with the Rent Defendants, and put them to shew cause, if they can, why they should not contribute, Car. Rep. 223, 92.

8. When the Conusee upon a Statute, or Plaintiff on a Judgment, hath received satisfaction; the Plaintiff or Conusor, his Heirs, Executors or Administrators, or a Purchasor charged or chargeable by it, may force him, his Executors or Administrators, if he be dead, to acknowledge satisfaction on the Judgment, or to deliver it up. And if Statutes be very ancient, this Court will force the Owners of them to deliver them up without satisfaction. And so the Court will force the delivery up of old Bonds, Fet. 178, 179. Car. Rep. 45, 46.

9. If a man have received the money due from me upon a Statute, and yet the Statute lies against me; in this case it hath been said, I shall not have remedy here, because it is a Record against which no Averment lieth. But it seems the practice is otherwise, and there is as much Equity for this as in case of another Engagement, Crompt. Jur. 43. 22 Ed. 4. 6. D. & St. 23. l. 1. c. 12.

The Plaintiff had an Execution for Three hundred pounds, and was ordered here to take it out only for One hundred pounds, Car. Rep. 51.

If I have paid my money on an Obligation with a Condition after the day, or a single Obligation at the day and according to Law, and have no Acquittance for it; or have at or after the day, or otherwise satisfied it, and he hath accepted it and is satisfied, and yet he keeps the Bond, &c. and refuseth to give me a Discharge: In these cases I, or my Executors &c. after my death, may enforce him, his Executors &c. after his death, in this Court to discharge it, and deliver up the Engagement, 22 Ed. 4. 6. 7 H. 7. 11. Cargies Rep. 74. 11 H. 7. 14. Tot. bill 26, 27.

10. If I have forfeited a Bond, and am in danger to have a great Penalty recovered of me thereby, I shall have relief here: As in case where one doth his best to pay money at the day, and by being robbed, or some other mischance is let, and he tenders it in a short time after: So where part of the money is paid, and yet the whole Engagement lieth, and the party that hath it doth refuse to deliver it up, or to receive the rest of his money, being tendred shortly after the day, or acknowledg what is paid, &c. Car. Rep. 1. 22 Ed. 4. 6. D. & St. 23. Crompt. Jur. 43. So where the Bond is to do any thing else, and the thing is done, and Condition performed, Car. Rep. 45. 46. So where one hath a double Security of me for a single Debt, as a Bond and Goods in pawn, or the like; I shall here force him that hath it to deliver up one of them, Crompt. Jur. 43. 16 Ed. 4. 9. Tot. 26, 27.

11. If I be bound as a Surety with another for a Debt, the which he hath paid, or he hath paid part of it, and hath a further day given him for the rest, or by agreement hath a further day, or he is released of the Debt, or the Creditor hath agreed with him to take some other satisfaction: In all these and such like cases I may have advantage of this, and be relieved in Chancery, 6 Ed. 4. 41. Crompt. Jur. 44.

12. If my Scrivener that doth use to put out and receive my money, receive my money at the day, I having the Bond, and will not deliver it up, I may compel him in this Court, Hunt's Case, Hil. 22 Jac. Tot. 175.

13. If one enter into a Bond, or any other Engagement for money unlawfully gotten, as at Dice or Cards, or to procure a Marriage, or on a Simoniackal Contract, or upon a Cheating Contract, or the like; here is the place to be relieved against it, and have it took up or cancelled, Tot. 24. 23.

So if I have given an Engagement for that which is nothing worth, neither gain to me, or loss to him; as for Debts, things in Action not recoverable, or the like, Crompt. Jur. 45. 44. Car. Rep. 17. 37 H. 6. 12. Tot. 23. 26. 27.

A. had a son he intended to present to the Church of Dale, and he being sickly presented C. for the present, taking Bond of him of Six hundred pounds to resign upon request: C. is instituted and inducted; after the son of A. becomes healthy; and C. is required to resign; he refused; his Bond is sued, and coming into this Court for relief, it was denied to him, and the Bond agreed to be good in Law and Equity, Trin. 6 Car. Wood and Berries Case in Chancery, Tot. 26, 27. But if one make a Bond not to marry without consent of his friends, it seems this is not good, and the Obligor will be relieved here, Tot. 26, 27.

14. One Harris and J. S. two young men, needing money, came to one King to borrow One hundred pounds of him; who would not lend them money, but told them he had a Cabinet which he would lend them, and this cost him but One hundred and eleven pounds; and this he lent them, and took a Bond of them to pay him Four hundred pounds for it five years after, if King did live so long: Harris died, King died; the Executor of King sued the Bond against the other young man, who complained here, and it was decreed that the Executor should recover but One hundred and eleven pounds upon this Bond, and no Costs nor Damages, that the Suits Suits in Law should be stayed, and the Bond delivered up to be cancelled, 6 Car. in Chancery.

15. If I have entred into an Engagement, and had a Release of it upon good cause, and have lost it, I shall have remedy here: But it seemeth otherwise, if the Debt be by matter of Record, 22 Ed. 4.6. D. & St. l. 1. c. 12.

It hath been said, if money be paid on a single Obligation, and the Obligor hath no Acquittance for his money, that he shall not be relieved here, Car. Rep. 17. But I take it, the use of the Court is otherwise at this day, and that the Obligee shall be here forced to deliver up the Bill.

16. If money be paid upon the Redemption of a Mortgage by Indenture without taking any Acquittance, it seems the Mortgagee must bring in the Indenture to be cancelled here, Car. Rep. 17.

17. The Plaintiff and his Father were bound to the Defendant in Five hundred pounds, to stand to the Award of the Lord Chief Justice; who ordered, That the Plaintiff who had the Reversion in fee, and the Father who had the Estate for life, should make such Assurance as the Defendant should reasonably devise: The Defendant tendred an Assurance to the Father to be sealed, who being old and blind desired time to advise with his friend: The Plaintiff sealed, and his Father afterwards did offer to seal; and then the Defendant said he did not care for his seal, but he put the Bond in suit upon the Fathers refusal, and it was staid by Order of this Court, Car. Rep. 105.

But it is now provided by the new Ordinance for the regulating of this Court, That no Relief shall be here against a Bond for payment of money only, and entred into after the Five and twentieth day of March, One thousand six hundred fifty five, Art. 43.

Nor may any Injunction be had in any case, but by Motion in open Court, and upon the merits of the cause. But the Defendants taking of a Commission, or sitting of an Attachment, is not sufficient ground for an Injunction, Art. 27.

And if in any of these cases, the party to whom such Engagement is made, make use of it in any Court by way of Suit against him that entred into it, he may in this Court by Injunction stay his Suit there, and shall have the matter ordered here as in Equity is fit to be done, Tothill 23. Sucklins Case, 11 Car. 24.

For the clearing of this Point, see it in these following Cases.

1. If there be Tenant for life, the Remainder over, and the Tenant for life doth give way to the suffering of a Common-Recovery, which rigore juris is a Forfeiture of his Estate; in this case he may be relieved here, as was done in Staffords Case, 10 Car. Tot. 184.

2. If I convey my Land on Condition to be done by me, unless it be in the case of a Mortgage before, and I fail, I am remediless. So if I be a Lessee for life or years, and make a Feoffment of the Land, and forfeit it; in these cases if the Lord take advantage of it, there is no help for me in Chancery. So if I do commit Waste, and the Land be recovered from me, D. & St. 176. 20 H. 6. 3. 21 H. 7. 7. 10 Ed. 4.6. 4 H. 6. 24.

3. Hil. 9 Car. In Sir Edward Hungerfords and Wilsons Case in Chancery, it was held, That a Lessee shall have relief in Equity, or the Grantee of the Reversion against the Lessor that doth enter for a Forfeiture on the Land for not payment of the Rent: And yet if the Lease whereby the Rent is reserved be a dishonest Lease, as gotten of the King by a false Surmise, or the like, contra. Car. Rep. 32.

4. If a Lessee for years of Land, upon a Condition of Forfeiture for not payment of Rent, make divers Under-Leases, and after by Agreement between him and the Lessor he makes a Forfeiture, and the Lessor enter, and then makes a new Lease to the Lessee for years; in this case the Under-Lessees and Tenants may have relief here against the Lessor and Lessee upon this practice, Crompt. Jur. 64.65.

it seems the Copiholder is remediless in Law and Equity both, Co. 4. 24.

And yet a Copiholder within age was admitted, and his custody committed to the Mother; and her Under-tenant did waste, and being presented, the Lord seised it for the forfeiture, and held it many years, and died, and his Heir held it; and yet the Copiholder had an Order for it here till it were recovered by Law, *Lissons Case, M. 41. 42. 42 Eliz. The Father committed a Forfeiture, the Son was admitted; this was not allowed as a dispensation with the Forfeiture, in Equity, as was said; and yet agreed, That if the Lord had seised a Heriot after the Fathers death, that this had been a dispensation with the Forfeiture in Equity. Smiths Case, Clarks Case, Tot. 45.

So upon an Outdawy in any Action, albeit it be upon an unjust cause, and I have no notice of it, yet I am remediless: But if there be any undue practice in it, haply I may have some remedy against the Plaintiff in this Court, D. & St. 4. 2. c. 3. 20 H. 6. 3. 21 H. 7. 7. 35 H. 6. 27.

Judgment.

1. If there be any extremity used upon a Judgment had against me in another Court for money or Land, this Court may not vacate the Judgment, but may order the Persons as it shall see cause in Equity. And so was it resolved notwithstanding the Statute of 4 H. 4. 23. upon a special Debate by the Kings command, 14 Jac. But in cases tending to overthrow of Judgments had in other Courts, this Court neither may, nor will examine or revoke them: For if so, there will be no end, and this will render them invalid, 37 Ed. 3. 14. Dyer 20. 27 H. 8. 15. D. & St. lib. 1. ch. 18. Car. Rep. 74. 75.

2. If one make an Obligation in one County, and the Obligee sue in another, and there recover it; it is said the Defendant may have the Plaintiff here, and shew that by that he lost the advantage of pleading some truth, by which he might have avoided the suit, 9 Ed. 4. 15. Crompt. Jur. 42.

3. If two Copartners bring a Quimpedit, and one count false, by Covin between him and the Defendant; I having damage thereby, may sue them both here, 6 Ed. 4. 10. Crompt. Jur. 43.

4. If a Fine be reversed in a Court, by inspection and proof of Witnesses, for Nonage, and in truth he is of full age, it seems relief may be here: And if the Conusor after Reversal sell the Land to another, the Subpœna will lie against Buyer and Seller both, Dyer 261. 301. Crompt. Jur. 66.

5. If one have Land in antient Demesne in execution upon a Statute, and do after recover it there by a failed Recovery, the party grieved that cannot falsifie them, may be relieved here, Crompt. Jur. 45. 6.

6. If a Suit be against me in any other Court, upon an unreasonable Engagement, I may have relief here by Injunction. See Seff. 12. before, and Injunction at Seff.

7. If a Fine or a Recovery be passed in the proper Court, and thereby a just Claim pass, little hope of Relief is here, unless there be some notorious practice in it; for in these cases the Court is very tender.

8. If another Court entertain a Suit for Tythes not tytheable, Prohibition lieth here, F. N. B. 41.

The

The Heir entering into his Fathers house had of his goods worth five shillings, and the Defendant sued a Bond of Five hundred pounds against the Heir, as Executor of his own wrong: And proving he sold or gave away the goods, a Verdict passed for the whole Five hundred pounds; which appearing by the Certificate of the Justices of Assize, an Injunction was granted to stay all Proceedings in this Action, and to forbid any new Action, till the Court have determined the matter, Car. Rep. 49.

The Plaintiff had a Judgment for Three hundred pounds, and was ordered to take Execution but for Two hundred pounds, Car. Rep. 52. A Debt upon a single Bill satisfied, and the Bill not delivered, was sued, and Execution gotten, and the party relieved here, 21 Eliz. Owens Case, Car. Rep. 74.

If one sue here to be discharged of a Legacie, and after the Defendant did sue for it in the Spiritual Court, this Court granted an Injunction, Car. Rep. 73.

If one man do unduly get a Judgment in the name of another, Relief may be had here, Car. Rep. 76. And so in all such like cases, where any considerable circumstance of Equity is in the case, otherwise it will be dismissed, Car. Rep. 76.

The Plaintiff desired relief against an Obligation of One hundred pounds, with an insensible Condition put in Suit; for that the Plaintiff being desired by the Defendant to seal a Release, he desired time only to be advised thereof, which the Defendant would not yield to, but hath put the Bond in suit, though no ways damaged, and now is ready to seal it, and an Injunction was granted, Car. Rep. 78.

Injunction.

If one sue for Tythes of Land not rytheable, it seems relief may be had here, Car. Rep. 79.

A drunken man sued for words spoken in his drink, fought for remedy here, but could have none: Qui peccat ebrius, inas sobrius. Car. Rep. 93.

The Plaintiff sought to be relieved upon an Obligation of Three hundred pounds, which he entred into to make a Jointure to his wife, in consideration of One hundred seventy four pounds promised to him by the Defendant in marriage, which was never paid to him: In this case an Injunction was ordered, Car. Rep. 112.

The Defendant pleaded Non est factum to a Bond of Four hundred pounds, and it passed with the Defendant. The Plaintiff preferred his Bill, supposed he had promised payment after the Verdict, and it was received, 35 Eliz. Suttons Case, Tot. 137.

But now by the new Ordinance, no Injunction is to be granted in any of these cases before the Hearing of the Cause, to stay any Suit at Law; but upon matter confessed in the Defendants Answer, matter of Record, or in Writing under hand and seal produced in Court, Art. 18. Nor may any Injunction be granted after Plea pleaded at Law, or Rules given, to stop a Trial at Law, or any Pleadings or Proceedings preparatory to a Trial, Art. 29.

For this, take these Cases.

1. If I be Surety for another to pay money, or to do any other thing, and he doth it not, but suffer me to be damnified by it: In this case I may here, if I have no remedy at Law, compel him to discharge me, D. & St. lib. 1.

2. If I be bound with A. B. to pay money at a day, and he is bound to save me harmless, and at the day I pay the money, and then sue my Counterbond, he may avoid this suit at Common-Law; but in this Court I may compel him to pay me the money again, M. 31; 32 Eliz. Cromp. 43, 44. in Chancery.

3. If the principal Debtor and the Creditor will by agreement without my privity that am the surety, continue the Debt after the first day of payment, when I do suppose it to be paid; in this case the Court will compel the Creditor to take his relief of him, and discharge me, my Heirs, Executors, &c. Miles Case, 5 Car. Harri Case, 10 Jac. Sanders Case, 10 Jac. Tot. 181.

4. If the principal Debtor have Lands descended, and his Heir have conveyed them in trust, I may here compel the sale of them to pay the Debts, Tot. 182.

5. If he assign Debts, which be things in Action, to me, I may recover them here, Tot. 182.

Set. 16.
Upon a Deteiner of my Lands, Deeds or Goods, to discover and recover them.

If a man hold my Land from me, I may sue him here, and suppose he doth keep my Bvidences from me also, and put him to set forth by what title he doth claim it; wherein are these things.

1. If I have occasion to bring an Action for the Land, and cannot tell the Tenant, I may sue the Occupier here, and he must shew what he or any other claimeth to his knowledge; that I may know who to sue; yet some doubt of this. The Defendant held over his Term; the Court put him to shew what time his Lease was, M. 6 Car. Tot. 183.

2. So the Confess of a Statute did here force the Lessee for years to set down all the particulars of his Lease, to see whether it were extendible or not, 11 Car. Tot. 183. Tot. 20. Criswells Case, Tot. 99. Car. Rep. 16.

3. If one detain from me my Evidences, and they be not in any Box or Chest locked, and I know not the certain Contents of them, so as to bring an Action at Law for them, them, I may recover them here. For explanation, take these Cases.

1. Wrights Case, circa 28 Eliz. in Chancery one did exhibit his Bill for Evidences of Land, and made himself a title to the Land, and the Defendant made himself a title also, and justified the detaining of them; and it was referred to a Tryal at Law for the title, and ordered, That he should have the Evidences with whom the Verdict passed, Crompt. Jur. 44. Caries Rep. 16.

2. If the Heir happen to get Writings, that by Law do belong to him, but in Interest to the Executor; or the Executor get writings that by Law do belong to him, but in Interest to the Heir, as Bonds or Statutes for the securing of the Land of the Heir, or the like: In these cases they may enforce the delivery of them here, Broo. Oblig. 18. 68. Chattel 6.

3. If one be bound in a Bond to me for money, and he hath gotten the Bond; I may sue here for the Bond, and for the money without the Bond, West.

If one have any other goods of mine, and I cannot tell what they be, I may sue for them, to Discover and Recover them in this Court, 39 H. 6. 16. And if I have lost my goods, and cannot tell who hath them, I may here suppose any man to have them, and put him to discover on his Oath, whether they have or know of them; and albeit the case be such that I may by a Suit at Common Law recover them, yet I may here in this Court, for preparation to that Suit, force the possessor to make, and set down an Inventory of them, Crompt. Jur. 45. If Lands be given by one Deed severally to two men, he that hath the Deed shall be compelled here to shew it, for the defence of the others Title, 9 Ed. 4. 41. If the King had granted to me all the goods of A attainted by Felony, and I know not the certainty of them; yet I may compel any man that hath them, to make an Inventory of them in this Court, 36 H. 6. 26. where Deeds do concern as well the Defence of the Title of the Tenant for life, as of him that possesseth the Deeds, being to him in Reversion or Remainder; in this case it is usual for this Court to order them to be brought into the Court, Caries Rep. 19. So in such like cases, where the Land is yet in question, or the Court hath not determined who shall have it, Caries Rep. 52, 18 Eliz. The Plaintiff sued for Tokens he had delivered to the Defendant, when he was a Suitor to her; she confessed part of the in her hand, which the Court forced her to deliver forthwith; and for the rest, that the Plaintiff left them against her will, and she delivered them to a friend of the Plaintiffs that dealt between them; and for that, ordered that he take his Remedy against the friend, Caries Rep. 55. Where the Court doth see cause, it will force the Defendant to bring the Writings in Court, by a Ducens tecum, Caries Reports 67. 43. 52. 53.

For this, take these cases.

1. This Court would not change an Estate in Fee, depending on an Estate in Tail, Totbil 84.

2. An Estate in Tail was Ordered to be cut off, against the Proviso of a Deed, onely to make a Wife a Joynture, and to settle the rest as it was before, Bailies case, 38 Eliz. Totbil 82.

A. deceased, late Father to the Plaintiff, did give the Land Intailed to the Father of the Defendant, reserving forty pound Rent to him and his Heirs, after granted twenty five pound, part of the Rent, to the Plaintiffs for their lives; the Defendants Father did Avorn and pay the Rent to the Plaintiffs, till two years before his death, after the Issue in Tail refused, but was ordered here, Caries Rep. 92.

A Father being Tenant in Tail of Land, sells this Land, and leaves as much free Land to descend to his Heir in Tail; in this case it was ordered, that the Heir shall repay the money paid by the Purchasor, according to the Fathers Will, or else the Plaintiff shall have the Fee-simple, Ruled, Pearces case, Totbil 183, 184.

In this Court a man shall have Relief for the recovery of his Land, Debt, or Duty, where by Law he hath none. For the knowledge whereof take these things.

1. If I have a good Title to Land, but have lost my conveyance, I may recover my Land in this Court, Caries Rep. 24. Gosless case. The Plaintiff sued to have his

- Rent. 2. If I have a good title to Rent, but no means to gain it, as if it be a Seck; and I have had no Seisin of it, or another Rent, and I have not had any Attornment of the Tenant, or the Rent is by some accident without any recompence for it discharged, or the like, I may recover it here. So if it hath been usually paid, but I can shew no Deed of it, Tothil 171, 172. 77. 173. And yet some say in the case of lack of Seisin of a Rent, I shall have no remedy here, Co. upon Littl. 159. So the Lord Keeper and Judges, M. 1596. Caries Rep. 5. But a man possessed of a Lease for years Devised a Rent out of it, without clause of distress, and made his Wife Executrix, she married, and she and her Husband sold the Lease; in this case the Court Ordered the Recompence to be made by the Executor, and would not charge the Land, 9 Jac. War case, Tothil 77.

- Especialty lost. 4. If I sue for, and recover a Debt at Common-Law, and for Error it is Reversed in the Exchequer chamber, I may after notwithstanding recover it here. Cuttings case, 40 Eliz. Caries Rep. 8.
- Limitation. 5. In some cases, albeit I be gone in point of time by the Statute of Limitation, 21 Jac. by not suing for it in time; yet I shall have relief here, especially when it hath been demanded within the time; or when it is given and directed to be paid by Will, Tothil 178. 179. 53.
6. An Elegit being returned and filed, and the time thereof elapsed, and yet the Plaintiff unsatisfied his Debt; he was relieved here, and the Elegit revived, Tothil 179.
7. This Court will order the Lands extended to be delivered to the Plaintiff in execution, and at the value it is found, Tothil 178.
8. If the King had given Forfeiture-goods to A. he might have recovered it here, 39 H. 6. 26.
9. But if Lands be extended by a Jury much under value. and there be no practice in the case, it seems no remedy is to be had here; for the Debtor may help himself by payment of the money, Crompt. Jur. 35. 15 H. 7. Dupleys case. And if a Defendant hath waged his Law in an Action, and thereby the Plaintiff is barred, or a Grand Jury in an Assize do finde with the Petit Jury, though never so much against Truth, and a man have twenty witnesses to disprove it, this Court will not give Relief, D. & Sr. 31. Crompt. Jur. 49.

4. Doctor Ford, by his Will devised his Land to his Wife in these words; (Non per viam fidei Comissa) for which his son might sue her; but hoping that if his Son grew christy, that at her death she would leave the Remnant of these Leases to him; she married Grey, and before marriage he did write to her that she should dispose these Leases at her death, after marriage he sells the Leases; the Son sues here, but had no relief, Caries Rep. 22, 23.
- The Plaintiffs Father, seised of Land in Fee, by a Nuncupative Will devised three hundred pound out of his Land, to be paid to false portions, two hours before his death, and because the Father had dis-inherited him of other Land, the Court freed him of this payment, 13 Jac. Samburns case, Tothil 184.
- The Plaintiffs Father did fully resolve that he should have the Lease, make a kinde of Devise of it to him, divers times say that he had given it to him, the Defendant that that had the Lease, say and protest, as he was a Christian man, he should have it, offered an Agreement, and to give him two hundred pound for the Lease; it was Decreed he should have it; Redmans case, 28 Eliz. Tothil 69. A Devise void in Law, by reason of a mis-recital of a Grant, and lack of Attornment, Decreed here to be good, Bacons case, Tothil 79. A breach of a condition upon a Devise, was here holpen against the Heir, Serjeants case, 39 Eliz. Tothil 77. If there be a great overplus of Estate, and no disposal thereof by the Will; this Court doth Order it to the Testator's Kinsfolk, and to charitable uses, Breretons case, 6 Jac. Tothil 87. A Devise of money to a woman, if she would be divorced from her husband, was decreed good, without Divorce, Tenants case, 6 Jac. Tothil 78. If one possessed of a term, Devise it to another besides the Executor, and he have not Assets to pay debts and sell it, there's no relief to be had here: But if he have enough besides, and yet sell it, the Legatee shall have relief here against him; and if the buyer did know of the Devise, the Subpoena shall go against them both, but the Court will not avoid the sale; before the sale haply the Court will not avoid the sale: but before the sale happily the Court will prohibit it, Plow 539. 519. See more in Section nine before. If A. and B. be bound jointly and severally to C. in a Bond of a hundred pound, and C. gives to A. all the debts he owed him; C. died, and his Executor sued A. for the debts. A. complained for relief here; in this case the Lord Keeper doubted upon the manner of the Devise onely, being clear, that if the debt had been from A. alone, he would have relieved him, 6 Car. in Chancery. If one give his Leases to his wife, thus hoping that if his Son be towardsly she will leave them to him, but not that he may sue her, and before her second marriage he promised to leave them to him; yet after the marriage he sold them, and no remedy could be had here, Caries Rep. 23.

A Legacy was recoverable here; but by the new Ordinance it is provided, it shall be tried for at Common Law. Enquire how and where, and what the practice and experience is.

On this, observe these cases.

First, If Lessee for years Demiseth parcel of the term to another, and after, covinously, forfeit his Lease for a condition broken, and then take back the Land or Lease again; in this case the Lessee of parcel shall be relieved here, 1 Ed. 4. 4. Crompt. 64, 65. Caries Rep. 18. See Section 12. before.

Upon a Fraudulent practice to avoid a Lease.

Secondly, If one enter into a Statute in my name, it seems I cannot avoid it here, but I shall have remedy by a Writ of Deceit; but if he be of my name also, I may against this avoid it by Plea, Caries Rep. 22.

If, before the Statutes of Fraud, the Debtor had made a Deed of Gift of his Goods, to defraud his Creditors, and continued the possession of them, and took Sanctuary and died there, his Executors having the Goods might be chargeable here, 16 Ed. 4. 9. Caries Rep. 18.

To avoid a Debt.

If one buy Goods of me for money, and after, being a begger, and purposing to defeat me of my Debt, gives the Goods to one J. S. but useth them all his life time and dies, and then his wife kept them; she married, and her husband kept them; in this case J. it seems may here sue the husband and wife upon this Covin: For they cannot be charged by Law as Executors of their own wrong, because the Goods were the Goods of J. S. in Law, 16 Ed. 4. 9. Crompt. Jur. 62, 63.

1. If one sue for Land, and the Defendant, hanging the Suit, make secret conveyances of the Land; this Court will order him to discharge the Land thereof, Tothil 108.

3. If a Scrivener appointed to draw a Deed of a Farm, and all the Land belonging to it, makes it of purpose of the Farm cum pertinentiis, and after gets a Grant of it himself, to avoid the Deed; this Court will avoid this, Harbins case, Tothil 99.

To avoid a Conveyance.

4. If I be a simple man, and another cunningly procures me to convey my Land to him for nothing; albeit he sell it to Purchasers, and a discent be call; yet this Court will order the reassuring of the Land, Lewis case, Tothil 42, 43.

To get a mans Land from him.

5. If Goods be given to defraud Creditors, in such a case as the gift be not avoidable avoidable by the Statutes, possibly the Party may be relieved here, 16 Edw. 4. 9.

Fraud upon
Fraud.

6. If a Debtor will colude with some of his friends to deceive his Creditors, and his Friends break their trust with him; it seems this Court will not give relief in this case, Fallere fallentem non est fraus; and yet sometimes the Court, in this case hath ordered the Goods, so conveyed by Fraud to the Creditors, Caries Rep. 13.

7. If a copy of Court-Roll be indirectly entred, the party wronged may have Relief here; and albeit the Homage finde the Copy true, yet this will not hinder Relief, Caries Rep. 55. If one sell Land, and before the Assurance made, convey it to another that knoweth of the sale, it will be holpen here. So if he convey it to another that hath notice, Caries Rep. 82. So if he convey it to any of his children, Totbil 107.

Use.

If two Executors be, and one of them release the Debts (as he may) and there be not enough besides to perform the Will; in this case the other Executor may sue him in Chancery; and if there be covin between him and the Debtor, the Subpana may be had against them both, 4 H. 7. 4. Crompt. Jur. 106. 11 Ed. 4. 2. And if one be bound to two in an Obligation, to the use of one of the two onely, and the other release the Debt (as he may by Law) he to whose use it is, may have relief here, and against them both; if the Debtor were privy to it, 7 H. 7. 11. If two have any Commodity of Land or Goods together as Jointenants, or the like, and one of them take, or sell all from the other: In this case, if it be in case where he hath no remedy by Law, as in some cases of Merchants that are Partners, and in some others; the party grieved may have remedy here, D. & St. 12. 175. Crompt. Jur. 49. And yet in Caries Rep. 21. it is said, That if one Jointenant take all the profits, the other shall have no remedy, except there be an Agreement or Promise of Account. If two Copartners or Jointenants joyn in a Q. Impedit, and the one of them plead convincously; this Court will compel him to joyn with the other in the Plea or Presentment. So if Lands be given severally, by one Deed to two men; he which hath the Deed, shall be compelled to shew it for the defence of the others title, 9 Ed. 4. 41. Caries Rep. 15.

Executors.

One Executor sued another, supposing that divers Goods were left with them to be delivered to children at their full age; and the trust and charge being joyn, which may survive, he desires they may give Bond one to the other, that they, or if they die, their Executors shall pay the children their Portions when they come of age; and it was thought fit to be decreed, Caries Rep. 79. Two are made Executors to the use of children, one of them gets the Estate into his hands, makes a Testament, and gives in Legacies as much as this, and all the rest of his Estate, and dies; his Executor was ordered here, first of all, out of all the Estate, to satisfy this Estate of the first Testator, Wray Chief Justice case, Caries Rep. 86, 87.

Waste.

In some cases where an injury is done to me, the which is continued and increased, I may stay it here by a prohibition; as in case of some Wastes, by cutting down of Woods, or ploughing up of Grounds; wherein take these things.

First, A Prohibition was granted here to stay the ploughing of ancient Pastures by the Tenant thereof, Totbil 52.

Lease without
of Waste.

Secondly, The Lessee of an Estate dispunishable of Waste, was here prohibited to destroy the houses, Morgans case, Totbil 92. At another time to do Waste in Woods and Houses, Kings case, 4 Car. Totbil 82. And the Lessee of such a Tenant was here forbidden to do Waste, 11 Jac. Totbil 83. And a Bishop made a Lease before the first of Queen Elizabeth, without impachment of Waste, which was confirmed by the Dean and Chapter. And the Lessee cut Timber, and it being moved here, the Lord Keeper said, because the Bishop was punishable for Waste; therefore he would forbid it, otherwise not. But he did not forbid the sale of what was cut, Trin. 6 Car. The Bishop of Sarums case.

Timber.

Thirdly, Lessee for life the Remainder for life, the Remainder in Fee and the first Lessee for life doth Waste; in this case, albeit he in Remainder in Fee hath no remedy by the Common-Law; yet he shall have a Prohibition to restrain him from doing more Waste, Crompt. Jur. 48, 49. Caries Rep. 20, 26. Tenant in Tail after

after possibility of Issue extinct, shall not be restrained, Doff. & Stud. Lib. 2. chap. 3.

Fourthly, Birch-Trees in some Countries agreed to be Timber-Trees, and here forbidden to be cut down, 8 Jac. Totbil 88.

Fifthly, If the Lessee of a Copiholder dig Gravel, or cut Trees, or the like, which is not Waste in the Copiholder; yet he may be restrained, Caries Rep. 63.

Sixthly, Two houses-adjoyning being upheld by one main Wall standing upon the Freehold of either party, and one of them hath necessary Rooms standing upon the others Kitchen, and he went about to pull down his under Rooms, which would be the ruine of the upper Rooms; an Injunction was granted to stay it till examination of the matter, Caries Rep. 90.

This Court doth order Inclosures of Common Grounds, when it is for common good; wherein take these cases.

Self. 22.
About an Inclosure.

1. It hath ordered Colledges, and the Person of a Church to agree hereunto, Totbil.

2. Because Lands have been inclosed thirty years together by consent of most of the Parish; it was ordered so to continue, Pigott case, 4 Jac. And yet in 2 Car. in Ingrams case, the Court would not binde a man that did not agree to it.

3. M. 22 Jac. Trigs case. The Court would not decree an Inclosure, because it was a Depopulation, and the Plaintiff refused to give the Defendant amends for his common.

4. If any prejudice be to the High-ways, or any conversion of Tillage into Pasture, or such like publick prejudice by the Inclosure; this Court will not order it, Totbil 109, 110, 111.

5. The Defendant once agreeing after disagreed, was ordered to stand to his first Agreement, Foxes case, 13 Car.

A Release was pretended to be lost, and it was deposed it had been seen; but this not allowed for proof, unless he would swear, that he had seen it sealed and delivered; it is not sufficient to say he saw it after it was a Deed: And no Deed is to be allowed here, unless it be produced, or the Execution thereof proved, Caries Rep. 31.

Deeds how to be proved here.

A Bill was brought against Executors to the Father, who was Guardian in Socage for the profits of the Land which he had received of his Wives Childes Land, and the Plaintiff did aver they had Assets, and the Defendants demurred, because they were not privy to the Account, but were ordered to answer, Caries Rep. 54. The Suit was for certain Rents, Fines, and Woodsales, received by the Defendants Testator during the Plaintiffs minority, and it appeared, That if the Plaintiff had made good proof he had been relieved: A Commission was therefore awarded by consent, Caries Rep. 114. And yet in the case of Fleetwood, 21 Eliz. it was ordered, That if the Plaintiff did charge the Defendant by the Bill, for the Issues and Profits meerly by way of Account, then that the Defendants should not answer: But if they were charged by way of promise, then that they should answer, Caries Rep. 114. But it seems the practice is otherwise. This Court regularly will not make a void Award good: But some use it will make of it for Evidence and Advice, especially when an Award is final and reasonable, as to all the matters in difference between them; and sometimes it will Decree the very things themselves contained in the Award; and then especially, when the parties hands are to it, shewing their Agreement to it, Totbil 16. And therefore a Suit being for Land about a Custom, and both parties agreeing, that the Judges of Assize had made an Award in it; it was decreed, that both parties should perform it, and that either party shall have Injunctions one against the other, Burters case, 2 Eliz. Caries Rep. 47. and 19 Eliz. The Plaintiff sued to have an Award made by certain Arbitrators indifferently chosen to be performed; for performance whereof, both parties were bound one to other: One part whereof was, That if any difference should after arise, the same Arbitrators should end it; and the Court ordered the Bill should be retained, Barkers case, Caries Rep. 57. And 19 Eliz. there was a Suit to have an Award in writing, made by the Lord Chief Justice, and under his hand, and the hands of the parties decreed; and the party was called by Proces, to shew why it should not be so, Wakefields case, Caries Rep. 64.

Award.

And

And where an Award is good, there this Court will order the performance of it, and grant Injunction as occasion shall be to stay Suits against the meaning thereof, Caries Rep. 106.

No Tenant by Elegit or Extent, shall be forced to account here for more then the extended value upon any Statute, Recognisance, or Judgment, unless the Suit be begun within a year after the Extent be executed, and possession delivered, and enjoyment thereupon accordingly, except in case of Infancy Coverture, Non sane memorie, or being beyond Sea; and in these cases within a year after the impediment removed, Ordinance for Regulating the Chancery, Art. 53.

Under value.

A Suit was brought here, and because it was for six pounds onely, it was dismissed, Marbers case, 21 Eliz. Caries Rep. 83.

Another in the same year being for five pounds for Fish, was dismissed, Richards case, Caries Rep. 100.

So another being for a Rent of ten shillings by the year onely, was dismissed, Knights case, 21 Eliz. Caries Rep. 80.

So also another the same year was dismissed; because the Land sued for, was not worth forty shillings a year, Townlies case, Caries Rep. 74.

So another was discharged the same year, because it appeared to be for nothing but a liberty to dry Cloaths upon a Parol-Agreement onely, Hambies case, Caries Rep. 76.

And in that year also was another Suit in this Court for a Hawk and certain Evidences, supposed to be in the hands of the Defendant, and the Court observing that the Evidences were put in for a colour onely, dismissed it, Glassers case, Caries Rep. 82. And yet if it be under value, and for the poor of a Parish, the Court will hear it, Caries Rep. 103.

Jointenants.

This Court will not order, That the Survivorship of Jointenants shall not hold place according to Law. And yet two Jointenants were, and one of them did promise the other upon his Death-Bed, not to take advantage of the Survivor, but to suffer it to go to the payment of the others Debts, and thereupon he Devised part of it to pay his Debts: And this was Decreed, and that the Survivor should make the Estate accordingly. Springs case, 21 Eliz. Caries Rep. 81.

And in Mich. 7 Car. Two Joint-Purchasers were, and one of them Devised his part for payment of his Debts, and it was ordered here, Mathers case, Tothil 79.

But if two Joyntenants be, and they cannot agree upon the Presentment to a Church, but suffer a Lapse; there is no remedy here, D. & St. L. 2. ch. 33.

Two Jointenants, Sisters, of a Lease for years, they marry, one of them dieth, the other claimeth the whole by Survivorship; and the Husband of her that is dead sued here, and pretended, That there was some secret Act done in her life, by which the Joynture was severed, but the Court would not order the Defendant to Answer it, Caries Rep. 9.

This Court doth not give Remedy in Criminal things, nor in case of Misdemean- For Misdemeanor, or, as for Perjury, Forgery, or the like; and yet for Misdemeanors done in this Court, it will give relief, and punish the offenders, as in case of Perjury in this Court, mis-carriage of a Commissioner in examination of witnesses, or any practice here by a Suit, examination of witnesses or otherwise, Caries Rep. 56, 63, 68, 74, 75, 90, 99. 56. 68.

This Court is the proper place for a Woman being turned off by her Husband, to recover Alimony against her Husband, and it can be done no where else. But a Legacy by the new Ordinance is not to be sued for here, but at the Common Law. See the Ordinance for the Regulation of the Chancery. But enquire the practice, and what Action at Law shall be framed for a Legacy, and how.

Also Relief lieth here in divers other cases, As

If I be Lessee for life or years, and a stranger do waste against my will, whereby I am liable to a Suit and loss of treble damages therein, and I bring my Action of Trespass, and recover treble damages against him, as I may, and after it hapneth that he in Reversion, before he sueth me, dieth, so that now the Action against me is gone; in this case the Trespasser shall have Relief here, to have again his treble damages, D. & St. 34. Crompt. Jur. 49 Caries Rep. 2.

So, if one sued for Land here, and it appeared the Defendant had been in possession a hundred year, and it was dismissed, Caries Rep. 110.

A Man married a Co-heir, and had children by her that are dead, and he sued here to be Tenant by the Courtesie, the Land being conveyed to them and their Heirs jointly, and the Court refused to Decree it here, Cowleys case, 2 Jac. So the continued possession of the Bastard signe shall prevail in Conscience, as well as in Law, against the Mulier puisne, D. & St. 154. Caries Rep. 5. So, if one have waged his Law to my Action of Debt against him, though never so falsely, I can have no remedy in this Court.

A Lease is made of a House and Wood, wherein it is covenanted that the Lessee shall have Houf-boot and Fire-boot, by which is understood, that he is not to have to any other purpose, but that they belong to the Lessor; and in this case the Chancery doth usually help him to it, leaving sufficient for the Lessor, Caries Rep. 18.

One Pool was bound to C. a Merchant, in a Statute; after B. lent Pool five hundred pound to buy a Mannor, the which he did with this money; and within four days after the Purchase, made it over to B. for the security of his five hundred pound. After C. sued Execution of the Statute, and had the Mannor in Execution: B. sued here to be relieved in Equity but was denied, Crompt. Jur. 63.

If one was seised of Copihold Land in Fee, and had two Daughters, by two Ventrers; the Daughters entred and took the profits divers years together, without doing Fealties or paying Fine, or any admittance by the Court, and the eldest dieth without issue: But it was here Decreed, upon this possession, That the Collateral Heirs of the eldest, and not the sister of the half blood, should have the Land and it was said, That the possession was Seisin sufficient without admittance, to make the Heir inheritable. Dyer 292. Crompt. Jur. 53. The Copi-holder had a Daughter by one Woman, and a Son by another Woman, and he died, his Son within age, who by the Lord was committed to the Mother, who entred, and then the Son died before his admittance, by paying Fine or Fealty. and the Daughter sued in Chancery to be admitted, but was denied; for it was said the Mothers possession was his possession, Dyer 242.

A Man may at this Court recover damages for the profits of his Land kept away, Damages.
in

in some special cases, and for ploughing up his Grounds, cutting down his Trees and other Wastes, in many cases where none may be recovered by Law, Tosbil 6. 51, 52. But where one hath Right or Title to Land, for which he can recover no damages for the mean occupation thereof, albeit he may Recover the Land there; Regularly, no Remedy can be had here, D. & St. Lib. 1. ch. 19.

Release with Warranty to Bar a Disseisor.

If the Collateral Ancestor of the Devisee do release to the Disseissor, by his procurement, and die; this Warranty will Bar, albeit they know right to be in the Disseisee, and intend to Bar it, and this is remediless, Crompt. Jur. 55. D. & St. 154.

And if I have two Sons, and the eldest go beyond Sea, and is supposed to be dead, and I die, and the younger Brother entrench and alieneth the Land with Warranty, and die without Issue of his body, leaving no Assets to his elder Brother, who is his Heir, and he do after return, he shall have no Remedy here, he is barred in Law and Equity, Dolt. & Stud. chap. 39. Littl. Sett. 704, 705, 707.

Waste.

If one hold my Land by Covenant, and do make Waste in it, I may be relieved against him here, Tosbil 188.

Highway Awarded.

If there be two voluntary Deeds, usually the Court doth Decree the first; but if the last be for payment of Debts, it doth Decree that Deed, Tosbil 54.

One sold a piece of ground, wherein was a High-way, and did not except it; but it was ordered here to continue as before, Nowels case, M. 3 Car. Woollens case, 10 Car. Tosbil 70.

Parcel.

The Contents of a Mannor being in question, it was referred to a Jury to finde as it had gone by usual reputation sixty years past, Caries Rep. 24.

Parcel or not Parcel was Decreed here, and the Land lying intermixt, and not to be distinguished, Ordered to be set out, notwithstanding the Defendant under the general words of his Deed, had long enjoyed it, Dean of Windsor case.

Estoppel.

Every Estoppel in Law, is not an Estoppel in Conscience. For, if a lawful Heir and her sister, a Bastard, had sued out Livery together, the lawful Heir might have had Remedy here, D. & St. 34.

In these and such other like cases, where no ordinary Remedy is given by the Common Law, Relief may be had here, and no where else, by way of Bill and Answer: But in cases where there is an ordinary and clear Remedy for any injury by the Common Law, this Court will not meddle with it, 39 H. 6. 26. 7 H. 7. 11. as in divers of the cases before.

Ways: Commons:

And therefore in cases of Titles of Commons, Ways, or upon Customs, Prescriptions or the like, no Relief is to be had here. And yet in Wentworths case, 2 Eliz. A Fold, Course, or Common of Pasture, was Decreed, Caries Rep. 46.

Also in this Court one sued for Common of Turbery and Pasture, and the Defendant Demurred, and was over-ruled, Caries Rep. 64.

Also in this Court one may set out or ascertain a Common, or set out the Bounds of a Way, Caries Rep. 83. Tosbil 48, 49.

Sett. 26.
Customs.

A Bill allowed for a Title of Common, to examine Witnesses, and upon Publication to go to Law, 39 Eliz. Throckmortons case.

Nor can one sue in this Court for Debt upon a Bond or Bill, Trespass, Slander, or the like, or to avoid a fraudulent Deed made to deceive Purchasers or Creditors; nor sue to prevent a Woman of her Dower, because her Husband was de non sans memorie at the time of the marriage; for in these cases the Common Law giveth Remedy: Nor to have the penalty upon a Penal-Statute, by way of Information, 39 Eliz. Cowards case. Tosbil 18. Caries Rep. 57. And yet some circumstances, as lack of Witnesses, or the like, may make these cases fit for the Chancery, Tosbil 10. 39 H. 6. 26. 7 H. 7. 11. Crompt. Jur. 63. 44. Tosbil 189.

And this Court hath sometimes Decreed these things, as 6 Eliz. there was a Decree that the Tenant should pay his Rent, and do his service, and the Arrears thereof, Caries Rep. 53.

And

And in cases tending to overthrow a Maxim or Fundamental point of the Common-Law, this Court is tender, and will not admit any suit in it. And therefore if a man de non sane memorie make a Deed, he himself shall not be received here to avoid his own Deed, Co. 4. 127.

And yet a man may have relief here against his own Deed, be it Fine, Feoffment, Release or otherwise, in case where it was unduly procured by practice, fraud or force, or without any consideration at all, Tot. 42, 43. Cromp. Jur. 53. Dyer 169. See Sess. 8. before, Tot. 170, 171, 78.

If a man do a personal wrong, and die, the party wronged is remediless both in Law and Equity, Co. 4. 127. And hence it is, that if my Goods be sold in a Market overt, and the Property altered, I shall have no remedy in Equity, D. & St. 40. 7 H. 7. 12.

If a woman levy a Fine with fear, and by a kind of compulsion, and so is barred, she hath no remedy in Law or Conscience, D. & St. 5.

If a Lease be made rendring Rent with a clause of Re-entry, the Rent is behind, and the Lessor die before any demand made thereof; in this case his Heir may not enter in Law, nor will this Court enable him so to do, D. & St. c. 20. l. 1. And hence it is, that if a Tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct commit waste, no remedy can be had against him here, no more than in Law, D. & St. 2. ch. 3. If a man have a Wife an Inheretrix, and her Father dyeth, and he maketh all the speed he can to make his Entry, but his Wife dyeth before he can do it; in this case he cannot be Tenant by the courtlesie, but for this he is remediless in Law and Equity both, D. & St. l. 2. c. 15.

If a father leave his son and heir a great Debt, and Assets in Land to pay it; he cannot avoid it in Law nor Equity, D. & St. l. 2. 49. And if a man make a Lease of Land to a man and his wife, rendring a greater Rent then the Land is worth, and the husband die, the wife may choose whether she will meddle with the Land. So if it come to Executors, they may refuse it if they have not Assets besides; and this Court will not compel them to occupy the Land and pay the Rent, D. & St. 121, 122. And yet in some of the cases of this nature, sometimes some circumstances make it properly examinable in this Court.

So also it is in cases tending to overthrow Acts of Parliament made for the public good and general Repose of the People: In these cases this Court will not easily admit of a complaint. And hence it is, that regularly it doth not give relief to a man that is barred by a Fine with Proclamation, and no Claim or Common-Recovery, D. & St. 40. 155. 33. So that a woman that was a Feme-covert when she levied the Fine, cannot come here and say she did it for fear, D. & St. 155. Car. Rep. 8. And in this case also the case may be fit for Equity in some cases, as of a Fine levied by an Infant, or the like.

By the new Ordinance for Regulating of the Chancery, it is provided,

1. That no Decree be made here against an Act of Parliament. Art. 47.
2. That none shall sue here for a Legacie, Art. 48.
3. That no Relief be given here for that which a man may recover at Common-Law, unless it be to have the thing in kinde; where it cannot be had in Law, Art. 46.
4. Nor may any Injunction be had now of course, but upon the merits of the cause, Art. 27.

A Devise was of the Heirs third part of Lands in capite, and the Court decreed it against the Heir: But it was afterward reversed as an erroneous Decree for the cause aforesaid, the Case appearing in the Decree it self, Pasch. 16 Jac. Sir Henry Roswells Case.

And in the cases of this nature also there do fall out some circumstances also which make them fit to be examinable in Equity, and in such cases they are received here. And therefore where an Act of Parliament hath been taken one way for a time, and after is taken another way, Relief may be in Equity for cases arising before the alteration.

And in all these, when a Plaintiff doth exhibit a Bill tending to any such purpose as before, if it appear to be so in the Bill exhibited, the Defendant may demur to it and cast it out of Court by dismissal; if it appear to be so in the end of the Case when it comes to Trial, then the Court will cast it out. And if in the interpleading by Bill and Answer they fall upon an Issue in Law, as Will or no Will, or the like, the Court doth usually send it to Law to be tried.

The manner and method of proceeding in suits by Bill and Answer in this Court.

In the Courts of the Common-Law, the Judges do proceed secundum potestatem ordinariam; but in this Court the Judges do proceed secundum potestatem absolutam. And yet in this Court there is a twofold Power: First, ordinary, which is in cases of Traverse, Recognizances, Partition, Scire facias, to repeal Patents, Extents, and the like; in all which they are to proceed according to the Rules of the Common-Law, and so it is a Court and Law. Secondly, They have another power that is more arbitrary and unlimited; and this is used by Bill and Answer: And in the exercise of this last power, the common method and process is, first of all to call the Defendant in by a Subpoena, which is the first Writ, and is to require the Defendants appearance in this Court by a day, and under a pain, to make answer to the Complaint of the Plaintiff.

But for this and the Proceeding in this Court, See my First Part of the Marrow of the Law, in fol. 656. unto the end of the Book. And see the new Ordinance of the Lord Protector and his Council, made the 22 of August 1654. and what Alterations be made thereby in the Proceedings and the Fees.

CHAP. XLIII.

Of Charge and Discharge.

IT is an Act done by a man, binding him, or that which is his to the performance thereof, and making him, or it, or both subject thereunto. See Rent charge.

Note, that Lands may be charged divers ways, as by Grants of Rent out of it, by Statutes, Judgments, Conditions, Warranties, and the like; and may be divers ways discharged again, For all which see much in other Titles. Lit. sect. 648. & Co. super Cro.

And it is a Principle, That every Land in Fee-simple may be charged in Fee by one way or other, Lit. sect. 648.

Where a Grant of Land will be good in respect of the parties, Grantor, Grantee, Thing granted, or the manner of the Grant, there a Charge upon the same Land will be good also: As if any Body Corporate or Politick, Dean and Chapter, Mayor or Commonalty, or the like, charge their Land by their Common-Seal, and common consent, it is good. So if the Patron, or Parson and Ordinary, or in time of Vacation the Patron and Ordinary charge the Land by their Grant, this would have bound the Land by the Common-Law: But in case where a Grant of the Land it self would be void or voidable in respect of the parties, Grantor, Grantee, or thing granted, or the manner of the Grant, there a Charge upon the same Land will be void also, and the Land shall never be subject to it. As if an Infant, Feme-covert, Dean without his Chapter, Mayor without his Commonalty, or the like, grant a Rent out of their Land, this is void: But a Dean or Mayor in such cases may charge their own persons, and their own Lands they have in their own right. So if one grant a Rent to a person incapable; or if one by his Deed grant a Rent out of Land to which he hath no right nor possession; or if he have the possession, yet hath no right; or if he have right, yet hath no possession, this will not charge the Land, albeit the party do alter get a Right to it, or the Possession and the Right come together, Perk. tit. Grants, 14 H. 8. 10 & H. 5. 8.

Where the right of Fee-simple is perpetually by Judgment of Law in Abeyance, without any expectation to come in esse, there he that hath this qualified Fee concurrentibus his qua in jure requiruntur, may charge the Land; and this Charge is good; as in the case of the Charge of Parson, Patron and ordinary before the Statute. But where the Fee is in Abeyance, and may come in esse every hour, there it cannot be charged till it come: As if a Lease be made for life, the Remainder to the right Heirs of I. S. the Fee-simple cannot be charged till I. S. be dead, Co. super Lit. 343.

Lands intailed also may be charged in Fee, if the Estate-tail be cut off by Fine or Recovery: For if a Tenant in tail grant a Rent-charge, and after suffer Recovery, levy a Fine, or make a Feoffment, this Charge shall be always good against the Recoverer, Conusee, or Feoffee: And so if he make a Lease. And so also in some cases where the Estate doth continue: As if a Disseisor make a Gift in tail, and the Donee in consideration of a Release by the Disseeisee of all his Right to the Donee, granteth a Rent-charge to the Disseeisee and his Heirs proportionable to the value of his Right, this will bind the Issue in tail. So if A. devise Land to B. and his Heirs of his body, the Remainder to C. on condition that B. shall grant a Rent-charge out of it to D. in Fee, and B. grant the Rent accordingly, this is good to bind the Estate-tail and the Remainder also, as was adjudged in Duston & Ivianes Case, M. 15 Jac. B. R.

If a man have a moveable Inheritance, as in a great Meadow, two Acres by division or election every year by Custom, so that one year he hath it in one place, and another in another; this may be charged well enough, and the Charge will follow the Land, Co. super Lit. fol 4. a. 343. b.

Mortgagor and Mortgagee.

When all those that have Interest in the Land joyn in the Grant of a Rent, so that the Grant is made Concurrentibus his qua in jure requiruntur, the Grant is good for ever: As if at the Common-Law, Donor and Donee in tail had joyned in a Grant of a Rent, and the Donee die without Issue, the Donor shall hold the Land charged. So if the Mortgagor and Mortgagee join in the Grant of a Rent-charge, and after the Mortgagor enter for the Condition broken, yet the Rent doth continue. So if a Disfeisor or his Heir grant a Rent-charge, and the Disfeisee confirm it, this is now unavoidable when he doth recover the Land. So if Feoffee on Condition grant a Rent-charge in Fee, and the Feoffor confirm, and after the Condition is broken, and the Feoffor enter, he cannot avoid the Rent. So if Lessee for life charge the Land with a Rent in Fee, and the Lessor confirm it, this is a good Rent for ever, albeit the Confirmation be made after the Tenant for life. So if Tenant for life on Condition grant a Rent-charge in Fee, Lessor confirm the Grant, the Condition is broken, the Lessor doth enter, Co. l. 147. 149. 10. 49. Co. super Lit. 300. 121. 301. 14 Aff. pl. 14. 14 Ed. 3. Aff. 109.

If one have a Possession and an ancient Right, and he grant a Rent-charge, this shall issue out of both. And therefore if Tenant in tail lease to A. for life, and after he grant a Rent-charge to B. A. dies; he shall not avoid the Charge. So if A. Tenant in tail infeoff B. on Condition to the use of A. in Fee; A. acknowledg a Statute, which by the Statute of 1 R. 3. c. 5. is extended, (A. having then but a Rent and a Condition;) the Condition is broken, by which the Feoffment is avoided, and he seised of the Intail again, yet A. shall not avoid the Extent. And so if he had granted a Rent-charge, Co. 2. 14. Co. l. 147. 148. 11 H. 7. 21.

He that hath but a Remainder or Reversion of Land, may charge it, and the Charge is good in respect of the Possibility, and the Distress shall fasten on the Land when it comes in Possession, Co. 5. 2. 1. 62. and not before, Bro. Charge, 11. 30.

And therefore he in the Reversion expectant upon an Estate for life, may charge the Land. And if A. lease to B. for years, and after A. doth grant the Reversion to C. rendring Rent; A. cannot distrain during the Term per Moyle, but per Danby & Nedham. If the Beasts of C. come upon the Land, A. may distrain them; but Moyle al contra, but by him, if C. pay the Rent once to A. if it be a year after, A. may have an Assise, Bro. Distress 48. but after the Term is ended, A. may without question distrain for all the Arrearages, Co. 5. 2.

If A. lease to B. for life, and then grant a Rent-charge to C. A. die, B. being his heir, in this case B. shall hold the Land discharged during his life; but otherwise it is if he had purchased the Land; Per Nedham, 9 Ed. 4. 18.

Rent.

If A. lease to B. for life, A. charge the Land, A. doth disfeise B. in this case A. shall forthwith hold the Land charged, 5 H. 5. 10.

If the Lessor grant a Rent-charge, and the Lessee surrender, the Lessor shall forthwith hold the Land charged, Bro. Charge 10.

If A. be Tenant by Elegit, and B. having the Reversion doth grant a Rent-charge out of it, and after B. doth release or confirm to A. for life; in this case A. shall hold it subject to this charge, 31 Aff. pl. 13.

A. being Tenant for life, the Remainder to B. in fee, or the Reversion to him in fee, A. doth grant one Rent-charge out of the Land, and B. doth grant another Rent-charge. A. surrender: In this case B. shall hold the Land charged with both the Rents, Co. 9. 107.

SeB. 2.

If one have divers Estates in Land, he may charge or grant them, Dyer 10.

If a Lord grant a Rent out of his Manor in which are Copiholds, and after one of the Copihold-estates fall into the Lords hand, and after this is granted away again according to the custom; now it seems the Charge shall not light upon this which is so granted away, but upon the residue of the Manor. Yet see Dyer 271. Co. 4. 24. 64.

If one grant a Rent-charge out of Land that is in Lease for years or life, it will fasten fasten upon the Land as soon as by any means it come into the hands of the Grantor, and not before. But it may be the person of the Grantor may be charged before: See before. And he that is in Possession, and he that is in Reversion or Remainder of the Land, may both charge the Land, but the charge of the Tenant in possession shall be preferred, 5 H. 5. 8. Co. 2. 137. Dyer 10.

If one Jointenant grant a Rent-charge out of his Land he holdeth in Jointenancie, the beasts of any of the other Jointenants shall not be distrained, neither shall they be charged hereby; but the beasts of the Grantor may be distrained upon the Land: But if the Grantor survive the rest of his companions, all the Land is chargeable; but if he die before the rest, all the Land is discharged. So if one Jointenant enter into a Statute, or suffer a Judgment, his part only shall be extended and subject to the charge whiles his companions live: But if he survive, then all shall be in Execution, unless his companions did sever the Jointure in their lifetime; and if he die before his companions, yet the Execution is not discharged of his part, 7 H. 6. 1. Perk. 183. 11 H. 6. 33. Bro. Charge 39. Execution 148. Co. super Lit. 184. 13 H. 7. 22. F. N. B. 20.

If a Mayor alone, or a Dean alone, will charge the Land they have in common with the Corporation, none of the Corporation shall be charged, nor the Land, but the person of the Dean or Mayor himself.

If four be bound in a Statute or Recognisance, and one die, the three that survive shall not be charged with all, but those three with the Heir of the fourth together equally, 29 Aff. f. 37.

If two be bound jointly in an Obligation, and one die, or be outlawed, it seems the other shall be charged with the whole. So if two be Accountants, and one die, or be outlawed: So if two warrant Land, and the one bath nothing to render in value, it seems the other must answer all. But if two men make a Feoffment in fee with Warranty, and the one die, the Feoffee cannot charge the Survivor only, but the Heir of him that is dead also, Bro. Joins. 5. 16. 21. 9 Ed. 4. 24. Co. super Lit. 386. 3. 14. 19 H. 6. 55.

If a man seised of Lands in fee, and possessed of a Term for many years, grant a Rent out of both for life in tail or in fee, with clause of Distress out of both, this Rent doth issue only out of the Freehold, and the Lands in Lease are only charged with a Distress: But if it had been granted only out of the Lands in Lease, then that Land had been charged during the Term, if the Grantee live so long, Co. super Lit. 147. Co. 7. 23.

If one have divers Estates in the Land, and grant or charge it, this shall go out of all his Estates. As if A. be Tenant for life, Remainder to B. in tail, Remainder to A. in fee, and A. grant a Rent-charge and die, B. dieth without issue, the Heir of A. shall be charged. So if A. be Tenant for life, Remainder to B. in tail, Remainder to A. in fee, and A. acknowledg a Statute and die, and B. die without issue, the Heir of A. shall be charged, as was held in Pethowse and Cranes Case, M. 36 Q. 37 Q. Co. B. So if A. be Tenant for life, Remainder to B. for life, Remainder to A. in fee, and A. makes a Feoffment; in this case all his Estates pass, 24 E. 3. 70. Bro. Dove 55. So if A. Tenant in tail, the Remainder to him in tail, levy a Fine, all his Estates pass and are barred, Co. super Lit. 372. So if A. be Tenant for life on condition to have fee, A. lease to B for years, A. perform the Condition, yet he shall not avoid the Lease for years. So of a Rent. But otherwise it is in case of the King, Co. 7: Parl. 2. 14.

A man makes a Lease for years rendring Rent, and after grants the Reversion for life, to which Grant the Lessee for years attorns; the Grantee acknowledgeth a Statute, and after surrenders his Estate; the Conusee extends the Statute, and distrains for the Rent, and it was adjudged good, Brownl. Rep. 3. par. 97.

Regularly, when the Estate is gone upon which the Charge is, the Charge is determined and defeated As for examples:

If one be seised of Land, and take a wife, and after grant a Rent or Common out of the Land, or enter into a Statute, and it be extended during the Husbands life, and after he die, and the wife is endowed of a third part of the Land charged by suit; now

3. Where and in what case a Charge good in its creation shall after be defeated and determined, and the Land discharged.

by

by this the Charge is determined as to that third part, and that part is discharged of it. But if one have three Manors, and charge them all, and die, and the accept of one of them, she shall hold two parts of it charged, Co. super. Lit. 349. F.N.B. 150. 4. 17 Ed. 2.

If a man have a Term of years in Land in the right of his wife, and he grant a Rent-charge out of this Land and die; now by his death the Charge is determined, and the wife shall hold it discharged. But if he survive his wife, the Charge is good during the Term, 9 H.6. 52. 7 H.6. 1. 9 H.6. 52.

By alteration of the Tenant of the Land to be charged.

If a Tenant in tail grant a Rent-charge out of the entailed Land, (unless it be in such a special case as is above) and then die, the charge is determined, and the Issue shall hold it discharged. So shall the Donor also, if the Tenant die without issue, and the Land revert to him. And although the Issue after his entry make a Feoffment, and take back a new estate, yet the Charge doth not revive, 12 H.4. 7. 44 Ed. 3. 21. 14. Aff. Brom. Charge 20.

If one devise that his Executors shall sell his Land, and the Heir after his death enter and charge the Land, and then the Executors do sell it; now the Charge is defeated, and the Vendee shall hold it discharged, 14 H.8. 10.

If a Feoffee or Lessee on Condition charge the Land by a Grant or a Statute, and after the Condition is performed, and the Feoffor or Lessor re-enter; now he shall avoid this Charge, for the Land is discharged of it, Perk. sett. 840.

See. 3.

If a Disseisor charge the Land he hath by Disseison, and after the Disseisee re-enter or recover the Land; now the Disseisee shall hold it discharged, and is not subject to the Charge of the Disseisor, Co. 11.

If a Lessee for life or years make a Feoffment in fee, and so commit a forfeiture, and after the Feoffee charge the Land by Grant, Statute or otherwise; and then the Lessor enter for the forfeiture: Now in this case the Charge is gone, and the Lessor shall hold it discharged. So if a Lessee do waste and cause a forfeiture, and after the Waste and before the Recovery of the Land charge it, and after the Lessor recover it; the Lessor shall avoid his Charge, Lit. sett. 476. Perk. sett. 844.

If the Husband charge the Land he hath in fee in the right of his wife, and after he and his wife levy a Fine of this Land; now the Conusee of the Fine shall hold it discharged, and the Charge is determined, Co. 1. 66.

If there be Tenant in tail in possession, the Remainder in tail or in fee to J.S. and J.S. grant a Rent or otherwise do charge the Land, and after the Tenant in tail in possession suffer a Recovery of the Land; now hereby all the Charges by him in Remainder are defeated, Co. 1. 61.

By other mat-
facto.

If one charge his Land with a Rent, or Statute, and after make a gift of it in Tail, and the Tenant in Tail make a Feoffment of the Land to the Grantee of the Rent, or him that hath the Statute extended, and the Issue recover the Land in a Formedon: Now it seems this Issue may avoid this charge, because it was once extinct. For the charge of Tenant in tail, See Estat. 19 H.6. 45.

By Remitter.

If a Tenant in Tail maketh a Feoffment to his Heir inheritable by the Tail, being within age, and after being of full age (living his Ancestor) he charge the Land, and after the Tenant in Tail dieth: Now the Land is hereby discharged, and he shall avoid his own Grant, because he is Remitted: So if the Heir of the Disseisee do Disseise the Disseisor, and grant a Rent charge, and then the disseised dieth; the Grantor shall avoid his own Grant for the same reason: So if the Father Disseise the Grandfather, and granteth a Rent charge, and dieth, now the Entry of the Grandfather is gone, if he die, the son shall avoid the charge by the Remitter. Littl. Sett. 660. Co. super. Cro.

4. Where and in what case, not but the charge shall remain notwithstanding the Alteration of the Tenant.

If a Tenant in Tail charge the Land, and after levy a Fine or suffer a Recovery of the Land to his own use; this doth confirm the charge, and it shall continue: But if he sell the Land away by Fine, or Recovery, it seems the Conusee or Recoveror shall hold it discharged, Co. 1. 61.

If Tenant for life charge the Land, and then Enfeoff him in Remainder; in this case he shall hold it charged during the life of the Tenant for life, and no longer; for this is a Surrender. Brom. Charge 6.

If a man have an Office of skill for his life, to which there is a house belonging, and he chargeth the house with a Rent during his life, and after he commit a forfeiture, yet the Charge shall continue during his life; for he that takes Land by advantage of a Condition in Law, must take it with his Charge, Co. super Lit. 234.

If one have a Lease for years or life, of Land, and grant a Rent out of the Land, and after surrender his Estate, and determine them; yet the Charge shall continue as long as the Estates should have endured, if they had not been surrendered, Dyer 10. Perk. sect. 844. Co. 1.67.8.145.

If one make a Lease for years or life, and after grant a Lease out of the Land, and after the Lessee for years surrender, the Lessor cannot avoid this Charge: But now it will take effect presently, otherwise it will not take effect until the Lease be determined, 5 H. 5.8. 38 Ed. 3.4.

If one Joint-tenant charge the Land, and after release to his companion and die, the Survivor shall hold it charged: But if it had come to him by Survivorship, contra. Co. 6.76.

If a man seised in Fee-simple that hath a wife, make a Feoffment in fee on condition and die, and the Feoffee on condition endow the wife of a third part, and she charge this, and after surrender or grant her Estate to the Feoffee on condition: Now he cannot avoid this, but must hold it charged during her life, Perk. sect. 823.

If there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in tail, Remainder in fee to the Tenant for life, and the Tenant for life charge the Land and die, and the Tenant in tail die without issue; now the Heir of the Tenant for life cannot avoid this Charge, but the Land will be charged, 5 Ed. 4.2.

If the Kings Tenant charge his Land, with or without the Kings licence, and after the Land come to the King by Attainder or Escheat, or the like: Now in this case the King must hold it charged, and cannot avoid the Charge, 3 Aff. p.1. stat. 2 Eliz. P. & M. cap.8.

If Tenant for life charge the Land, and after make a Feoffment to a stranger, or doth Waste whereby it is forfeit and recovered; here he in Reversion must hold it charged during his life. And if the Lessee grant one Rent, and he in Reversion another; now he must hold the Land subject to, and charged with both Rents, but the Grant of the Lessee for life shall be preferred, 50 Ed. 3.6. Co. 1.67. Dyer 10. Co. 9: 107. Co. 10.49.

If the Husband and Wife during the Coverture grant a Rent by Fine out of Land, and after his death she is endowed with part of it; now she must hold it charged with the Rent.

If there be Tenant in life, the Remainder in tail to B. the Remainder in tail to C. and Tenant for life, and B. levy a Fine sur grant, and render of Rent to the Tenant for life, and after B. the first Tenant in tail die without issue, and the Land go to C. he must be charged still with this Rent to the Tenant for life, Co. 1.76.

If Tenant in tail make a Lease for life, and he grant a Rent-charge out of the Reversion, and after Tenant for life dieth, whereby the Grantor becometh Tenant in tail again, and the Reversion defeated: Yet the Rent-charge is good and doth continue against him, but not against his issue, 11 H. 7. 21. Co. super Lit. 349.

If assent be issuing out of a Mill or House, and the Mill or House fall, yet the Charge doth continue upon the Soil, 9 Ed. 4.20. Co. 1.113. 10.48.

In all cases when any Executory thing is created by Deed, there something by consent of all persons, parties to the creation of it, may be by their Deed defeated and discharged: And therefore by a defeasance of all, the Covenant that doth create a future power of Revocation, as the power it self created may be defeated. And therefore Warranties, Rents, Charges, Recognizances, Annuities, Covenants, Leases for years, Uses at Common-Law, and such like things, may by mutual consent be avoided: And every right, title, and interest in presenti or in futuro, by the inquiry of all that have the right, may be barred and extinct. See Cases, Co. 10.49.

Taxes and Rates.

Taxes and Rates, are the appointing and setting down how much every one shall pay and be charged with, Stat. 43 E. c. 3.

Maimed Soldiers and Mariners.

The Justices of the Peace at the Sessions must set a Rate or Sum upon every Parish to be paid weekly, towards the relief of sick, hurt and maimed Soldiers and Mariners; but no Parish must be rated above ten pence, nor under two pence weekly; and if there be fifty Parishes in the County, not above six pence a week: And this sum so taxed shall be yearly assessed by the agreement of the Parishioners within themselves, or in default thereof by the Churchwardens and Petty-Constables, or the more part of them, or in default thereof by the Justice of the Peace next to the Parish: And if the party taxed refuse to pay the money taxed, the Churchwardens and Petty-Constables, or either of them, or in default of them the said Justice may levy it by sale of his goods. See more in Treasurer:

The Churchwardens and Overseers of every Parish, or the greater part of them, may by advice of two Justices raise weekly, by Taxation of every mans Land within the Parish, money, and charge men towards the Relief of the Poor: And every man must pay according to that Rate, or complain at Sessions for relief, St. 43 Eliz. c. 2. See more in Poor.

Prisoners of the Kings Bench and Marshalsey.

The Justices of the Peace at the Sessions must set down what must be paid by every County quarterly towards the Relief of the poor Prisoners in the Kings-Bench and Marshalsey, and such Hospitals and Alms-houses as shall be in the said Kings-Bench or Marshalsey, and in the same County; and it must not be less then twenty shillings out of every County yearly to each of the said Prisons. Which sums ratably to be assessed upon every Parish, the Churchwardens of every Parish must collect and pay to the High-Constable of the Division. So that it seems this Taxation must be made by agreement between the Parishioners amongst themselves; and that if any refuse to pay, that upon complaint the Justices of the Peace at their Quarter-Sessions may compel him: And if any be over-rated, that he must be relieved there, Stat. 43 Eliz. cap. 2.

Prisoners of the Common-Gaol.

The Justices of the Peace at their Quarter-Sessions may rate and tax every Parish in the County weekly as they think fit, so as it exceed not three pence a week every Parish, towards provision for the Relief of Prisoners in the Common-Gaol. And every Sunday the Churchwardens must levy it, and pay it quarterly to the Head-Officers of every Hundred or place, to be paid in at the Quarter-Sessions. And this also it seems must be taxed upon the Inhabitants by agreement amongst themselves, or else by Order of the Sessions, St. 14 Eliz. c. 5.

Chepstow-Bridg.

Four Justices (whereof one of the Quorum) may tax the Counties of Gloucester and Monmouth, according to their discretion, for and towards the Reparations of Chepstow Bridg, and every Hundred must pay according to the Rate. But they must rate every man in particular by Agreement, or by Order of the Sessions, St. 3 Jac. cap. 23.

Church.

Such Justices also may rate the Inhabitants of any Towns or Villages neer unto any decayed Bridg on the High-ways, when it is not known who ought to repair it; and the persons so taxed must pay it accordingly. See Stat. 22 H. 8. cap. 5.

The Rates for the Church are to be made by the Churchwardens, and the greater part of the Parish present, after solemn notice given in the Church, upon every Inhabitant and Occupier of Lands in the Town or place, for money towards the Reparation of the Church, and other matters belonging thereunto, and according to that Rate men must pay, or they will be compelled to it. See Churchwardens, Co. c. 67.

Sewers.

How men shall be taxed and rated for the reparation of the Sea-banks, See Commission of Sewers.

The

The Rates of Subsidies and Fifteenths are to be made according to the Statutes whereby they are granted, if they set down any Order of Taxing; otherwise according to the ancient use. See Subsidies, Stat. 9 H.4. cap.7. 1 Ed.3.6: See more of this in my Justice of Peace Book, chap.27.

CHAP: XLIV.

Of Charters.

Charters are Writings, Deeds, Evidences and Instruments made from the King or any other man to another, upon some Estate passed or conveyed between them of Lands or Tenements: shewing the place, name, and quantity of Lands; the Estate, Time, and manner of doing of it; the Parties to the Estate delivered and taken; the Witness present at the same Time, with other Circumstances. The word Charter doth usually signifie the Kings Patent; which see in Patents, Terms ley, Co.1.1. 34 H.6.1.

And these are some of them called Principal, such as do concern the Title of the Land, and are the chief strength thereof; and others are said to be Accessary, (i.) such as concern the Possession only, as Court-Rolls, and such like, Co.1.1.

Charters are the sinews and strength of mens Inheritances: And therefore for the most part, he whose possession is made by them, shall have them; and they are as Incidents or Concomitants to the Land, to go and pass with it. As a man seised of Lands in Fee in Possession or Reversion, and hath divers Charters, Deeds and Evidences, some with Warranty, and some without, and maketh a Feoffment in Fee without Warranty: Now the Purchasor shall have all the Charters, Deeds and Evidences, as incident to the Land, and though they be not granted by the Deed; Ratione Terra, to the end he may the better defend the Land it self, having no Warranty to recover in value, and the Feoffor being not bound to warrant, hath no use of them: so if there be a Warranty in the Deed, if there the Feoffor grant the Deeds, there the Purchasor shall have them also. So also if the thing sold be such a thing as doth lie in Grant, as Common, Rent, &c. if the Sellor or Grantor doth never grant the Charters that do concern the Land, and although there be a Warranty in the Deed, yet the Purchasor shall have all the Deeds that do concern the Land.

To whom they belong, and what persons shall have them.

But if that a man be seised of Land in Possession or Reversion, and have divers Charters, some containing Warranty, and some not, and he make a Feoffment of this Land, and warrant it to the Feoffee and his Heirs, so that he is bound to render in value, and there are no words of Grant of the Charters in the Deed: Now in this case, forasmuch as the defence of the Title is at the Feoffors peril, therefore he shall keep all the principal Evidences that are material for the maintenance of the Title of the Land; as all the Deeds which comprehend Warranty, whereof he may take advantage; and such as may serve him to deraign the Warranty paramount, and such like. But such as are accessory only, which concern the Possession, and not the Title, those the Feoffee shall have: As if A. enfeoff B. with Warranty, and B. enfeoff C. with Warranty, though C. may vouch A. upon the first Warranty, yet he shall not have the first Deed; and yet if in this case a stranger have them, the Feoffee may recover them against him. So if A. enfeoff B. with Warranty, and B. enfeoff C. by the word Deed; (which implieth a Warranty for life of the Donor) B. shall keep the Charters during his life, but his Heir shall not keep them afterwards, Co.1.144.3 Ed.3.11 Ed.3.17. 19 H.6.65. 34 H.6. Co.11.50. 10 Ed.4.9. 18 Ed.4.14. 6 H.7.3. 6 H.7.33. Co. on Lit. f.6.

If

If a Lord come to Land by Escheat, he shall have all the Charters belonging to the Land so escheated to him, Co. I. 1. Such Charters as belong to the Ancestor, the Heir shall have, though he hath no Land by descent, Co. I. 1.

If one make a Feoffment to two, and the Heirs of one of them, and deliver all the Charters and Deeds to him that hath the Fee-simple of the Land, and he happen to die before his Companion; now his Heir shall keep all the rest of his Evidences, except the Deed of Feoffment, which the surviving Jointenant is to have, Co. I. 2, 3: 4 H. 6. 1.

If two Jointenants be in by a defeasible title, and a Release is made to them, and one of them die; now the Survivor shall have that Release, and all the rest of the Writings, Co. I. 2. 21 H. 7. 33. 6 H. 7. 3.

If a Feoffment be made to two without Deed, and the Writings be delivered to one of them, now the other shall not have them from him. So if I release to my two Joint-Feoffees, and I release to them both, and deliver the Deed to one, the other, though he survive, shall not have it.

If I release to two Disseisors, and deliver the Deed to one, the other surviving shall have it. If the Disseisor release to the Disseisor, and he make a Feoffment of the Land, the Feoffee shall have the Release. But if a Feoffment be made to two without Deed, and the Evidences that do concern the Land are delivered to one, the other shall not have them, 34 H. 6. 1. 6 H. 7. 3.

CHAP. XLV.

Of Chattels.

1. Chattels, what.

The kinds,

Sec. 1.

Personal Action, Devise. Executors.

Thing in Action.

Chattels or Cattals are all Possessions of Goods moveable and unmoveable, except such as are in nature of a Freehold, or parcel of it. And these are either Real or immoveable, which are such as do not immediately appertain to the Person, but either to some other thing by way of dependance, as a Box with Writings of Land, the Body of a Ward, the Fruit of a Tree, or the Tree it self upon the Land, or are issuing out of things immoveable, and of a more real nature; as Leases for years, at will, Wardships, the Estates of Gardeins in Chivalry, which hold the Land for the double or single value, the Estates of Tenants by Statute-Merchant, Staple or Elegit, and Grants of the next Advowson: Or else they are personal and moveable, (i.) such as are moved by others; as Money, Plate, Gold, Silver, Jewels, Utensils, Householdstuff, Debts, Wood cut, Corn Emblements, Hay, and the like: Or such as move themselves, as Cattel, and the like. And therefore called Personal, either because they are such as do immediately belong to the person of a man, as an Horse, &c. or because being detained from a man, he hath no means to recover them but a Personal Action. And therefore are said to be Moveable, because one may move them, and make them to follow a man from one place to another. And all these one may devise by Will; or if he die, they shall go to his Executors or Administrators.

Personal things also are either quick and living, as Beasts, Fowl, and the like; or dead, as Money, Gold, Silver, or the like: The living also are either tame, or wild. Both these kinds of Chattels also are either in Possession, as when one hath his Ward or his Goods in hand: Or in Action; which is, where one hath not the thing it self, but an Action to recover it; and then it is called a Chose in Action, Terms ley, Stamford. cap. 16. Stat. 1 Eliz. cap. 1. Co. super Lit. f. 41. 118. Plow. 192. Dyer 277. 5. Co. 465. 3. 11. Park. f. 66. F. N. B. 128.

Chattels

Chattels are not so much regarded in Law, as Inheritances and Freeholds; nor Chattels personal so much esteemed as Chattels real: And therefore it is they will so easily vest in a man, and devest again; and devest, and vest again: For, De minimis non curat Lex, (i.) The Law regardeth not small things. Hence it is that no Precipe will lie against a Lessee for years, that hath only a Chattel, for the baseness of his Estate, Co. 8. 95. Dyer 25. 163. 298. 30. Co. 8. 171. Plow. 418.

If a Lease for years be made on Condition, that if such an Act be done, it shall be void; it will be made void without Re-entry, 24 Ed. 3. 54. 8 Ed. 4. 3.

A Traitor or Felon, after the offence done, and before conviction, may sell any of his Chattels real or personal, bona fide, to maintain himself. And an Officer of the King that is an Accountant, may sell any of his Chattels bona fide, after he is become an Accountant and Debtor to the King, and the Kings debt will not reach it. They will vest in the King where they be forfeit, and the Kings Officer may seize them without any Office found.

If an Obligation be made to two, and one of them release the whole Debt to the Obligor, the other is without remedy: But in case of Inheritances and Freeholds, the Law is otherwise.

Chattels will easily vest and devest: As if one that doth hold Land in capite doth mortgage it, and the Mortgager die, his Heir being within age, and the King seise the Body and Land, and after the day the Mortgager redeem the Land and re-enter; now the Wardship is lost again. So if he make a Feoffment to the use of the Feoffee and his heirs, until the Feoffor shall pay to the Feoffee or his heirs an Hundred pounds; and that upon, and from the day of payment of the Hundred pounds, the Feoffee and his Heirs shall stand and be thereof seised to the use of the Feoffor and his heirs, and that then and thenceforth the Feoffor shall re-enter, &c. and the Feoffee die, his heir within age, and after the money is paid, the Kings title to the Wardship is defeated, Dyer 369. a. Dyer 298. b.

A Wardship happened to the Bishop of Durham, by a Tenure of him in capite; and before any seising by him of Body or Land, the Bishoprick became void, and a new Bishop is made: It is adjudged, that the Executors or Administrators of the Predecessor, as a Chattel-vest, and not the King nor the succeeding Bishop shall have this Wardship. But if a Bishop seise a Ward after it happen, and die, his Executor shall have him, Dyer 277. 2 H. 4. 19. 7 H. 4. 41. 44 Ed. 3. 41. F. N. B. 143. c.

If one give his goods to his daughter in marriage, and after they are divorced, the wife shall have again the goods that are not spent, Dyer 13. a.

If a Waste by a Guardian in Chivalry be found against him, whereby he lose the Custody of the Land by the Statute of Marlb. cap. 4. yet the Marriage is not devest, but he may still maintain a Forfeiture of Marriage. So if Entry be for Mortmain, a Ward vest shall not be devest, but the Abbot shall have the Marriage, &c. Dyer 25. b.

The husband and wife are Joint-tenants of a Term for years, and the husband kill himself; now in this case all doth survive unto the wife, until the Office be found for the King upon the forfeiture, and then it goeth all from her unto the King, Plow. 261.

If one recover by an erroneous Judgment, and present to a Benefice, or enter into the Perquisites of a Vilain, and after the Judgment is reversed by Writ of Error; these Collateral things that are executed, shall not be devested, Co. 8. 142. b.

If an erroneous Judgment be given in Debt, and the Sheriff by force of a Fieri facias sell a Lease for years of the Defendants, and after the Judgment is reversed for Error; now in this case the Term shall not be restored, but only the money made of it: But if the Execution be by Elegit, and upon it the Sheriff do by Inquisition extend a Term of the Defendants, and deliver to the Plaintiff in the suit, and after the Judgment is reversed, in this case he shall have restitution of the Term it self, Co. 8. 142, 143. a. Adjudged Pa/ch. 15 Jac. B. R. Buckhurst and Mayo.

And if a Sheriff by force of a special Capias ut Lagatum, seise Goods, or Chattels, and sell them, and after the Uthary is reversed; here the party also shall be restored to all his Goods and Chattels in kinde, Co. 8. 143.

If the King do Knight a Ward, that is in custody of his Guardian, by reason of a Tenure in Capite, or Knights service; now hereby the Wardship of the Body is Devested, but he shall hold his Lands, and have the value of the marriage, Co. 6. 74. 75.

If a man be Out-lawed, and the King give away some of his Goods, and after the King pardon him, and restore him to his Goods. Now the Goods given between the Out-lawry, and the Pardon shall not be Devested, nor that Gift avoided by the Pardon, Broo. Restitutio 18.

If a man die seized of Capite Land, and it descend to his Brother and Heir, an Infant, and the Lord seise the Ward, the Wife of the Tenant being privily with child of a Son, and after the Son is born. Now the Brother shall be out of Ward, but if the Son die, then he shall be in Ward again. Broo. Gard. 119.

If there be a Presentment to a Church, happen to a Tenant in Tail, and he die before he present; now his Executor, not the Issue in Tail shall present, for the Chattel is not Devested: So if a Farmer have a Presentment, which doth happen during the Term, though he doth not present, yet he shall have it. See more in the next Questi. following, and in divers other Titles: F.N.B. 34. a. B. Perk. 363. 97.

If a Parson, Vicar, Master of Hospital, or any Body Politick, be possessed of any Goods or Chattels, in their own right, and die, these are Chattels that shall go to their Executors or Administrators, not to their Successors, Co. 4. 65. Perk. 363. 98.

If a Lease be made for years, or a Wardship, or the new Advowson of a Church, or Covenant for payment of money, or the like be granted, or an Obligation made to me, and to my Heirs, yet in all these cases I have this as a Chattel, and it shall go to my Executor, and not to my Heir. So if any such thing be made, or granted to me and my Successors, my Executors shall have it, and if the Heir or Successor get the Deedy, the Executor may recover him for them, Litt. 363. 740. 14 H. 4. 34. 34 H. 6. 27. F.N.B. 120. Broo. Oblig. 18. 68. Fitz. Accomp. 16.

If I have a Box, or Chest, or Trunk full of Writings, at my death, and the same open, not sealed, or locked; Now this shall go as Goods to my Executor; but if it were sealed or locked, as incident to the Writings, it would be the Heirs, whose the Writings be, 22 Ed. 4. 7. 3 H. 7. 15.

If Charters be pledged to me for money, or granted to me, and I have no Land that they do concern, it freeth this in the nature of a Chattel, and my Executor, not my Heir, shall have them. But all such Charters as concern my Inheritance, shall go with my Heir, and the Land it self they do concern, 21 Ed. 4. 18. 19. 8 Ed. 4. 3. F.N.B. 137. Broo. Chattels 12.

If one seized of Land, make a Roffment of it to me (excepting the Trees) and after Grant or Lease the Trees to me for years; or if one make me a Lease of Land for ten years, and after make me a Lease of the Trees for twenty years, to begin when the ten years are ended: In both these cases, I have the Trees in the nature of a Chattel, and they shall go to my Executor after my death, 20. 4. 63.

If there be a Lessee for years, or life, of Land, whereon Timber doth grow, or Houses be, and the Lessee, Lessee, or a stranger cut down any of the Timber, unless it be where the Lessee doth not where the Law doth allow him; in this case the Lessor shall have this as a Chattel, which shall go to his Executor after his Death: So also if the Houses or Trees be prostrate by the act of God, and if the Lease for years, or life, be a lease made without impeachment of Waste, in which case the Lessee is to have the Timber and Trees in the cases before, the Lessee hath them as a Chattel, which shall go to his Executor, Co. 4. 63. 1181. 34.

If a man hath the Fee Simple of Ground, whereon be Trees growing, sell me all or some of the Trees, and I die, or he, and I before they be cut, or I sell the Land, excepting the Trees; in the first case my Executor, in the last case his Executor shall have them in the nature of Chattels, and they be not cut down, Co. 11. 361. Perk. 363. 58.

If one be possessed of a Term of Land, and Devise it to A. for life, the Remainder to B. for life, whereby B. hath only a possibility; now if B. die, his Executor shall have this possibility in the nature of a Chattel, Co. 8. 55. 10. 47. Possibility.

So much of my Wives Apparel, as is necessary and convenient for her condition, and state, as her Goods, she may dispose at her death, or take after my death; but the rest, as my Goods, shall go to my Executor, 33 H. 6. 31. Wife.

If a Feoffment, Gift in Tail, or Lease for life be made, by one rendring Rent, and the Rent is behinde, and I die; or a Rent be granted out of Land to me, in Fee for life, or years, and it be not paid to me in my life time, it shall go to my Executors in the nature of a Chattel. 32 H. 8. 37. Dyer 375. Co. 4. 48. 49. Rent. Sect. 3.

If a Rent be granted to me, my Heirs, and Executors, during the life of J. S. and for one half year after: Now this half years Rent, after my death, shall go as a Chattel to my Executor. Curia, M. 7 Jac. Co. B. Walls case.

If one seized in Fee, make a Lease for years, rendring Rent, and devise this Rent to a stranger by years, and the Devisee die; now it seems the Executors, and not the Heir of the Devisee shall have it as a Chattel, Dyer 5. 6.

If one possessed of a Term, devise the Land to A. for life, the Remainder to B. Now this is a Chattel (though it be but a possibility) in B. which if he die, his Executor shall have it; but if it be a remote possibility, where an estate is to be reduced to a certainty by a contingent precedent, and it doth not rest in the Testators life time, it is otherwise. Co. 8. 51. 10. 47. Prices case, Trin. 10 Jac. B. R. Possibility;

If any person that is Tenant for their own, on anothers life, make a Lease to me for one hundred years; this is a Chattel, which shall go to my Executors, and is in Judgment of Law, but a Lease for so many years, if be, for whose life it is held, do live so long, Co. 7. 12.

Where by the Statute of Westm. 1. the Lord shall have the Wardship of his Heir-Females being of the Age of fourteen years, at the time of the death of her Ancestress for two years, if he die within the same two years, his Executors shall have it, 27 H. 8. 3. Co. on Litt. 79.

If a man make a Feoffment in Fee, upon condition, that the Feoffee shall pay an hundred pounds to the Feoffor, his Heirs, or Assigns (or his Heirs, Executors, or Administrators) at such a time: Now in these cases the Executor shall have this money as a Chattel, if it be paid by the Feoffee. Co. 3. 96, 97. Fitz. Condition 8.

If a man grant to me the two next presentations of the Church of D. these are Chattels; and if I die, my Executors shall have them, 34 Hen. 6. 27. Broo. Chanc.

If a Parson have an Annuity in Fee, in the right of his Church, and it is behinde, and the Parson die, the Executors, and not the Successor, shall have these Arrearages as a Chattel. H. N. B. 120. 9. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100.

If a man seized of Land, and possessed of a flock of Cattle, Lease it to others for years, and the Lessees Covenant to pay an hundred pound by the year to the Lessor, or his Wife, their Heirs, or Assigns, during the Term, and an hundred pound at a day, for a marriage portion of his daughter, and die; now the Wife, and after her death, her Executor, not the Heir of the Lessor shall have this Rent, Dyer 275. 276.

If a man make a Lease for life, rendring Rent, and die; now the Executor, not the Heir shall have the Arrearages of Rent, due in the life time of the Testator, Dyer 375. Co. 4. 50. Fitz. Executors 112. 98.

If there be in a Chest, or Box, wherein are Writings (which appertain to the Heir, or supra) Plate, or any other Goods; these do belong, and shall go to the Executor, and not to the Heir. Fitz. Execut. 111.

If a man finde Treasure, the owner whereof is known, and he die before he have it, yet the Executor of him whose it is, shall have it. Fitz. Corone 446.

If I be Out-lawed, and my Goods forfeit, and die, and my Executor reverse the Outlawry for Broach, now he shall have all these Chattels, and Goods that were so forfeit. Forfeiture.

If

Sec. 4.

If I being Guardian, do indow a Woman that hath title of Dower out of the Land, and after I die, my Executor shall have the Service due from the Woman, during the minority of the Infant. Fitz. Dower 138.

Fine on a Copholder.

If I be Lord of a Mannor, and a Fine certain or uncertain be Assessed upon the admittance of a Tenant: This sum of money assessed (as it seems) is a Chattel to me, which shall go to my Executors if I die.

If a man have a Judgment for Land, in a real or mixt Action, or damages, and die; now the Heir shall have execution of the Land, and the Executors shall recover the damages: So if a man recover damages for detaining of Charters, and die, the Heir shall have the Charters, but the Executors the damages; but the Executor shall not have Execution for the damage, before the Heir hath sued a Scire facias for the Charters, Fitz. Executor 32. 139.

The Executors shall have a ravishment of Ward, for a Ward took away in the time of their Ancestor, per Stat. of Ed. 3. for Goods taken away in the life of the Testator, this is a Chattel therefore in them: So if the Testator had a Lease for years, or an Interest by Statute, or Elegit, and be ousted and die, the Executor may have an Ejectione firme: So if the Testator bring an accompt, and the Defendant say Nennques son bailge, and it be found against him, and after Judgment the Plaintiff doth die; this Action shall survive to the Executors: So if the Testator hath recovered any debt, or damages in any personal Action, this as a Chattel shall go to the Executor: So all causes of Action and Suits shall go to the Executor, and not to the Heir. Wherefore see more in Executor, the very same Question in effect with this. Fitz. Execut. 52, 53, 59, 84, 117. & Accompt. 56.

s. Where not, but the Heir or some other shall have them.

Heir.
Incidents.

Regularly all those things which shall not be forfeit by Uttery in a personal Action, nor be attached in an Assize, nor distrained for Rent, are not reputed Chattels, neither shall go to the Executor, but to some other.

Also whatsoever it will not be Felony to steal, as all the Incidents of an House, as Glass of the Windows annexed to the Windows by Nails, or otherwise; all the Wainscot about the House, fixed by Nails, Screws or Irons put through the Posts, or Walls, Tables Dormant, Furnaces of Lead and Brass, and Fats in a Brew-house or Dye-house, standing, and fastned to the Walls, or standing and fastned to the ground in the middle of the House (though fastned to no Wall) a Copper or Lead fixed to the House; all the Doors without and within, whether they be set up at the charge of the Lord or Tenant, shall go with the House to the Heir, or him that is to have the House, and not to the Executor of the Tenant, as a Chattel.

Trees.

Also Trees standing, and Grass growing, is parcel of the Inheritance, and not as Chattel to go to the Executor or Administrator; 20 H. 7. 13: Kelw. 118. Co. 4. 63, 64. 21 H. 7. 26. 4 H. 7. 10. Kelw. 86. Dyer 273. b. Co. 4. 65.

Game of Parks.

Also Pales, Walls, and Stakes, Deer, Conies, Pheasants, Partridges, and the rest of the Game of a Park, shall go with the rest of the Park, as parcel of the Freehold, and Incident, and Concomitant thereunto, and not as a Chattel to the Executor. Co. 7. 14. 22 Ed. 4. 7 Hen. 7. 15. 10 H. 7. 6.

Fish.
Pigeons.

Also the Fish in the Pond are not reputed as Chattels, neither shall go to the Executor, but shall go with the Pond: So also the Pigeons of an House shall go with the House, Kelw. 118. 18 Ed. 48. Goldsb. 129. pl. 24.

If Land or Rent be granted to one and his Heirs, during the life of another; now after the death of the Grantee, his Heirs shall have this estate, and not his Executors as a Chattel, Littl. Sel. 739.

If one seized of Land, wherein are Trees in Fee, and make a Feoffment of it (excepting the Trees) and after sell the Trees to the Feoffee absolutely, or grant them to him and his Heirs; in this case the Trees are reunited, and parcel of the Inheritance, and are no Chattels, nor shall go to the Executors. And if a man seized in Fee of such Land, make a Lease for life, or years (excepting the Trees) these Trees are no Chattels in the Lessor, neither shall go to his Executors, but to him that hath the Land, Co. 4. 63. & 11. 48.

If there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in Fee of a Tenancy, and the Lord grant his Seignior for life, and after he in Remainder in Fee of the Tenancy die, his his Heir within age; and after the Lord die, and after the Tenant for life die: Now in this case the Heir of the Lord, and not his Executor shall have the Wardship, Co.

2. 97.

If the Kings Tenant by Knights service in capite, be seized of a Mannor whereunto an Advowson is appendant, and the Church become void, and the Tenant dieth, his Heir within age, the King that hath the Wardship, shall have the Presentment, and not the Executor as a Chattel: But if the Land were holden of a common person, the Executor and not the Guardian should have it, Co. upon Littl. 388.

If a Lease be made for years, rendring Rent at Michaelmas, or within ten days after, and the Lessor, during the Term, happen to die after Michaelmas, before the ten days expired. Now in this case the Heir of the Lessor, and not his Executor, shall have this last years Rent due at Michaelmas. Hil. 7 Jac. per totum curiam in B.R. & H. 9 Jac.

See. 5.

If any Office of Trust, Judicial, or Ministerial, being for the Administration of Justice, or the like, be granted to me for years, or to me, my Executors, and Administrators for years; yet this is no Chattel, which my Executor, or Administrator, shall have after my death; for it is Personal, and dies with the person, Co. 96. 97.

Office Judicial,
Ministerial.

Personal.

If one have a Wardship, as Guardian in Socage, and die, his Executors shall not have it, for it is personal, Plow. 293. Co. 3. 39.

If the Father have the Wardship of his Son, and Heir Apparent, Jure natura, this is no Chattel in him which his Executor shall have after his death; for the Custody is inseparably annexed to the person: As if there be Lord, and a Woman-Tenant by Knights service, and the Tenant doth make a Lease for life, and after the Lord and Tenant do enter marry, and have Issue, between them a Son, and the Wife die, and after the Father doth die, the Son within age, his Executors shall not have this Ward by reason of the Seigniorie, 33 H. 6. 55. Co. 3. 39.

In some cases things that are in their nature but Chattels, yet shall not go to the Executors, as certain Jewels, &c. of the Kings of England, that shall not go to the Executors of the King, but succeeding Kings: So also if a King hath the Temporalities of a Bishop, all Wardships, and present Actions, hapning by reason thereof, shall go to the succeeding King, not to the Executor: Also by the Custom of certain places, Heirbomes, and a reasonable part of the Goods may go to others from the Executors, 11 Hen. 4. 5. Broo. Chattels 2. F. N. B. 122. Fitz. Debit 51, 52. 38. 60.

If a Major and Commonalty, Dean, and Chapter, or any other Corporation, have Goods, or Chattels, in the Right of their Corporation; though they change not their nature thereby, yet they shall not go to the Executors, but to the Successors in the Corporation: But if a Lease be made to a Bishop, and his Successors for years, his Executors, or Administrators, shall have it as a Chattel, but in ante deus; for Regularly no Chattel can go in succession, in case of a sole Corporation, Co. 4. 65. Co. upon Littl. 46. b.

Corporation.

If Goods be given to a Woman in marriage, and the Husband and the Wife, be after divorced; now in this case, though these Goods change not their nature; yet they, at least those that remain, shall come back to the Wife, and shall not be the Husbands any longer, or go to his Executor after his death. See Divorce, 26 H. 6. 7. Broo. Chattels 2.

Husband and Wife.

If a man grant a Rent in Fee, and grant over that if the Rent be behinde, &c. That he shall forfeit twenty shillings nomine penae to the Grantee, and his Heirs; now if this Rent be behinde, and he die, the Heir, not the Executor shall have and recover this Rent, and Penalty, and he may have an Action of Debt for it; but if an Annuity or Rent be granted to one for his life or years, and he die; his Executor shall have and sue for them, and Arrearages incurred in his life time, F. N. B. 120. M. Fitz. Covenants 17. Fitz. Executors 99.

Rent.

Penalty.

If a man make a Feoffment in Fee of Land, and the Feoffee Covenant to do something to the Feoffor and his Heirs, Et quousque defecit fuerit, &c. That he shall forfeit so much, and his Heirs, five pound. Now upon default, the Heir, and not not

not the Executor shall recover this penalty. Dyer fol. 24. a.

If a man seized of a Mannor in Fee, and have a Relief due to him upon the death of a Tenant, and he die before it be had, it seems the Heir, not the Executor shall have it; but if the Lord were onely seized of an estate for life, or had a Lease for years of the Mannor, Contra, see somewhat more in the Question following, where Estate if Freehold, may be of a Chattel presently. Dyer fol. 24:

6. Emblements, to whom they shall apper-tain, and who shall have them,

Emblements strictly are the profits of Land which hath been sowed (which in some cases, he that soweth the Land shall have, and in some cases not) but the word is sometimes used more largely for any profits that arise, and accrew naturally from the ground, as Grass, Fruits of Trees, Hemp, Flax, and the like. Terms Ley. Kelm. 125. Co. upon Littl. 55.

If a Tenant in Fee-simple, or Fee-tail, sow the Land, their Executors after their death, if they die before cutting, not their Heir shall have the Emblements. Merton, cap. 2. 37 H. 6. 25.

Husband and Wife.

If one have Land in Fee-simple, or otherwise in his own or Wives right; or be estated in Land for years in the right of his Wife, and he sow it with Corn, and die before it be reaped; in this case the Executor of the Husband, not the Wife, or Heir shall have it.

Señ. 6.

And so it seems of Planted Hops, Saffron, and Hemp, Quicquid plantatur soli, solo cedit. But Grass, Apples, Pears, and other fruit upon the Trees, though ripe, and ready to be cut shall go to the Heir with the Land: But all these of both sorts, if the Land in which they grow, be sold away, and not excepted pass with the Land. The Roots of Carrets, Turneps, Parsnips, and Skirrets, are disputable. New Book of Executors.

Trespas.

If a Disseisor, or a Disseisor of a Disseisor, or a Feoffee, Donee, or Lessee, of the first, or second Disseisor, sow the Land, and cut and carry the Corn away, or cut and carry away the Grass, or Trees, or gather, and carry away the Fruit as Apples, Nuts, or the like; or give, or sell away any of this, (unless it be in a Market or Fair, &c.) yet when the Disseisee doth re-enter, he shall have it all again, and may take it wheresoever he doth finde it; for the property of it is still in him, and if he die, his Executor may do the like; and if they be gone, or spent, the Disseisee may have an Action of Trespas for them, against the Disseisor, but not against his Lessee, Feoffee, or Donee, which come in by Title. Co. 11. 51. Dyer 31. 173. 12 H. 7. 25. Perk. Sect. 519. Co. 5. 85.

If a Tenant for his own or anothers life, sow the Land, and after die, his Executors, and not him in Reversion, shall have the Emblements: And so is the Law for any particular Tenant that hath an estate uncertain; but if a Tenant for years sow the Land, and before that he hath cut, and severed the Emblements from the Land, his Term expieth, there the Lessor, or he in Reversion, and not the Lessee, or his Executors shall have the Emblements: But if Lessee for years of the Tenant for life, sow the Land, and the Lessee for life die before he can Reap, yet the Lessee for years shall have the Crop. So if a man seized of Lands, in Fee hath Issue a Daughter, and dieth, his Wife being enservis, or with childe of a Son, and the Daughter soweth the grounds, and after the Son is born, yet the Daughter shall have the Emblements, 10 Aff. p. 6. Littl. Sect. 68. 7 H. 4. 13. Co. 5. 106. 7 Aff. p. 19. Dyer 310. 16 H. 6. 6.

If Tenant for life be disseised, and the Disseisor sow the Land, and the Tenant for life die; in this case the Executors of the Tenant for life, and not the Disseisor, nor him in Reversion, shall have the Corn, Lessee for life, the Remainder for life, and the first Lessee for life, make a Lease for years, and this Lessee was put out of possession by a stranger, who soweth the Land, and the first Lessee for life died, and he in Remainder for life entred into the Land, and leased it to Sir H. R. In this case it seems not he, but the Lessee for years of the first Lessee for life must have the Corn. Goldsb. 143. pl. 60.

Husband and Wife.

If a Woman Copiholder, during her Widowhood, according to the Custom of the Mannor, soweth the Land, and before the severance of the Emblements, she taketh an Husband, the Lord shall have the Emblements: So if she make a Lease for years, years, and the Lessee sow the Land, and then she take an Husband, there the Lord, not the Lessee, shall have the Emblements, though the Lessee's estate be determined by the act of a stranger, Co. 5. 106. and upon Littl. 55. b. Goldsb. 189. pl. 136.

If the Wife have a Lease for years of Land, as Executor to a former Husband, and her present Husband sow it, and die; in this case, the Corn, at least, so much as is more then the value of the Land, shall go to the Wife, not to the Executor of the Husband. New Book of the Executors.

If a Lease be made to the Husband and Wife, during the Coverture, and the Husband soweth the Land, and after they are divorced, causa præcontractus, the Husband not the Lessee shall have the Emblements.

If one seized of Land, in the right of his Wife, in Fee, or for life be, and he, or his Lessee for years sow the Land; and before the Corn be cut, the Wife die, or the Husband die; now in the first case, the Husband, or his Executors, and the last the Lessee, or his Executors, if he die, shall have the Emblements (a) But if the Husband and Wife be Joint-tenants of Land, and the Husband soweth the ground, and the Land doth survive to the Wife; here it seems he shall have the Corn, and not the Executors of the Husband, but the Husband might have given or disposed them, 7 Hen. 4. 17. 7 Aff. p. 19. Broo. Embl. 6. Co. upon Littl. 55. (a) Aff. 21. Dyer 316.

Where one doth enter into Land by a right Paramount, or the Lease, or Estate, doth determine by the act of the Lessee, or by his means that did sow the Land, or by the means of him, under whom he claims; in this case, though the estate of the Lessee be uncertain, yet he shall not have the Emblements: As if one enter upon, or recover Land, saved by virtue of a condition in Law, or in Deed, as if the Lessee for life, or years, do alien in Fee, or commit Waste, and he recover the Land, or a Feoffment, or Lease be made on Condition, and the Condition be broken; or the Lord of a Copiholder enter for a forfeiture of the Tenant, or a Lord enter on his Villains Land, or the King, or Lord enter upon the Land of his Tenant after a Felony done for a forfeiture: In these and such like cases, he that entreteth upon, or recovereth the Land, shall have all the Emblements that are there growing, and not cut upon the Land at the time of his Entry, or Recovery. So if a man recover Land by a Suit upon a Right, and be put in possession by an Habere facias Scisnam, or Habere facias Possessionem, he shall have all the Emblements that shall be then growing upon the Land. Fitz. Trespass 254. 44 Ed. 3. 25. Co. 5. 106. and upon Littl. 55. b. Co. 4. 21. Perk. Setf. 5. 15. 40 Ed. 3. 5. 19 H. 9. 45. Stamf. lib 3: 301. Co. 5. 111. Broo. Embl. 8.

And yet if a Feoffment be made upon Condition, and the Condition is broken, and the Feoffee before the entry of the Feoffor, cut the Corn sowed on the ground, and after such severance Feoffor re-enter; in this case, not he but the Feoffee shall have the Emblements, but if he had entred before, he should have had it: So if a Copiholder after forfeiture, and before entry of the Lord, cut the Corn, he shall have that which is cut, 5 H. 7. 17. Broo. Embl. 4.

If a man Lease Land at Will, and the Lessee doth sow the Land with Corn, or set Roots, or sow Hemp, or Flax, or any yearly profit, and the Lessor determined the Will, before it be ripe, and oust the Lessee: Now in this case, the Lessee shall have the Corn, and if he die, his Executor shall have it; but if the Lessee himself determine the Will, he shall not have the Emblements, but the Lessor: And if such a Tenant at Will, plant yong Fruit Trees, or yong Oaks, Ashes, Elms, &c. or sow the grounds with Acorns, &c. he shall have no profits of these; for this doth not bring any yearly profit: So if he, or any other Tenant that shall have Emblements, do onely Ear and Dung the Land, they shall have no benefit by this, Co. 5. 116. and upon Littl. 55. 18 Ed. 4. 18: Littl. Setf. 68. Co. 5. 116.

If a Tenant by Statute-Merchant, soweth the ground, and then a sudden, and casual profit hapneth, by which he is satisfied, yet he shall have the Emblements, 44 Ed. 3. 15. Co. on Littl. f. 55. b.

If a Tenant at Sufferance be discharged, and notwithstanding he continue in possession, possession, and sow the Land, and the Lords Baily take the Rent at our Lady-day after, and payeth it to the Lord in a gross sum with other monies: Now it seems in this case the Tenant, and not the Lord shall have the Corn at Harvest, Crompt. Jur. 215:

If a man under colour of a Feoffment or Lease, presuming he hath a good estate, when in truth he hath none, sow the Land; now in this case, neither he nor his Executor, but the Feoffor or Lessor shall have the Emblements, Less Case, 9 Jac.

Tenants in Common.

If two be Tenants in Common, and one die, and his wife hold in Common, and sow the Land, and die; the other Tenant in Common, or the Heir shall not have it, but the Executor of the woman, Perk. sect. 523.

If a Lease be made to an Husband and Wife at will, and they be afterward divorced causa pracontractus, and the Land be sowed before; now in this case the Husband, and not the Lessor shall have the Emblements, Co. 5. 116.

Husband and Wife.

If a Tenant in Dower sow her Land, and die before severance of the Corn, the Heir shall not have it, but the Executor of the Wife: And if after the sowing she take an Husband, and he die before it be cut, his Executors shall not have it, but the Wife shall have it. If a Feme-sole sow her Land, and after marry, and he die before severance, the Wife, not the Executor of the Husband shall have it, Bro. Embl. 26. St. 20 H. 3. c. 2. Perk. sect. 522.

Parson.

If a Parson die before the first day of May, when the Land is sowed, and another Parson is made, the Successor shall not have the Tenth, but the Executors or Administrators of the first Parson: But if he die before the Conception of the Virgin Mary, the Successor shall have the Tenth of the Emblements. But now by the Statute of 28 H. 8. the Profits are to be sequestered from the death of the Parson, and to be delivered all to the Successor; only the Corn sowed upon the Glebe-land by the Predecessor, which he may dispose by Will; and if he do not, it seems his Executor shall have it, Stat. 21 H. 6. cap. 30. 34 H. 6. 33. 35 H. 6. 39. 28 H. 8. 11.

Stat. 8.
Forfeiture.

If a man be outlawed in a Personal Action, the King, not the party or his Executors, if he die, shall have all the Emblements on his ground at the time of his Outlawry: So if a man forfeit his Goods in case of Felony by flight, though he be after acquitted, or being convicted, the King will have all the Emblements at the time of the flight in the first case, and Felony done in the second case, or at any time after (as it seems) until Conviction, or Acquittal, 5 H. 7. 16. Fitz. f. Corone, 344.

Tythe.

If Corn be reaped, and the Tythe not set out, and the Inheritor of the Tythe die; it seems the Executor, not the Heir of the Inheritor shall have the Tythe, New Book of Executors.

Note.
7. The remedy to recover the Emblements.

But note, That in all these cases where a man hath right to Emblements, and dies, if he make any Devise of them, then they shall go according to his will and disposing. See Testament. Dyer 316.

Action.

And in all these cases before, he to whom the Law doth give the Emblements, may lawfully enter into and upon the Land or ground where they grow, and cut and carry them; and he is not put to his Action for them, nor bound to take them ere they be ready, or at one time; but the Law doth give him convenient entry of Ingress, Egress and Regress; and if he be disturbed in this way, he may have his Action of the Case, and shall recover as much as he is damaged. Quando Lex aliquid alicui concedit, concedere videtur, & id sine quo res ipsa esse non potest. And if a man that hath right to these Emblements have any Trespass done to him in them, he may have an Action of Trespass for it, Co. super Lit. 56. Kelm. 125. Kelm. 160. a

If a man be possessed of a Term or Lease for years, and do by Will devise it to one for life, and after to another for life, or for the residue of the years; these Devises are good, and the Devisees shall have it accordingly, and the Executor of him in Remainder after his death shall have this possibility as a Chattel; and he that hath the first Estate cannot bar him of the next, but not as a Freehold, for the quality of the Estate is not hereby changed. But if such a Conveyance were by Deed, in this case case he to whom the first Estate were limited, would have all the whole Term; and they that are to come in the Remainder, would have nothing. So also such a Devise by Will of a Chattel personal, will (as it seems) be void to him in Remainder. But Quare of this; and see Fitz. Devise contra, Co. 8. 95. 10. 47. Plow. 525. Dyer 358. Bro. Chat. 23.

But if a man be possessed of a Term, and do devise it to one and the heirs of his body, the Remainder to another; this Devise is void to him in Remainder, and the first Devisee and his Executors shall have it all the time: And if he devise to one of his Heirs, the Devisee hath no Freehold, but it shall go to his Executors as a Chattel, Co. 10. 87. Watts and Gouldstons Case, M. 19 Jac. Co. B.

If a man be possessed of a Term or Lease for years of Land, and grant a Rent-charge out of it to J. S. for his life, or in fee, this is a good Grant, and the Land shall be charged during the Term only, Co. super Lit. 147. b.

If one that hath a Lease for years enter into a Statute, and Execution be sued thereupon, and the Sheriff extend the Lease, and deliver it to the Conusee at a yearly value, as he may either sell it outright, or extend it at a yearly value, which he will; this is no frank Tenement in the Conusee, but a Chattel still.

If a Termor grant all his Estate to A. to the use of himself and his wife for their lives; in this case neither the Termor or his wife hath any Freehold; for the Statute of 27. doth not execute the Possession to this use: And therefore if he or his wife grant this to another, their Grant is void, for the whole interest in Law is in A. Dyer 369 a.

If a Lease be made to J. S. for Forty years, if he live so long; and if he shall die within the said term, that his wife shall have the Residue of the term: Now this is no Freehold, and by the death of J. S. the Lease is ended, and therefore the Remainder to his wife is void, Dyer 253. b.

A man may have an Estate of Freehold or Inheritance in other things as well as Lands, Rents, Commons, and such like; as in a Robe or Garment, Bread or Drink, or the like. See Corody, and Fitz. in Affise.

If Land or Rent be granted to one and his heirs during the life of J. S. in this case, after the death of the Grantee, his Heir, not his Executor shall have it, Lit. sect. 739.

And regularly all other things which are not forfeited by an Outlary in a Personal Action, nor attachable in Affise, nor distrainable for Rent, nor the taking away whereof will be no Felony; they are not to be reckoned Chattels that shall go to the Executor, 20 H. 7. 13. Kelm. 118.

A Thing in Action, is, when a man hath Cause, or may bring an Action, or have other Remedy for something due, or some wrong done to him. As a Right or Title of Entry into Land, which another hath; an Action of Debt upon an Obligation, or Annuity, or Rent, or Action of Covenant; or an Affise upon a Disseison, Ejectione firme upon an Ejectment; a Ravishment of Ward, upon the detaining of a Ward; Trespas of Goods taken away, Beating, or the like. And because they are things whereof a man is not possessed, but for recovery of them is driven to his Action, they are called things in Action, or the Possibility of a thing. And this is either certain, (i.) when the demand is certain, as in case of Debt; or uncertain, (i.) when the demand is of a thing uncertain, as in Actions of Trespas, and the like. And these Choses in Action also are some of them Personal, as Debt, Damages, and the like; and some of them are mixt, as Wardships; and some are real, as Rights, Titles of Entry or Action, and the like, Terms ley, Finches ley, f. 25. Bro. Pat. 98.

These things in Action, or Causes of Suits, as Entries to continue ones Right, or upon a Title Possibilities, and the like, or of that nature, as that regularly they cannot be given nor granted, nor yet transferred from one Subject to another, by act of Law; as a Right of Action will not come to the Lord by Escheat. And if an Obligation had been made to a Villain, and the Lord seize him, he shall not have, nor can recover this Debt, but in the Villains name; nor yet be given or granted by act of the party from one man to another. And therefore if a man hath a Debt due by Especialty or otherwise, he cannot grant or assign it to another, save only in some special cases; cases; but he may depute another to sue it for him, and in his name, or by Agreement promise it to another when it is recovered; or he may grant, give, or assign the Especialty it self, and so deprive himself of the means to recover it, as hath been often adjudged. But such things may be extinct by Release, or Confirmation, &c. But this must be always between the parties themselves: For, no strangers, but parties themselves and privies, (i.) Heirs, Successors, Executors and Administrators can take advantage of them, unless it be in special cases: As where a man is Executor, or where is a Grant of a Reversion, (for which see the Statute 32 H.8. cap.8. & vide infra.) And this the Law doth provide to avoid multiplicity of Suits, and subversion of Justice, which would follow, if these things were grantable one from another, 1 H. 6. 4. Co. 10. 48. 22 Aff. p. 37. 10. Where, and what things shall be repured in the nature of things in Action, and not grantable.

Whatsoever comes under the definition of Action, (for which see Action) or is a Chattel only in Action, (for which see above) as all Causes of Suit for any Debt or Duty, Trespas or Wrong, are to be accounted Choses in Action. Also if I have a Judgment against another man for money, or a Statute for money; these are Choses or Things in Action. So also if I have an Annuity to me in Fee, for life or years, it seems this is in nature of a Chose in Action, and not grantable. But Quare. See Fitz. Grant 45. For it seems, an Annuity in Fee to me and my heirs, is grantable, Bro. Adjudg. 16. Co. 5. 89, 90.

If a man have an Advowson, and the Church be void, the Presentation to it is in the nature of a Chose in Action, and cannot be granted by a common person, but might be in the case of the King. But in this case, if the Patron grant the next Presentation when it shall be next void, the Grantee it seems shall have the next Avoidance after this, Bro. Chose in Action. Dyer 296. Fitz. Grant 50. Dyer 26. a.

Grant.

Also a Possibility of an Interest, or an Estate in a Term of years, is somewhat near in its nature to a Chose in Action, and therefore is not grantable from one Subject to another; but this may be released to Privies and Parties in the Estate, Co. 4: 66. a. b. But if one sell to me and my Assigns an hundred Load of wood in his Wood, to be taken by my Assignment; this is more then a thing in Action, for it is an Interest which I may grant over, and if he refuse to assign it, I or my Assigns may take it without him. So if one sell me his wood in such a Wood, (except twenty of the best Trees) and that I shall cut it within two years; this is an Interest in me grantable over; and if he refuse to choose his twenty Trees in reasonable time after I have requested him, I may cut down the Wood, and leave him twenty Trees. So if one grant me reasonable Estovers in his Wood, to be taken by the view and delivery of his Bailiff, this is an Interest; and if his Bailiff will not deliver it after request, I may take it without him, Co. 5. 25. 5 Ed. 3. 64.

Self 10.
11. When, and what right of Title, Debt,
Duty, or thing in Action, may be given or granted over

All Choses in Action personal that are certain, that were the Kings originally, or that did come to him by Forfeiture from others, as Annuity, Debt, Ward, or the like, might have been by special and apt words by his Prerogative granted to any Subject; and the Grantee might have sued for the same in his own name, albeit there had been no words in the Patent to enable him so to do: And the course is to sue for them in the Exchequer. Also the King might have granted the Presentation of a Church, when it was void, Dyer 30. Fitz. Grant 16. Bro. Ch. in Aff. 1, 33 H. 8. 39. The King might have granted his Obligations made to him, to his Heir or Executor, at his pleasure. Also the King (as it seems) might have granted over his Rent, and his Condition of Re-entry for non payment, or any other real or mixt Chose in Action, which another may not do, but where a Reversion is granted within the Statute of 32 H. 8. And if the King be indebted to others, he might have assigned over all, or part of a Tenth, for the payment of it to those he did owe it, or appoint it to be paid by his Customers, 2 H. 7. 8. per Hussy. 1 H. 7. 8. Bro. Pat. 98. 5 Ed. 4. 8. Det. 38. 43. 62.

By a common person.

But a Common person regularly cannot give or grant any such Chose in Action, (unless it be to the King, which he may do by Deed not inrolled) and if he do, such Gifts and Grants will be void. As if an Obligee give or grant his Debt and Obligation to another man; in this case he to whom it is given or granted, cannot have

nor

nor recover the Debt in his own name, but he may cancel the Obligation or deliver it up to the Obligor. So if a man hath a Right or Title of Entry into Land, he cannot give or grant this over to a stranger. As if a man disseise me of Land in Possession or Reversion, and I grant my Right of Entry into this Land to a stranger: Or if I make a Feoffment in Fee on Condition, that if I do such a thing, I shall re-enter; this Condition or Title of Entry in the nature of a Chose in Action, is not grantable over; but sometimes a Condition incident to a Reversion is grantable by the Statute of 32 H. 8. Co. 10. 48. Co. 5. 89. 90. 21 H. 7. 15. Fitz. Prerog. 10. 2 H. 7. 8. Perk; 1st. 86. 280. Co. 2. 56. a. 3. 4. a.

If a man have the Wardship of an Infant, and he is contracted to another in his minority, and then he grant the Wardship, and after the Infant is married: Now in this case the Grantee shall have the Writ of Ravishment of Guard; for this Grant was good, Fitz. Guard. 94.

If a man take away any of my Goods and Chattels from me as a Trespassor; now it seems I cannot give or grant these Goods or Chattels to another, until I have de-vested the Property of them again in me by seizure, &c. 2 Ed. 4. f. 15. 10 H. 7. 27.

The things in Action sometimes are extinct and gone by the act of the party that hath right to them; and sometimes they are only suspended, and shall be again revived: As if the Ordinary commit the Administration of the Goods of the Debtee to the Debtor, the Debt is only suspended. And therefore if the Administration be unduly granted, and after revoked and granted to another, the second Administrator may recover this Debt of the first: And if there be not Assets besides, this should be accounted Assets in the hands of the first Administrator, whiles it doth continue. So if a Feme-sole Executrix of a Debtee, take the Debtor to husband, this doth only suspend the Debt; and if he die, the wife may sue the Executors or Administrators of her husband, as she might before, and that Debt also shall still be reputed Assets in her hands. So if the Debtor makes the Debtee, or the Debtee the Debtor his Executor, and he do legally refuse it, or if he make him and others Executors, and they all refuse, then the Debt is revived again, Co. 3. 136. Plow. 185. Co. 8. 136. 9. 37.

But if a Feme-sole Debtee take her Debtor to husband, or if there be two Obligor's in an Obligation, and the Obligees take one of them to husband; or if one be bound to a Feme-sole and another in an Obligation, and she take the Obligor to husband; or if the Debtor make the Debtee his Executor, or the Debtee and another his Executors, and they do take the Executorship upon them; or if the Debtee make the Debtor his Executor, or him and another his Executors, and the Debtor die before he take upon him the Executorship: In all these cases the Debt or Action is extinct, and shall not revive. See Suspension. Co. 8. 136. 21 Ed. 4. 3. Plow. 184. 11 H. 7. 4. 21 H. 7. 24.

If a man disseise me of Land, and then I make him Lease for years of the Land: Or if I make him a Feoffment in Fee on Condition, and before the Condition performed, make a Lease of all or part of it to another; by this the right or title is suspended: And if I make a Feoffment in Fee; in these cases the right or title is extinct, and will never revive. So if the Disseisor levy a Fine of the Land to a stranger, the right is extinct, and the Disseisor shall hold the Land for ever, Co. 4. 52. Co. 2. 56. a.

When a man doth die, all these things called Choses in Action shall go to his Executors as part of his Chattels. See in Chattels.

If an Obligation be made to two men, and one of them forfeit by Outlawry or otherwise, or had granted all to the King; in this case the King would have had the whole, and the other had lost his part, 19 H. 6. 7. 22 Ass. p. 37.

If a Villain escheat, the Lord shall have no Choses in Action that were his: And if the King had had an Idiot, he should not have had any Choses in Action that were his hereby. And yet if a man had been outlawed, the King should have had thereby the Forfeiture, or all Debts upon Especialties, but not of Debts upon simple Contracts, 1 H. 7. 24. 50 Ass. p. 1.

13: Who shall have things in Action.

CHAP. XLVI.

Of Claim and Coaches.

1. Claim.

Quotuplex.

It is a challenge by any man of an Interest or Ownership of a thing, that is in the possession of another, or at least out of his own; and this is either Actual or by Deed; as by Action (i.) when a man doth bring his Action for the thing he claimeth, or by Entry or Seizure (i.) when one doth enter into, or seize the thing he doth so claim; or else it is verbal (i.) when one doth by words claim and challenge the thing that is so out of his possession; and this is sometimes to Lands and sometimes to Goods or Chattels: Also some distinguish Claim into Expressed and Implied; for which see Infra, Co. super Littl. 251. b. Terms Ley. Plow. 359. Littl. Sect. 442. & 419, 420.

Sect. 1.
Continual Claim.

And continual Claim is a frequent Claim, or a Claim made once every year and day at the least, unto some Land or other thing, by which means the Entry or Property of him that hath right is preserved, and a mischief prevented: So that this doth nothing differ from Claim, but that Claim is but once onely, and continual Claim is, and must be re-iterated and renewed once in every year at the least; for in their effects and operations they both agree for the most part. Littl. Sect. 414, 429.

And note that by Claim in most cases of Land, is understood a Claim with an Entry into some part of the Land, or at least a near approach thereunto; for a Claim is so to be made of Land, viz. In and upon some part of the Land, or within view of it, unless it be in special cases of fear, &c. And there it may be made in view, or as far off, as the cause of fear and danger is, Co. super Littl. 254. a. b.

And note also that this Claim may be by an Action brought, as if the Disseisor bring an Assize; this is a Claim for Lands: And if the Goods of a Villain be distrained before the Lord seize them, the Lord may have a Replevin, and by the bringing of this Action as by a Claim, the property of the Goods is vested in the Lord. Co. super Littl. 263. a.

2. The effects and operations of this Claim.
As to Lands.

The effect and operation of the Claim, is divers, and he that doth make it, hath thereby great advantage; for by it in some cases he shall avoid a dissent of Lands, and thereby in some other cases, he shall have his Title, which otherwise would be lost; and therefore such Claims in Judgment of Law, amount to an Entry in Law, and will preserve the right of Entry to him that maketh it, notwithstanding there be any Disseisors, Discontinuances, Remitters, or Dissents by any Disseisor, Intruder, Abator, &c, or their Feoffee or Donee, within the year and day: As where a man hath Right and Title to enter into any Lands or Tenements, whereof another is seized in Fee, or Fee tail: As if I be disseised, or my Tenant for life or years make a Feoffment in Fee, whereby he do forfeit his Land, and I having Title to enter, do make continual Claim, (i.) I claim the Land within the year and day before the death of the Disseisor, or the Feoffee: In this case, I or my Heir, if I die, may enter notwithstanding the Dissent. Littl. cap. Continual Claim in toto.

But if the Disseisor die seized, his Heir within age, and by office the King is intitled unto the Wardship of him; in this case I cannot enter upon the King, but must have other remedy. Fitz. Continual Claim 1. 5 Ed. 4. 4.

And they both do defeat the estate unjustly gained, and put the party that claimeth in possession so, that if the other occupy the thing, after he may have either an Assize against him, or an Action of Trespass, or forcible Entry, as if he were in the Actual possession of it: For such a Claim being an Entry in Law, is as strong and as forcible as an Entry in Deed, and that as well in the hands of one that hath the Land by Title, as by wrong; and therefore such an Entry in Law will avoid a Warranty.

But

But yet this continual Claim of the Disseisor, shall vest the possession and seison in him onely for his own advantage, and not his disadvantage: And therefore, if he bring an Assize, and hanging the Assize, he make his continual Claim otherwise; or by the bringing of the Writ which doth amount to a continual Claim in Law; this shall not abate the Assize, but he shall recover damages from the beginning: And as often as he which hath right of Entry, making such Claim, and the other doth continue the occupation, so often he doth wrong and disseisons to him, and so many Actions of Trespass he may have; and recover his coſts and damages; or may have an Action upon the Statute of 5 R. 2. 7. In which case he shall recover damages for the first wrongful Entry, but not for the mean profits; or may have an Action on the Statute of 8 H. 6. 9. In which case, without any Regress, he shall recover treble damages, as well for the mean occupation as for the first Entry, Co. super Littl. 253, 254. 11 H. 6. 51. Littl. Sect. 430, 431. Co. super Littl. 263. a. Littl. Sect. 430. Co. super Littl. 257.

This Claim doth sometimes also produce a Forfeiture of Estate. for an Estate may be forfeited by Claim in two sorts. Either Expressed; as if Tenant for life will in Court of Record Claim Fee, or if Lessee for years be ousted, and he bring an Assize ut de libero tenemento: Or Implied; as if in a Writ of Right brought against him, he will take upon him to joyn the nise upon the meer Right, which none but Tenant in Fee-simple ought to do: So if Lessee for years loose the Land in a Precipe, and bring a Writ of Error, for Error in Proces; this is a Forfeiture by Claim implied. Co. super Littl. 251. b. Fitz. Judgment 237. Fines 120. 15 Ed. 4. 29. 2 H. 6. 9. 16 Aff. p. 16.

Sect. 2.
3. How an Estate may be forfeited by claim.

By the Claim of Goods the property is altered and removed from one to another; As if my Villain have Goods, which by Law are mine; now after I have made my Claim to them, and seized some part of them, the property shall be said to be in me: So if the Wardship of a body belong to me, and I by words Claim the Ward being present; though I lay no hands on him, yet by this he shall be said to be seized. And so in other cases where Claim is necessary, by the Claim the Forfeiture of the Goods is prevented. Vide infra. Fitz. Replevin 43. 9 H. 6. 25. 42 Ed. 3. 18. Co. super Littl. 118. b.

As to Goods and Chattels.

If two Lords of two several Villages or Mannors have Wastes or Fields adjoining together parcel of their Mannors: And there is no inclosure or separation between them, but the bounds and circuits of each Mannor are known, and there is in that Waste or Field a Common, because of Neighborhood, for the Tenants of both Mannors: In this case the Lords and Tenants of either Mannor may inclose their own, and divide themselves from the other side, and so make an end of their Inter-commoning without their consent, although their side inclosed be the greatest part. Co. 4. 38, 39. 9. 113. 7. 5.

4. Where and in what case others may inclose one against another, and where not.

In cases where the owners of the Land have been used in a place to inclose their own Land in the Field, and to relinquish and wave their Common in the rest of the Field, and have kept out the Commoners; so that they have not taken any Common in the inclosed ground, there every man may inclose his Land at his pleasure: But where the rest of the Commoners have been used to take their Common, and put in their Cattle in such inclosed grounds, notwithstanding the Inclosure from Harvest till Sowing time; in this case no man may inclose, although he would wave his Common in the Field besides: And yet if in such a case there be an ancient Inclosure taken out of the Field held always in severalty; this may be kept inclosed always, Co. 7. 5.

If two men have Inter-common, the one in the ground of another, they may by Agreement inclose and seclude one another; but one of them alone, cannot inclose and seclude the other without his Agreement, although he wave and refuse his Common in the ground of the other; neither when the one hath inclosed, may the other inclose without mutual consent: Also the owners of the Soil, and the Commoners altogether, by an unanimous Agreement, may inclose any Commons whatsoever, Co. 7. 5. Broo. Common 47.

If

If the Lord make a Feoffment of Parcel of his Waste, it seems the Feoffee may inclose it; and that this is a kinde of Improvement of the Lord; but then it must be in case where an Approvement is lawful: So if a Lord have a great Moor and Infeoff another, of a hundred Acres of the North-side thereof, the Feoffee may inclose it, or the Lord may inclose the residue, Fitz. Garant de Charters 31. Dyer 372. p. 10.

If one have an ancient Sleight for Cattle in a Field upon his own Land, whereon he hath been used to keep them, and to drive out Cattle of other men that come within it; it seems in this case he may inclose this Sleight. Per Just. Jones, 6 Car. Gloucester Assizes.

If the Lord have Common in the Soil of the Tenant held of him, the Tenant in this case may inclose a part of his own Soil, so as he leave sufficient, by the Statute of Improvement, although it speak onely of Lords, Broo. Commons 22.

Señ. 3.
§: Where and in what case a Claim or Entry is requisite,
where not.
To Lands.

In all cases where a Right or Title of Entry is come to any man, and nothing doth hinder but he may enter into it, or make his Claim to it, there he must so do before he shall be said to be in Actual possession of it, or before he can grant it over: But where the party that hath right, is in possession already, or where an Entry or Claim, cannot be made, Contra. As if a man Disseise me of my Land, or I make a Feoffment in Fee of Land in possession, upon Condition, and the Condition is broken; or my Tenant in Fee-simple do Alien in Mortmain; or my Tenant for life, do make a Feoffment in Fee, (in both which last cases he doth forfeit his estate.) Now in all these cases, I must either make an Actual Entry upon the Disseisor, Feoffee, and Tenant; or I must make my Claim to the Land (which is tant amonni) before the Law will adjudg me to be in Actual Possession: And the same Law is where one doth grant an Advowson, Rent, Common, Reversion, or any such like thing which doth lie in Grant, upon Condition, and after the Condition is broken: Now in this case also the Grantor must make his Claim to this thing, before it shall be said to be in him. But if a Feoffment be made on a Collateral Condition, and the Feoffee make a Lease to the Feoffor, and after the Condition is broken; in this and such like cases where the party hath it in possession, he need not make any Entry or Claim. Littl. Señ. 436. Co. 1. 157.

If a Tenant in Tail make a Feoffment, and discontinue the Estate-tail, and then die; in this case, the Issue of the Tenant in Tail must Claim, if he will prevent the inconvenience of a Discent; for after a dying seized of the Feoffee, the Issue cannot enter, but is put to his Formedon, Vide Discontinuance. See Littl. Señ. Discontinuance.

If a man seized of Land in the right of his Wife, and make a Feoffment in Fee on Condition, and the Husband dieth, and the Condition is broken, and the Heir enter, as he must; in this case the Wife need not Claim, nor enter to bring her Estate to her, for the Law doth vest it in her, without any Claim. Co. super Littl. 202. a. C. 8. 43, 44.

Infants, Feme-Coverts, persons de non sane memorie, beyond the Sea, or in Prison, whiles they so continue, need not make any Entry or Claim. Vide Infra.

If a Fine be levied of my Land; in this case if I will prevent the Bar, I must make my Claim to this Land within five years after the Proclamations had, made or certified, or else I am barred of my Land for ever. For which, see Fines. 4 Hen. 7. cap. 24.

To Goods.

If a Lord have right to the Goods of his Tenant, because he is Villain, he must claim or seize the Goods, ere he shall be said to have the property: If I have right to the Wardship of a Body, I must lay hands on him, or claim him, ere I shall be said to be seized of him. So if my Goods be taken as Waiffs, or Estray, or Wreck; in this case, I must claim them within a year and a day of the Seizure, or else I shall lose them for ever. Co. super Littl. 118. b. Co. 3. 107.

After

After a Right or Title of Entry accrewed, it is good policy to make a mans Claim or Entry, as soon as he can. For if a Fine be levied of anothers Land according to the Statute of 4 H. 7. (as most Fines are at this day) he that hath right must enter or make his Claim within five years after his Right or Title accrewed; or else he is barred, not onely of his Right of Entry, but of his Right to the Land for ever. But if the Fine be a Fine at Common Law, and not with Proclamations; in that case, he that hath Right must make his Claim within a year and a day after the Fine levied, or else he is barred for ever. See Fines. Co. 9. 105. Dyer 3. 72. 224. Co. 5. 107. 8. 101.

6. Within what time such Claim shall be made, and such Claim is good, being made within the time; where not.

To Lands:

If a Judgment were had in a Writ of Right and Execution thereupon, and another man hath right to the Land; now he must have made his Claim within a year and a day of the Judgment, or else he is barred for ever. Co. 5. 507. 8. 101.

If I be disseised of my Land, and thereby put to a Right of Entry: Now in this case, by the Common Law, I must make my Claim, or my Entry within a year and a day, (the day wherein the Claim was made being accounted one) of the disseison, or else if it happen the Disseisor die seized in the interim: I am barred of my right of Entry, so if one abate, or intrude into my Land. Littl. Sess. 421. 426.

So also if I make a Feoffment in Fee or Condition, and the Condition being broken, so as I have Title to re-enter, I must enter within the year and day, else if the Feoffee die seized within that time, my Title of Entry is gone, and I am put to my Action to recover the Land. But now by the Statute of 32 H. 8. 33. in case of Disseison, a Disseisor must be in five years quiet possession before his dying seized can hurt the Disseisor; and then it may, and therefore after that time the Disseisor must make his continual Claim; but the Law for Abators and Intrudors, and the Feoffee of a Disseisor is, as it was before, Co. super Littl. 283. Plow. 47.

Sess. 4.

But if I make my Claim, and after the Disseisor, or Feoffee, &c. of the Disseisor die seized; this will not hurt me. Also if it happen that the Disseisor, &c. do not die, in forty years after the Disseison. If I make my Claim before his death a year and a day, and he die within the year; this doth prevent the mischief of his dying seized. Littl. Sess. 427.

If a Tenant Alien his Land in Mortmain, the Lord if he will take advantage of the Forfeiture, must make his Claim or Entry within a year and a day after the Alienation; otherwise he is barred of his Entry and Action for ever. Dyer 25.

Continual Claim must be made once every year; and once every year doth suffice what ever happen. And therefore, if he that hath right maketh Claim, and the Tenant dieth within the year and the day, this Claim, though it be but once made shall preserve the Entry of him that maketh the Claim: And if the Ancestor or Predecessor, Claim, and the Disseisor die, and then the Ancestor or Predecessor dieth, now his Heir or Successor may enter. But if the Ancestor or Predecessor make a Continual Claim, and dieth, and the Son or Successor make no Continual Claim, and within the year and day after the Claim made by the Ancestor, the Disseisor dieth; this shall take away the Entry of the Son or Successor, for that the descent was cast in his time. Co. super Littl. 250, 251. 22 H. 6. 37. 15 Ed. 4. 22.

If my Goods be seized as Waiffs, or Estray, or Wreck; in this case I must claim them within a year and a day of the seising of them first, or else I shall lose them; but the Lord is not bound to this time for the Goods of his Villain, nor for the Body of his Ward. Co. 5. 107.

To Goods.

The party himself that hath right, either immediate or remote, may and must in most cases make his Claim or Entry to the Land; and this he may do in person, or by his Servant or Deputy, for Qui per alterum facit, per seipsum facit. And therefore if the Master say to his Servant, that he dares not come to the Land, or any part of it, &c. and that he dareth go no nearer then such a place; and command him to go thither, and make his Claim, and he do so; this is good, though the Servant do not fear at all. Littl. Sess. 433, 433. Co. super Cro. 245. a.

7. By what persons such Claim may be, or shall be made, and when such Claim is good by such persons, and where not.

If an Infant, or any Man of full age, have any Right of Entry into any Lands, any stranger in the name, and to the use of the Infant, or Man of full age may enter into the Lands, and this Regularly shall vest the Lands in them without any Commandment Precedent, or Assent Subsequent. Omnis enim ratihabitio retrotrahitur & mandato equiparatur. But in case of a Fine, a stranger without authority present, or subsequent Agreement, cannot make a Claim to avoid. And in all cases where one hath a Right or Title of Entry that is in Ward, his Guardian in Chivalry or Socage may enter for him. Fitz. Release 28. 7 Ed 3. 39. 10 H. 7. 12. Co. 9. 106. a. & super Littl. f. 245. a.

Sett. 3.
To Lands.

If the case be so with a man that he dare not, being forbidden by authority to go abroad, or cannot being sick, and not able to go to the Land; if in this case he command his servant to make a Claim for him, and the servant is afraid of beating, maiming, or death, and goeth as near the Land as he dareth, and there doth make Claim for his Master; this is good, and will suffice, for Impotentia excusat legem. But if the Master in that case were in health, and might go to part of the Land himself, such a Claim by his servant will not avail him. Littl. Sett. 434.

Also in some cases he that hath right, and cannot enter, yet may make this Claim: As he in Reversion, after an estate for years (and as some hold after an estate for life) by Statute Merchant, Staple, or Elegit, may enter to make a Claim to prevent a descent, or to avoid a Collateral Warranty: But none but such as have Right or Title of Entry, can make this Continual Claim, Co. super Littl. 250, 251. b.

If a Fine be levied of my Land, any man may enter, or make claim for me, and to my use to avoid this Fine, by authority precedent from me; and without authority also, if I do afterwards agree to it within the five years, but not otherwise.

A Guardian for Education, or in Socage may enter or make Claim in the name of the Infant that hath right without any Commandment Precedent, or Assent Subsequent, in respect of the privity, is between him and the Infant.

The Chapter in case of a Dean and Chapter, nor Cominalty in case of a Major and Cominalty, in the vacancy of the Dean or Major, cannot make any Claim; for they have not ability nor capacity to sue or be sued, and Entry and Continual Claim must always pursue the Action. Co. super Littl. 263. b.

To Goods.

The party himself that hath right to the Goods or Chattels, or his Deputy or Servant, or any other in his behalf by his Precedent appointment, or Assent subsequent, may claim or seize Goods that he hath right unto and it shall be good; for such persons may claim Land, a fortiori then, Goods. Vide supra.

8. In what place such Claim shall be made, and when it is well done in such place, or not.

He that is to make any Claim or Entry into Lands, if he be not afraid, is to go to the Land, or some part of it; and if by his Entry or Claim, he be to divest any estate that is in another, he must enter into some part of the Land; but if it be onely to bring him into actual possession, and not to divest any estate in another, he may do it in view; but if he dare not come to, nor in view of the Land, he must come as near it as he dare, and make his Claim there. 9 H. 4. 5. 11 H. 6. 51. Co. super Littl. 252. 254.

To Lands.

If a man have cause to enter into any Lands or Tenements which are in divers Villages in one County, if he make his Entry into the Land within one Village in the name of all the rest he hath right to enter into, within all the Villages of that County; this is good for all the rest: But if it be in divers Counties, he must make divers Entries. But if three several men disseise me of three several Acres (though in the same County,) or if one man Disseise me of three Acres, and lettech it to three several men for life; or one Disseise me of one Acre at one time, and another Acre at another time; in all these cases my Entry must be several, else it will serve onely for so much as I enter into: But if I infeoff another of one Acre of ground upon Condition, and after I infeoff him of another in the same County on Condition, and both Conditions are broken, an Entry into one in the name of both is not sufficient; but an entry into one part in the name of all, subject to one Condition, is good; although there be divers parcels in divers Towns. And according to this pattern (as it seems) a Claim must be made, 7 Aff. 18. 12 Ed. 4. 10. 36 H. 6. 27. Dyer 337. 11 H. 7. 25.

But if it be so that the party in possession do lie in wait, or have threatned to kill, beat, or maim the party that hath right if he come upon the Land; so that he is in fear fear of his life, and he doth not dare to go into any part of the Lands; there he may come as near it, within the view of it as he dare, and claim it; and this is good enough. Littl. Sect. 421.

If one have cause to claim or seize the body of a man or woman-child for his Ward, it must be in his presence by words, or else by laying hands upon him: But the Lord may claim his Villains Goods in any place where he findes them; and so may any man in any other case. 3 H. 4. 15. Fitz. Barr. 217. Doct. & Stud. fol. 139.

If a man have Right or Title to enter into any Lands or Tenements, whereof another is seised in Fee, or in Fee-tail, if he which hath Title to enter, makes Continual Claim to the Lands or Tenements, before the dying seised of him which holdeth them; then albeit such Tenant dieth thereof seized, and the Lands do descend to his Heir, yet he that hath made this Claim, or his Heir if he die enter into the same Lands, and the force of the descent is hereby avoided. Littl. Sect. 414, 415.

As if I be disseised, or my Tenant for life Alien in Fee, and I make Continual Claim to the Lands in the life of the Disseisor, or Alienee, if after the Disseisor or Alienee die seized, and the Land descend to his Heir, yet I may enter upon the possession of the Heir, and avoid this descent: So if the Disseisor, or Feoffee, &c. of the Disseisor disseised, yet my right of Entry by this Claim is saved.

If there be Tenant for life; the Remainder for life, the Remainder in Fee, and the Tenant for life Alien in Fee, and he in Remainder for life, maketh continual claim before the dying seized of the Alienee, and after the Alienee die seized, and after he in Remainder for life die before any Entry by him made: Now in this case he in Remainder in Fee shall have benefit by the Claim of the Tenant for life, and he may enter upon the Heir of Alienee; and so may he in Reversion also: And if two Joynt-tenants be disseised, and one of them do make continual Claim, and dieth, the Survivor shall have the benefit of this Claim: But if the Tenant for life doth make continual Claim; this will not avail him in the Remainder, unless the Disseisor die in the life time of the Tenant for life. Littl. Sect. 416. & Co. super Cro.

The Claim of the Lord shall avail the Tenant that is a Copiholder, so likewise shall the Claim of the Copiholder avail the Lord: So the Claim of him in Reversion or Remainder shall avail the particular Tenant, and the Claim of the particular Tenant avail him in Remainder or Reversion: For which see more in Fines. Plow. 359.

It is where one hath omitted, or neglected to make his Claim in the time and manner the Law appointed him, then this may be shewed or pleaded against him, to bar him of the thing he doth challenge, or would have. 34 Ed 3. 16. Crompt. Jur. 144.

If an Infant be disseised, and the Disseisor during the time of the Infancy die seized, this will not prejudice the Infant, although he made not his Claim in all that time, but he may enter when he comes to age: So if a Fine be levied of his Land, during his minority, and the proclamations and five years be passed, and in all this time, he hath made no Entry, nor Claim; this will not hurt him; for he shall have five years after he come to age to make his Claim. Vide Fines. Co. 8. 200. & Littl. Sect. 402.

If there be Tenant in Tail, the Remainder in Fee, and the Tenant in Tail levy a Fine with Proclamations, he in the Remainder die, his Heir within age; and after the Tenant in Tail doth die without Issue; so that the Tide doth accrew to the Infant, and five years incur, and yet he is within age: Now in this case he shall not be hurt by his non-claim in these five years, for he shall have five years after he come to his full age, Dyer 133. a.

If a man be disseised of Land he hath in the right of his Wife, and the Disseisor die, during the Coverture, and no Claim is made by the Husband; now in this case the non-claim of the Husband shall not prejudice the Wife, though it do bar him; And if a Fine be levied of any Land, which is the Land of a Feme Covert, within the Statute of 4 H. 7. In this case, though the Husband make no Claim, during the Coverture Home de non sane memorie.

If a man de non sane memorie, that hath not Intelligence and Reason, be disseised, have any Right or Title to enter into Land, and do not make his Claim, but suffer a cying seized, if all this be during the time of his dissemper; this Laches of his shall not hurt him at all. See Non sane memorie. Co. 8. 100.

Home en prison.

If a man be imprisoned, and he be disseised, and the Disseisor dieth seized, during the time the Disseisee is in prison, whereby the Tenements discent to the Heir of the Disseisor; this Discent, or his Non-claim, will not hurt the Disseisee which is in prison: But if he were at large at the time of the disseison, or at any time after, before, or at the time of the dying seized of the Disseisor, here is Non-claim will bar him: *Plow. 360. If a man be out of the Realm, in the Kings service, for the business of the Realm, or otherwise, if such a one be disseised when he is beyond the Seas, and the Disseisor dieth seized, the Disseisee being still out of the Realm, his Laches of Entry here shall not prejudice him, neither shall his Discent grieve him: But if he were infra quatuor maria, at the time of the Disseison, or at any time after, before, or at the time of the Discent, Contra. Littl. 9. Sett. 439, 440.

Al Auters.

If a Bishop, Parson, Vicar, Prebend, or Abbot die, and during the Vacancy, one enter into any of the Land belonging to the Bishoprick, &c. and claim it to him and his Heirs, and die seized of that Estate, and it discent to his Heir during the Vacancy: Now this Discent and Laches will not hurt, but the Successor may enter notwithstanding. So if a usurpation be had to a charge in time of Vacation, this shall not prejudice the successor to put him out of possession, but that at the next avoidance he shall present. Littl. Sett. 443. Co. super Cro.

12. Disclaimer.

It is where a man doth not challenge, but deny that which is his; or it is a plea containing an expresse denial, or refusal. And this is sometimes in the Tenancy, sometimes in the Seignior, sometimes in the Blood, sometimes of Goods. As where the Lord distraineth his Tenant, and he sueth a Replevin, and the Lord avoweth the taking of it, by reason that he holdeth of him, if the Tenant in this case say, That he disclaimeth to hold of him; this is called a Disclaimer. And hereupon the Lord may bring a Writ of Right Sur Disclaimer, and if it be found against the Tenant, he loseth his Land for ever, if the Disclaimer be in a Court of Record, else he is to be amerced for it onely. So if a Precipe be brought against two men for Land, and one of the Tenants disclaimeth, and saith that he is not Tenant thereof, nor doth claim any thing therein, for the manner of Disclaim is such. Nihil habet, nec habere clamat in terra illa, nec die impetrationis brevis originalis predicti habuit nec clamavit, sed aliquid in terra illa habere de advocat' & disclamat. Now by this he loseth his part of the Land, and the other Tenant shall have the whole. And if there be but one Tenant, and he do so disclaim, the Writ shall abate, and the Demandant may enter into the Land presently, whether he have right or not. And in this case the Tenant hath no Remedy by Writ of Error, to avoid his own Disclaimer, 13 H. 7. 27. 16 Hen. 7. 1. Westm. 2. 2. Co. 3. 26. F. N. B. 150. 13 H. 7. 27. Co. 8. 62.

Des Terres.

Right of Disclaimer.

Also the Lord may disclaim of his Seignior, and in this case if he do so in Court of Record, the Seignior is extinct, and the Tenant shall hold of the Lord next Paramount, the Lord that did so disclaim by the Services he held before. Littl. Sett. 146.

Of Blood.

Also we may disclaim in the Blood, as in case where a Nuper obiit is brought by one Coparcener against another, the Tenant may claim by purchase, and disclaim in the Blood; and it seems if this be found against him, he loseth the benefit of the Blood and Discent. F. N. B. 197. 9.

Of Goods.

Also one may disclaim his own Goods: As if a man be Indicted that he did feloniously ously steal the Goods of another, where in truth they are his own proper Goods, and the Goods are brought in Court, and set before him, and being demanded what he saith to them, he doth disclaim them; now hereby he hath lost them to the King, as Goods confiscate, although he be afterwards acquitted of the Felony. Fitz. Corone 355. Stamf. fol. 186. a:

Also there is a Disclaimer of Estates; (which see more of in Wayver :) As if Lands be given to Husband and Wife in Fee, or in Tail, and the Husband dieth: Now the Wife cannot by any Verbal Wayver, or Disclaimer in the Country. As if before any Entry made, she saith she doth altogether wave, and disclaim the said Estate, and will never take, nor accept thereof; yet the Freehold doth remain in her, and she may enter when she pleaseth: So a Charter of Feoffment was made to four, and Seison delivered to three, in the name of all; and the fourth when he seeth the Deed, saith, He will not have, nor accept it, and disclaimeth; yet the Freehold is in him, and he hath as much to do with the Land, as the rest. Co. 3. 26.

Of Coaches.

FOR Coaches, these things are to be known.

1. There shall not above Two hundred persons within London, Westminster, and six miles about the late Lines of Communication, keep Hackney Coaches and Horses. Nor shall they have and use above Three hundred Hackney Coaches, nor above Six hundred Hackney Horses.

2. The Stage Coaches that come to, and go from London, to or from the remote places of the Nation excepted.

3. That the Government of them be always in the Court of Aldermen, within the City of London:

4. This Court may make and set down Orders, and offer them to the Lord Protector and his Council, who may alter them as they see good, and then they shall be binding to them.

5. The Thirteen persons named in the Ordinance, are to be Thirteen of the first Two hundred persons, who shall keep Hackney Coaches, and Hackney Horses.

6. These Thirteen, or the greater part of them, were to name to the Court of Aldermen Two hundred persons; out of which, the Court of Aldermen, if they thought fit, were to chuse thereof.

7. Every one to be first admitted to keep a Hackney Coach, was to pay Forty shillings towards a common Stock, to bear up the Company.

CHAP. XLVII.

Of Collusion or Covin.

SECT. 1.
1. Collusion or Covin. What.

Fraud or Dis-
ceit.

Collusion is a crooked proceeding, or the deceitful and secret Assent and Agreement between two or more, to the prejudice or hurt of another.

It differeth nothing from Fraud, but in this, That Fraud may be by one, but Collusion must be by two or more.

This Collusion is either apparant, when it is, and sheweth it self in the face of the Act it self; or else (which is most common) it is Secret, that is, when it is vailed over with the shews of honesty, or done in the dark, that it cannot be easily espied, Co. 9. 109. Plow. 54. Co. on Littl. 3. 12. Sect. 678.

2. The effect
of it.

This Covin, although it doth insinuate it self into most of the Acts and Affairs of men, yet is it a thing the Law doth much abhor and oppose; and therefore it doth make void all Acts that are done by it, and not onely so, but all Acts that are dependant upon it, though otherwise in themselves never so good, or much favored in the Law. Quod aliàs bonum & justum est; si per vim vel fraudem petatur, malum & injustum efficitur. Fraus & dolus nemini patrocinari debent. Co. upon Littl. 366. Co. 3. 78.

3. Wherein it is conversant. And what signs are
of it.

Covin is commonly hatched, and conversant in and about Conveyances of Land, be they by Fine, Feoffment, Recovery, or otherwise, and then it is tending to defeat Purchasors of their Lands, or Creditors of their Debts, or Lords of their Wardships and Services. Also it is used oft-times in and about Deeds of Gift of Goods. But it is sometimes practised in Suits of Law, and Judgments had thereupon, in Letters Patents, in Presentations, Administrations, Contracts, Releases, and almost in every thing.

And if the Fraud be in the Conveyance of Lands or Goods, there are some certain signs or marks, whereby the same may be descried and found out. As

1. When the Conveyance, or Deed of Gift, hath in it a power of Revocation or Alteration at the will of him that makes it.

2. When the party granting, giving, or selling, doth notwithstanding the sale, or gift, still possess and use the thing given, or granted, as his own.

3. If the sale or gift be made after Suits of Law be begun against him, or when he is about to sell the thing to another.

4. When the thing is done in secret, Qui malè agit odit lucem. Et Dona clandestina semper inducunt suspicionem.

5. Where there is any Expreß, or any implied Trust in the Case.

6. When the Deed doth contain some unusual clauses or flourishes of honesty and truth in it. Clausula inconsueta semper inducunt suspicionem.

7. When the Deed is very general, Versus vadis in generalibus. 27 Eliz. 4. Dyer 294. Co. 3. 81. 6. 72. 10. 53.

SECT. 2.
4. What shall be accounted a Fraudulent Conveyance to deceive a Purchaser, and void, or not.

All Fraudulent Conveyances of Land, or any Rent, or profit out of Land made by whomsoever, with intent to deceive any one that shall purchase the same Land, or any Rent, or profit out of it, for money or other good consideration of the Fruit, and effect of their Purchase, shall be void as to such Purchasors; and all such as come under their Estate, as to so much as they shall so convey, and he that shall knowingly avow such a Conveyance, may be punished for it. 27 Eliz. 4. But such Conveyances as are made Bona fide, and upon good consideration, are not to be accounted Fraudulent. Ibid.

For the further opening and clearing of this Statute, and the Law, in this point, these things are to be known.

1. The

1. The good Conveyance must be both Bona fide, and upon good consideration, or else it is void, for Bona fide is opposed to such as are made upon, or with any trust Expressed or Implied: And good Consideration is to distinguish from such Considerations, as are not valuable, as Nature, Blood, and the like; for such Purchasors as come in upon any such Consideration, cannot avoid a former Conveyance as Fraudulent, Co. 3. 81.

2. If one convey Land with a present or future power of Revocation or Alteration at the will of him that doth convey it; this is Fraudulent as against him that shall after purchase the Land of him that made the first Conveyance. As if one convey Land to the use of himself for life, and after to the use of divers of his Blood, with a future power to revoke it after the death of such a one, or after such a day, and before the day, he sell the Land for valuable Consideration; in this case, the first Conveyance is void as to the Purchasor; and he may avoid it, Co. 3. 82.

3. If the Father make any Fraudulent conveyance, and after continue the occupation, and then the Land descend to the Son, and the Son sell it for money, or other valuable consideration; in this case the Purchasor may avoid the Conveyance made by the Father, whether the Son were privy to it, or not. Co. 6. 62.

4. If a man have made an Estate with power of Revocation, and after with an intent to defraud a Purchasor, levy a Fine, or make a Feoffment to a stranger, to extinct the power, and after sell the Land for valuable consideration; in this case the Purchasor may avoid both the former Conveyances, as Fraudulent. Co. 3. 83.

5. If one had made the first Conveyance to the King, and after had sold the Land for good consideration to a common person; in this case the Purchasor might have avoided the first Conveyance. Co. 11. 74.

6. If the first Conveyance be made by way of Bargain and Sale, yet if it be Fraudulent within the intent of this Statute; it is voidable by the Purchasor. So it was ruled by the Lord Chief Justice Hide, in evidence to a Jury in London at Guild-hal. 3 Car.

7. If there be Grand-father, Father, and Son, and the Grand-father makes a Lease for a thousand years to the Father, and the Father to prevent the drowning of the Lease by the descent of the Reversion, assigned it to divers of his friends to the use of the Son, being an Infant, under pretence to pay Debts, the Grand-father dieth, the Father continueth the Occupation and maketh Estates, and doth all Acts as owner of the Land, the Son paid no Debts, and Assignment, though divers persons of good quality were named in it, yet it was delivered by the Father to one of the Assignees of mean Estate, and in private, and afterwards the Father sold the Land for a valuable consideration; in this case it was resolved, That the Lease and Assignment both might be avoided by the Purchasor, as Fraudulent, Co. 6. 72.

8. If a Feoffment be made of Lands held by Knights Service to J. S. upon condition, that he within a certain time shall Enfeoff J. D. And that this Feoffment to J. D. shall be to the use of the Wife of the first Feoffor, for her Joynture, &c. In this case the Feoffment shall be Fraudulent. Dolus circumitus non purgatur.

9. Albeit the Purchasor when he buyes doth know of the Precedent former Conveyance, and go on with his Purchase, yet he may avoid the former Conveyance as Fraudulent. Co. 5. 60.

10. If there be Tenant in Tail, the Remainder in Tail or in Fee, and he in Remainder in Tail or in Fee, sell his Remainder by Deed, inrolled to the King; and after one buy the Land of the first Tenant in Tail, and he suffer a common Recovery; in this case the Purchasor may avoid this sale to the King, as Fraudulent. Co. 11. 74.

11. If there be a Lease for years, and the Lessor make a Fraudulent Conveyance in in Fee, and then for good consideration make another Lease to begin after the end of the former Lease; this may be a Fraudulent Lease. And he for publishing and avowing of this Lease (though it be during the first Lease) yet he may fall under the penalty of the Statute, and the party likely to be grieved, may have his Action. Cowel and Barton. M. 4. Jac.

12. If A. make a Lease for years to B. upon good consideration, and after he make a Lease to C. of the same Land for the same time, and B. drives this Bargain, and is witness to this second Lease, and doth not discover the Lease to him, nor is it excepted in the second Lease; and this second Lease is upon good consideration also. In this case it was said the first is Fraudulent. By two Justices. Hil. 18 Jac. B. R.

13. If one after marriage make a voluntary Conveyance of his Land for a Joynture or a maintenance of his Wife, and after sell the Land for money; in this case the Conveyance made to, or for his Wife, shall be said to be Fraudulent. And yet if a man upon a marriage before the marriage made, and in consideration thereof convey Land to the use of his Wife, &c. In this case, without question, the Conveyance is good, and shall not be avoided as Fraudulent, especially if it be in consideration of money also, as the common course is.

If one in consideration of a marriage had, and money to be paid, convey his Land, and after sell it for money; the first Conveyance will not be Fraudulent. So also it is thought when it is in consideration of a marriage past, and money paid together. A. being to have fifteen hundred pounds with his Wife in marriage, in consideration hereof did Covenant to assure Land for the benefit of his Wife, the fifteen hundred pounds is secured to A. they enter-marry, after A. having a Lease of the Mannor of S. for sixty years, doth grant it to Friends to the use of himself for his life, after of his Wife for her life, and after of their Son; after this, he doth Mortgage to J. S. for money borrowed. This it seems was ruled not Fraudulent, during the life, and therefore much less after his death. H. 30 Jac. Peter Vanlores case.

And if the Joynture or Estate be made before the marriage, and this after the marriage is delivered up, and a new Estate for Joynture, &c. made in consideration thereof of other Lands; this perhaps may be good also, and not judged to be Fraudulent. The opinion of some Learned Lawyers. Mich. 10 Car.

14. If one make a Lease by Covin or Fraud to one, and after make another Lease to another Bona fide, but without Fine or Rent; in this case, this second Lessee cannot avoid the first lease, because he is not a Purchaser that comes in for money, Co. 3. 83. So if one make a Lease for thirty years without consideration, and after marriage make it to his Wife in Joynture; this last will not avoid the first.

15. If one Covenant for the advancement of his Heirs Males, or for the like consideration, to levy a Fine by a day, to the use of himself for life, and after of his Issue Male, &c. and before that day he make a Lease by Fraud for many years, and after levy the Fine accordingly; in this case they cannot avoid this Lease as Fraudulent within this Statute, for they come not in for money. Co. 3. 83.

16. If a man be somewhat foolish and given to waste, be perswaded to settle his Land upon some of his Friends, of purpose to maintain himself with it, and after some of his friend companions inveigle him, and get him for a small sum of money to convey it to them; in this case they shall never avoid this former Conveyance as Fraudulent, Co. 3. 83.

17. If one that hath a Term of Land for sixty years, if he live so long, make it away, and he forgo a Lease for ninety years absolutely, and he by Indenture reciting the forged Lease for valuable consideration, doth sell the forged Lease, and all his interest into the Land to J. S. In this case J. S. is not such a Purchaser as within this Statute to avoid this precedent Lease. Co. Inst. 1. part. pag. 3. Pasche, 12 Jac. Jones case.

18. If

18. If a man be seised of Land in Fee, and he make a Feoffment for divers good Considerations to the use of himself and his wife, and the heirs on the body of his wife begotten, and after he sells the Land to J. S. for money: In this case it seems the former Conveyance shall not be said to be fraudulent to the Purchaser, but the Estate made thereby is good, except there be some circumstances of fraud in it more than usual.

19. A. seised of the fifth part of the Manor of D. and C. of the sixth part, and M. comes to A. to buy this Manor of him; after M. tells A. My Council tells me, you cannot sell, unless C. join with you: After this, C. grants a Rent-charge of Fifteen pounds a year out of the Manor, to S. her youngest son and his heirs of his body, for natural affection, he being then but three years old; with a Proviso, That if B. (whom he intended to marry) shall grant to S. T. the like Rent of Fifteen pounds, and for the like Estate out of Twenty pounds a year Land of B. then the Grant to be void: After A. doth buy the sixth part of the Manor, of B. and C. his wife, (they being now intermarried together) and after A. B. and C. his wife join in a Grant to M. In this case it was agreed, that this Grant was not fraudulent: For it is the changing of an Estate, and at a great charge. Otherwise it were, if it were upon the tender of a pair of Gloves, or the like, M. 19 Jac. Co. B. Millers Case. But no Purchaser but he that comes in for money or good value, can take advantage of the fraud, for it doth bind all others: And the latter Conveyance must have a good, as well as valuable cause, M. 37. 38 Eliz. Uptons Case, Co. 3. 83.

All Feoffments, Gifts, Grants, Alienations, Bargains and Conveyances of Lands, Tenements, Hereditaments, Goods and Chattels, or any Rent, Profit or Commodity out of Land. So all Bonds, Suits, Judgments, Executions made and entered into by Fraud or Collusion of Trust for him that made it or entered into it, or otherwise with intent to hinder, delay, or put by Creditors, or others of their just and lawful Actions, Suits, Debts, Accounts, Damages, Penalties, Forfeitures, Heriots, Mortuaries, or Reliefs shall be void as against them to whom such Debt or Duty doth belong, and they may proceed to take their remedy, as if no such thing had been done or made, Stat. 3 H. 7. 4. 47 Ed. 3. 6. 2 R. 2. 3. 17 Eliz. 5. 50 Ed. 3. 6. And for the further opening of these Statutes, and the Law in this matter, these things are to be known.

Seff. 3.
5. What shall be accounted a fraudulent Conveyance, or an Act to defeat Creditors or others of their Debts or Duties, and therefore void; or not.

1. By the antient Common-Law, he that had a former Right, Title, Interest or Demand, might avoid an Estate subsequent made by fraud. As if one sell my Goods in a Market overt by Covin and fraud, I may avoid it: And if I have a Judgment for Debt or Damages against another, and in the mean between the Judgment and the Execution he give or sell away his Goods by fraud, I may make Execution of them, 22 Aff. 44. Dyer 295. Co. 3. 83. Bro. Don: 0.

2. But now by these Statutes, one that hath a subsequent right, and may avoid a precedent estate, right, &c. And therefore if one be indebted to A. Twenty pounds, and to B. Forty pounds, and be possessed of Goods to the value of Twenty pounds, and A. sues him for this Twenty pounds, and hanging this Suit, the Debtor secretly makes a general Deed of Gift of all his Goods to B. in satisfaction of his Debt, and yet he himself doth continue the possession and use of the goods as the Owner thereof, sell and shear the Sheep &c. mark them in his own name, and after A. getteth a Judgment and Execution in his own name, and after A. getteth a Judgment and Execution in his Suit for his Twenty pounds; in this case A. shall make Execution of these goods, as if no such Deed of Gift had been made. So if in this case the Debtor had given all his goods to B. in satisfaction of his Debt before any Suit begun by A. upon any express or implicate Trust, as that he should be favorable to him in respect of his poor estate, or the like; or that he should suffer him to use his goods, and pay him as he can, or the like: In all these and such like cases, although the thing be done upon good consideration; yet because it is not done bona fide, because there is a Trust in the Case, therefore it shall be said to be fraudulent, Co. 3. 83.

3. If one in consideration of natural affection give all his goods to his Child or Cousin, bona fide; this as to Creditors shall be said to be fraudulent. So if I, when Suits be against me, convey away my Land to my Children or Cousins, with a Proviso to avoid it at my pleasure; this as to Creditors will be fraudulent, Co. 3. 80. Dyer 295.

4. If two be bound together in an Obligation, and the Principal having a Lease for years grants it over to his Surety, in consideration he is bound with him, and after he enters into a Statute, or suffers a Judgment against him; in this case the Grant shall be said to be fraudulent, and subject to Execution. But if the Surety had been bound to save the Principal harmless, and he had paid the money for him, and delivered up his Counterbond, and for this he had made him this Assignment without any Trust, this had been good, Wilsons Case, Pasch. 8 Jac. B. R.

5. Where the Deed is made upon these terms, That if he can provide the money, he shall have his goods again; this shall be esteemed fraudulent.

6. If one bind him and his heirs in an Obligation, and after make a fraudulent Conveyance to another to defeat the Debtee, and die; in this case the Obligee may sue the Heir, and recover the Debt against him, Co. 5. 60.

7. If after a Commission of Bankrupt be sued out, the Debtor deliver or make over all his goods, or any part thereof to one of the Creditors in satisfaction of his Debt; this shall be said to be fraudulent, and the Commissioners may sell them notwithstanding.

8. If the fraudulent Deed be made by one to some of his friends, and they are not privy to it; yet it shall be accounted fraudulent, and shall be void as to Purchasers or Creditors, Co. 8. 131. Plow. 54.

9. If an Administrator do covinously give or sell away the Goods, and after his Administration is revoked, and another granted to another; in this case the Creditors may sue the first Administrator, and his Deed of Gift as to them shall be void, Co. 6. 18.

10. If a Recusant or any other, with an intent to defeat the King or other Lord of his Forfeiture, make a Deed of Gift of his Goods and Chattels, after the offence is committed; this as to the Lord or King shall be said to be fraudulent, Stat. 13 Eliz. chap. 1.

11. If one sue an Executor or Administrator for a Debt due from the deceased, and there is a Judgment had before that time against him at another mans suit, which is not satisfied, and he have not Assets in his hands more then to satisfy for the first Judgment; in this case if the first Judgment be bona fide, it is a Bar to the second Suit. But if the first be fraudulent, as the Law will judge it to be, in case where either there was no, or not so much Debt rei veritate due from him that is dead, or the Executor or Administrator hath compounded for less, and the Judgment is left of purpose to bar other Creditors; this Judgment, as to the Plaintiff in this Suit, shall be said to be fraudulent, Co. 1. 132.

12. If one being indebted, and having goods, make a Deed of Gift of his goods to J. S. and then make him his Executor, supposing by this to keep his goods from being liable to his Debt; this shall be said to be fraudulent and void as to Creditors, and J. S. will be charged as Executor for all the goods. So if one, when Judgment is given, or like to be given against him for a Debt, make away his Lands or Goods of purpose to avoid Execution: Or if one in prison for divers Debts, procure himself to be indicted and attainted for some offence, to the intent to forfeit his Estate, have his Clergy, to defeat his Creditors; all these Acts will be made void as fraudulent.

13. If a man a little before his death convey away his Land, to the intent that a Warranty and Assets should not bar his son for other Land; this may be avoided as fraudulent, Dyer 295.

14. If A. bona fide, and for valuable consideration mortgage his Lease for Twenty one years to B. upon condition, that if he repay the money a year after to B. he shall re-enter; B. covenant with A. that he shall receive the profits till the time of payment, &c. A. doth not pay the money at the time: B. hoping that A. in time will pay him, doth not interrupt him, but suffer him to take the profits two or three years after; and in the interim a Judgment is had against A. upon a Bond, and Execution awarded: In this it was held, that this was no fraudulent; and being no fraudulent duleat Conveyance at the first making, it cannot become a fraudulent Conveyance by matter ex post facto. By both the Judges of Assise, in the Case of the Lady Lambeth, in Com. South. 5 Car.

15. Such Conveyances, Deeds of Gift, Contracts and Agreements as are made bona fide and upon good consideration, are not to be accounted fraudulent, nor can they be avoided. And all such Conveyances and Deeds as are void by these Statutes, are void as to Purchasers and Creditors only, but good against them that make them, and all others, and as to all other purposes. And therefore it was adjudged, That if A. for Twenty pounds paid him grant all his Goods in a Schedule annexed to the Deed to be carried away upon demand, and covenant that he and his Executors shall deliver them upon demand, and the Executor is required to deliver them, that he shall not say, being sued, that this Deed is fraudulent, Brownl. 3 part, 111. And any man that will, may by word or writing give, or he may sell his Goods outright for money, at any time before Execution done; so that there be no Trust in the case, that upon payment of the money, he shall have the Goods again, or the like; and this will be good against himself, his Executors, Administrators, or any to whom he shall after sell or convey them. Stat. 3 H. 7. c. 13. Eliz. ch. 15. Co. 3. 82. 59. 60. See more for this in my Book of Common Assurances, in Chap. of Deeds.

If any Tenant holding Land of the King or other Lord in capite, or by Knights service, make a Feoffment or other Conveyance to defraud the King or Lord of whom he holds his Land, of his Wardship, primer Seisin, or other benefits of his Tenure reserved to him by the Statute of 32 and 34 H. 8. of Wills, it will be void as to a third part as to the Lord, and he shall have the same benefit as he should have had if no such Conveyance had been made. And as to this, take these Cases.

1. Therefore if such a Tenant enfeoff his lineal or collateral Heir within age, or make a Lease for life, the Remainder to his Heir; or make a Gift in Tail, the Remainder in Fee to his Heir; or make a Feoffment to another and his Heir; or make a Feoffment on condition that he shall enfeoff back again his Heir at his full age; or make a Feoffment for the payment of his Debts, Preferment of his wife and children; or enfeoff one to the intent that he shall receive the profits till he have an Heir male, and then to re infeoff him; or devise all his Land by his Will in any such sort: This shall be esteemed fraudulent, and will be void as to the Lord for a third part. Co. 6. 76. Plow. 49. Co. 8. 164. 9. 119. Dyer 36. Stat. Marlb. c. 6.

2. But in case the Tenant had left a full third part to descend to his Heir, he might have disposed the rest either by Act executed, or by Will before, or at his death how he had pleased, and no Averment of Fraud doth lie for more then a third part in any such case: For a man might by those Statutes have conveyed or devised two parts in three of his Land to or for his wife, children, or payment of his Debts, and the Lord shall have nothing out of that, but he must have what is due to him out of the third part that is left. Dyer 276. Co. 8. 164. And for Lands held by Socage tenure, every man may dispose them at his pleasure.

3. If one that holdeth his Land to pay a Heriot at his death, and he in consideration of natural love enfeoff his son and heir; and the son, to prevent the Dower of his wife during his fathers life, makes a Lease for Forty years, if his father live so long; the father pays the Rent, and the son doth suit of Court for the Land, and after the father dieth: In this case the Conveyance shall not be adjudged fraudulent as to the Lord to deceive him of his Heriot, for it was done to another end. Brownl. Rep. 2 part, 287. Co. 10. 46. So if a man for fear of Debts convey his Land to friends with condition, that upon payment of Ten pounds they shall convey it to whomsoever he shall appoint. Co. 10. 47. Dyer 268.

4. If one make a Feoffment of Land to two and their heirs for money, or other valuable consideration, and this was of Land holden by this Tenure, this was not accounted fraudulent. So neither where one of the Joint-tenants make a Feoffment of his Moity to a stranger. Co. 8. 164.

5. If a Feoffment be made by Collusion, and the Feoffee die, or make a Feoffment over bona fide to another before the death of the Ancestor; this second Feoffment is good, and the Collusion is gone. Co. 1. 22. 2. 94. Dyer.

6. For fraudulent Conveyances to deceive the King of Abbey-lands, See Stat. 35 H. 8. 13. 1 Ed. 6. 44.

For this matter, take these Cases following:

1. If a woman that hath a title of Dower to the Land of her husband, cause one to disseise the Tenant of the Land, with intent to sue him, and after she doth so, and recover her Dower against him; all this is void. And yet if a Disseisor, Intruder, or Abator do endow a woman that hath a lawful title of Dower, without any practice; this is good, and shall bind him that hath right. Co. 3. 77. 11 Ed. 4. 2. 7 H. 7. 11. 19 H. 8. 12. So if a Tenant in tail be ousted of his Land, and may bring his Formedon, and he shall cause another to disseise the Tenant of the Land, and bring his Action, and recover the Land against him; this is void, and shall be no Remedy to the Tenant in tail, Plow. 54. Co. 3. 77. So in all cases where a man hath a rightful and just cause of Action, and he of Covin and consent doth raise up a Tenant by wrong against whom he may recover, this Covin doth suffocate the Right; so as the Recovery, though upon a good title, shall not bind nor restore the Demandant to his Right, 41 Aff. pl. 28. 25 Aff. pl. 1. 15 Ed. 4. 2.

2. If A. and B. Jointenants, be entitled to a real Action against the Heir of the Disseisor, and A. cause the Heir to be disseised, against whom A. and B. recover and sue Execution; in this case B. is remitted, and shall hold in common with A. for he was no party to the Covin, but A. is not remitted, Co. upon Lis. 357.

3. So it is said, if an Attorney appear without Warrant, and suffer a Judgment against me by fraud between him and the Plaintiff in the Action, it is all void, Dyer 361.

For answer to this, take these Cases.

1. If a Copholder or Lessee for years levy a Fine of Covin, or make a Feoffment of Covin with intent to levy a Fine to bar him in Reversion, this is all void; and though five years pass without claim, yet is he not hurt by it, especially where the Tenant doth pay the Rent, and do the Service still as he was wont to do. But if a man purchase Land of B. by Feoffment, or by Bargain and Sale enrolled, and after finding that B. hath a defeasible Title, and that C. hath the Right, and B. levies or taketh a Fine with Proclamations, with an intent to bar the Right of C. this is good. So if one pretend Title to Land, and enter and disseise the Tenant, and after levy a Fine with intent to bar the Disseisor, this is not fraudulent, but is good. And if the Disseisee do not claim nor enter within the five years, he is barred, Co. 3. 79.

2. If the King had given Lands in tail to any one in recompence of any service done to him, or for other cause; and the Tenant in tail, while the Reversion was in the King, had suffered a Common-Recovery; this had been esteemed fraudulent and void, as against the King and his Successors, Stat. 34 H. 8. 201. Co. 10. 48. 1. 15. Plow. 54.

3. If Lands be conveyed by a husband or any of his Ancestors, to the wife for her life, or to her and her husband and their issue in tail, for the Jointure of the wife; and after the husband's death, the wife alone, or she and another husband suffer a Common-Recovery of the Land; this shall be esteemed fraudulent and void, by the Statute of 11 H. 7. c. 20.

4. If a Tenant for life suffer a Common-Recovery without the Assent of him in Reversion, this is void by the Stat. 32 H. 8. 31. 14 Eliz. 81. But if any Tenant in tail in Possession or Remainder suffer a Common-Recovery by Agreement, (except in the case before where the Reversion is in the King;) this is good, and cannot be falsified as done by fraud. And if there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in Tail, or in Fee, and the Tenant for life doth suffer a Common-Recovery, and vouch over him in the first Remainder in Tail; this is not fraudulent, but a Bar to the Estate tail, Co. 10. 49.

5. But in many cases where there is a fraud in the first Conveyance to defeat Purchasers, Creditors, &c: if the Grantee shall after homo fide grant it away to a third person, here perhaps the Collusion may be gone, and this second Grant may be good, 33 H. 6. 28. Goldsb. 118. pl. 2. in Br. Collus. 23. 39 H. 6. 19. 44 Ed. 3. 46. 41 Aff. 28. 15 Ed. 4. 4. Co. 6. 58. Ca. 8. 132. Plow. 51.

A Deed of Gift may be of Goods, with intent to defeat Successors of Spiritual persons of their remedy for Dilapidations; of which see St. 13 Eliz. 10. 14 Eliz. 11. 17. 25.

If one sell another mans Goods in a Market overt or Fair, revera & bona fide; by this the Property is altered. But if this be by Covin and Agreement, and of purpose to alter the Property, it is otherwise, Co. 3. 83.

If the Husband sell away his Wives goods of purpose to prevent her having them again after a Divorce, and they be divorced; in this case she shall have all her goods she had before the marriage, that are so covinously sold away: But being sold away bona fide, she cannot avoid the Sale, 26 H. 8. 7.

If Tenant in tail and his Issue discontinue the Discontinuee to the use of the Father, and the Father dieth, and the Land descend upon the Issue; he is not remitted against the Discontinuee, for he is privy to the wrong, but in respect of all others he is remitted, and shall deraign the first Warranty, Stat. 11 Ed. 4. 2. 13 Ed. 4. 21. 15 Ed. 4. 23.

If a Disfeisor give to another Seisin of a Rent out of the Land, that hath right to the Rent; this is good, if there be no Covin in it: Which if there be, this will make it void, Co. 6. 58.

Letters Patents may be void by Fraud; as when it shall be to compass the Land held of another in Mortmain, or the like, Co. 11. 74.

If one die intestate, and the Administration is committed to his Wife, and another by Covin between him and a Creditor procure the Administration to him, and a Revocation of the first Administration, and then release to the Debtor his Debt; if this be all of purpose, it is a void Release, Dyer 339.

If one be outlawed while he is in Prison, the Outlawry may be avoided: But if it be of purpose that he is imprisoned, it is otherwise, 38 Aff. 91. 17.

If one in Prison, to the intent he may be removed, cause himself to be indicted by Covin, this will make it all void, 37 Aff. 210.

There may be Collusion in divers other cases. For which see Stat. 30 Ed. 3. ch. 5. 1 R. 2. 15. 5 H. 4. 13. 11 H. 7. 27. 13 Eliz. 10. 23 Eliz. 8. 43 Eliz. 8. 31 H. 6. 9. 4 H. 7. 29. 33 H. 8. 1. 5 Eliz. 2. 43 Eliz. 6.

This Collusion may sometimes be tryed in the same Action wherein the Covin is, and sometimes it may be tryed in another Action, as for Lands aliened in Mortmain by a Quare ius, Co. 9. 33. 18 H. 8. 6.

And when it is apparent, there need no proof of it: Quod constat clart, non debet verificare. But when it is secret, it must be proved by Witnesses, and found by a Jury, as other matters of fact be; and a little proof will serve, because it is commonly very secret. And if a Jury find a Fraud specially by their Verdict, they must express it how, to defeat Creditors, or to defeat Purchasors: For if the Jury find only a Fraud in general, or some circumstances of Fraud only, this will not be a good Verdict: And if the Jury find it a Fraud to one purpose, it shall never be said to be a Fraud to any other purpose, Co. 10. 47. 9. 108. Plow. 46. Brownlows Rep. 2 part, 187.

Disceipt, is a Writ that lieth against him that doth any thing deceitfully in the name of another, for him that receiveth harm thereby. And this is properly Disceipt. But others do take it in a larger sense, and say it is Original, where any Disceipt is done to another, so that he hath not performed his Bargain. For which see much in my First Part of the Marrow of the Law, Chap. 22. where many Cases are put upon it. Or it is Judicial, when upon a Scire facias sued out of a Record to warn a man to appear, the Sheriff doth return the party summoned, and it is not so, or he was not legally summoned, and hereby Judgment is given against him for the Land: For this the party grieved, in some cases, shall recover damages against the Sheriff; and in some cases also the Judgment shall be vacated, F. N. B. 95. Old N. B. 5. St. 2 Ed. 3. 15.

If I make an Attorney for me in a Real Action, and the Attorney by agreement between him and the Plaintiff suffer me to lose the Land, I may have this Action, F. N. B. 95.

So

So if in any Action against me, another person will come into Court and personate me, and hereby any mischief come to me, I may have this remedy against him: As if he sue out a Writ in my name, wherein a Fine is to be paid. So if one acknowledge a Judgment in my name, and I suffer any loss hereby, I may be righted against him by this means, F.N.B. 96, 97.

So if one levy a Fine, suffer a Recovery, knowledge a Statute, Recognisance, or Bail in my name, and I be hereby dammified, I may have this remedy, F.N.B. 100. So if a man in a Suit I have against him, get a Protection, or remove the Suit only to delay me, and without any cause; I may have this Writ, Co. 534. F.N.B. 97. So if one forge any Deed in my name, and use it, or it be used against me, I may have this Writ, F.N.B. 99. Dyer 75. And so in many other cases. As if my Attorney in a Suit do any thing in my name he hath no Warrant for: One procure another to sue and vex one: I be bound to pay money on a Statute, and have paid it at the day, and another causeth the Statute to be extended without the will of the Conusee. One promise to make me a Feoffment of Land by a day, and before the day he make it to another: Or promise me to deliver Wares, and he deliver false and sophisticated Wares; or sell me Cloth, and warrant it of a certain length: Or another and my self are sued as Executors, whereas I only am Executor, and the other confesses the Action; in all these cases I may have remedy by this Writ, F.N.B. 98. Dyer 301. 75. 23, 24.

And if a Recovery be had in a Real Action by the false Return of the Sheriff, the party grieved or his Heir may have this Action against the Sheriff and the Demandant; and the Summoners, Vexors, and Pernors shall be examined; and if it be found, the party shall recover damages against the Sheriff, reverse the Judgment, and have Restitution of the Land, Co. 69. upon Lit. 259. Co. 8, 9. F.N.B. 97. So in a Scire facias to execute a Fine, if the Land be recovered on the Sheriffs false Return, the party grieved may avoid the Judgment by this Writ, F.N.B. 97. So if one sue a Scire facias on a Recognisance for Debt, and the Sheriff return Summons where none was, F.N.B. 97, 99. So if after a Recovery in an Annuity, such a Return be on a Scire facias, and hereby the Annuity is recovered, the party grieved may have this Writ, F.N.B. 88. And if a Tenant in ancient Demesne levy a Fine of his Land, the Lord may avoid it by this Writ, Plow. 370. F.N.B. 98, 99. See Albin of the Case, Chap. 4. Set.

There are other Deceits, as by Counterfeit-Letters to get money; in a Miller to change his Grift, and otherwise; punishable by Justices of Peace. See my Justice of Peace for it:

CHAP. XLVIII.

Of Common.

Common is that Soil, Water, or other thing, the use whereof is common to this or that Town, Lordship, or Person: Or it is the Right that a man hath to take of that which is anothers. And it is either of Pasture; of Turbary, (i.) of digging and taking Turfs; or of Fishing; or of Estovers, (i.) taking Wood; or it is of digging for Coals, Mines, and the like. And the Common of Pasture is divided into Common Appendant, Appurtenant, Engross, or by reason of Neighborhood: And some is certain, (i.) for so many Cattel, or the Cattel levant on such a place; or incertain, which is for Cattel without number, Co. 8. 70. upon Lit. 122. 6. 60. 5. 60. 7. 5.

And whosoever doth claim any Common, he must claim it in one of these kinds. For if a man will claim it in any other kind, as Ratione commorantia or residentia, (i.) by reason of dwelling or residence in a house, this is no good title. And that Common that may be claimed, is, and may be claimed in some cases by Grant; but in most cases a Title is made to it, and it is claimed by Prescription or Custom, Co. 4. 38.

But Copiholders may allege a Custom, That every customary Tenant of the Manor may have Common in the Lords Waste. So also Inhabitants of a Village who are a Corporation, may allege a Custom to have Common in such a place, as belonging to their ancient houses, Co. 6. 59. 60. Or Copiholders may prescribe to have Common in the ground of another besides the Lord; but then they must do it in the Lords name, Co. 4. 32.

One may make himself a title to have and enjoy solum vestrum terra for a time, (i.) from such a day to such a day, and so long to exclude the Owner himself to feed there: But a custom or prescription to exclude him always, is not good, Co. super Lit. 122.

A Lord prescribed, That time out of mind the Lord of the Manor had been used to have for himself, his Farmers and Tenants of the Manor, Common of Pasture in &c. for all his Sheep which are levant and couchant in and upon the Demesne lands of W. which lie and are in A. aforesaid, every year; and it was allowed for good, Duncombs Case, H. 9 Jac. Brownl. 1 par. 232.

One prescribed that he was seised of a Messuage and certain Land in Dale, and that he, and those whose estate he hath, for himself, his Farmers and Tenants, used to have Common in the Field or place called B. in S. when the said Field called B. was fresh and not sowed all that year, with their Cattel levant and couchant; and when the Field was sown with corn, and the corn carried away, until it was sown again; and allowed good.

One prescribed to have Common in anothers ground, as belonging to his Messuage and Yard-land, thus: For six Horses, Geldings or Mares, two Colts, six young Beasts called Steers, or young Beasts called Heifers, and two Mares called Breeders, in and upon the said Messuage and Yard-land lying and rising in manner following; that is to say, from the 1. of August until the 25. of February then next following, and good, Brownl. Rep. 2 par. 61.

A Custom was alleged, That the Lord had the place wholly to himself till Lammas, and after it was common to the Tenants, every one of which is to put in a certain number, and no more; and that then the Lord is to put in but a certain number; and it seems good, Brownl. 1 par. 187.

And generally for Common, a Custom or Prescription may be alleged for Common, either for all sorts of Cattel, or for some kind of Cattel only: And it may be for a certain number of Cattel only, or it may be for the Cattel levant and couchant on such a place, which is certain by consequence; or it may be without number. And it may be either for the whole year, or at some times only of the year: And it may be for more cattel at one time, and for fewer at another time, and the like. But for an Allegation of a Prescription of Common that shall be good and allowable, there must be these things in the case.

1. It must be such a Common as might have a reasonable commencement by agreement of parties or otherwise, Brownl. 2 par. 64.

2. The Land wherein the Common is to be taken, and the Land to which the Common to be had doth belong, must be laid to be in a Parish and County in certain.

3. If it be Common appendant, it must be for cattel levant and couchant upon such Land; for if it be for all his cattel without restriction, it is not good.

4. It must not be belonging to a thing which began of late: And therefore Prescription of Common time out of mind, to a House built within time of memory, cannot be good, Goldsb. Rep. p. 38. See for all these things, Brownl. Rep. 1 par. 180. 189. 198. 232. 2 par. 47. 63. 222. 297. March. Rep. 83. 37 H. 6. 34. 32 Aff. pl. 3. See more in the next Questions, to every kind of Common: And see more in my Second Part of the Marrow of the Law, p. 296, 297.

1. If one grant me Common ubique, where-ever the Beasts of the Grantor shall go: By this, if he occupy an hundred Acres with his Beasts, I may common in that hundred Acres with him at all times. But if it the Grant be made to me of Common in his Land quandounque, whensoever the Beasts of the Grantor shall go there; in this case I may not common in his ground, but at such times only as his Beasts are in the Common, and at no other time, 9 H. 6. 35. Finch. 36.

2. If a Lord grant me Common out of all his Manor, this must be understood in all commonable places, and not in his Gardens, &c. and it must be understood of Common with commonable Beasts only, and not with Pigs, and such like things, 9 H. 6. 35. Fitz. Dower 123.

3. If one grant me a Messuage with Common appurtenant for ten Beasts; by this I cannot take Common without number, but for ten Beasts only, 9 H. 6. 35.

4. If one grant me Common for ten Beasts in his ground for three years, and I take no Common for the first two years; I may not by this put in thirty Beasts the third year, and take the three years profit together, but must put in ten Beasts only, 27 H. 6. 10.

5. If a Lord of the Manor of Dale, wherein is a great Waste, wherein the Farmers of every House have Common, grant a House with all the Commons thereunto belonging and therewith used; by this it seems the Grantee shall have usual Common in the Waste, Brownl. 2 par. 222.

6. If a Lord seised of a Moor of two hundred Acres, enfeof me of fifty Acres of the North-side thereof; by this I have no Common in the rest, but we must divide and keep our cattel one from another, or we shall be Trespassors one to another, Dyer 372.

7. If one grant me Common in his ground without number, it seems I may put in as many cattel as I will, and so he may also; though some say I may not put in so many, as not to leave him enough for his own cattel, 12 H. 8. 2. See more, Self. 6. Brownl. Rep. 220.

8. If one grant me Common in his ground, he can do nothing to prejudice his own Grant: And therefore he cannot set a Rick there on the ground, nor drive my cattel from his Rick, Brownl. 1 par. 220.

Common Ap-pendant, what.

Common appendant is, where a man hath Common for his commonable cattel, as Oxen, Horses, Sheep, Kine, and the like, only in the ground of another man, by reason of certain Land that hath been ancient errable Land, unto which that Common is so annexed, that it cannot by any means be severed from the same, but he that hath the one must have the other, Co. 8. 70. 4. 37.

The nature of
it.

This Common is of all other the best; for this is said to be of common right, and is evermore belonging to errable Land, or to the Land which was anciently errable Land,

Land; for it cannot be created at this day, nor can it belong to new Errable Land. But it may belong to a Mannor, Farm, or Yard-Land, which are things in Gross (wherein there is Errable Land included) and then it doth in truth belong to the Errable onely.

This Common began when Lords did infeoff their Tenants of Errable Land, to hold by Tenure in Socage; for in this case it was included in the Feoffment, That for the maintenance of their Plough, which they by their Tenure were bound to keep; and for the furtherance of Tillage (a thing much favored in Law) the Tenant was to have Common in the Lords great Wastes for all his Commonable Beasts, that did dung or drefs his Land; for at the first, almost all the Ground that doth now lie inclosed in Meadows and Pastures, did lie open in great Wastes and Commons, and were in the hands of Lords of Mannors. Co. 4. 37. Mert. 4. Perk. 670.

One may prescribe for this Common; or one may claim it without prescription, thus, That he hath two Acres of Land, to which he hath Common Appendant,

&c.

For the Answer of this Question, these things must be known.

1. If there be a House built upon that which was antiently Errable, and part of it be turned into Meadow, and part into Pasture, the Common Appendant to it may be claimed and taken still as Appendant; and he shall have Common for all the Beasts that he doth keep upon that which was ancient Errable Land. Co. 4. 37.

2. It may belong to a Mannor, Farm, or Plough Land. Co. 4. 37.

3. It may be claimed to be taken in a Field, when it is not sown to Corn onely. 37 H. 6. 34.

4. This Common is always for such Beasts, as either manure the Land, as Oxen or Horses; or else for such as marl and compast the Land, as Sheep and Kine: And therefore if the Common be claimed for any other Cattle, it cannot be this Common, but it must be some other. 37 H. 6. 34. 26 H. 8. 4.

5. In Parishes where their Lands in their Fields do lie intermixt, and any one of them do inclose his Land, and the Inhabitants have used to have Common in this inclosed ground, after Harveft, till Seed time again; in this case if the Common be for Beasts onely that manure and marl the Land, then it is Common Appendant; but if it be for all manner of Beasts, then it is Common Appurtenant, Co. 7. 5.

6. If there be two Villages adjoining, and a great Field or Waste between them, part of which doth belong to one Parish, and part to the other; and the Tenants of the one Parish do, have Common there with the Tenants of the other Parish; this is not a Common Appendant, but a Common because of Neighborhood. Dyer 47. But if there be two Villages, and a third between them, and one Village hath Common with the third, and there are no Wastes adjoining; this it seems, shall be a Common Appendant, and not by cause of Vicinage. Dyer 47.

7. Where the Lands of men do lie intermixed in little parcels in great Fields, and they do use to Common altogether promiscuously, from Harveft till the Field be sown again; this which is like to their Shack in Norfolk, is a kinde of Common Appendant; and there if any man inclose, and the rest do then use to Common with him notwithstanding; this is Common Appendant. Co. 7. 5.

Common Appurtenant is, where a man hath Common for all manner of Beasts in the Ground of another man. And this Common, a man may have or claim by Grant, or by Prescription; for this Common a man may create at this day. Co. 8. 70. 6. 60. And therefore this Common differeth from Common Appendant in many things: For,

1. Common Appendant cannot be created at this day; for when it began it grew by continuance, and must now be claimed by Prescription, time out of minde, but Common Appurtenant may be newly granted.

2. That may be had by, and claimed for those Cattle onely that manure and marl the Land; but this may be had and claimed by, and for all manner of Cattle.

3. That is to be claimed for, and taken by, so many Beasts onely as will serve to marl and manure the Land, to which it is Appendant. But this may be claimed for, and taken by Beasts without number.

5. That is to be claimed for, and by reason of ancient Errable Land onely. But this may be claimed for, or by reason of a House, or any other Land as Meadow or Pasture, or Errable Land newly made.

Appurtenment.

6. That cannot be severed from the Land, to which it is Appendant by any act of God, act of Law, or act of the parties: But this may be severed from the House or Land, to which it is Appurtenant.

Admeasurement of Pasture.

7. That must be taken with a proportion, having respect to the Land to which it is dependant, as if it be Appendant to one Acre, he shall have Common for so much, as that one Acre will keep, and if he take more, the rest of the Commoners may have a Writ of Admeasurement of Pasture. But this may be taken by Beasts without number, and this Writ will not lie in this case of Common Appurtenant.

8. That must be taken with a mans own Beasts, and cannot be taken with the Beasts of another man. But if he have but a Special Property in the Cattle, it seems it is well enough. Co. 8. 70. 6. 60. 4. 38. 15 Ed. 4. 32. 10 Ed. 3. 56. 37 H. 6. 34. 9 Ed. 4. 3. 4 Ed. 4. 29 22 H. 6. 43. 26 H. 8. 4. 5 H. 7. 7. *F. 6. Common in Grofs.

What shall be said to be this kinde of Common, or not.

Self. 5. Appurtenant. How it may be taken.

Common in Grofs is, where one claimeth to have Common for all manner of Beasts, or for some kinds of Beasts without number, or to a certain number of Cattle, by special Grant in writing, and not by reason of any Land. Terms Ley. Co. 4. 38.

If one that is Lord of a Mannor, wherein are divers Wastes, grant to another certain Lands within the Mannor and Common, within the Wastes of the Mannor, for all his Cattle; this is a Common in Grofs, and not Appurtenant. But if the Grant be of Common for a certain number of Beasts, then it is Common Appurtenant. By three Judges, B. R. in Stamps case. And so this Common may be made at this day, for every man may grant to another what Common he will, upon his own Ground: And this Common, the Grantee may take with the Cattle of another body, if his Grant do not express that he must take it with his own Cattle, as if it be a Grant of Common for his Cattle, or for his Ten Beasts, or the like; for then he must take it with his own Beasts. 11 H. 6. 22. 36 Aff. pl. 5. But otherwise he may take it with any Beasts he will, that he hath for the present any Special Property in, for that purpose. 15 H. 7. 10. 14 H. 6. 6.

Common by cause of Vicinage.

The nature of it.

Appendant. How it may be taken and used.

Inclosure.

Common by cause of Vicinage is, where the Tenants of two Lords, which be seized of two Villages or Towns, lying neer one another, and either of them have been used time out of minde, to inter-common and feed their Cattle of all sorts of Commonable Cattle together, and one with another.

This Common is much of the nature of Common Appendant, for it cannot be created at this day, but one must have and claim it by Prescription. And the Commoner may not put in what he will, but according to the proportion of the Land, to which it is Appendant, and the quantity of the Common belonging to that Village, of which the Commoner is: And this Common by consent may be inclosed. Co. 4. 38. 7 Ed. 4. 26. Dyer 47.

But this, the Commoners of one Village cannot put in their Beasts into the Common of the other Village, but they must put them in on their own side upon their own Common; and then if they go into the Common of the other Village that lieth open with their Common, they cannot distrain them damage Fesant, nor bring any Action, nor chase them out. And such a Commoner may put in what kinde of Cattle he will.

Distres damage Fesant.

Estovers. What.

Common of Estovers is, where a man hath right to cut and take Houf. boot in anothers Wood to spend in his House: And this is sometimes Certain, and sometimes Incertain, and sometimes Appendant, sometimes in Grofs: It may be by Grant, Grant, or by Prescription; but it is always belonging to a dwelling House, and cannot be granted or severed from it, but he that hath the one must have the other, and it must belong to the old House, not a new one; and the old Chimneys, not to new Chimneys. And this, if the Commoner be hindred of, as if the owner of the Wood cut down so much, that he doth not leave him enough, he may have a Quo Minus; Quo Minus. What. if he have a Freehold, he shall have Remedy by Assize, otherwise by Action of the Case. And if the Commoner take too much, the owner of the Wood may sue him in Trespass. Co. 4. 37. 8. 46. F.N.B. 180. Bro. Rep. 1. part. 221.

For Answer to all these Questions at once, take these things.

1. In these Cases the Law doth much heed the Custom of the place.
2. No Commoner may take away the Grass upon the Common, otherwise then by the mouths of his Beasts. 45 Ed. 3. 25. Nor can he meddle with the Soyl, no not to better it. 12 H. 8. 2. 22 Aff 36. 13 H. 8. 16.
3. If I have Common in another mans Ground, I cannot shut him out, but he may Common with me. Co. upon Litt. 122.
4. If one have two Tenements in two Villages, and Common Appendant to one of them; in this case he cannot take his Cattle that are upon the other Tenement, to eat up the Common Appendant to that Tenement. F.N.B. 125. 10 Ed. 3. 56.
5. He that hath Common in Gros by Grant, as if a Grant be to him of Common for twenty Beasts, may feed it with another mans Cattle; but if the Grant be for Common for his own Cattle onely, it is otherwise. 11 H. 6. 22.
6. If a Grant be to me of Common for Cattle, without number in a Close, I may put in without stint; but if the Grant be of Common, for a certain number of Cattle, I can take no more then are named. 11 H. 6. 22.
7. He that hath Common Appendant, or because of Neighborhood, may put in no more but a reasonable number of Cattle, he must be stinted. 13 H. 7. 13. Co. 4. 38. 12 H. 8. 2.
8. If a Copiholder be to have Common, it must be onely for the Cattle that are Levant and Couchant upon his Copihold. 15 Ed. 4. 32. See more to this before Self. 2. How the Grant of Common shall be taken.
9. For the power of the Commoner against them that disturb him, take these things.

First, If any Commoner that hath any Freehold in the Common be ousted or hindred of his Common, totally by Inclosure, Trespass, or the like, so that he cannot have it; he may have remedy by an Assize, be it the Lord, or any other that doth hinder him. But if the Impediment be such, that he cannot have and enjoy his Common so beneficially, and so plentifully as he was wont to do; his proper Remedy is by Action of the Case. And if the Commoner be onely Lessee for years, or a Copiholder, albeit the hindrance deprive him totally of his Common; yet he cannot have an Assize, but must have an Action of the Case. Or the Commoner may take the Beasts of any man but the Lords, upon the Common damage Fesant. But all this is to be understood of such a Trespass, as that thereby the Commoner doth in all or part, lose his Common: For if it be onely a little Trespass, by cutting a Tree, digging a Turf, or the like, that is no hindrance to the Commoner in his Common, the Commoner can neither have Action, nor distrain damage Fesant. And yet perhaps the Lord may for this. Also a Commoner may drive out any mans Cattle that are there doing Trespass, Co. 9. 112, 113. 8. 79. Kelw. 41. 147. Goldsb. 132. pl. 30. Dyer 3. 116. Bro. Rep. 1 part. 187, 197, 208, 228. 2 part. 55. 148, 149; 323.

Secondly, If the Lord of the Soyl make new Coney-Burrows, and his Coneys grow to so many, that they hinder the Commoner of his Common, the Commoner cannot stop the Burroughs, Ferret-Chafe, or kill the Coneys, nor distrain them, no more then his Piggs, or the like; but he must have his Action of the Case against the Lord, Bro. 1 part. 208, 228. Mich. 9 Jac. Sawburns case. Mich. 7 Jac. B.R. Mich. 3 Jac. Sir Christopher Hudsons case.

7. If one Grant me Common in his Ground, and he set up a Rick there, and my Cattle come to his Rick, and he chase my Cattle away; I may have an Action of Trespass against him for this. *Farmers case, Hil. 8 Jac. 9. Where a Common may be extinguished and gone for ever, or suspended for a time. And where it shall be apportioned, or not.

Apportionment. Sett. 3. 4. 5.

The Lord and Commoners together, may do what they will with the Soyl and Common. And the Lord himself, without his Tenant, and against his minde, may in some cases, to preserve Woods, or make a Pasture, inclose a part of the Common, leaving sufficient for the Commoners; and this is called an Approvement or Improvement. And he may make a Warren, and keep Conies there, if he do not keep so many to deprive the Tenants of their Common. But for this, see more in my Second Part of the Marrow of the Law, p. 306, 307, 308.

For the Answer to this Question, we are to know these things.

1. That where one comes to as high, as good, and as durable estate in the Land, as he hath in the Common; there generally the Common is extinct: As if the Commoner purchase the Land wherein he hath Common, or it descend to him, and being extinct, it can never be after revived. Co. 4. 38. D. & St. 25. Dyer 45. Plow. 72. Goldsb. 3. pl. 6.

2. If one that hath Common out of Land in Fee, and he get an estate for life or years onely; by this the Common is onely suspended, and may be revived again when that estate is ended. Co. super Littl. 310.

3. If one have Common Appendant, and purchase some of the Land out of which it comes in Fee; this is not gone, but shall continue, and be apportioned. But otherwise it is of Common Appurtenant. Brownl. 2. Rep. p. 287. Co. 8. 79. 4. 38.

4. If a Commoner, Alien or Demise part of his Land, to which the Common doth belong; this doth not extinguish the Common, be it Common Appendant or Appurtenant: But it doth still continue, and shall be apportioned. Co. 8. 79. Bro. Rep. 2 part. 297.

5. If one have Common Appendant in a great Waste, belonging to his Tenement, and the Lord improve and inclose part of it, leaving sufficient, and after make a Feoffment of this to the Commoner; this doth not destroy his Common in the rest of the Waste, Dyer 339.

6. If a Copiholder claim Common by custom in a great Waste, and the Lord grant part of this Waste to another, and then make a new estate of this Copihold; this Common in the Waste granted away, is not gone, but the Copiholder will have Common there also. Co. 8. 64.

Sett. 7.

7. If he out of whose Land the Common is had, doth purchase part of the Land, to which the Common is Appendant; yet the Commoner hath not lost his Common, but shall have pro rata for the Residue. Co. 4. 37, 38.

8. If one have Common in Certain, (i.) for ten Beasts in twenty Acres of Land, and ten Acres of this Land doth descend to the Commoner; by this the Common is not gone, but shall be apportioned. But if the Common were Common Incertain, and without number, there shall be no Apportionment, but it shall be as it was before. Co. super Littl. 149.

9. If there be Common Appurtenant to Copihold Land, and part of it be sold away, away, and divided from the rest, it seems by this the Common is gone; otherwise of Common Appendant. Brown. 1 part. 171.

10. A Copiholder is of a Messuage, and two Acres of Land in Fee, and the Lord by Deed doth grant and confirm the Messuage and Lands, with the Appurtenances to the Copiholder in Fee, and so destroy the Copihold; by this the Common is gone, and the Grant of the Land, with the Appurtenances, will not create it de novo. Grant of Common.

Brown. 1 part. p. 220.

So if a Copiholder be to have Common in the Land of another, besides the Lord, and the Lord make him a Feoffment of his Copihold. But perhaps if in these Grants there be a Grant of all Commons belonging to it, or used with it, it may be continued. Brown. 1 part. 173. 2 part. 209, 210. See more in Suspension.

Admeasurement of Pasture, is a Writ lying where many have Common in the Ground of another man, and one of them doth surcharge the Common with more Beasts then he should keep, then any one of the Commoners, or all the rest of the Commoners together, may have this Writ against him that doth oppress the rest. Or one may sue him that doth surcharge, and all the rest of the Commoners; for all the Commoners must be Plaintiffs, or Defendants in the Suit, because all must be Admeasured. F. N. B. 123. 8 H. 6. 26. Old N. B. 72. And by this means it shall be enquired of, and hereupon an Order shall be set down, how they shall take their Common for after times. And if any one of them do break this Order, and overcharge again, the party grieved may bring another Writ called a Secunda super- Seft. 8.
operatione. And thereby he shall recover damages, and the party that doth surcharge, 10 Admeasure-shall lose the value of the Beasts, wherewith he doth surcharge more then his pro- ment of Pasture.
portion, as forfeit to the King. Westm. 2. 8. What.

This Writ of Admeasurement lieth onely for, and against such as have Common Appendant, or Common by reason of Neighborhood. And it will lie also against him that hath Common Appurtenant, or ingross to a certain number. But it lieth not amongst them that have Common Appurtenant, or ingross without number. Nor will it lie against the Lord of the Waste, by a Commoner that is his own Tenant. For in this case, if the Lord surcharge or improve more then he ought, the Tenant may have an Affize against him. And if the Tenant surcharge, the Lord may distress him Damage-Felant: Or either of them (as it seems) may have his Action of the Case against the other. F. N. B. 125. Old N. B. 73. 22 Aff. pl. 65.

Quod permittat is a Writ lying where a man is disseised of his Common of Pasture, and the Disseisor alieneth, or dieth seized, and his Heir entreth, and then the Disseisee die; then his Heir may have this Writ. Terms Ley. 159. Damage-Felant.

Quo jure is a Writ lying for him that hath Land, wherein another doth challenge Common time out of minde; and this is to compel him to shew by what Title he doth challenge this Common. F. N. B. 128. Quo Jure.

CHAP. XLIX.

Of Common Law, Common-Weal, Concealment, and Confirmation.Common Law.
What.

He Common Law is taken divers ways, sometimes it is taken for the ancient Laws and Customs of the Realm, before any Statutes were made; and so it was nothing else but the common usage and custom of the Country, grounded upon the Law of God, and common Reason; and in this sense it is distinguished from the Statute Law. And sometimes it is taken for the whole Common Law and Statute Law together. And so it is distinguished from the Civil Law, the Spiritual Law, and certain private Customs, or Customary Laws: And sometimes it is taken for the Courts at Westminster, and so it is distinguished from the lower and bale Courts in the Country. Terms Ley. Co. 9. 15. Dyer 54.

For the Original Antiquity, Equity, and Excellency of the Common Law: See Homs Annals 94. Fortescue in Laudem Legum Anglia. Co. 3. In the Epistle. Dugl. & Stud. l. 1.

Of Common-Weal.

Common-Weal.

BY Common-Weal is understood in our Law, Bonum Publicum, or Common Good; and this is a thing the Law doth much eye: And therefore it doth to rate many things to be done for Publick good, that otherwise might not be done. As in case of Fire, or Enemies, to prevent increase of mischief by them, men may pull down Houses, or do any other thing upon mens Houses or Lands, and justifie it when it is done. To apprehend Felons, or prevent Murders, and the like, men may break Houses or Doors: The Oxen of the Plough, Horfe that is under a man in travel, may not be distrained: And upon this score it is, that all Monopolies are void, all Obligations, and Covenants, to restrain Tillage, or free Trade, are void; the Law will suffer a little wrong to go unpunished, then suffer multiplicity of Actions, as knowing, Expedis Respublica ut sit finis litium. Plow. 10. 25. Co. 11. 50. Dyer 36. 14 H 8: 25.

Of Concealment and Concealers.

Concealment.

CONCEALED Land was that Land which was concealed from the King, and secretly detained in the hands of common persons that had nothing to shew for it. And Concealers were such as did finde out such Lands concealed, wherein the main Rule is this, That Land shall never be said to be concealed, or unjustly detained from the King, where there is any Record extant, to inform him of his Title, or where he is, or may be acquainted with his Title by any reasonable intendment; but for this, see Co. 10. Sir Arthur Legates case. Co. 4: 113. 43 Eliz. 1.

By the Statute of 22 Jac. The King is to be barred where there is sixty years possession against him. See for this Co. 3 part. of Inst. cap. 87.

Of Confirmation:

1. Confirmation:
What.

A Confirmation is the Conveyance of an Estate or Right that one hath into Lands or Tenements to another that hath the possession thereof, or some estate therein, whereby avoidable estate is made sure, and unavoidable, or whereby a particular estate is increased and enlarged: And this albeit it may be made by other words, as by Dedi or Concessi, which are generall words, and serve to make a Grant, Feoffment, Lease, Release &c. yet it is most commonly and properly made by these words Confirmasse, Ratificasse, & Approbasse, which do signifie Ratum & firmum facere & supplere omnem defectum. And he that makes the Confirmation is sometimes called the Confirmor, and he to whom it is made the Confirmed.

Terms Ley. Co. super Lit. 295.

Confirmor Confirmee.

There are two kinds of Confirmations, viz. a Confirmation implied, or in Law, which is when the Law by Construction makes a Confirmation of a Deed made to another purpose, and a Confirmation express or in Deed, which is when the Act Done or Deed made is intended for a Confirmation. And both these are always in writing. The latter is properly called a Deed or Instrument of Confirmation, and is made after this manner, Noveritis universi &c. me A de B ratificasse, approbasse & confirmasse C de D statum & possessionem quos habeo de & in anno Mlesnagio &c. cum pertinen. in F &c. A Confirmation is also distinguished by his effects, for sometimes it doth tend and serve to confirm and make good a wrongfull and defeasible estate, or to make a Conditionall estate absolute. And then it is said to be confirmatio perficiens. And sometimes it doth Tend and Serve to increase and enlarge a rightfull estate, and so to passe an interest. And then it is called confirmatio crescens. And sometimes it doth tend and serve to diminish and abridge the services whereby the Tenant doth hold. And then it is called confirmatio diminuens. Co. super Lit. 295. Plow. 140. Lit. Sect. 515. Co. 9. 142.

2 The Kinds:

The nature and work of this where it doth find a foundation to work upon is, either to increase and enlarge the estate of him to whom it is made from a lesser to a greater, and to give him some new interest he had not before, or to Corroborate and perfect the estate that was imperfect before, or to change the quality of it from an estate upon Condition to an absolute estate or otherwise, for this a Confirmation will doe. In some Cases also it will extinguish Rights and Titles of Entry. But it will not make an estate good that is merely void; nor add, nor take from an estate a descendible quality, and make a man capable of it that is incapable in himself, or à contra. In some cases also it will lessen and diminish rents or services. But it cannot ne will change the nature of the service into some other kind of service, nor increase it into a greater service. Co. 146. 147. Dier. 109. 7. H. 6. 7. Lit. Sect. 539. Co. 9. 142.

3. The nature and operation of it in general.

If a Bishop, Dean, Archdeacon, Prebend, or the like, make any lease of the Land they have in the right of their Bishoprick, Deanery, Archdeanery, or Prebendship not warranted by the Statute of 32 H. 8. and within the other Statutes, it seems this lease must be confirmed by the Dean and Chapter by their common seal, and if there be two Chapters, it must be confirmed by them both, or otherwise it is not good. But if the lease be such a lease as is warranted by the Statutes, the Bishop may make it without the confirmation of the King, the Patron, and Founder of Bishopricks, or the Dean and Chapter. And so also it seems of the rest. And a Corporation aggregate as Dean and Chapter, Master and Fellows, and the like, may grant without any confirmation of the Founder, and this grant will be good. If a Bishop, &c. grant an ancient office belonging to his Bishoprick, albeit it be but for the life of the Grantee, yet it must be confirmed by the Dean and Chapter, otherwise it is not good. If a Parson or Vicar had made any lease for longer time than his own life, it must have been confirmed by the Patron and Ordinary. But at this day albeit it be confirmed by the Patron and Ordinary, yet the lease is good for no longer then during the Parsons ordinary residencie, except it be impropriated. Co. super Lit. 300. 301. Co. 10. 62. 5. 3. Dier. 145. 273. 349. 338. 339. 61. Co. 10. 62. Dier. 52. Stat. 13. El. ch. 20.

4 Where the Confirmation of some persons is needfull to perfect the grant of others Or not. And how it may be done.

If Tenant for life grant a Rent-charge to I. S. and his heirs; in this case he in reversion must Confirm it, otherwise the grant of the Rent will be good for no longer then the life of the Tenant for life. Co. 1. 147.

Where a man hath an interest in any Lands, Tenements, Rents, Commons, Felons-goods or the like, by grant of any of the Kings of the Realm, he need not have the Confirmation of any or of every succeeding King. Also it seems grants of Fairs, Markets, Warrens, and the like, made by one King, will be good in Law against his successors without any Confirmation. But all such as have any judiciall or Ministeriall Offices, Commissions and Authorities derived from the King, must have the Confirmation of every succeeding King, otherwise they may lose them. Co. 8. 167. Dier. 277. Dier. 327. Lit. Bro. 203. Kelm. 145. 188.

5 What Confirmations may be made. And what shall be said a good expresse or implied confirmation. Or not. And by what words it may be made.

1. To Confirm,
Or alter the quality of the estate of him to whom it is made;

In every good Confirmation tending to confirm an estate or alter the quality of it, these things must concur.

1. There must be a good Confirmor, and a good Confirmee, and a thing to be Confirmed as in other Grants, and the Deed must be well sealed, &c.

2. There must be a precedent Rightfull or Wrongfull estate in him to whom the Confirmation is made in his own or in anothers Right, or at least he must have the possession of the thing whereof the Confirmation is to be made that may be as a Foundation for the Confirmation to work upon. As if Feoffee on condition make a Feoffment over, and the Feoffer confirm his estate to him to whom the second Feoffment is made and his heirs; this is a good Confirmation to make his estate absolute. Co. 1. 146. 9. 142. 7. H. 6. 7. And if Lessee for life make a Feoffment in Fee, or Lease for years, and the first Lessor confirm this second estate; it seems this is a good Confirmation. Littleton section 5. 16. And if one Disseise me of Land, I may after Confirm the estate of the Disseisor, or of his heir if he be dead, or of his Feoffee if he have aliened it, and this will make his estate good for ever: And if the Disseisor make a Lease for Life, or years of it; I may Confirm the estate of the Lessee, and this will make it good for the time. Co. 9. 142. 6. 15. Perk. sect. 86. Lit. sect. 518. 521. 11. H. 7. 29. 28. And if one make a Lease for Life absolute, or a Feoffment in Fee, or Lease for Life on Condition, or be Disseised of Land, and the Lessee for Life, Feoffee, or Disseisor doth grant a Rent out of the Land in Fee, and the Lessor, Feoffer, or Disseisee doth Confirm the estate of the Grantee; this doth make good the Grant for ever. Co. 1. 144. Lit. sect. 527. 529. 11. H. 7. 28. Co. super Lit. 300. Lit. sect. 547. 11. H. 7. 28. And so also if the heir of a Disseisor that is in by Descent Grant a Rent-charge, and the Disseisee Confirmeth it; this is a good Confirmation. And if an Infant make a Lease for 20 years, and the Lessee doth make a Lease to another for all or part of the time, and the Infant at his full age doth confirm this second Lease; this is a good Confirmation, and doth perfect the Lease; for it is a Rule, That which I may defeat by my entry, I may Confirm by my deed. But if there be no precedent estate on which the confirmation may work, or the estate be such an estate as is meerly void, then is the Confirmation void, and cannot take effect as a Confirmation: as for example, If a man assign Dower to a woman that hath nothing to do with it, or a Court that hath not power doth make Leases by Commission, or an estate that was upon Condition is avoided by entry, or a Lessee surrender, or a Disseisee enter upon a Disseisor, and afterwards he that hath the Rightfull estate Confirm their estates so defeated and gone; these Confirmations are void. Debiles fundamentum fallit opus. Co. super Lit. 295. 301. Dier. 263. And a Confirmation to him that hath nothing in the Land is void. And hence it is that if one Confirm all his estate that he hath granted to another, when in truth he hath granted none at all; this is void. And so also it is if there be an estate and no possession: as if a Disseisor make a Lease for years to begin at Michaelmas, and before the day the Disseisee doth Confirm the estate of the Lessee for years; it is said, this is not a good Confirmation, sed quare. 4. H. 7. 10. Dier. 109.

Infant.

3. The Confirmor must have such an estate and property in the thing whereof the Confirmation is made, as he may be thereby enabled to Confirm the estate of the Confirmee, at the Lessors, Feoffers, and Disseisees in the cases before have, otherwise the Confirmation is void. 19. H. 6. 62. And therefore if the heir of the Disseisee during the Life of the Disseisee Confirm to the Disseisor; this is no good Confirmation to perfect his estate, albeit the Disseisee die, and the Right of the Land descend to his heir afterwards. Co. 9. 138. So if Lands be given to A. and B. his Wife and the heirs of their bodies issuing, the Remainder in Fee to A. and A. levy a fine with Proclamations and die, and she within five yeares doth enter and Claime, and after the Conusee doth Confirm the estate made by the first gift to the Wife, To have and to hold according to the same; this Confirmation is to no purpose. Co. 9. 138. So if Lessee for Life make a Lease for thirty yeares, and after he in Reversion and the Lessee for Life Lease for sixty yeares; in this case he cannot Confirm the Lease for thirty yeares, because he hath granted it before for sixty sixty yeares. Fitz Confirmation 15. Lit. Sect. 523. Dier 263. And hence it is also that the Confirmation by one Jointenant of the estate of his companion worketh nothing, for their estates are equall, and each hath interest in the whole Land. And yet if one Jointenant confirme the whole Land to his companion, To have and to hold the Land to him and his heires; this shall amount to a Grant, and so will be good to pass his moiety. Lit. sect. 543. Co. super Lit. 308. And hence it is also, that if a man grant a Rent-charge out of his Land to another for life, and then confirme his estate without any clause of distress (for by a clause of Distress a grant of a new Rent may be made) To have and to hold, to him in Fee-simple, or Fee-tail; that this is void, for the Confirmor hath no reversion of the Rent to him.

4. The precedent estate must continue untill the Confirmation come, as in all the cases of voidable estates made the confirmation must be before the estates be made void by entry, &c. or otherwise the confirmation will be void. And therefore if Lessee for life or yeares surrender, or the Disseisee enter upon the Disseisor, and after the Lessor or the Disseisee confirme the estate of the Lessee or Disseisor; this Confirmation comes too late. Co. 5. 15. Lit. sect. 60.

5. The estate precedent and that which is to be Confirmed, must be lawfull and not prohibited by any act of Parliament. And therefore if a spirituall person, as Prebend, or the like, make a Lease not warranted by the Statutes; the Confirmation of the Deane and Chapter will not help nor amend it. And if Tenant in tail make avoidable Lease, and after confirme it himself, this is voidable still. Lit. sect. 531. 532. 10. Ed. 4. 3. Co. super Lit. 295. Dier. 116. Co. 1. 147. 5. 15.

6. There must be apt words of Confirmation in the Deed or Instrument. And herein note that albeit the words Confirmavi, ratificasse & approbasse, be the most significant & proper words to make this conveyance, yet such as are made by other generall words may make a good Confirmation. And therefore it is agreed, that a Deed made by the words Dedi, Concessi, or Demisi, may make a good Confirmation; And therefore that if the Disseisee, Coparcener, or Lessor make a Deed of the Land by the word Dedi, or Concessi to the Disseisor or other Coparcener, or Lessee for life, and deliver the Deed; this is a good Confirmation without Livery of Seisin. Also if a Feoffment be made to A, to the use of B and his heires upon condition, and before the Condition broken, the Feoffor and B doe joine in the grant of a Rent-charge, and after the Condition is broken; in this case the Law doth interpret this a good Grant from B and a good Confirmation of the Feoffor without any words of Confirmation. So if Tenant for life doe grant a Rent to him in reversion, and he by Deed doth grant it to another and his heires in Fee; in this case the Law doth continue this a good Grant and a Confirmation also. Lit. sect. 519. Co. super Lit. 296. And in these cases of Confirmations of estates, if it be by the Disseisee to the Disseisor, it is good without any words of heires, as if the Disseisee confirme the estate of the Disseisor, or confirme the Land unto him, and say not, To him and his heires; this is an effectuall Confirmation to him and his heires for ever. And if a Lessee for life or a Disseisor make a Lease for life, or yeares, &c. and he in the Reversion, or the Disseisee confirme their estates and not the Land, and without any Habendum or limitation of estate; this is good for so long as the estates do continue. Co. 1. 147. But it is most safe alwayes to expresse the estate, i. to say, To have and to hold the Land to him and his heires, or for life, &c. as the agreement is. If Lessee for life grant a Rent to one and his heires out of the Land, and the Lessor doth confirme the estate, or this Rent-charge this doth make the estate of Rent sure. And so also if he doe confirme the Rent, and say, To have and to hold to him and his heires; this is a good Confirmation. But if he confirm the Rent, To have and to hold to him in fee, without naming his heires, hereby his estate is not bettered. Lit. sect. 531. 532. 10. Ed. 4. 3. Co. super Lit. 295. Dier 116. Co. 1. 147. 5. 15.

If the Lessor confirme the estate of his Lessee for life with this clause, To hold without impeachment of waste, this is a good Confirmation to change the quality of the estate so far as to make it unpunishable of Waste. So if the Lord Paramount confirm the estate of the Mesn with clause of Acquital. And so if Lessee for yeares or for anothers life be without impeachment of waft, and the Lessor confirme to him for his own life, and omit that clause; hereby this privilege is gone and the estate is become punishable for the waft. Co. 9. 139. F. N. B. 136. Co. 8. 76. Dier. 10.

This kind of Confirmation Crescens must have all the qualities of the former: and there must be also in this case a privity between the Confirmor and the Confirmer. Co. 9. 142. super Lit. 305. Dier. 145. 296. Co. 6. 15. Lit. Sect. 533. 532. 523. Dier. 263. And then it may enlarge the estate of him to whom it is made, as from an estate at will to an estate for yeares, or to a greater estate; from an estate for yeares to an estate for life, or to a greater estate; from an estate for life to an estate in Taile, or in Fee; and from an estate Taile to an estate in Fee; and these Confirmations are good. But in all these kind of Confirmations care must be had of the manner of penning them, and that in every such Deed there be a limitation of the estate. That these words be inserted, To have and to hold the Tenements, &c. to him and his heires, or to him and the heires of his body, or to him for terme of life, or yeares, as the agreement is; for if Lessee for life make a Lease for yeeres, and then Lessee for life, and he in Reversion confirm the land, To have and to hold to him for life, or to him and his heires; these words will make the estate to increase. But if the Confirmation be made to the Lessee for life or for yeares of his Terme or estate, and not of the Land; As when he doth confirm his estate, To have and to hold his Estate to him and his heires, this doth not increase the estate. And yet if he confirme the Land, To have and to hold the Land to him and his heires; this will increase the estate. Et sic de similibus. Littleton sect. 524. 545. Plow. 540.

If the husband have an estate of Land for life or yeares in the right of his wife, or to them both for life, and a Confirmation to him alone, of his estate or of the Land, To have and to hold the Land to him and his heires; this is a good conveyance of the Fee simple to him after the death of his wife. And if I let Land to a woman Sole for the Terme of her life, who taketh a husband, and after I doe confirme the estate of the husband and wife To have and to hold for Terme of their two lives; this is good, but it shall enure onely to enlarge his estate for Terme of his life if he survive his wife. But if one lease to another for life, and after confirm the estate of the Lessee to him and his wife for Terme of their two lives; this is void as to the wife. Co. super Lit. 299. Plow. 160. Lit. sect. 535. Fitz. Confirmation 7. 17.

If one Grant a Rent-charge out of his Land for life, and after the Grantor confirme the estate of the Grantee in the Rent without any clause of distresse To have and to hold to him in Fee simple or Fee taile; this Confirmation is not effectually to enlarge the estate. But if a man be seised of an old Rent-charge or Rent-service, and grant the same first for life, and after confirme the estate of the Grantee in Fee simple, or Fee taile; this is good and will enlarge the estate accordingly. Lit. sect. 548. 549.

If Tenant for life grant a Rent out of the Land to one and his heirs during the life of the Lessee for life, and after the lessor confirme the Rent to the Grantee and his heires; it seemes the estate is not hereby enlarged, but when the Tenant for life doth die, the Rent shall cease. Co. 1. 147.

This kind of Confirmation may be made by the same words as the former, viz. by the words, Give, Grant, or Demise. But neither of these may be made by the words, Surrender, Release, Exchange or the like, for these are peculiar words destined to a speciall end being proper and peculiar manner of conveyances. And yet if I that am a Lessor do say to my Lessee for yeeres by my deed, I will that you shall hold the land for your life; this is a good Confirmation to increase the estate by this word volo onely. So if I grant to my Lessee for yeares, that he shall hold the Land for Terme of his life; this without any other words is a good Confirmation. Co. super Lit. 301 Fitz. Confirmation 23.

By a Confirmation the Lord may confirme the estate of his Tenant which holdeth by Knights service to hold in Socage, or to hold for a lesse Rent, or to hold at common law where before he did hold in ancient demesne, and such a Confirmation is good. But such a confirmation as is to hold by new services, as a rose for money or the like, is not good for that purpose. And in this case there must be also a privity; and therefore if there be Lord, Meisn and Tenant, and the Lord confirm the estate of the Tenant, to hold by less services; this is void. And if the Lord confirm to his Tenant after he is disseised before his Entry, to hold by less services; this is void. Co. 9. 194. Littl. Sess. 538.

A Confirmation may be by apt words in case of a Lease for years for part of the time, but in case of a Freehold it cannot be so. And so also it may extend to part of the thing before in estate; and therefore if a Disseisor, Tenant in Tail, Husband of the Land, he hath in the right of his Wife, or Lessee for life make a Lease for years, and the Disseisee, Issue in Tail, Wife, or Lessor make a Confirmation of all the Land, for part of the time, or of part of the Land for all the time; this Confirmation is good. But if any such person make a Lease for life, Gift in Tail, &c. the Disseisee cannot confirm part of the estate, but he must confirm all; and therefore if he confirm his estate for one hour, it is a Confirmation of the whole estate. And so also if he confirm the Land to the Disseisor himself but one hour, one week, one year, or for his life, &c. this is a good Confirmation of the estate for ever. And if it be a Lease for years that is confirmed, care must be had to the manner of the Confirmation; for if the Confirmation be of the estate or the term for one hour; this is a good Confirmation for the whole time: And therefore the Confirmation must be had of the Land, To have and to hold for part of the term; and being so made, it may be good for that time onely, and no longer. Co. 5. 81, 82. Littl. Sess. 519. Co. super Littl. 197. Littl. Sess. 520.

If I make a Feoffment on Condition, and before the Condition broken, I confirm the estate of the Feoffee absolutely; this will not extinguish the Condition. And yet if the Condition be broken first, so as my Entry is lawful; in this case the Confirmation will extinguish the Condition. And if the Feoffee make a Feoffment over absolutely to another, and I confirm the estate of the second Feoffee, whether it be before or after the Condition broken; by this, the Condition is discharged. 11 H. 7. 29. Co. 1. 146. 9. 142.

If the Lord confirm the estate of his Tenant in the Tenements, or one that hath a Rent, Common, or profit out of Land, confirm to the Terretenant his estate; in these cases notwithstanding this Confirmation, the Signiory, Rent, Common, &c. do continue, and this shall not enure to extinguish it. Littl. Sess. 535, 536, 537.

If the Disseisee and a stranger disseise, the Heir of the Disseisor, and the Disseisee confirm the estate of his Companion; this shall not enure to extinguish the suspended right of the Disseisee, but when the Heir of the Disseisor shall re-enter it shall be revived: And if the Grantee of a Rent-charge and a stranger disseise the Tenant of the Land, and the Grantee confirm the estate of his Companion; this shall not enure to the Rent, suspended to extinguish it, but after the re-entry of the Tenant, the Rent shall be revived. Co. super Littl. 298.

If a man hold his Land of me by Knights service, Rent, suit of Court, &c. and I confirm his estate to hold of me by Knights service onely, for all manner of services and demands; in this case albeit this do abridge the service, yet it shall not be construed to take away Wardship, Relief, Aid, to marry my Daughter, and make my Son Knight, and the like. Co. super Littl. 305.

If I have an estate in Land for my life, and he in the Reversion doth confirm the estate to me, and my Wife, for the term of our lives; this shall enure onely as a Confirmation of my estate, and not so as to give any estate to my Wife: But if I have a Lease for life or years in right of my Wife, and he in the Reversion do confirm the estate to me and my Wife, To have and to hold to us for our lives; this shall enure not onely to confirm the estate, but also to create an estate to me after my Wives death: And in the case of a Lease for years, it maketh our estate joyns, but in the case of a Lease for life, I shall take by way of enlargement of estate for my life after my Wives death: And if in this case the Confirmation be to me and my Wife, To have and to hold the Land to us two, and our Heirs; this shall enure to us in Fee-simple as Jointenants. See before.

If Land be let to Husband and Wife, To have and to hold the one moyety to the Husband

6 Where a Confirmation may be good for part of the Estate, or for part of the thing, or not.

7. The force and vertue of it; and how it shall enure and be construed and taken.

Husband for his life, and the other moyety to the Wife for her life, and the Lessor confirm to them both their Estate in the Land, To have and to hold, to them and their Heirs; in this case, as to the one moyety it doth enure onely to the Husband, and his Heirs, but as to the other moyety they shall be Jointenants. And yet if such a Lease for life be made to two men by several moyeties, and the Lessor confirm their Estates in the Land, To have and to hold to them and their Heirs; by this they are Tenants in Common of the Inheritance. Co. super Littl. 399.

If the Disseisee confirm the Estate of the Disseisor, To have and to hold to him, and his Heirs of his Body engendred, or, To have and to hold to him for term of his life; this shall enure to him as a Fee-simple, and shall confirm his estate for ever. Littl. Sel. 419.

If my Disseisor make a Lease for life the Remainder over in Fee, and I confirm the Estate of the Tenant for life; this shall not enure to, nor avail him in Remainder. And if the Disseisor make a Gift in Tail, the Remainder to the right Heirs of the Tenant in Tail, and the Disseisee confirm the estate of the Tenant in Tail; this shall not extend to the Fee-simple, no more then if the Disseisor make a Gift in Tail the Remainder for life, the Remainder to the right Heirs of the Tenant in Tail, and the Disseisee confirm the estate of the Tenant in Tail; for this shall extend onely to the estate Tail, and not to the Remainder for life, or in Fee. But if the Disseisee in the first case confirm the estate of him in the Remainder; this shall enure to and avail the Tenant for life. And so if a Disseisor make a Lease for life, and keep the Reversion, and after the Disseisee doth confirm to the Disseisor; this shall enure to the Tenant for life. And so if a Disseisor make a Lease for life to A. and B. and the Disseisee confirm the estate of A.; this shall enure to B. and make his estate good also in the other moyety. And so if there be two Disseisors, and the Disseisee confirm the estate of one of them, without saying more; this shall enure to them both. But if the Confirmation be of the Land, To have and to hold the Land to one; in this case it may enure to him alone. So if a Disseisor enfeoff A. and B. and the Heirs of B. and the Disseisee confirm the estate of B. albeit it be but for his life; yet this shall enure to both, and to the whole Fee-simple. Co. super Littl. 298.

If a Lease be made for life to A. the Remainder to B. for life, and the Lessor confirm their estates in the Land, To have and to hold to them and their Heirs; this shall enure as to the one moyety to A. in Fee, after the death of B. and as to the other moyety in Fee to B. after the death of A. Co. super Littl. 299.

If Lands be given to two men, and the Heirs of their two Bodies begotten, and the Donor doth confirm their estates in the Land, To have and to hold the Land to them two, and their Heirs; it seems this shall enure to them as a joynt estate for their lives, and after for several Inheritances, Co. Idem.

If the Lessee for life, or the Disseisor doth make an absolute Lease for years, and he in the Reversion or the Disseisee doth confirm the estate of the Lessee for years; this makes the Lease good for all the time. So if the Disseisor makes a Lease for life, and the Disseisee doth confirm the estate of the Lessee for life; this makes the estate good for the life. And if he in Reversion confirm the estate of the Termor but one hour; this doth make it good for all the term. And if an estate for life, or in Fee, be confirmed but for one hour; it is a good Confirmation for all the estate. And if the Disseisee confirm the estate of the Disseisor, To have and to hold for one hour, year, or for life, or in tail; this is a good Confirmation for ever, and makes his estate unavoidable. And yet if the Disseisee confirm the Land Habendum the Land for life, or in tail, &c. Contrà. Littl. Sel. 516, 521. 519, 520, 541. Co. 5. 79.

If a voidable Lease be made for forty years, and the Lessor confirm the term for twenty years; this is a good Confirmation of the whole term. But if he confirm the Land for twenty years, it may be good for that time onely and no longer; where-in as in divers other cases before observe, that the very words whereby the Confirmation is made are much to be heeded, for Parols font Plea. Dyer 52: 339. Co. 5. 81.

Note.

If Tenant in Tail, or for life of Land, letteth it for years, and after confirm the Land to the Lessee for years, To have and to hold to the Lessee, and his Heirs for ever; by this the Lessee hath onely an estate for term of the life of the Tenant in Tail, or for life, and therein his Lease for years is extinct. Littl. Sect. 606, 607, 610.

If Tenant for life doth grant a Rent to another, and his Heirs, during the life of the Tenant for life, and the Lessor confirm to the Grantee, and his Heirs; this shall be construed to be an estate for life onely, and no enlargement of the estate. But if Tenant for life, Grant a Rent-charge in Fee, and the Lessor confirm it; this shall be construed to be a Confirmation of the Fee-simple. Co. 1. 147. super Littl. 301.

CHAP. L.

Of Consanguinity, Affinity, Consideration, Conspiracy, and Condition.

Consanguinity is a kindred or joyning of persons by Birth or Blood, and Affinity is a kindred or joyning of persons by Marriage. Consanguinity, Affinity.

For the Exposition of these words, and how they shall be taken in Exposition of Devises, and in Disceits; to whom Land shall descend, and in Heir who shall be Heir to another. Next of Blood;

Of Consideration.

Consideration is described to be a cause or an occasion meritorious, requiring a mutual recompence in Deed or in Law, or the material cause of a Contract, without which, no Contract is so to be binding in Law. And this is either valuable, as Money, Land, or Goods; or not valuable, as Natural love and affection, advancement of Blood, and the like; and both these are sometimes Expressed, and sometimes Implied. Expressed when the thing is agreed upon, and set down between the parties, and where one for Twenty pound doth bargain and sell his Land, or where one doth sell his Land for other Land in exchange, or where one doth give twenty shillings for a Horse, or where one for twenty pound doth promise to do a thing: Or else it is implied, as where one doth come to an Inn, and call for provision for himself or his Horse; in this case there is an Implied contract, and the Inn-keeper may either sue him for it, or keep his Horse, but not his person, till he pay as well, as if he had made an Express agreement with him. So if one without expressing any consideration, covenant to stand seized to the use of his Wife, Child, Brother, or Cousin; in these cases, by the naming of them to be of their Kin, there is an Implied consideration, and thereupon the use will rise, which without some valuable or invaluable consideration will not rise by Covenant. But for these things see Co. 3. 80 Dyer 366. and Contracts, Bargain and Sale, and Uses; in my Books of the Marrow of the Law, and of Common Assurances. Consideration. What. The kinds of it.

Of Conspiracy or Confederacy.

This word is always in our Law, taken in ill part: And largely it doth signifie any Agreement, Combination, or Confederacy between two or more to do some unlawful act: As where they do agree or binde themselves by Oath, Covenant, or other Alliance, that every of them, shall bear, and aid the other, falsly and maliciously to indite, or falsly to move or maintain Pleas, and also such as cause children within within age, to appeal men of Felony, whereby they are imprisoned and sore grieved; and such as retain men in the Countreys with Liveries or Fees, to maintain their malicious enterprises; and this extendeth as well to the takers, as to the givers: Also Stewards and Bailiffs of great Lords, who by their Seigniorie, Office, or Power undertake to bear or maintain Quarrels, Pleas, or Debates, that concern other parties, then such as touch the Estate of their Lords, or of themselves; but in this sense it is confounded with maintenance, and champerty. See Maintenance for this. 34 Ed. 1. 2. 4 Ed. 3. 11. 3 H. 7. 13. 1 H. 5. 3. 18 H. 6. 12.

And sometimes, and most commonly, and so in this place, it is taken more strictly, that is, where two or more persons, do purposely and maliciously conspire and labor together, to indite another falsely and unjustly, without any ground at all; for some Treason, Felony, or other offence; and after, he which is so indicted, is upon that indictment after a lawful tryal, purged and acquitted. Poulton de Pace 231. 28 Aff. pl. 12.

Judgment in it.

Frank-law.

In this case, and for this wrong, the party grieved may have the offenders indicted, and so punished at the Suit of the Lord Protector. And therein if the partie be found guilty, their Judgement is, That they shall lose their Frank or Free Law. (i.) That they shall not afterwards be put into Juries, or Assizes, nor be otherwise produced as witnesses to testify truth. And if they have anything to do in the Lord Protector's Court, they must do it by Attorney, and shall not come themselves within twelve miles of the Court, that their Lands, Goods, and Carcles, shall be seised into the Lord Protector's hands, their Houses wasted, their Trees eradicated, and their Bodies taken and imprisoned; and this is called a Villanous Judgement. Or the party grieved, might have preferred his Bill into the Star-Chamber, and have punished them there; or he may have his Writ of Conspiracy at the Common Law, which is a special Action of the Case; and therein the Judgement shall be, that the Plaintiff shall recover his damages, and the Defendant shall be taken. 27 Aff. pl. 39. 23 Ed. 3. 34. 46 Aff. pl. 11. 24 Ed. 3. 34. F. N. B. 114, 115. Co. 9. 56.

There are divers Confederacies, and Conspiracies, to other purposes, whereby men are wronged, and for those there is relief given by other means. F. N. B. 116.

Sec. 2.
2. In what case this Writ of Conspiracy, or general Action of the Case for Conspiracy lieth, or not.

In all cases where this Writ may be had, or this Action doth lie; there must be these Incidents in the case.

1. There must be two persons or more in the plot and practise; for a Writ of Conspiracy is not maintainable against one, unless the charge be, that he smul caus others did conspire with him. And hence it is, that it will not lie against a man and his wife alone, unless some others be made Defendants with them; for they two are but one person in Law. And hence it is also, that although the Suit be begun against divers, yet if all of them, but one, be discharged to all intents, as if all of them, but one, be acquitted by a Verdict, or by matter in Law, as if they plead they were Indictors, or any such like matter in Bar, hereby that one is discharged also; and if the Writ be brought against two, and they plead not guilty, and one is found guilty, and the other not, hereby he is discharged also, and the Plaintiff cannot recover. But if the Writ be brought against two, and one of them is attainted, and the other doth Bar the Plaintiff by a Demurrer in Law, or one doth appeal, and plead, and his Plea is found against him; in this case the other is not discharged, but the Plaintiff shall recover, though the other be not attainted (and yet perhaps in this case, the one may refuse to answer without the other.) So albeit one of the Conspirators be dead, yet the Suit may be had against the other alone; and in all cases, where the practise is such by one person, that if there were more joyned with him, a Writ of Conspiracy would lie, there a general Action of the Case will lie. F. N. B. 116. 114. 18 Ed. 4. 1. Broo. Conspiracy 11. 24 Ed. 3. 34. 40 Ed. 3. 19. 38 Ed. 3. 3. 22 Aff. pl. 71. 28 Aff. pl. 12. 11 H. 4. 62. 28 H. 6. 35. 24 Ed. 3. 34. 35 H. 6. 14.

2. The party that would have this Action, must be indicted, arraigned, and acquitted, and therefore a man cannot have this Action, nor a general Action upon his case, for a plot or preparation, onely to such an act without an Execution; for in this case the Rule doth hold Non officit conatus nisi sequatur effectus. And yet notwithstanding such a Confederacy in preparation onely, as where two or more, knit, unite, and binde themselves to maintain each other in their matters, right or wrong, or to do any unlawful act (which implies no more but a false Accusation) albeit the party be never indicted and acquitted; this is punishable by Indictment at the Assizes, or might have been by Bill in the Star Chamber. Therefore Justices of Assize and Nisi prius, are to inquire of Conspirators in their Circuits, and punish them. But then such Confederacies as are so punishable by the Law, before they be executed, must have in them always these four Incidents.

First, They must be overtly declared by some manner of prosecution, as giving of Bonds, or the like.

Secondly, They must be malicious as for some unjust revenge, &c.

Thirdly, They must be false against an Innocent.

Fourthly, They must be voluntarily out of Court, and not by restraint. If the parties proceed further therefore, as to cause the accused person to be apprehended, brought before Justices, examined, bound to appear, sent to Gaol, indicted, or if they give Evidences, retain Counsel, or the like, against the prisoner, although the Jury finde an Ignoramus upon the Indictment; this is much more punishable by Indictment or Bill, for Quando aliquid prohibetur & id per quod pervenitur ad illud. But if all this be done and no more, in that the party be not arraigned and tried by the Petty-Jury, and thereupon acquit, it seems he cannot have this Action, for the Writ is Et legitimo modo acquiescit. And yet Quare, for I have heard say, that it hath been adjudged on the contrary. See for this 19 R. 2. Co. 9. 50. F.N.B. 114: 6 Ed. 4. 1. 24 Ed. 3. 34. 27 Ass. pl. 59. 19 H. 6. 28. 21 H. 6. 26. 9 Ed. 4. 12. 27 Ass. pl. 44. Articuli super Chartas, c. 10. 4 Ed. 3. 11. Co. 9. 56, 57.

3. The proceeding and prosecution must be voluntary, and therefore neither this Action, nor the general Action of the Case, will lie against him or them that shall prosecute any man after this manner, by constraint or compulsion; as when they are thereunto obliged by their Oaths, Duties, or Offices. Hence it is, that if a Justice of Peace doth any thing in open Sessions, to discover or punish offenders, or Jurors sworn upon an Enquest, to enquire of Felonies, do indict a man for Felony, or make known the Felony to their fellows, or move or set forward an Indictment against him whiles they stand sworn, albeit some of them did conspire before they were sworn, or they be after discharged before their verdict given; or one come into a Court to discover a Felony voluntarily, or one is sworn and doth give Evidence to the Enquest, unless he did before conspire, falsely to give this Evidence, that no Action will lie for any of these things, for all these things are justifiable and not punishable in any Court. Therefore it seems to be a good Plea to this Action, for the Defendant to say he came to the Sessions of the Peace, and informed a Justice of Peace, of the matter against the party, and that at the Justices requiring, he did put the Information in writing, for this any man may justify, for therefore is Proclamation made, that any man shall inform the Court that will, that such as will may do it. 27 Ass. pl. 12. 12 Ed. 4. 18. 21 Ed. 4. 67. 47 Ed. 3. 17. 21 Ed. 1. 17. 17 H. 4. 31. 27 Ass. pl. 12. 36 Ass. pl. 21.

4. The proceeding and prosecution must be malicious, and therefore if one man do prosecute another, upon good ground, as when a Felony is done, and there is some cause of suspicion of that person, either by the common fame, or otherwise; or when a man is robbed, and the next Village upon Hue and Cry make pursuit, and take a man they suspect, and the party robbed doth indict him, and he is acquitted; or a Coroner after a murder, sitting super visum corporis, cannot finde out the murderer, and then enquiring of the first finders of the body, they say that J. S. killed him, and after J. S. is indicted and acquitted. These are no faults at all, neither are any of these punishable at all in any Court. Broo. Conspiracy.

5. The charge and accusation must be false, so the Writ must run, That the Defendants conspired to indict the Plaintiff falsely and maliciously without any ground or cause. And hence it is, that if there be a conspiracy to indict a man for murder, and upon his arraignment it is found he killed the man; but it was lawful, or per infortunium, or se defendendo; no action will lie for this. Broo. Conspiracy. 21 Ass. pl. 77. Fitz. Consf. 21, 24. Stamf 3. 12.

6. The

6. The party indicted must be legitimo modo acquietatus, he must be acquitted after an indictment found upon his tryal by the other Jury, or he must be non-suite, if he bring an Appeal in the suit. And hence it is, that if any conspire to indict another man, and he is acquitted by the Kings general Pardon, or he is acquitted by the Kings particular Pardon (unless he wave that, and after plead not guilty, and then be acquitted) or he is discharged by the insufficiency of the Indictment; or there be a general Pardon, and the party doth not take advantage of it, but doth plead, and is acquitted. In all these cases, the parties that do prosecute, cannot be punished, neither can the party grieved, have any Remedy; for in the cases of the general Pardon, the Judges ought to have allowed it, and dismissed the party without pleading of it. And hence it is also, that it hath been always held, that if the party be indicted for an offence. And hence it is also, that it hath been always held, that if the party be indicted for an offence by a conspiracy, and the Jury upon Bill finde an Ignoramus, no Action lieth for this.

2. This Writ lieth as well where the Defendant is acquitted, or the Plaintiff is non-suit upon an Appeal. As where the Plaintiff was acquitted upon an Indictment: But if the Appeal be founded on an Indictment, and the Defendant be acquitted, or the Appellant be non-suit upon the Appeal, after Declaration, and the Defendant be arraigned and acquitted at the Kings suit, or the Plaintiff be non-suit upon the Appeal contra, (and yet see F. N. B. 114. contrary to this) Dyer 85. 33 H. 6. 1. 40 Ed. 3. 42. Stamf. 5. 12.

3. If a Conspiracy be to indict one as Principal, and another as Accessory, and after he is non-suit in his Appeal, or the Principal is acquitted (which is an acquittal of the Accessory) yet the Accessory may have this Action, as well as the Principal. But if the Principal had been out-lawed, had got his pardon, or had died before tryal. Contra. F. N. B. 115. Bro. Conspiracy 2. 34 H. 6. 9. 33 H. 6. 2.

4. If the Indictment and acquittal be before a Major, or a Bailiff, or any other that have power to deliver Goals, the party grieved may have this Writ. F. N. B. 115.

5. If the Conspiracy be to indict a man for Trespass, or any other offence, besides Treason or Felony, the party grieved may have this Action against the Conspirators. F. N. B. 116. Broo Conspiracy 25. 3 Aff. pl. 13.

6. If the Conspiracy be to indict a man for any offence against any Statute Law, the party grieved may have this Action, as well as when it is for an offence against the Common Law. New Book Entries 126.

7. If any person shall be indicted or appealed of Felonie, Treason, or Trespass in a Forreign Countie, Liberties, or Franchises, where the said person did never dwell or converse, after he is duly acquitted by verdict, he may have an Action of the Case against the procurer of such Indictment, and herein shall recover treble damages. Old Book of Entries. f. 126.

8. If any doe maliciously indict of Treasons, or Felonies, supposing that in their said Appeales and Indictments that the said Treasons or Felonies were committed in one certain place, where in truth there is no such place in the Countie; the Indictments and Appeales and Proces thereupon shall be void, and the parties grieved may have this Writ against the Conspirators. 9 H. 5. 1. 13 H. 6. 12.

9. If one of meer malice procure one to be falsely indicted at Assises for a pretended murder and he be acquitted, the partie may have an Action of the Case. Hobbar Rep. 8. Miles case.

10. If Overseers of the Poor or other Officers conspire in an undue way, and by colour of their Office to oppresse a man and do so, this Action may lye for this.

See §. 3.
3. What shall be a good Barr or Plea to this Action.

1. It is a good Bar or Plea to plead a Concord made between the Plaintiff and them. 21 H. 6. 28.

2. Any thing that will prove the Indictment or the Acquittal of the Plaintiff erroneous is a good Bar, although the partie indicted did take no advantage by it. Co. 9. 26. 9 Ed. 4. 12.

3. It is a good Plea to say that there is no such Record, as the Plaintiff doth set forth. 9 H. 6. 26.

4. It is a good Plea to say, that they were Jurors, and did present upon their Oaths; or that they were Witnesses, and gave evidence, or any such like matter as is above. 20 H.6.5.

5. But if the Writ be brought against two, it is no good Plea for one of them to say, the other is dead hanging the Writ; for it may be found, that he and the other did conspire, and then it is well enough, 18 Ed.4.1.

6. It is no good Plea to say, the Plaintiff was guilty of the Felony, after he is acquitted of it. 20 H.7.11.

7. If twenty be indicted, and one of them doth bring a Writ of Conspiracy, supposing that the Defendant conspire to indict him; it is no good Plea, that the Record is, that he and others are indicted. 9 Ed.4.23.

Of a Condition.

A Condition is a kinde of Law or Bridle, annexed to ones act, staying or suspending the same, and making it uncertain, whether it shall take effect, or no. Or as others define it, It is modus an Equality annexed by him that estate interest or right to the Land, &c. whereby an estate, &c. may either be created, defeated or enlarged upon an uncertain event. Terms Ley. Co. super Littl. 201.

And this doth differ from a Limitation, which is the bounds or compass of an estate, or the time how long an estate shall continue.

And this sometimes is contained in a Testament or Will, and sometimes in a Deed. And when it is in a Deed, it hath no proper place assigned it, but it may be in any part of the Deed; howbeit, for the most part it is placed next after the Habendum, or next after the Reservation of the Rent. It is also sometimes annexed to and depending upon estates; and sometimes annexed to, and depending upon Recognizances, Statutes, Obligations, Contracts, and other things: Conditions are also contained in Acts of Parliament and Records. But of these we speak not here in the ensuing matters, which are especially to be applied to such Conditions, as are usually contained in Deeds and annexed to the realty, i. To estates in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life or years. 27 H.8.16. Co 2.70.

And of these Conditions there are divers kinds. For some are in Deed or Express, i. When the Condition is expressed by the party in legal terms, and by express words in writing, or without writing, knit to the estate, as if I enfeoff a man of Land, rendering Rent at a day on condition, That if it be not paid, it shall be lawful for me to re-enter. And some are in Law or implied, i. When the Condition is tacite created by the Law, without any words used by the party. Co. super Littl. 201. Plow. Colthirsts case. Co.8.43.

The first sort of Conditions also are some of them precedent or executed, i. When the Condition must be fulfilled ere the estate can take effect, as where an Agreement is between me and J. S. That if he pay me Ten pound at Michaelmas, he shall have such a ground of mine for ten years; or I make a Lease of Land to J. S. for ten years, provided, That if he pay me Ten pounds at Michaelmas, he shall have the Land to him and his Heirs; and in these cases by the performance of the Condition the estate is required.

And some of them are Subsequent and Executory, i. When the estate is executed, but the continuance thereof dependeth upon the breach or performance of the Condition, as where a Lease is made for years, on condition that the Lessee shall pay ten pound to the Lessor at Michaelmas, or else his Lease shall be void; and in this case, by the performance of the Condition, the estate is held and kept.

These Conditions also are some of them in the Affirmative, i. That do consist of doing, as providing that the Lessee shall pay the Rent, or pay ten pound to the Lessor, &c. And some in the Negative, i. that consist of not doing, as provided, That the Lessee shall not Alien, &c. And some of them are in the Affirmative, which imply a Negative, as provided, That if the Rent be unpaid that the Lessor shall re-enter which implieth a Negative, viz. not paid.

Conditions also are some of them Collateral, i. When the act to be done is a Collaterall act, as that the party shall pay 10 l. goe to Rome, or the like. And some are inherent. i. Such as are annexed to the Rent reserved out of the Land whereof the estate is made. And some of them also are Restrictive and contain a restraint, as that the Lessee shall not alien, or do wast, or the like. And some are compulsory, as that the Lessee shall pay to the Lessor 10 l. such a day, or his lease shall be void.

And some of them be single. i. To doe one thing only. And some Copulative, i. To doe divers things. And some disjunctive. i. when one thing of divers is required to be done. And some conditions make the estate whereunto they are annexed voidable only by entry or claime. And some of them make the estate void ipso facto without entry or claime.

And sometimes they tend to destroy estates, sometimes to make, or to enlarge estates, and sometimes neither to make nor destroy, but only to clogg estates. as where a Lease is made rendring Rent on a day, on condition if it be not paid that the Lessor shall enter on the Land and keep it till the Rent be paid. And all these wizes conditions may be lawfully made. In esse potest donationi modum, conditio sine Causa. Lit. sect. 327.

The conditions in Law or implied are either by Common Law, or by Statute Law. The first sort are some of them founded on skill, as where an office is granted, there is a condition sacite implied, that if the Grantee doth not execute it faithfully according to the trust, the Grantor may put him out. Co. 8. 44. 3. 65. Lit. 325. 378. F. N. B. 205.

And some are without skill, as where an estate is made for life or years of Land, there is this condition implied, that if the Lessee doe wast he shall forfeit the place wasted, or if the Lessor make a Feoffment of the Land he shall forfeit his estate and the Lessor shall enter.

And where an estate is made in Fee of Land; this condition is implied, that the Feoffee shall not alien it in Mortmain.

And these conditions doe sometimes give a recovery, and no entry, as in the case of wast: And sometimes they give an entry and no recovery, as in the case of Alienation in Mortmain. In the case of exchange also there is a condition in Law, for which see Exchange. Co. 4. 121.

3 What things may be made and done upon Condition. And to what things a Condition may be annexed, Or not: And how it may be made and annexed ther-unto.

It is a generall rule, That when a man bath a thing, he may condition with it as he will. Conditions in deed therefore may be annexed to things inheritable, to Frank Tenements, or to Chattels Reall and Personall: as for example. If a Feoffment in Fee, gift in Taile, or Lease for life be made of Lands or Tenements, or a grant be of a Rent, Common, or the like thing in Fee-simple, Fee-taile, or for life, these things may be done upon condition.

So a Lease for years of Land, or a grant of a Rent, &c. for years may be made upon condition. And a Lease may be made for five years on condition that if the Lessee pay to the Lessor within the first two years 100 markes, that then he shall have the Fee, otherwise but for five years. 21 H 7. 24. Perk. sect. 707. 708. &c.

Also a Gardian in Chivalry may grant the wardship of the body and land of either of them on condition. A Tenant by statute Marchant, Staple, or Elegit may grant their estates upon condition. The Lord may grant his Seigniorie to his Tenant on condition. The Tenant for life may grant his estate to his Lessor, or him in reversion upon condition. The King may make letters Patents of denization to an Alien, or a Charter of pardon to a man for his life upon condition. Also releases and Confirmations may be made upon condition. And a submission to an award may be upon a condition. But an Institution to a Benefice, or an induction may not be on a condition. An Atturment, or an expresse Manumission of a villaine cannot be upon a condition subsequent, as it may be upon a condition precedent. And a condition cannot be released upon a condition, as some hold. But the contrary is held by others clearly, and that there is no difference between this and a release of a right, Idco quare. An award cannot be made on a condition as was held in Sherers case 35 Eliz. A Contract or sale of a Chattel personall, as an ox or the like, may be upon condition, as if A sell his horse to B that if A doe such an act, then that B shall pay 5 l. at the day agreed upon, otherwise but 4 li.

So if I agree with a Physician, that if he cure such a disease, he shall have so much, and in this case he cannot have the money untill he have done the cure. As where I promise a man 10 l. when he hath built such a house, in this case he cannot have the money untill the house be built. Also retaining of servants, delivery of Charters and divers other things may be done upon condition.

And if an Executor assent to a Legacy upon a condition; the Assent is good, but the condition is void. Perk. sett. 121. Co. super Litt. 274. Perk. sett. 724. Co. 8: 98. Dier. 242. Co. 2. 74. Co. super Litt. 174. Perk. sett. 712. 713. Co. 4: 28.

And conditions annexed to estates in all the cases before, howsoever they are most frequently and falsely made by deed in writing, yet it seems such conditions may be made and annexed to any estate of a thing grantable without deed without any writing at all; howsoever in some cases it cannot be well pleaded nor used without a deed, for it is a Rule, That if a condition be pleaded in any action to defeat a Freehold, the deed wherein the Condition is contained must be shewed. But of Chattels real, as Leases for years and the like, or grants of Chattels personall, a man may plead that such leases and grants were made upon condition, without shewing the deed. Litt. sett. 365. Co. super Litt. 161. 216. Dier. & Sim. 16. Perk. sett. 715.

And in the first case also of a condition to avoid a freehold, it may be given in evidence to a Jury, and they may finde the matter at large as it is, and so the party may have advantage of the condition without shewing any deed of it. Also the pleading of a Feoffment in Fee on condition without deed and Reentry, is good if the party confess the condition. A condition may be annexed to a limitation of uses, and thereby the same may be made void. See Vfe. Co. 5. 40. Co. 8. 90.

The nature of an expresse condition annexed to an estate in generall is this: That it cannot be made by, nor reserved to a stranger, but it must be made by, nor reserved to him that doth make the estate. And it cannot be granted over to another, except it be to and with the Land or thing unto which it is annexed and incident.

4: The nature of a condition in deed, and of a limitation.

And so it is not grantable in all cases; for the estates of both the parties are so suspended by the condition, that neither of them alone can well make any estate, or charge, of or upon the Land; for the party that doth depart with the estate, and hath nothing but a possibility to have the thing again upon the performance or breach of the condition, cannot grant or charge the thing at all. Co. super Litt. 186. Perk. sett. 818. Litt. Sett. 358. Dier. 6.

And if he that hath the estate, grant or charge it, it will be subject to the condition still, for the condition doth alwaies attend and wait upon the estate or thing whereunto it is annexed: so that although the same doe pass through the hands of an hundred men, yet is it subject to the condition still; And albeit some of them be persons priviledged in divers cases, as the King, infants, and women covert, yet they also are bound by the condition. And a man that comes to the thing by wrong, as a Disseisor of Land whereof there is an estate upon condition in being, shall hold the same subject to the condition also. Dier. 298. Co. 8. 44. Perk. sett. 818. 819.

And when the condition is broken or performed, &c. the whole estate shall be defeated: So that if there be a Lease for life made by deed and not by will, the remainder over in Fee, on condition that the Lessee for life shall pay ten pound to the Lessor; if the Lessee pay not this ten pound, the estate in remainder is avoided also, Et sic e converso, unless by speciall limitation it be otherwise provided, as if A grant by Indenture Land to B for life, the remainder to C in Fee, rendering Rent to A and his Heirs with condition that if the Rent be behind, to reenter and retain the Land during the life of B and no more, and A doth enter in the life time of B for non-payment; this doth not destroy the remainder. Dier. 117. Co. 10. in Mary Portingtons case. super Litt. 230. Litt. sett. 374. Perk. sett. 564. f. 108. Litt. f. 224. Dier. 127. Co. super Litt. 224.

And if Tenant for life and he in remainder joyne in a Feoffment on condition that if, &c. that then the Tenant for life shall reenter; this is good without defeating the entire estate, for regularly a condition cannot avoid a part of an estate onely, and leave another part entire; neither can the estate be void as to one person, and good as to another, (except it be in case of a condition annexed to an estate limited by way of use, as in Frances case, Co. 8. 90.) And yet if A make a gift in tail to B, the remainder to B in Fee upon condition not to alien, and B doth alien; this doth defeat the estate taile onely, and not the remainder. Also the whole estate of the whole, and not of some part only, shall be avoided, except by agreement the condition be specially restrained to some part, and the reentry given in that part only, as where a Feoffment is made of two acres, on condition that if such a thing happen, the Feoffor shall enter into one of them. And further when he that hath right doth reenter by force of such condition, he shall avoid all charges and incumbrances put upon the Land after the condition made, for he that doth enter into Land by force of such a condition, must have it again in the same plight as it was when he parted with it. And finally, a condition for the most part will not determine the estate without entrie or claim. So that howsoever a limitation hath much affinity and agreement with a condition, and therefore it is sometimes called a condition in Law, both of them doe determine an estate in being before, and a limitation cannot make an estate to be void as to one person, and good as to another, as if a gift be made in taile to one and his Heirs males, untill he doe futh anything, and then his estate to cease and goe to another: yet herein they differ. 1. A stranger may take advantage of an estate determined by limitation, and so be cannot upon a condition. 2. A limitation doth always determine the estate without entrie or claime, and so doth not a condition. see Brown. 1 part 31. Co. 4. 121. Dier. 127. Perk. sect. 840. See Infra. Litt. sect. 380. Co. 9. 128. 8. 17. 6. 41. Blom. 413. Cp. 10. 40. Dier 300. Litt. sect. 90.

Conditions annexed to estates are sometimes so placed and confounded amongst covenants, sometimes so ambiguously drawn, and at all times have in their drawing so much affinity with limitations, that it is hard to discern and distinguish them. Know therefore that for the most part Conditions have Conditionall words in their frontispice, and doe begin therewith, and that amongst these words there are three words that are most proper, which in and of their own nature and efficacy without any addition of other words of reentry in the conclusion of the condition that doe make the estate Conditionall, as Proviso, Ita quod, and sub condicione. And therefore if A grant Lands to B, To have and to hold to him and his Heirs, Provided that, or so as, or under this condition, that B doe pay to A Ten pound at Easter next; this is a good condition, and the estate is Conditionall without any more words. But there are other words, as Si, si contingat, and the like, that will make an estate Conditionall also, but then they must have other words joined with them, and added to them in the close of the condition as that then the Grantor shall reenter, or that then the estate shall be void, or the like. And therefore if A grant Lands to B, To have and to hold to him and his Heirs, and if, or but if it happen the said B doe not pay to A Ten pound at Easter, without more words, this is no good condition, but if these or such like words be added, that then it shall be lawfull for A to reenter, then it will be a good condition. Co. 2. Lord Cromwells case. 10 Mary Portingtons case. Co. super Litt. 204. 27. H. 8. 16. Litt. sect. 328. 329. 330. 331.

But here note that these words Proviso, Ita quod, and sub condicione, albeit they be the most proper words to make conditions, yet doe they not always make the estate by the deed to be Conditionall, but sometimes doe serve for other purposes; for the word Proviso hath divers operations besides; for sometimes it doth serve for, and work a qualification or limitation, and sometimes it doth serve to make and work a covenant onely. And then only (being inserted amongst the covenants of the deed) it doth make the estate Conditionall, when there are these things in the case. Co. super Litt. 146. Co. 2. 70. Dier 152. 311. Litt. In A.

1. When

3 When an estate shall be conditionall. And what words will make a condition. And what not. And how a condition may be known from a covenant, or limitation. Proviso, Ita quod sub condicione. Si. Si contingat.

1. When the clause wherein it is, hath no dependance upon any other sentence in the Deed, nor doth participate with it, but stands originally by and of it self. 2. When it is compulsory to the Feoffee, Donee, &c. 3. When it comes on the part, and by the words of the Feoffor, Donor, Lessor, &c. 4. When it is applied to the Estate, and not to some other matter, as if one grant a Manor with an Advowson appendant, and after the Habendum and reservation of Rent amongst the Covenants, there is this clause inserted, [Provided that the Grantee shall regrant the Advowson for the life of the Grantor] this is a good Condition. And thus it may be also a Condition, and a Covenant: As if the words run thus; Provided always, and the Feoffee &c. doth covenant &c. that neither he nor his heirs shall do such an act, this is both a Condition and a Covenant. But if the clause have dependance on another clause of the Deed, or be the words of the Feoffee, &c. to compel the Feoffor to do something, then is it not a Condition, but a Covenant only: As if there be in the Deed a Covenant, that the Lessee shall scour the ditches; and then these words follow, [Provided that the Lessor shall carry away the earth:] Or there is a Covenant, that the Lessee shall repair the Houses; and then these words follow, [Provided that the Lessor provide Timber.] So if this clause be applied to some other thing, and not to the thing granted, then it is no Condition; as if a Lease of Land be made rendring Rent at B. Provided, that if such a thing happen, it shall be paid at C. this doth not make the Estate conditional. Or a Lease is made for years without impeachment of Waste, proviso quod non prosterneat domus voluntarie; in this case howsoever this doth make the privilege, yet doth it not make the Estate conditional. Or a Lease is made for years rendring Rent, provided that the Lessor shall not distrain for the Rent; in this case this is a good Condition, but not annexed to the Estate. So if in a Deed of Bargain and Sale of Land, after the Habendum, there are these words, viz. upon these Conditions following, viz. That if the Vendor pay the Vendee twenty pounds at Easter, and enfeoff him of the Meadow called S. before Whitsuntide, that the Bargain shall be void: Provided nevertheless, that the Bargainor shall hold the Land for 20 years without let of the Bargainee; it seems this Provided in this case doth not make a Condition. So if a Lease be made of a House, and amongst the Covenants these words are inserted, [Provided also, that if the Lessor will dwell upon it, or keep it in his hands, then the Lessee, his Executors and Assigns doth covenant upon one years warning to remove and give place to the Lessor, this Lease notwithstanding;] it seems this is no Condition, but a Covenant only, Dyer 318. 27 H. 8. 15. Bro. Condition 7. If a Lease be made, provided that if the Rent be behind, without any more words; this is no good Condition, Curia Pasch. 14 Jac. Br. in the Case of Muddy. Co. super Lit.

Covenant.

Proviso, sometimes makes a Condition: As if one lease Land, Provided that the Lessee shall not alien without the assent of the Lessor, under pain of Forfeiture. Sometimes it is taken for an Explanation: As if I have two Manors called Dale, and I lease to you the Manor of Dale, Provided that you shall not have my Manor of Dale in the occupation of I. S. Sometimes for a Covenant: As if one lease a House, and the Lessee covenant to keep it in Repair, provided that the Lessor shall find great Timber. Sometimes for an Exception: As if I lease to you my Messuage in Dale, Provided that I will have such a Chamber my self. Sometimes for a Reservation: As if I make a Lease rendring Rent at such Feasts as J. S. shall name, Provided that the Feast of S. Michael be one. Goldsb. 13. 1 pl. 27. See more, Brownl. 1 par. 45. 170. 2 par. 150.

The word si also doth not always make a Condition; for sometimes it makes a limitation, as when a Lease is made for years, if J. S. shall live so long.

There are other words also, that in the Kings Grant, in last Wills and Testaments, and other special cases do make Conditions; as, ea intentione, ad effectum, propositum, intentionem, Paying, and the like. So that if one devise his Land to J. S. ea intentione, &c. that he shall pay to W. S. Ten pounds, or paying, or so as he pay to W. S. Ten pounds, or to sell, &c. these are good Conditions. But these words regularly do not make a Condition when they are used in Deeds.

And

And therefore if one make a Feoffment in Fee ea intentione, ad effectum, &c. that the Feoffee shall do, or not do such an act; these words do not make the Estate conditional, but it is absolute notwithstanding. And yet perhaps these words being conjoined with some others, may make a Condition; as if Lands be granted ea intentione quod si defeceris, &c. tunc quod reintrabis, or the like. Co. super Lit. 236, 237. Doct. & Stu. 122. Dyer 138. Plow. 142. 7 H.4. 22. Co. super Lit. 204. Ca. 10. 42. Dyer 318. Doct. & St. 34. Idem 94. Dyer 6. 91. 63. 92.

Also Conditions are sometimes made, especially in Estates and Leases for years, without any of these formal words; when the apparent intent of the Lessor is to make the Estate conditional, albeit the words be not used as the words of the Lessor, but as the words of the Lessee, or indefinitely of neither. And therefore it hath been said, That if an Indenture be made between A. and B. thus: It is agreed and covenanted between the parties aforesaid, that B. shall have the Land for years, and that he shall not alien it; that this Estate is conditional. But it seems this is not Law. But if this clause be inserted amongst other Covenants, viz. If the Lessee hinder the Lessor to sell, cut, and carry away the Trees upon the Lands devised, that the Lessor may re-enter, and the Lease shall be void; this is a good Condition, and so it hath been adjudged in the case of Howard and Fletcher, Hil. 3 Car. B. R. And if a Lessee for years do covenant in his Lease, that if he; his Executors or Assigns shall alien, that it shall be lawful for the Lessor to re-enter; it seems this is a good Condition, and not a Covenant only. And if a Lease for years be made, and this clause is inserted in the Deed: It is agreed between the parties, That if the Lessee do not pay Ten pounds to the Lessor at Easter, from thenceforth the Lease shall be void; this is a good Condition. And if a Lease be made with this clause inserted in the Deed: It is agreed, That whosoever shall have the Estate or Interest, that he or they shall find Sureties within the year for the Rent, otherwise the Estate shall cease; it seems this is a good Condition. Dyer 86. 65. Curia M. 37. 38. Eliz. B. R. And if a Lease for years be made with this clause inserted, And that it shall not be lawful for the Lessee to alien without licence of the Lessor, under pain of Forfeiture; this is a good Condition. And if a Lease for years be made of a House, with this clause inserted in the Deed, And the Lessee shall continually dwell upon the same House, upon pain of Forfeiture of the said Term; this is a good Condition, Dyer 79. 27. Co. super Lit. 204. Plow. 132. And if in a Lease for years, the Lessee covenant to pay so much Rent, and then these words are inserted; And if it shall happen the said yearly Rent, &c. then the Lessee doth covenant and grant, &c. that the Lease shall be void; it seems this is a good Condition, and so hath it ever been taken, as was said by Just. Dodridge, Hil. 3 Car. And in all these cases the Estate is conditional. But in cases of Feoffments in Fee, Gifts in tail, and Leases for life, it seems words penned in this manner will not make Conditions; but that in these cases the precise and formal words of a Condition are requisite. And therefore that if a Feoffment be made by Deed, and therein is inserted this clause; That it is agreed, or that the Feoffor doth covenant, that if the Feoffee do such an act, that the Feoffor shall re-enter; this is no Condition, nor the Estate hereby made conditional. And yet see Perk. sect. 744. Co. super Lit. 204. Doct. & Stu. 94. Dyer 65. 138.

If one make a Lease for years on condition to pay Rent at four Feasts; and after there is a clause in the Deed, And if the Rent shall be behind, &c. that he shall distrain; this clause doth not take away the Condition, but the same doth continue, and the Estate is conditional still, Dyer 348. See more in the next Question.

In the making of Estates, the Cause is regarded: And in case of the Grant of Lands or Tenements, Causa doth sometimes make a Condition; as if a woman give Lands to a man and his heirs, causa matrimonii prolucuti; in this case if she either marry the man, or the man refuse to marry her, she shall have the Land again to her and her heirs. But on the other side, if a man give Land to a woman and to her heirs causa matrimonii prolucuti, though he marry her, or the woman refuse, he shall not have the Lands again to him and his heirs. And in the case of a Grant executory, the word pro may make a Condition. Co. super Lit. 204. 10. 42. Plow. 141: 9 Ed. 4. 19. 15 Ed. 4. 2. Dyer 6.

And

And therefore if a man grant me an Annuity pro una acra terre, or pro decimis, &c. or if he grant me an Annuity for a way, or a gutter through my ground, this is Conditionall, and if he be disturbed in the way, acre, of Land, Tithes, or Gutter, he may refuse to pay the Annuity. So if an Annuity be granted to an Officer for the executing of his Office, or pro consilio impendendo, if the Grantee doe not execute the Office, or give counsell, &c. the Annuity shall cease. But if one grant me Tithes or an Annuity, and I grant an Annuity for these Tithes, or grant to give counsell for the Annuity; it seems the Grants that are in this manner are not Conditionall, but absolute. So if I pro consilio, &c. or pro una acra terre &c. make a Feoffment in Fee, or Lease for life of another acre, these estates are not Conditionall. And if one devise Land to be sold by his Executors, and to be distributed for his soul; by this it seems the estate or power of the Executors is Conditionall. So if one devise his Land to find a Preacher or a Chaplain. But otherwise it seems it is of Land so conveyed by Deed in a mans life time. And if a Feoffment be made of Land ad erudiendum filium, some have said this estate is Conditionall, Dier 7. 127 see Testament. Plow. 141. 142.

Testament.

The most apt and proper words to make a limitation of an estate are Quamdiu, Dummodo, Dum, Quousque, Si, and such like. And therefore if A grant Lands to B, To have and to hold to him and his Heirs, untill B goe to Rome. or untill he be promoted to a Benefice, or untill B pay to A, or A pay to B twenty pound, or so long as I. S. shall live, or if A grant Lands to B, To have and to hold to him, his Executors, &c. if I. S. and I. D. shall live so long. Or if A grant Lands to B, To have and to hold to him for the life of T. So that B, pay 20 pound to A at Easter following; these are not Conditionall, but limited to estates. So if A grant Lands to B To have and to hold to him for so long as he shall keep himself a Widower, or dum sola fuerit, or durante viduitate, if the Grantee be a Widow, these are good limited estates, but these words doe not make the estates to be Conditionall. Co. super Litt. 234. 235. Co. 19. 42. Plow. 413. Litt. sect. 90. Dier 290.

Limitation.

If the words in the close, or conclusion of a condition bee thus, that the Land shall return to the Feoffor, &c. or that he shall take it again and turn it to his own profit, or that the Land shall revert, or that the Feoffor shall recipere the Land, these are either of them good words in a condition to give a Reentry, as good as the word reverter, and by these words the estate will be made Conditionall. Dier 125, Plow. 159. Perk. sect. 749.

The Tenant by the curtesy, the Tenant in Taile after the possibility of issue extinct the Tenant in Dower, the Tenant for life, the Tenant for years, by Statute, or Elegg, Guardian, &c. doe hold their estates subject to a condition in Law, so that if either of them Alien his Land in Fee, or claime a greater estate in a court of Record then his own, he doth forfeit his estate, and he in Remainder or Reversion may enter, and if such a Tenant doe wast, he in Reversion shall recover the place wasted. The Tenant in Fee-simple doth hold his estate subject to a condition in Law, so that if he Alien his Land in Mortmain, he doth forfeit it, and the Lord may enter upon him. So also he that doth take Land in exchange doth hold it under a condition in Law, viz. that if the Land he give in Exchange for that Land be recovered from him that hath it, that he shall enter upon his own Land again. Also every Officer that hath to doe in the Administration of Justice, all Keepers of Parks, Stewards, Beadles, Bailiffes, and such like hold their Offices under a condition in Law; so that if they doe not duly execute it, and doe all that thereunto doth appertain, they may forfeit them, and the Grantor may put them out. In quo quis delinquit in eo est de jure puniendus. Co. super Litt. 233. 234. Co. 8.

6 What shall be said a condition in Law. And when an estate shall be subject to such a condition.

7 What shall be said a good condition in a deed or limitation in his Original creation. And what not. For the manner, and frame, and order of making of it.

44. To every good condition is required an externall form. i. Words to declare an intent in the party to have the estate Conditionall, as in the cases before.

And an internall form, that is, such matter as whereof a condition may be made.

As

As to things executed, the condition must be made and annexed to the estate at the time of the making of it, but as to things executory, it may be made afterwards. And if the condition be made in another deed, and not the same deed wherein the estate is made, if it be delivered at the same time it is as good as if it were contained in the same deed. And therefore if a man make a Feoffment, Lease, or the like, by one deed absolute, and at the same time make another deed of Rescance or condition, and deliver both together, this is a good condition, and will make the estate Conditionall. But if the Rescance be sealed and delivered before, or after the Deed, contra. And therefore if one make an absolute Feoffment in Fee, and before or after the sealing or delivery of that Deed the Feoffor declare himself by Deed: or the Feoffor and Feoffee agree by deed that the estate made before, or to be made after, shall be Conditionall, yet this is not Conditionall. And yet if an Annuity be granted absolutely by one Deed, and after the Grantee grant to the Grantor, that if the Grantor doe such a thing, the Annuity shall cease: in this case the Annuity is Conditionall. Perk. Sess. 717. Co. 1. 113. Plow. 133. Co. super Litt. 146. 217. Co. 2. 71.

A condition may be annexed to an estate by way of use, as if a Feoffment be made to a A, to the use of B, and his Heirs, on condition that B shall pay to the Feoffor twenty pound such a day; this is a good condition. So if one Covenant to stand seised of Lands to the use of B and his Heirs, on condition that if he pay him Ten pound, the use shall be void, or the like. Also a condition may be annexed to an estate created by Will, as if one devise Land to J. S. for his life, Provided that he pay ten pound yearly to J. D. this is a good condition. Whereof see in Testament, Co. 146. Hil. 40. Inc. B. R. Warners case: Co. 1. 112. Albanes case, Dier 126, 348.

A Rent, or any such like thing may be granted on condition, that if such a thing be or be not done, the Rent shall cease for a time, and then revive again; and this condition is good. But in case of Land it is otherwise, for that cannot be granted after this manner. Also a condition to make an estate void for a part of the time is not good. And therefore if a Feoffment be on condition, that upon such a contingent the Feoffor shall enter and have the Land for a time, or the estate shall be void for a part of the time; or make a Lease for Ten years, provided that upon such a contingent it shall be void for five years; these conditions are not good. And yet if a Feoffment be made of two acres, provided that upon such a contingent the estate shall be void as to one acre onely; this is a good condition: Co. 8. 17. 24. Ed. 3. 29. Co. 1. 86. Perk. Sess. 718. Co. 4. 121. Dier 6.

A condition that a stranger, or the Heir of the Feoffor shall doe an act is good, as if a Feoffment be made to J. S. on condition that J. D. shall pay to the Feoffor, Ten pound at Easter next; or if a Feoffment be made on condition that if the Heir of the Feoffor pay Twenty shillings to the Feoffee, that the Feoffor and his Heirs shall reenter. But a condition to give a stranger a reentry is void so far forth. And therefore if an estate be made upon condition, that upon such a contingent a stranger shall enter, or the estate shall cease, and another shall have it; howsoever this may be so drawn, as it may be a good condition to give him his Heirs, &c. that doth make the estate an entry, yet it cannot be good to give the estate or the entry to the stranger. So if a Feoffment be made on condition that upon such a contingent the Feoffor and a stranger, shall enter; this is not good to give an entry to the stranger, but it is good to give the Feoffor a reentry, And yet by will a man may devise a Terme after this manner. Co. super Litt. 214: Duch. & Stud. 94. 159. 160. Co. super Litt. 379. Co. 1. 84. Dier. 33. 21 H. 7. Dier 4. Co. 8. 95.

If a man Enfeoffe another, upon condition that he and his Heirs shall render to a stranger and his Heirs a yearly Rent of Twenty shillings, &c. and if he faile of payment thereof, that the Feoffor shall reenter, albeit this as a reservation of Rent is meerly void, and the condition that doth call it a Rent, is meerly mistaken, yet the condition is good, and ut res valeat, the words shall be taken contrary to their proper sense. Co. super Litt. 213.

If I infeoffe I S. of land on condition that if I D. give to him ten pound, or goe to Rome before such a day &c. that then the feoffee shall pay to me ten pound &c. this is a good condition. Perk. Sett. 798.

If a feoffment be made to one and his heirs, on condition that if the feoffee pay to the feoffor ten pound, hee shall have the fee of land; this is not a good condition.

But if he say further, And if he fail to pay that, the feoffor shall reenter, this is good. Co. super Litt. 207.

If a gift in tail be made to a man and the heirs of his body, and if he die without heirs of his body, that then the donor and his heirs shall reenter; this is a void condition, for when the issues fail, the estate is at an end. Co. super Litt. Sett. 324.

A man makes a lease for years rendring Rent on Condition with a Covenant that the lessee shall repair the house with other Covenants. And after he devise the same land to the lessee for more years rendring the like Rent and under the like Covenants as in the first lease the Remainder in fee to another; in this case there is no Condition made by the devise to give Entre to him in Remainder. Goldb. 74. Pl. 1.

Conditions that are so penned, as they are insensible and altogether incertain are void. as if one make a lease on condition that if the rent be behinde to restrain, and if there be not sufficient, the ground to enter into the premises, this condition is void for insensibility, and the estate is absolute. Et sic de similibus. Muddy & Gardners case. Adjudge pasche 14. Jac. B.R.C. 6. 41.

A condition to enlarge or encrease an estate may be good, as if a gift be made in tail, or a lease be made for life or years, on condition that if such an act be done or not done, the lessee shall have the land to him and his heirs, as if one make a lease for life to one, and if the lessor die without heir of his body, then he doth grant the land to the lessee and his heirs for ever. Or if land be granted to a man for 5 years, on condition that if the grantee pay to the grantor within the two first years ten pound, then that he shall have the fee-simple; otherwise that he shall have the land but for five years, and livery of seisin be made according to the deed; this is a good condition, and by this upon the performance of the condition the fee-simple will passe. Co. 3. 75. Plow. 477. 481. Litt. Sett. 350. Perk. Sett. 710. Plow. 135. 10. Aff. pl. 15. Perk. Sett. 745. 707. Plow. 25. Litt. Sett. 707. 350. Plow. 272. 482. 483. 4. H. 7. 4. See more in the Lord Staffords Case, Co. 8. 73.

So if one grant land for five years rendring rent, and that if the lessee will hold it over to him and his heirs, that he shall pay twenty pound rent; this is a good condition, and if he pay the rent, he shall have the fee-simple. So if a man make a lease for years, and at the same time for the surety of the terme to the lessee makes a feoffment to him upon condition that if he be disturbed in his term, hee shall have the fee-simple of the land, and deliver both these deeds at one time, and give livery of seisin accordingly; this is a good condition. So if a lease for life be made upon condition, that if the lessor or his heirs pay to B or his heirs, ten pound at a certain day, that then the lessor may reenter, and if he doe not pay it at that time, and the lessee pay to the lessor or his heirs ten pound at a certain day, after the former day, that then the lessee shall have the land to him and his heirs for ever; this is a good condition. But in all cases where these kind of conditions are good to make the increased estate good, there must be these things in the case.

1. There must be a precedent particular estate as an estate in tail for life, or years, for a foundation to erect the subsequent estate upon, and that first estate also must be certain and irrevocable, not upon contingency, or with power of revocation.

2. The privity must remain untill the time of the performance of the condition, for if the donee or lessee doe grant away the first estate, the condition cannot afterwards be performed to effect and produce the encreasing estate.

3. The subsequent estate must vest eo instanti, when the contingency upon which the condition dependeth, shall happen or never.

4. The first and second estate must take effect by one and the same deed, or else by two deeds delivered at the same time; for qua incontinenti sunt in se videmus.
 5. The condition upon which increase is, must be possible and lawfull, for upon an impossible condition it cannot, and upon an unlawfull condition it shall not increase: see Browl. 2 parts 324. 225. 349. 250.

Covenant.

If one make a Lease for life, provided that if the Lessee die within sixty years, that his executors shall have the Land for so many of the sixty years as shall be to come at the time of his death; this is no good condition to make the estate to increase, but it may be a Covenant. And if a lease for years be made, on condition that if the Lessor sell the reversion of the same land, the Lessee shall have the Fee of it; this is no good condition to increase the estate. And a possibility cannot decrease upon a possibility, as a Lease for years to a Lease for life by one covenant, and the Lease for life to a Fee-simple by another. And if a Lease be made to a man and a woman for their lives, on condition that which of them two shall first marry, that one shall have the Fee & they intermarry; in this case neither of them shall have the Fee for uncertainty. Co. 1. 155. Dier 150. Co. 84. Co. 8. 75. Co. super Litt. 218.

To abridge an estate.

If a man make a Lease for life, and add this condition, that if the Lessee within one year doe not pay twenty shillings, that he shall have but a Term of two years, and he doe not pay the 20^s. by this his Lease for life is gone, and he hath now but a Lease for two years. Co. super Litt. 218. 50 Ed. 2. 27.

2. For the matter and substance of it.

If a Lease be made, on condition that if a stranger dislike it, or be discontented with it, that the Lease shall be void; this is a good condition. 1 H. 8. 13.

Prerogative.

If a Lease be made, on condition that if the Lessee be outlawed, the Lease shall be void; it seems this is a good condition. Hil. 6 Jac. B. R. Curia.

If a Feoffment be made, on condition that if the Feoffee commit treason, that the Feoffor shall reenter; in this case the condition is vain; for if the Feoffor enter, his entry is not lawfull, for the King is intitled, and his title shall be preferred. Trin 3 E. 6. per Curiam.

Testament. Use.

No condition or limitation, be it by act executed, limitation of a use, or by devise, or last Will, that doth contain in it matter repugnant, and tending to the utter subversion of the estate, or matter that is against Law, or matter that is impossible to be done is good. And therefore in all such cases if the condition be subsequent, the estate is absolute, and the condition void: And if the condition be to goe before the estate, the estate and the condition both are void. Co. 1. 83. 6. 43. Co. 9. 128.

Repugnant conditions. To restrain Alienation.

If a Feoffment or other conveyance be made of Land, or a grant of Rent, &c. in Fee-simple by deed or will, upon condition that the Feoffee or Grantee shall not alien to certain persons, as to J. S. or to J. S. and W. S. this is a good condition, So if one make a Feoffment in Fee of Land, on condition that the Feoffee shall not alien it in Mortmain; this is a good condition. So if A be seised in Fee of black acre, and B doth infeoffe A of white acre in Fee, on condition that he shall not alien black acre; this is a good condition. But if the condition be that the Feoffee or Grantee shall not alien the thing granted to any person whatsoever, or that if he doe alien to any person, that he shall pay a fine to the Feoffor; these conditions are void in the case of a common person as repugnant to the estate. But in case of the King, such conditions are good. And in the cases of a common person also the alienation is good until it be avoided by the Feoffor. And in Pasc. 19 Jac. B. R. it was held by Just. Dodridge and Chamberlain, that if a Feoffment be on condition that if the Feoffee alien, he shall pay 10 l. to the Feoffor; that this is a good condition; but Ch. Just. and Just. Haughton held the contrary, for then this shall be a circumvention of the Law. If a gift had been made to an Abbot, and his successors, on condition not to alien; this had been a good condition. Co. super Litt. 223. Bragge and Tanners case. Dolt. & St. 124.

Prerogative.

If one make a Feoffment of Land to an infant, on condition he shall not alien to any person; this is a good condition during the minority of the infant, but not afterwards. In like manner as if one make a Feoffment to a husband and wife, on condition they shall not alien; this condition to some intent is good, i. to restrain alienation by Feoffment or deed, and to some intent repugnant and void, i. to restrain alienation by fine, for that is lawfull.

So

So if a gift be made in tail, on condition that the Tenant in tail may alien for the profit of his issues; this is a good condition. And so if Land be given in tail, upon condition that the Tenant in Tail or his Heirs shall not alien in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, nor for the Term of any others life, but for their own lives; this condition is good Co. super Litt. 224. 10 H. 7. 11. 13 H. 7. 23. Co. 10. 30. Perk. sett. 739. 21 H. 6. 33.

But if Lands be given in tail on condition, that the Tenant in tail, or his Heirs in tail shall not suffer a common Recovery, levy a fine with Proclamations according to the Statutes of 4 H. 7. and 31 H. 8. to bar the issues, or on condition that he shall not make Copyhold estates of Copyhold Land, according to the custome of the place; or make Leases according to the Statute of 31 H. 8. ca. 28. these conditions are held to be repugnant, and for that cause void. And yet see, for the last of these cases the opinion in Co. super Litt. 223. to be contrary, and that a condition to restrain the making of such leases is good; for this power is not incident to the estate, but given to him collaterally by the Statute, and Quilibet potest renunciare juri pro se introducto. But contra curia in Mary Portingtons case is against him. If a man make a gift in tail to A the remainder to him and his Heirs, on condition that he shall not alien; this condition as to the estate tail is good, and void as to the other. And therefore if an alienation be, he shall defeat it only as to the estate tail. And if a man make a gift in Tail on condition that the Donee or his Heirs shall not alien; this is a good condition to some intents, and void to others; and therefore if he make a Feoffment in Fee, or any other estate by which the reversion is discontinued tortiously, the Donor shall enter; otherwise if he suffer a common recovery. And a gift in tail, on condition that the Tenant in tail shall not make a Lease for his own life, is not a good condition, by Co. 6: 43. against Co. super Litt. 223. If one seised in Fee of Land, and make a Lease of it for years or life, on condition that the Lessee shall not alien the Land leased, or any part thereof during the Term, or on condition that he shall not alien it, or any part of it, during the Term without licence of the Lessor; these are good conditions. So if one be seised in Fee of a Manor, and he make a Lease of years of it to I. S. on condition that he shall not make voluntary estates by copy; this is a good condition. But in a Feoffment in Fee such a condition is repugnant and void. And if one be possessed of a Lease for years, or of a house, or of any other chattel reall or personall, and he give or sell all his interest therein, upon condition that the Donee or Vendee shall not alien the same; this condition is void for repugnancy, and the gift or sale is absolute. Dier. 48. Co. 6. 43. Co. super Litt. Idem Dier. 227. Co. 6. 43. Co. 6. 43. 4. 84. super Litt. 223.

If one make a Feoffment of Land in Fee, on condition that the Feoffor shall retain the Land for twenty years without interruption; it seems this is a good condition and not repugnant. Co. 1. 72. Dier. 318.

If I grant Land to another for life, if it shall please me so long to suffer him; it seems this condition is repugnant and void. Dier. 94.

If a Feoffment be made of Land in Fee, on condition that the Feoffee shall not enjoy the Land, or shall not take the profits of the Land, or on condition that the Heir of the Feoffee shall not inherit the Land, or condition that the Feoffee shall not doe waite, or condition that his wife shall not be endowed; in all these and the like cases the condition is void as repugnant to the estate. Co. 10. 39. super Litt. 206. Plow. 77. 133. 21 H. 7. 8. 8 H. 7. 10. Perk. Sett. 731.

If a gift in tail be made, on condition that the Donee or his issues shall not take the profits of the Land, or on condition that if the Donee die, his estate shall go unto another, or on condition that their Wives shall not be endowed, or on condition that they shall not do waite, or on condition that warranty and assets or a collaterall warranty shall not bar the issues in tail; all these conditions are repugnant and void. Co. 6. 41. 184. super Litt. 224.

If Lands be given or granted to two and their Heirs, on condition that the survivor shall have the whole notwithstanding partition, or on condition that the survivor shall not have the whole albeit there be no severance; these conditions are repugnant and void. Co. 1. 84.

If one make a Lease for life, on condition that the Lessee shall not doe fealty; this condition is not good. Perk. felf. 71.

If Lands be given to one and the Heirs males of his body, provided that if he die without Heirs, Females of his body, that the Donor shall reenter; this condition is repugnant and void. Co. Super. Litt. 264.

If one have Land in possession, or reversion, and he grant a Rent out of it, on condition that the grant shall not charge the person of the Grantor; this is a good condition, and not repugnant. But if a man grant a bare Annuity, or grant a Rent charge, out of another mans Land with such a condition, or if one grant a Rent charge, on condition that the Grantee shall not distrain nor charge the person of the Grantor, or if one grant a Rent out of Land, on condition that the Land shall not be charged with it; all these conditions are repugnant and void. So if two grant a Rent charge out of Land, provided that it shall not extend to one of them; this condition is repugnant and void. Co. Super. Litt. 146. 10 H. 7. 8. 6. 41. 5. H. 7. 7. H. 8. 44. Perk. felf. 732.

If a man seised in Fee of Land make a Lease for years rendring Rent, and after the Lessee makes a Lease to the Lessor of other Land, on condition that he shall not distrain for his Rent in the former Lease made to this Lessee; this is a good condition, and not repugnant. Perk. felf. 733.

If one make a Feoffment in Fee, or Lease for life, with warranty, on condition that the Feoffee or Lessee shall not vouch to warrant, nor recover in value, or if the lease be made without impeachment of waste, on condition that if the Lessee do waste the Lessor shall reenter; these are good conditions and not repugnant. Perk. felf. 734. Dier 47.

Conditions against Law.

All Conditions annexed to estates being compulsory, to compel a man to doe any thing that is in its nature good, or indifferent, or being restrictive, to restrain or forbid the doing of any thing which in its nature is malum in se, as to kill a man, or the like, or malum prohibitum, being a thing forbidden by any Statute, on the like; all such conditions are good, and may stand with the estates. But if the matter of the condition tend to provoke or further the doing of some unlawfull act, or to restrain or forbid a man the doing of his duty; the condition for the most part is void.

And therefore if Lands be given or granted to a man, upon condition, that he shall kill a man, or upon condition that he shall burn his neighbours house, or upon condition that he shall forswear himself, or upon condition that he shall save and keep harmless the Grantor whatsoever he shall doe, or that if he doe not these things, the grant shall be void; this condition is void. Or if Lands be given or granted to an Officer, upon condition that he shall not duly execute his Office; this condition is against Law, and void: Et sic de similibus. So if a gift be made in tail, upon condition that the Donee shall discontinue, or one give or grant Land on condition that the Grantee shall be a foretaller against the Statutes; these and such like conditions are void. And hereupon it is, that conditions annexed to Land, that the profits thereof shall be employed to superstitious uses are void. And hence also it is that such conditions as are against the Liberty of Law, as that a man shall not marry or the like, are void. And hence also such as are against the publique good. And therefore it seems if one grant his Land to I. upon condition that he (being a husbandman) shall not sow his errable Land this condition is void. And in all these cases if the condition be subsequent to the estate, the condition only is void, and the estate good and absolute; if the condition be precedent, the condition and estate both are void; for an estate can neither commence nor encrease upon an unlawfull condition. see Brownl. 2 part 138. 139. Co. Super. Litt. 223. 224. 207. Perk. felf. 722. 723. Perk. felf. 727. Co. 1. 24. 6. 43. Dier. 343. Co. Super. Litt. 206. Co. 11. 53. 7 E. 3. 60. Perk. felf. 722. 725.

Conditions impossible.

All conditions annexed to estates that contain in them matter at the time of making of them impossible to be done are void. Co. 6. 41. Super. Litt. 207. 219. 206. Dier. 252. 262. Plow. 152. Perk. felf. 935. 729. Plow. 272. 286. Co. 1. 84. Super. Litt. 207.

And

And therefore if one give or grant land on condition, that a man shall go to Rome in three days, or condition that a man shall infeoffe a corporation, when there is none such, or if one give lands in tail, on condition that the estate shall cease, as if the tenant in tail be dead, or if one grant lands, on condition that a man shall infeoffe his wife, all these and such like conditions are void. And in these cases also, if the condition be subsequent, the condition is void onely, and the estate is absolute, and if the condition be precedent, the condition and the estate both are void, for an estate can neither commence, nor increase upon an impossible condition. And if the thing to be done by the condition be possible at the time of the making of the condition, and doe afterwards by the act of God become impossible, the condition is become void, and the estate absolute, as if a feoffment be made, on condition that the feoffee shall before Easter following infeoffe the feoffor, and the feoffee die before the day, or on condition that the feoffee shall appear in such a Court before or at Easter, and he die before the time; in these cases the condition is gone, and the estate is absolute.

And the same Law is for the most part of Limitations, if they be repugnant, impossible, or against Law, as is before shewed to be of Conditions. See more in the next division following. Co. 41. 1. 84.

Limitation.

It is a general rule, That such conditions annexed to estates as goe in defeasance, and tend to the destruction of the estate being odious to the Law, are taken strictly, and shall not be extended beyond their words, unless it be in some speciall cases. And therefore if a lease be made, on condition that, if such a thing be not done, the lessor [without any words of heirs, executors &c.] shall reenter and avoid it; in this case regularly the heir, executor &c. shall not take advantage of this condition. So if one make a lease for years of a house, on condition that if the lessor shall be minded to dwell in the house, and shall give notice to the lessee, that hee shall depart; in this case if the lessor die, his heir, executor, &c. shall not have the like advantage and power as the lessor himself, for the condition shall not be extended to them. And hence it is, that if a lease for years be made, on condition that the lessee shall not alien without the licence of the lessor; in this case the restraint shall continue only during the lives of the lessor and the lessee, and no longer. And yet this rule hath an exception, for if a man mortgage his land to W. upon condition that if the mortgagor and J. S. pay 20s. such a day to the mortgagee, that then he shall reenter, and the mortgagor die before the day; in this case J. S. may pay the money and perform the condition. But otherwise it is whiles the mortgagor doth live, for in that time J. S. alone without him may not tender it, and if he do, this tender is no performance of the condition. And in case where a condition doth tend to create an estate, there it shall have the most favourable exposition that may be, and therefore in that case albeit the words be not satisfied, yet if the intent be satisfied, it sufficeth. And therefore if one make a feoffment in fee, on condition that the feoffee shall make an estate back again in tail to the feoffor and his wife before such a day, and before that day the feoffor die; in this case the condition shall be performed as neer to the intent as may be; & therefore if the condition be, that he shall make the estate to them two Habendum to them and the heirs of their two bodies engendred, the remainder to the right heirs of the feoffor, the estate shall be made to the wife for life without impeachment of waste, the remainder to the heirs of the body of the husband begotten on the wife. And if A. infeoffe B. on condition that B. shall make an estate in frankmarriage to C. with such a one the daughter of the feoffor; in this case albeit an estate in frankmarriage may not be made, yet an estate shall be made to them for their lives. Et sic de similibus. Condicio beneficiæ quæ statim constituit benigne secundum verborum intentionem est interpretanda, odiosa autem quæ statim destruit stricte secundum verborum proprietatem est accipienda. Brownl. 1. part. 135. Co. 890 super Litt. 219. 27. H. 8. 14. Dier. 66. Co. super Litt. 219. Litt. Sect. 352 Co. super Litt. 219. Co. 860.

8. How a condition in deed or a limitation shall be taken and expounded. And how it must & ought to be performed.

1. In respect of persons.

Not to alien.

To pay money.

To make an estate.

2. In respect of time.

In all cases where a time is set for the doing or performance of the matter contained in the condition, be it to pay money, make an estate, or the like, it must be done at the time agreed upon; and set down in the condition. And

And in cases where it is to be done before a time certain, it must be done before that time, or else the condition is broken. Co. super Litt. 109. 208. 219. Ca. 2. 79. 6. 31. Litt. 353: Plow. 30: Perk. Sett. 155. 779. 794. 787. 793. 789. 788. 38. Ed. 3. 111: Dier. 311.

But in all cases where no time is set for the doing of the thing contained in the condition, be it to pay money, make an estate, or the like, if the act to be done, bee to be done to the party that doth make the estate; or be to be done to him and a stranger, and be such a thing as is for the benefit of him that doth make the estate, and for his benefit only, there regularly the party that is to do the thing shall have time to do it during his life, unless the party, feoffor, &c. that doth make the first estate, wherunto the condition is annexed, doth hasten the doing thereof by request: for if he request the doing thereof and set no time, it must be done within a convenient time after that request; and if he request and prefix a time convenient when he doth desire to have it done, it must be done at that time; and in these cases the condition cannot be broken without a request, so long as he to whom the estate upon condition is made be living. And therefore in this case it is not like to a condition made by a Will, for if one devise his land to I S. so as he pay the twenty pound to I D. the Testator doth owe him, and no time is set for the payment thereof; in this case he must pay it as soon as it is demanded, or he doth forfeit the land, and the heir may enter. But if the thing to be done, be to be done to a stranger, and be for the profit and benefit of a stranger only: as if a feoffment be made on condition that the feoffee shall marry the daughter of the feoffor, or on condition that the feoffee shall infeoff a stranger, and no time is set for the doing hereof, in these cases the feoffee shall not have time during his life to do it, but he must do it in a reasonable time, and that without any request at all, or else he doth break the condition. And in some special cases when the act to be done is to be done to the party himself, the party shall not have time to do it during his life, as if one grant land to I S. on condition that he shall grant an Advowson to the grantor for his life, or on condition that he shall grant a rent charge to the grantor during his life, to be paid at Michaelmas and our Lady day; in these cases the grant of the Advowson must be before the Advowson fall, and the grant of the rent must be before either of the dates of payment come, and that without request, else the condition is broken. And if the condition be that if I S. do such an act, that then the feoffee shall pay ten pound to the feoffor, else that the feoffor shall reenter, and no time is set when the feoffee must pay this ten pound; in this case it seems the payment must be as soon as the same act is done, and that without any request at all. And in case where the feoffee &c. or a stranger be to do an act, and he alone is to do it, and it doth nothing concern the feoffor &c. as to goe to Rome, or the like, there the feoffee &c. or stranger shall have time during his life to do the thing, and it cannot be hastened by request. Perk. Sett. 9. 798: Co. super Litt. 209.

If lands be granted, on condition that the grantee shall make a lease for life of other lands to the grantor, the remainder to a stranger: in this case the feoffee shall have all the time of his life to do it, if hee be not hastened by request. But if the condition be to make a gift in taile to a stranger, the remainder to the feoffor; in this case it must be done in time convenient without request. Co. super Litt. 210. 222.

If the King licence his tenant to infeoff A. and B. so as they give the land again to the feoffor, and the heirs males of his body, and he make a feoffment accordingly, in this case it must bee reconveyed before the death of the feoffor, or else the condition is broken.

If A. infeoff B. of black acre, on condition that if C. infeoff B. of white acre A. shall reenter; in this case C. shall have time to do this during his life, if B. doe not hasten it by request. Co. super Litt. 208.

If a lessee grant his estate to a stranger, on condition that the grantee doe get the good will of the lessor, and no time is set when he shall get his good will; it seems in this case he shall have time to get his good will during the terme, and that although he deny it at the first, yet if he grant it afterwards, that this is sufficient. Perk. Sett. 795.

When a time is set in certain for the payment of money, or the doing of any other thing generally; neither agent nor patient are bound to attend any other time. And if the thing be to be done on a day certaine, but no houre of the day is set down wherein the same shall be done; in this case they must attend such a distance of time before the Sun set, as may be convenient to doe that work in. And if the condition be to pay money at a place certain, at any time during life; in this case the money may not be tendered at any time in the place, in the absence of him that should receive it, but he that is to pay it must give notice to the other party before-hand what time he will tender it, that the other may be ready to receive it. Or if at any time the parties happen to meet at the place, a payment or tender then at that place is sufficient. And the same law is for the most part in conditions of obligations. Lit. Sect. 342. Co. Supp. Litt. 213.

To pay money

Obligation.

3. In respect of place.

In cases where a place is set down for the doing of the thing contained in the condition, there it must always be done at that place, unless by some agreement made between the parties, afterwards another place be appointed, otherwise the condition is not performed, and the parties are not bound to attend in any other place. But in cases where there is no place set down for the doing of the thing contained in the condition; if the thing to be done be a corporall service, as to pay money, or any such like thing, the party that is to do it must at his perill seek out the person to whom it is to be done, if he be intraregium Anglia: but if he be not within the kingdom, he is not bound to seek him, and yet the condition is not broken. And if the thing to be done be either locall, such a thing as must be done in or at a place certain, as the making of a feoffment of land, payment of rent, or the like; in this case the thing must be done at that very place, and a tender of doing it in that place is a sufficient performance of the condition; as for example, if a feoffment be made on condition that the feoffee shall pay to the feoffor twenty pound on Easter day at Dale; and the feoffee tender the twenty pound the same day at Sale: And albeit the feoffor be at Sale, and he tender the twenty pound to his person there the same day, yet this is no performance of the condition. And if a feoffment be made in mortgage, on condition for the payment of money at a day, and no place is set for the payment thereof, in this case the mortgagor must seek the mortgagee and tender it to his person at his perill: and tender of the money upon the land mortgaged, is not a sufficient performance of the condition. And if a feoffment be made, on condition that the feoffee shall infeoffe the feoffor of white acre in Dale; in this case the feoffment, or the tender of it must be in Dale, and cannot be elsewhere, and a tender of it there is sufficient to perform the condition. So if the condition be, that the feoffee shall in Easter Terme next acknowledge satisfaction upon a Judgement in the Kings Bench; this must be done there, and cannot be done elsewhere. So if a feoffment in fee be made of white acre, rendering rent to the feoffor and his heirs, on condition that if the rent be not paid, the feoffment to be void, and no place is set for the payment of it; in this case the feoffee is not bound to tender his rent any where for the saving of the condition, but upon the land, and a tender there is sufficient. And if a man make a feoffment in fee, without any reservation of rent precedent in the deed, on condition that the feoffee and his heirs shall render a yearly rent of twenty shillings a year to the feoffor and his heirs, and if they fail, that the feoffor shall reenter; in this case also it seems the payment or tender must be upon the land. But if the condition be, that he shall render twenty shillings a year to a stranger, and his heirs; this is no rent, nor in the nature of a rent, and therefore in this case the feoffee must render it to the person of the stranger where he can find him at the day, or else hee doth break the condition, and tender upon the ground is not sufficient. But in these cases if the nature of the thing to be done be such as will not admit of such a carriage from place to place to seek out the person of the feoffor &c. there albeit the thing to be done be corporall or transient, and not a locall thing, yet he that is to do it shall not be bound to seek out the person of the other; as for example. If an estate be made, on condition that the grantee shall deliver twenty quarters of wheat, or twenty load of wood to the grantor at such a time, and no place is set for the doing thereof; in this case the grantee is not not bound to cary the same about to seek the Feoffor or Grantor, as he is bound to cary money; but before the day, the Grantee is to know of the Grantor where he will appoint to receive it, and there it must be tendered. And the like Law, is for the most part in conditions of obligations. Co. super Litt. 210. 211. 213. Litt. sect. 243. 345. Bro. Condition 60.

A Caveat.

It is best therefore in all these cases, and herein be that is to be the agent is to take care to have certainty of time and place set down in the condition for the doing of the thing that is to be done, and the more certain it is, the better it is for him.

4 In respect of other matters
To pay money.

If a Lease be made, on condition that the Lessee shall pay to the Lessor all such sums of money as the Lessor shall lay out in such a business; in this case the Lessor must first tender to the Lessee a note of the charges before the Lessee is bound to pay, and untill this be done the condition cannot be broken. And after a note is given also, he shall have some reasonable time to provide the money. And if he tender him a note of more then in truth he doth lay out, the Lessee if he know it, may pay so much as is laid out, and he may refuse to pay any more. Per Just. Bridgeman.

To make an estate.

If Lands be granted, upon condition that A shall make an estate of Lands at the charges of B; in this case A must doe the first act. viz. notifie to B what assurance he will make before B is bound to tender the charges. Co. 5. 22.

To deliver household stufte, or pay money.

If a Feoffment be made, on condition that the Feoffee shall give so much household stufte to the Feoffor, or so much money for it as it shall be rated at by two indifferent persons to this end to be chosen; it seems in this case the election of the two men must be by the Feoffee; but if the words be by two persons to be indifferently chosen, then the election shall be by both parties, for in the first case the word Indifferent doth goe to the praising, not to the persons, Pasche 17. Jac. B. R.

To cleanse ditches.
To dwell in the house.

If a Feoffment be made of a ground, on condition that the Feoffee shall rake the ditches, in this case if the Feoffee doe it once, it is a sufficient performance of the condition. And yet if a man grant a house for life, on condition that the Lessee shall dwell and be resident in the house during the said Terme; in this case it is not sufficient that he dwell in it once during the Terme, but must doe so all the Terme, or else the condition is broken. 27 H. 8, 1. Plow. Colshirfts case. 21.

To give goods.

If an Annuity be granted of Ten marks per Annum to a man, on condition, or till he be promoted to a benefice by the Grantor, and it is not said of what value the benefice shall be, in this case it shall be taken for a benefice of as great value, and of as good an estate as the Annuity is, otherwise the Grantee may refuse it, and yet his Annuity shall continue. Perk. sect. 804.

If a Feoffment be made on condition that the Feoffee shall give all his goods si qua fuerint, or give all his Pikes in his pond si qua fuerint; in this case the words shall be taken in the present tense, for the goods and Pikes that are at the time of the grant. But if a Feoffment be on condition that the Feoffee shall give all his goods in London si qua fuerint, that did belong to J. S. in this case the words shall be taken in the preterperfect tense. Perk. sect. 742.

Not to disturb the Lessor in raking the wood.

If one make a Lease of the Manor of Dale (wherein is a wood called Dale wood) excepting all the woods and underwoods growing in Dale wood and all the great trees growing elsewhere, and this is upon condition that if the Lessee shall disturbe the Lessor to cut and sell the wood and underwood excepted the Lease to be void; in this case it seems the condition shall extend only to the wood and underwood in Dale wood, and not to the trees elsewhere, but if the words of the condition be [shall disturbe, &c. to cut &c. the wood and underwood on the premises] contra Howard & Fulchers case. Hil. 3. Car. B. R.

To pay Rent,

If one grant Land rendring Rent at the Feasts of S. Michael and our Lady or within a Moneth after, on condition that if it be behind after the Feasts and daies limited by the space of eight weeks that the Lease shall be void; in this case the eight weeks shall be accounted from the Moneth which is the twenty eight day after the Feast. Dirr 142.

If the condition be made in the Copulative and consist of divers parts, every part must be observed, or the condition will not be performed. But when it is made made in the disjunctive, if any part of it be observed it is a sufficient performance of the condition. And therefore if a feoffment be made, on condition to reinfeoffe and pay twenty pound, and the feoffee do reinfeoffe but not pay the twenty pound; in this case the condition is broken. But if the condition be to reinfeoffe or pay twenty pound and the feoffee doe one of them; it is a good performance of the condition. And when it is made in the copulative and disjunctive both, it shall be taken in the disjunctive only, as if a lease be made to A. and B. his wife, on condition that the said A. and B. or any child between them shall so long live; this shall be taken in this sense, if the husband wife or child shall so long live, so that the lease shall not be determined by the death of the husband or wife alone. If there be two provisos in two severall indentures of conveyance of severall Manors to A. and B. that if the feoffor pay or tender twenty shillings to A. and B. or the heirs of A. that the Conveyance shall be void, and A. die; in this case tender to B. is not sufficient, and it must be made to the heir of A. and it must be twenty shillings for every proviso: but otherwise it is of a collaterall act. 12.H.7.10.

If the words of a condition be thus, that upon such a contingent the party shall enter and retaine the land untill the thing be done &c. in this case and by these words the estate is not determined, as it is by these words, [that the estate shall be void, or that the grantor shall reenter, or the like.] And in these words there is a difference also to be observed: for if the words be, that upon such a contingent the estate shall cease and be void, and it be a lease for years to which the condition is annexed, the estate is ipso facto void without entry or claime, and can never be affirmed afterwards; but if the words of the close of the condition be, that the feoffor, lessor, &c. shall reenter, without any other words, albeit it be in a lease for years, yet the lease is not void untill he hath made an actuall reentry. But in both cases if the estate to be avoided be an estate in fee, or for life, it is only voidable by the breach of the condition, and must be made void by entry or claime, and untill this be done the grantor can make no new estate of the land. But in the first case before the party shall retaine the land and take the profits of it in the nature of a pledge untill the thing be done agreed upon in the condition, and then the other party shall have the land againe. See more in the next questions. And in Obligation Numb. 7. Covenant Numb. 6. Co. 3. 64. super Litt. 203, 204. Dier. 6. 127: 11. H. 7. 21.

The words of a condition may be performed and not the intent, and the intent may be performed and not the words; and then for the most part a condition is performed when the intent and meaning of it is observed. And therefore if a feoffment be made, on condition that the feoffee or his heirs shall make an estate to the feoffor and his wife in taile before such a day, and before the day the husband die, and then he make an estate as neere it as he may, viz. to the wife for life without impeachment of waite and after to the heirs of the body of the husband; this is a good performance of the condition. And if the condition be that the grantee shall make a feoffment of land; and he make a lease of the land first, and then a release to the lessee and his heirs; this is tantamount and a good performance of the condition. Co. 8. 90. Litt. Sect 352. Co. 3. 64. 282. 2 H. 4. 11.

If a feoffment be made, on condition that if the feoffor or his heirs pay ten pound by a day the feoffment to be void, and the feoffor before the day doth commit treason and is executed and so dieth without heire, and after before the day the heire is restored, and he at the day doth pay the money; in this case this is a good performance notwithstanding there was once a disability. So as if heretofore one had made a feoffment, on condition to reinfeoffe by a day; and before the day the feoffee had entred into Religion, and then had been dearraigned, and at the day had made the feoffment; this had been a good performance of the condition. Co. super Litt. 222. Perk. sect. 803, 803.

If a Feoffment be made, upon condition that if the Feoffee shall pay to the Feoffor Ten pound such a day, that then he shall have the land to him and his heirs, otherwise that the Feoffor shall re-enter, or if it be made on condition that the feoffee shall pay ten pound to the feoffor such a day; and before the day the feoffee sell the land; in this case the seller or the buyer either of them may tender the money at the day, and this will be a good performance of the condition, for he that hath interest in the land on the one side, or in the condition as party or privy on the other side may tender and performe the condition to save the estate. Co. 5. 96 & super Litt. 208. 209:

Testament.

If lands be mortgaged, (or which is al one) if a feoffment be made of lands on condition that if the mortgagor or feoffor pay ten pound to the feoffee such a day that then the estate shall be void, and before the day the mortgagor or feoffor die; in this case the heire or executor of the feoffor, the Ordinary, the Gardian in Chivalry or Socage of the heire of the feoffor, or any other by either of their commandement precedent, or assent subsequent may pay this money at the day, and payment or tender of it by either of them at the day is a good performance of the condition. And so also it seemes is the law upon a devise of land to I. S. paying to I. D. twenty pound; if I. S. die his heire or executor may pay twenty pound, and this is a good performance of the condition. But in these cases if a stranger of his owne head without any such commandement or agreement pay the ten pound; this will be no good performance of the condition. And yet perhaps if the party that is to pay it be an Ideot; the payment or tender by any one in his behalfe shall be a good performance of the condition. And if a feoffment be made, on condition that if the feoffor pay ten pound to the feoffee that the estate shall be void, and no time is set for the payment of this money, and the feoffor die before any payment or tender made; in this case his heire cannot tender it and so perform the condition. Litt. Sess. 534. 537. 15. H. 7. 2. Co. super Litt. 206. Litt. Bro. Sess. 125. Litt. Sess. 337.

If a feoffment be made, on condition that if the feoffor and I. S. pay ten pound such a day, the feoffment to be void, and the feoffor die before the day and I. S. alone pay it; this is a good performance of the condition. Co. super Litt. 207. Bro. Condition 109.

If a feoffment be made, on condition that if the feoffor pay to the feoffee or his heirs ten pound such a day, and before the day the feoffee doth grant the land away to another; in this case the money may be paid to the feoffee himself, or if he be dead to his heirs, and this payment is a good performance of the condition. And if the words of the condition be [That if he pay to the feoffee, his heirs or assignes &c.] in this case payment to either of them is a good performance of the condition; so as if in this case the feoffee make a feoffment over, it is in the election of the first feoffor to pay the money to the first or second feoffee, and if the first feoffee die, to pay it to his heire or second feoffee: But payment to an executor or administrator in this case is not a good performance. And yet if the words of the condition be, that if he pay to the feoffee [without words, heirs, executors &c.] ten pound such a day, in this case the payment may be made to the executor or administrator of the feoffee after his death, and such a payment is a sufficient performance of the condition: And if the words of the condition be [that if the feoffor pay to the feoffee, his heirs, executors or administrators &c.] in this case payment to either of them is a good performance of the condition. But payment to an assignee in this case is not good. And if the words be, that if he pay to the feoffee and his heirs &c. in this case payment to his executors or to his assignes is not a good performance of the condition. So that in all these cases it seemes for the person to whom payment is to be made the words of the condition are precisely to be pursued. Co. super Litt. 110. 5. 96. Dir. 181. 101. Co. 6. 69. Litt. Sess. 339.

To tender money.

If a feoffment be made, on condition that if the feoffor shall tender twelve pence to the feoffee such a day the feoffment to be void, and afterwards the feoffee is disseised of the land, and after the feoffor doth tender the twelve pence to the feoffee at the day; this is a good performance of the condition. Paf. 9. Jac. 5. Sir Richard Lass case.

If

If a feoffment be made to two men, on condition that they shall reinfesse the feoffor, or make a lease to him by a day, and before the day one of them die, and the survivor doth reinfesse, or make the lease; this is a good performance of the condition. And so also it seemes the law is if both the feoffees be living, for by his owne acceptance it seemes he hath dispensed with the condition and so cannot enter for the breach of it, Dier. 69. 41. E. 3. 25.

To reinfesse.

If a feoffment be made on condition that the feoffee shall infesse the feoffor of the Manor of Dale by such a time, and before the time appointed the feoffee doth grant a rent charge out of the Manor to a stranger, and then at the time appointed makes a feoffment of the Manor according to the condition; in this case this is a good performance of the condition. But if in this case the feoffee before the time appointed grant away to a stranger twenty acres parcell of the Manor, and then doth make a feoffment of the Manor according to the condition; this is no good performance of the condition. And if a feoffment be made on condition that the feoffees or lessees in trust of such land shall grant an Annuity out of it, and some of them only doe grant this Annuity; this is no good performance of the condition. Plow. 23. 3 H. 7. 4. 21 H. 6. 101

If there be a feoffment made, upon condition that the feoffee shall make a lease of land to the feoffor for life, the remainder to I. S. in fee, and the feoffee make a lease to the feoffor for life, and after by another deed doth grant the reversion to I. S. this is a good performance of the condition. 44 E. 3. 22.

To make a lease.

If a feoffment be made upon condition that the feoffee shall purchase lands or tenements to the value of twenty pound per Annum, and he purchase a rent common, or any such like thing to that value; this is a good performance of the condition. But if in this case the feoffee and another purchase so much land together jointly this is no good performance of the condition. So if the feoffee alone purchase lands to the value of twenty pound per Annum, and there is a rent issuing of it which must be deducted; this is no good performance. And yet in these cases, if the stranger Jointenant release to the feoffee all his right in the land, or the grantee of the rent release to him the rent before the time of the performing of the condition the condition is well performed in both cases. Tantum valet terra quantum vendi potest.

To purchase lands.

And if one make a feoffment in fee, on condition that if the feoffee purchase land to the value of twenty shillings, the feoffment shall be void, and after the feoffee disseise another man of land to that value: it is said that by this the condition is performed, Sed quere. And that if he recover so much land in value in an action: that this is no performance of the condition. Sed quere. For this seemes to me a better performance of the condition then the former. Perk. f. 807, 808. 21 H. 6. 28. Dier. 15. Perk. f. 812.

Payment.

If lands be granted, on condition to pay money, and the money is tendred according to the condition, but either no body is ready to receive it, or it is refused: this is a good performance of the condition. And after a man hath once refused the money so tendred to him according to the condition, he hath no remedy in law to recover it except it be money lent upon a mortgage. Dier. 181. Lit. f. 334, 335. 338. Co. super Litt. 209. Termes of the law six. Coine.

To pay money: Tender.

And if the payment be made part of it with counterfeit Coine, and the party accept it and put it up, this is a good payment and consequently a good performance of the condition. Co. super Litt. 212. Fitz. Barre 343.

And if at the day of payment the parties doe account together, and he to whom the money is to be paid being indebted to the other, that debt by agreement is allowed, and the residue is paid and accepted: this is a good performance of the condition. Co. super Litt. 212.

Acceptance.

So if the party that is to receive it accept and take new security by bond or statute for the money: this is a good performance of the condition. Dier. 45. Co. 5: 96.

And so in most cases, when by a condition a thing is to be done one way; and to be done to the party to the condition himself and not to a stranger, and he doth accept it another way: this is a good performance of the condition. Volenti non fit iniuria. But if the thing to be done be to be to a stranger, and one that is no party to the condition, and it be done in any other manner, and he accept thereof: this is no performance of the condition. And so also if the time of doing the thing be past, as if one make a feoffment to me, on condition that if he pay me ten pound such a day the feoffment shall be void, and he doth not pay me at the day, but doth die, and after by agreement between his heire and me he doth pay me the ten pound, and I receive and accept it, and thereupon I suffer him to enter and hold the land: in this case the condition is not performed, but I may enter upon him and out him notwithstanding. Perk. Sect. 392.

If the mortgagor pay the money according to the condition, and after the mortgage deliver it to the mortgagor as his own money, the condition is performed, and the mortgage discharged notwithstanding. Adjudge Mich 40. & 41. Eliz. B.R. Powel versus Bartholomew.

If a feoffment be made to I. S. on condition that if the feoffor pay to the executors or administrators of I. S. ten pound the feoffment shall be void; and I. S. die, and the ten pound is paid to the executors of I. S. according to the condition, but it is covinously done, i. there is a private agreement that the feoffor shall have all, or part of his money againe: this payment in this case is no good performance of the condition, but that payment that must be a performance of a condition in this case to fetch lands out of the hands of an heir must be real, full and effectually. Brownl. part. 64.

To get the good will of I. S.

If a lease be made, on condition that the lessee shall get the good will of I. S. and the lessor doth come to I. S. first and aske his good will, and he denie it him, and after when the lessee doth aske it he doth grant it him; in this case the condition is performed. So if the condition be, that he shall get his good will by such a day, and at the first being desired he denieth it, but afterwards and before the day he doth grant it. And yet if no day be set, and he desire his good will and I. S. denieth it and afterwards he doth get his good will; it seemes this is no performance of the condition. 14 H. 8. 17.

If there be two things in the copulative to be done by the condition, both must be done, otherwise the condition will not be performed. Perk. Sect. 746, see before.

2. When the act is to be done by a stranger, to pay money.
3. When the act is to be done to a stranger. To make an estate. Tender.

If a feoffment be made, on condition that if the feoffor and I. S. pay ten pound at Michaelmas the feoffment shall be void; and before the day the feoffor die, and I. S. pay the money; this is a good performance of the condition. But if the feoffor beliving, contra. Co. super Lit 219.

If a feoffment be made on condition to make an estate to a stranger by a day, and before the day he die; in this case if an estate be made as neere the condition as may be, it is sufficient. Plow. 133. Co. 3. 64.

If a feoffment be made to I. S. on condition that he shall infeoffe I. D. and his heirs; and I. S. doth tender the feoffment to I. D. and he doth refuse to take it; this is no performance of the condition in this case. But if it be to be done to the feoffor himself, contra. And so also it is, if the condition be to make an estate taile, or any lesser estate to a stranger, and he tender it and the stranger refuse it; this is no good performance of the condition. And if a feoffment be made, on condition to reinfeoffe the feoffor and his wife in tail the remainder to W. in fee, and he tender it to the wife only and not to him in remainder; this is no good performance of the condition. Co. super Litt. 209. 19 H. 6. 67. Perk. Sect. 815, 816. 2 E. 4. 2. 19. H. 6. 67.

10. What act shall be a breach of a Condition in deed And when a condition in deed shall be said to be broken, Or not.

And the same law for the most part is in conditions of obligations. See more in Obligations at Numb. 9.

If a feoffment be made, on condition that the feoffee shall not infeoffe I. S. of the land; and the feoffee doth make a feoffment to I. S. and I. D., this is a breach of the condition. And so also it is if the feoffee make a feoffment to I. D. to the intent that he shall alien to I. S. Quando aliquid prohibetur fieri, directè prohibetur & per obliquum.

And

And yet if the Feoffee in the case before alien to I. D. and after he doth alien to I. S. this is no breach of the condition. And if the condition be, that the Feoffee shall not infeoffe I. S. and he die, and his Heir infeoffe I. S. this is no breach of the condition. Co. super Litt. 222. Dier. 45. 46. Not to alien.

If a Lease for years be made, on condition that the Lessee shall not assigne, or alien, the Term, or the Land during his life without the licence of the Lessor, the Lessee doth give it by his will without licence; this is a breach of the condition and forfeiture of the estate. But if he make an executor of his will only, this is no breach. And if the condition be that the Lessee shall not alien, and he die, and his executor alien, this is no breach of the condition. And if the condition be that the Lessee shall not alien, but to his children, and the Lessee by will devise it to his executors; it seems this is a breach of the condition. So if he devise that A. his son shall have his Term after his wife, & doth make A. his son his executor, it seems this is a breach of the condition. But if he do not make A. his executor, contra. And in cases of devise albeit the executors doe not assent yet the condition is broken, as in case where a reversion is granted on condition that the Grantee shall not alien it, and he doth alien it, but no attornment is to this grant; yet it seems this is a breach of the condition. And if a Lease for years be made, on condition that the Lessee or his assignes shall not alien, and the Lessee doth make his wife his Executrix, and she doth take another husband, and he doth alien it; it seems this is a breach of the condition and a forfeiture of the estate. But if a lease be made on condition that the Lessee shall not alien without the licence of the Lessor, and after the Lessor die, and the Lessee assigne, or the Lessee die and his executors or administrators assigne; this is no breach of the condition in either of these cases. So if a Lease be made, on condition that the Lessee shall not alien the terme during his life, and he makes an executor, but doth not devise it to him; this is no breach of the condition. And if a Lease be made, on condition that the Lessee his executors or assignes shall not alien the Terme to any persons without the licence of the Lessor but to the wife or one of the children of the Lessee, and the Lessee die, and his Executors alien to one of the children of the Lessee and he alien to a stranger without licence; this is no breach of the condition. And if one make a Lease of a house and Land, on condition that the Lessee shall not parcell out the Land or any part of it from the house, and the Lessee doth grant all his Terme in the house and part of the Land, and doth keep the rest, and after doth Lease that part also; this is a breach of the condition. If a Lease be made to I. S. for years on condition, that if he shall devise other then for a year, that the Lessor may reenter, and after he devise it by will; this is a Forfeiture, Gouldsb. 184. Dier 45. 65. Per. 3. Justices B. R. 3. Jac. Dier 6. Dier 152. Co. 4. 120. Hil. 38. El. Marb versus Curtis.

If a Lease be made of a house, on condition that the Lessee shall not suffer any woman great with child to harbour or lodge in the house six daies after notice given by the Lessor, and the Lessee doe suffer any such person after notice given, albeit the Lessor consent to it; yet the condition is broken. But if the Lessor doe volens volens keep such a woman there against the mind of the Lessee; this is no breach of the condition. Co. 892.

Not to suffer a woman with child in the house.

If a Lease be made on condition that if any waft be done the Lessor shall re-enter; in this case if the house fall by a tempest, this is no breach of the condition, for this is not waft: but if it be uncovered by tempest, and the Tenant hath a convenient time to repair it, and doth not, but doth suffer the timber to perish for want of covering; this is a breach of the condition and the Lessor may enter and put out the Lessee. And if a Lease be made on condition that the Lessee shall not doe waft, and he suffer waft to be made in decay of the houses, &c. it seems the condition is broken. Sed quare. 12 H. 4. 5. Bro. Condition. 40. Per Dier and Walsh Justices. Dier. 281.

Not to doe waft.

If a Lease be made, on condition that if the Lessee be minded to sell his estate the Lessor shall have the first offer thereof, giving as much as another will give; in this case if the Lessee doth not give notice when he is minded to sell it, he doth

Not to sell till the Lessor refuse it to any other, doth break the condition : but if when he is minded to sell he doth tell the Lessor of his purpose and what he is offered for it, and the Lessor doth either say he will not have it, or that he will not give so much for it, or doth not accept it, but doth delay, &c. and then the Lessee doth sell it to another: this is no breach of the condition, neither is he bound to wait upon him in this case. Dier 13.

To make an estate.

If a Feoffment be made, on condition that the Feoffee shall make a Feoffment in Fee, gift in taile, lease for life, or years of the Land to the Feoffor, or to a stranger by a day ; and before the day the Feoffee doth disable himself to doe it, either by making some estate of the same thing to some other person in taile, for life, years in present or future, or for one year, or by taking a wife whereby she may be entitled to dower, or by suffering a recovery of the Land, or by granting of any Rent, Common, or the like, or by entring into any Statute, &c. or by suffering any Judgement to be had against him, or by doing any other such like act, whereby he cannot convey the Land according to the condition in the same plight, quality and freedom it was at the time of the conveyance made : in either of these cases the condition is ipso facto broken. And albeit the Land be afterward discharged and the party againe enabled before the day to performe the condition, yet this will not save the breach. And so also it is of a limitation. But when the condition is to be performed of the part of the Feoffor or Grantor, there disability before the time will not hurt so as he be againe enabled at the time. And so also it is when the condition is to be performed of the part of the Feoffee, and there is no certain day set for the performance of the thing, for in this case albeit he be once disabled, yet if he be afterwards againe enabled, and doe it within the time that the Law doth give him to do it ; in this case the condition is not broken. And so also it is, if the Feoffee be disseised, and during the disseisin, he doe any such act as before ; in this case before his entry this is no breach of the condition, for till then the charge doth not bind the Land. And so likewise it is when the disability doth proceed from another cause, as where one doth make a Feoffment on condition that the Feoffee shall re-enseoffe before such a day, and before the day the Feoffor disseise the Feoffee and keep him out till the day be past, or one doth make a Feoffment, on condition the Feoffee shall marry B. before such a day, and before the day the Feoffor himself doth marry her so that the Feoffee cannot perform the condition ; in these cases the condition is not broken. Co. super Litt. 221. 222. Co. 2. 58. Perk sect. 80. 803. Litt. sect. 355. Co. super Litt. 206.

To employ the profits to charitable uses.

If one make an estate of Lands (held in Capite) on condition that he to whom it is made shall employ the profits thereof to divers charitable uses, and he die his Heir within age, by reason whereof the King hath the Land during the minority of the Heir, so that the profits cannot be employed ; this is no breach of the condition. Trin. 13 lac. Slade versus Tompson. B. R.

To re-enseoffe.

If one make a Feoffment of Land, on condition to re-enseoffe in convenient time, and the Feoffee doth not so but doth make a Lease to another ; this is a double breach of the condition. And the same Law is of a Devise by will in this manner. Co. 1. in Porters case.

To make an estate.

If a Feoffment be made, upon condition that the Feoffee shall make some estate to the Feoffor, or some other by a day, and the Feoffee before the day say to him to whom the estate is to be made, that he will never make the estate, notwithstanding he doth make the estate before the day according to the condition ; in this case it is said the condition is broken. Sed quere of this, for it seemes if he really deny it before, and actually performe it at the day, that this is a good performance of the condition.

To suffer one to take his goods.

As if a Lease be made of a house, on condition that the Lessee shal not disturbe the Lessor in the taking away of his goods out of the house, and when the party doth come or send to fetch them the Lessee doth only forbid them ; this in this case is no breach of the condition, and it was agreed in this case that words without some deeds, as shutting the dore against them, forcible resistance or laying of hands upon them, or the like are no breach of such a condition.

And

And if a Lease be made, on condition that the Lessor shall be four times a year in the house demised without being ousted by the Lessee, and the Lessee seeing him comming doth shut the dores or windows against him; this hath been thought to be no breach of this condition. Brownl. 2 part. 277. Perk. sect. 796: Co. 8. 90.

To suffer one to come into a house.

If a Lease be made, on condition that the Lessee shall pay yearly to the Lessor during the Terme ten pound; in this case if he faile of payment once, the condition is broken and estate forfeit. So if one make a Feoffment in Fee of Land, on condition to pay ten pound yearly to I. S. if he faile once, the condition is broken. Dier 33. 3 H. 4. 8.

To pay a yearly Rent or sum.

If a Lease be made of a Manor in which are divers Copyholders, on condition that the Lessee shall not molest, vex, or put out any Copyholder paying his duties and services, in this case if the Lessee enter upon, and put out any one Copyholder, this is a breach of the condition. But if he enter vi & armis upon a Copyholders Tenements, and there beat him only, or the like: this is no breach of the condition. Penner versus Glover 37. & 38 El. Mich. B. R. per curiam.

Not to molest Copyholders.

If there be a condition to pay Rent, and the Lessee let part of the Land to other undertenants, or let all the Land to another for part of the time, and he undertake the Rent still, and faile of payment: in this case the condition is broken and estate forfeit. But if there be any covin and practise in the case between the first Lessor and the Lessee, the undertenants may perhaps have relief in equity. Crompt. Jur. 65:

To pay Rent.

Equity.

If one make a Lease for years of Land, and then also make a Feoffment in Fee of the Lands on condition that if the Lessee be disturbed in his Terme that he shall have the Fee-simple, and he is disturbed by the Feoffor or by his means; in this case the condition is broken and the Lessee shall have the Fee-simple. But if the disturbance be by a stranger and not by the Feoffor or by his means or consent; this is no breach of the condition. Co. 8. 90.

Not to disturb

If a Lease be made on condition that the Lessee shall not be outlawed, and he is outlawed without proclamation; it seems this is no breach of the condition, because the outlawry is not good. Per 2 Justices H. 7 Jac. B. R.

Not to be outlawed.

If a condition possible at the time of creation become after impossible in part by the act of God, and the party doe not performe that which is possible, the condition is broken. Litt. sect. 352. Co. 2. 59:

If a man make a Lease for years on condition, and the Lessee doth not know of it, and after the Lessor doth by will give the Land to the Lessee without condition, and the Lessee doth such an act as is a breach of the condition; in this case the condition is not broken, for the Lessee must have notice of the condition ere he can break him. Co. 8. 92.

If a Lease be made rendring Rent, on condition, that if the Rent be not paid within twenty daies the Lessor shall re-enter, and the Rent is not paid; in this case the condition is broken, but the Lessor cannot enter untill he hath made a legall demand, and if he die before he doe it, his Heir shall never take advantage of that breach, but it is discharged for ever. Doe. and Sen. 35. 13 H. 4. 17.

To pay Rent.

When an act is to be done in time convenient, or otherwise, and the party doe it not by the time appointed by Law; the condition is broken. Litt. sect. 353. Plow. 30:

If one grant an Annuity pro consilio impenso & impendendo, and the grantor require advise, and the Grantee refuse or neglect to give it: this is a breach of the condition and a forfeiture of the estate. And if the deed be, that he shall goe to such a place, to give counsell, and he require him to goe thither, and he refuse it, this is a forfeiture of the estate. But if he refuse to goe with him to another place, or give counsell to his adversary being not required to give counsell to him, this is no breach of the condition nor forfeiture of his Annuity. And if one had heretofore demised his Land to be sold by his executors, and to have been distributed for his soule, and the executors had not sold it in time convenient, or had taken the profits to their own use: this had been a breach of the condition.

11. When a condition in Law shall be said to be broken. Or not. Forfeiture.

Infant. Women-covert.

12. Who may enter for a condition broken. And what persons shall take advantage of a condition or a limitation. And what not.

See more in the last foregoing division, and in Obligation Numb. 10: Covenant Numb. 7. The same Law is for the most part of conditions of obligations. See Obligation Numb. 10. 21 E. 3. 7. 8 H. 6. 24. Dier 369. Litt. Sect. 381.

Every particular estate hath a condition in Law Annexed to it, and therefore if Tenant for life in Dower, by the courtesie, or after possibility of issue extinct, Lessee for years, Tenant by statute merchant, elegit or the like make any absolute or conditional estate of the Lands they hold in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, or for life, and give livery of seisin thereupon or levy a fine Sur connissance de drois or suffer a recovery of the Land, or the like; this is a breach of the condition in Law and a forfeiture of their estate. Also if any such Tenant (except tenant in tail after possibility of issue extinct) doe wast in the Lands they doe so hold; this is a breach of the condition in Law, and a forfeiture of their estate in so much as the wast is committed. But if an Infant or feme covert that hath such an estate shall make any such estate, &c. this is no breach of the condition in Law. And yet if such a person doe wast, this is a breach of the condition in Law. And so also if any such person be an Officer and doe any thing which is a cause of forfeiture in another; this will be a forfeiture in him or her also. Co. 2. 15. 8. 44. super Litt. 233.

If any keeper of a Park without warrant kill any Deer, fell or cut any wood and convert it to his own use, pull down the lodge or any house with the Park used for hay for the Deer, or the like; this is a breach of the condition in Law. So also if a keeper shall not look to the Game, but the Deer be killed by his default, and damage come to the Lord; by this also the condition is broken. But the not attending upon such an Office for two or three dayes if the Lord have no special loss thereby, is no cause of forfeiture. Co. super Litt. 223.

Offices that are for the Administration of Justice, or of clerkship in any Court of Record, or concerning the Kings Treasure, Revenue, Account, Alnage, Auditorship, &c. have also conditions in Law annexed to them, and therefore if such Officers shall sell their Offices or misdeameane themselves in their Offices, by this the condition in Law may be broken, and they may forfeit them. Co. super Litt. 234.

As no man may create or annex a condition to an estate, but he that doth create the estate it self, so neither can a man give or reserve the power, title or benefit of re-entry and avoidance of an estate upon the breach of a condition to any other but to him or them, or at least to one of them that doth make the estate, his or their Heirs, Executors or Administrators, &c. for it is a Rule of the common Law, That none may take advantage of a condition but parties and privies in Right and representation, as Heirs, Executors, &c. of naturall persons, and the successors of politique persons: and that neither Privies nor Assignes in Law, as Lords by Escheate, nor in deed, as Grantees of Reversions, nor Privies in estate, as he to whom a remainder is limited, shall take benefit of entry or re-entry by force of a condition. Litt. Sect. 347. Plow. 175. Co. 2. 62. 347. 556. Dier. 131. Co. super. Litt. 214. 215. Doct. & Stud. 93. Perk. sect. 830. 831. 833. 835. Plow. 488. 489.

And therefore if a man had made a Lease for life reserving Rent, on condition that if the Rent be behind, the Lessor, his Heirs and assignes shall re-enter, and after had granted the Reversion to a stranger; this Grantee should not by the common Law have had benefit by his condition. But if the Lessor had died, his Heir or the Gardian in Chivalry or Socage of such an Heir if he had been an Infant and in ward might have taken advantage by the condition. And if one had been possessed of a Lease for years, and had granted his Terme upon condition and had died; his Executors or Administrators might have had advantage of this condition. Brownl. 1 part. 149. 2 part 56. 224. &c.

And at this day the Law is still the same as touching Privies in blood, for an Heir shall take advantage of a condition, though no estate descend to him from the Ancestor. And therefore if one be seised of Land of the part of his mother, and he make a Feoffment in Fee of it, on condition, and die, and the condition is broken; in this case the Heir of the part of the Father shall enter, but as soon as he hath entred, the Heir of the part of the mother shall enter upon him and enjoy the Land.

And

And if a man be Seised of Land in the right of his wife, and he make a Feoffment in Fee of it, upon condition, and die; the Heire of the husband shall enter for the condition Broken, but the wife shall have the Land. And so also is the Law as touching Privies in right and representation, for Executors and Administrators shall take advantage of a condition now as heretofore. And so also shall the Successors of a Deane and Chapter, Bishop, Arch-deacon, Parson, Prebend, or any body Politique or Corporate, Ecclesiasticall or Temporall; these shall take advantage of conditions as heretofore they did. So also the Law is the same as touching Privies in Law, for they shall no more take advantage of a condition now then heretofore. But as touching Grantees of reversions and Privies in estate, there is some alteration made of the Law, for by a new Law it is provided, That all persons which shall have any Grant of the King of any reversion of any lands &c. which pertained to Monasteries &c. as also all other persons being Grantees or assignees &c. to or by any other person or persons, and their Heirs, Executors, Successors and assignees, shall have like advantage against the Feoffees &c. by entry for not payment of Rent, or for doing Waste, or for other Forfeiture &c. as the said Lessors or Grantors themselves ought or might have had. Sat. 31. H. 8. Cap. 34.

And for the true understanding of the sense of this Statute and the ancient Common Law further touching this point, 1. These Diversities must be observed to be taken before the Statute which take place still. Co. super Lit. 214. Plow. 27.

1. Between a condition that doth require a Reentry, and a limitation that doth ipso facto determine the estate without Entry, for albeit a stranger might not take advantage of the first, yet he might take advantage of the last by the Common Law. And therefore if a man at this day make a Lease to another quousque, or until I, S. come from Rome, or if a man make a Lease to a woman quoadm in casta vixeris, or if a man make a Lease to a widow si tantum in pura viduitate viveret, or if a man make a Lease to another for one hundred years if he live so long, and then the lessor doth grant the reversion to a stranger; in all these and such like cases the grantee of the reversion may take advantage of the limitation, for after the estate is ended by the limitation he may enter. Co. 10. 36. F. N. B. 301.

2. Between a condition annexed to a freehold and a condition annexed to a lease for years, for if before the Statute a man had made a gift in taile, or lease for life, on condition that if the donee or lessee did not pay tenne pounds by such a day the gift or lease should be void or cease; in this case the grantee of the reversion could not by the common law have taken advantage of the condition, for it could not be void or cease, but by entry which could not be transferred to another. But if a lease for years had been made on such a condition; a grantee of the reversion might by the common law have taken advantage of this condition, for the estate in this case was by the breach of the condition ipso facto void without entrie. But now the grantee of the reversion shall have advantage of the condition in both these cases. Co. 3. 64, 65. Co. super Lit. 214. 11 H. 7. 17. Plow. 136.

3. Between a condition in deed and a condition in law, for by the very common law not only the grantee of the reversion, but also the Lord by Escheat, may either of them have advantage of a condition in law for any breach in his owne time. Co. super Lit. 214.

2. These Resolutions and Judgements upon the Statute must be marked. 1. That the Statute is general, and the grantee of the reversion of every common person as well as the King may take advantage of conditions. 2. That the Statute doth extend to grants made to the successor of the King as well as to the King, albeit he only be named in the Statute. 3. That he that comes to the reversion by fine, feoffment, grant, limitation of use, common recovery, or bargain and sale, is such a grantee as is within the intendment of the Statute. 4. That where the Statute doth speak of Feoffees &c. that it doth not extend to gifts in taile, and therefore if a gift in taile be upon condition, and after the donor doth grant the reversion; this grantee shall never have any benefit of this condition. Co. super Lit. 214: Co 5. 13

5. That where the Statute doth speak of grantees and assignees of the reversion; that hereby an assignee of part of the state of the reversion may take advantage of the condition, as if lessee for life be, and the reversion is granted for life &c. or if lessee for years be &c. and the reversion is granted for years &c. in these cases the grantees of the reversion shall have advantage of the conditions.

So if a lessee for one hundred years make a lease for tenne years, rendring rent, with condition of reentry, and the first lessee doth afterward grant his terme and estate to I. S.: in this case I. S. is such a grantee and assignee of the reversion as shall take advantage of the condition. Davie and Mathews case per 2 Justices Trin. 14 Jac. B. R.

6. That as well mediate as immediate grantees i. e. The grantees of grantees in infinitum are intended within this Statute. Co. 5. 112. 113. Co. super Litt. 214.

Prerogative.
Apportionment.

7. That a grantee of part of the reversion cannot take advantage of a condition by this Statute. And therefore if a lease be made of three acres reserving rent upon condition, and the reversion is granted of two of the three acres; in this case the rent shall bee apportioned, but the condition is destroyed except it be in the Kings case. And yet a condition may be apportioned by the act of law, or by the wrong of the lessee. As if a lease be made of two acres (the one of the nature of Burrough English, and the other at the Common law) upon condition, and the lessor having issue two sons die; in this case each of them shall enter for the condition broken, And if the lessee upon condition make a feoffment of part of the land, this doth not destroy the condition. There is therefore herein a difference between a condition that is compulsory, and a power of revocation that is voluntary: for he that hath such a power may by his own act extinguish it in part, by levying a fine of part of the land or otherwise, and yet his power may remaine for the residue as in the case of a limitation; but in the case of a condition he cannot do so. Co. 5. 113, 114. Co. 8. 92.

Power of Revocation.

8. Such grantees as shall have advantage by this Statute, must be complete grantees, and therefore grantees of reversions by fine, or deed, must have attornment ere they can take advantage of the condition. And yet if a reversion be granted by fine to one that hath an no attornment, and he grant it to another that hath attornment; in this case the second grantee shall take advantage of the condition, albeit the first grantee shall not. And the lessee must have notice of the grant of the reversion, ere he in reversion can take any advantage of a condition. And therefore it is, that if the lessor bargain and sell the land by deed indented and inrolled (in which case there needs no attornment); or if the lessor make a feoffment of the land, and so out the lessee, and the lessee reenter (which is an attornment in law); the grantee or feoffee in these cases cannot take advantage of any condition before he hath given notice to the lessee of this grant of the reversion. Co. super Litt. 214. Pasche. 7 Jac. Co. B. per 2 Justices.

9. Such as come in merely by act of law, or paramount, as the Lord of a Villain, the Lord by escheat, the Lord that doth enter for Mortmain, or the like, cannot take advantage of a condition within this Statute. And hence it seems it is that if the lessee for forty yeares make a lease for thirty seven years on condition, and after surrender his estate to his lessor, that the surrenderee shall not have advantage of this condition. Co. super Litt. 215. Dier. 309. Curia in Leeks case. Pasche 7 Jac. Co. B.

10. Albeit the words of the Statute be generall, yet grantees and assignees shall not take benefit of every forfeiture by force of a condition, nor yet of all conditions but onely of such as are inherent. Such as are either incident to the reversion, as for payment of rent, or for the benefit of the State, as for restraining of waite, for causing of reparations, making of fences, skowring of ditches, preserving of woods, and the like. And of conditions that are collateral, such grantees shall not take benefit. And therefore if the condition be for payment of a sum of money in grosse, to restraine alienation, for the delivery of corn, wood, or the like, the grantee of the reversion of the land shall not have advantage of it by this Statute, for these remain as they were before the Statute at the Common law. Per Justice Bridgman.

11. Such

11. Such conditions as are on the part of the Lessor, it seems are not within this Statute; And therefore if one make a Lease for years, on condition that if the Lessor his Heirs or assigns, pay ten pound to the Lessee at our Lady day, the Lease to be void, and the Lessor doth grant the reversion to a stranger before the day; it seems the Grantee shall not take advantage of this; but the condition is gone.

If one make a Lease for years rendring Rent to him and his Heirs, on condition that if it be not paid within fourteen days, that he and his Heirs shall reenter, and the Rent is behind, and the Lessor doth demand it, and then die; in this case the Heir may enter. But if he die before demand, the Heir cannot make a demand, and so take advantage of that breach of the condition, which was in the time of his Ancestor. Doct. & Sr. 25. 13 H. 4. 17.

If a man be possessed of Land for twenty years in the right of his wife, and he make a Lease of it for ten years rendring Rent, with condition of reentry for default of payment, and after the husband die; in this case the wife shall have the Rent, but it seems she shall not take advantage of the condition. Perk. sect. 834.

If a lease be made to I. S. on condition that if such a thing be, or be not done that the Land shall remain to I. D. or that I. D. shall enter; in this case I. D. shall never take advantage of this condition, either by the Common Law or by this Statute. Co. 1. 85. super Litt. 379. Dier. 127. 117.

Regularly where a man will take advantage of a condition, if he may enter, he must enter, and when he cannot enter, he must make a claim; for an estate of freehold or inheritance will not cease without entry or claim. And he that is to have advantage by the condition, may waive his advantage if he will. And untill such entry or claim made, the party that should enter can make no good estate of the thing to any other. But herein a difference is to be observed in the penning of a condition, and between a Lease for years and a Lease for life or a greater estate; for if a Lease for years be made, on condition that upon such a contingent the estate shall cease, or the Lease shall be void; in this case when the thing doth happen, the Lease is ipso facto void without entry or claim. But otherwise it is of a Lease for life, albeit there be the same words in the condition. And if one make a Lease for years, on condition that if such a thing be done, the Lessor shall re-enter; in this case an entry is needfull to avoid the estate. Co. super Litt. 218. 237.

If one make a Feoffment in Fee, gift in taile, or Lease for life, on condition that upon such a contingent the estate shall be void; in this case there must be an entry made after the condition is broken to avoid the estate. So if one bargain and sell his Land by deed indented and inrolled, with proviso that if the bargainor pay &c. then the estate shall cease and be void, and he doth pay the money; in this case the estate is not reverted in the bargainor before an actual re-entry is made. And so it is also if Lands be devised to a man and his Heirs, on condition that if the Devisee doe not pay twenty pound at a day, his estate shall cease and be void; in this case the estate is not void untill an actual re-entry be made. And so also it is if a reversion, Remainder, Advowson, Rent, Common, or the like, be devised on such a condition; in these cases there must be a claim before the estate will be determined. And therefore if a man grant such a thing to another and his Heirs, on condition that if the Grantor pay twenty pound on such a day, the state of the Grantee shall cease or be void, and the grantor doth pay the money according to the condition; in this case the state is not reverted in the Grantor before a claim made at the Church in case of an Advowson, and in the other cases upon the Land. But in case where a man cannot make an entry or claim, there the Law will not compell him to it. And therefore if one grant Land to another for five years, on condition that if he pay to the Grantor within the two first years forty marks, that then he shall have the Fee, otherwise but for term of five years, and livery of seisin is made accordingly, and the Grantee doth not pay this money; in this case after the two years are past, the freehold shall be in the Grantor without entry or claim, for as this case is, he cannot enter, but he must out the Lessee of his term. So if I grant a Rent charge out of my Land upon condition; when the condition is broken, the Rent is extinct, and here needs no claim.

13. Where entry or claim is needfull, to avoid an estate on condition. And where a man may take advantage of a condition without entry or claim. And where not.

Rent.

14. When a condition broken shall make the estate, &c. void ab initio. And when not. And to what intents the Lessor, Feoffor, &c. shall be adjudged by his reentry to be in of his first estate. And to what intents not.

Supposed if a man make a Feoffment in Fee of the Land to me in Fee, on condition that I shall pay him twenty pound such a day, &c. and before the day I let the Land to him for years, rendering Rent, and after the condition is broken; in this case he may retain the Land without entry or claim, and the Rent is extinct. So if one covenant to stand seised to the use of himself for life or otherwise, and then after to the use of others, with a proviso of revocation &c. and after he doth revoke it; in this case all the estates are revested in him without entry or claim.

So if a man make a Feoffment of Land to me in Fee, on condition that I shall pay him twenty pound such a day, &c. and before the day I let the Land to him for years, rendering Rent, and after the condition is broken; in this case he may retain the Land without entry or claim, and the Rent is extinct. So if one covenant to stand seised to the use of himself for life or otherwise, and then after to the use of others, with a proviso of revocation &c. and after he doth revoke it; in this case all the estates are revested in him without entry or claim.

It is generally true that he that doth enter for a condition broken, doth make the estate void ab initio, and that he shall be in of his first estate in the same course and manner as it was when he departed with the possession, and at the time of the making of the condition. Co. 4. 120. Perk. sect. 840. Plow. 186. 482. 14 H. 8. 17.

And hence it is, that if there be any charge or incumbrance on the Land, as if Lessee of Land upon condition grant a Rent charge out of the Land, or enter into a Statute or Recognisance, and the Comisee have the Land in Execution and this charge is after the condition is made; in this case when the condition is broken, and the party doth re-enter, he shall by relation avoid the Rent, statute, and recognisances, and hold the Land freed from them all. And if an estate be to pass by way of increase, upon condition, or a Lease is to be made upon a condition precedent, when the condition is performed, the party shall hold his estate free from all after charges and clogs. Co. super Litt. 234. Perk. sect. 843. 844. Co. super Litt. 233. And if a man enter for breach of a condition in Law, he shall avoid all charges and acts done after that thing is done which doth produce the forfeiture, but he shall not avoid any thing done before that time; for he must take the thing as he findes it: as if a house or Land belong to an Officer in respect of his Office, and he grant a Rent out of it for his life, and then he doth forfeit it; in this case the Rent shall continue. And if Lessee for life of Land grant a Rent out of it, and then make a Feoffment in Fee of the Land; in this case the Rent shall continue and the Lessor cannot avoid.

But if Lessee for life of Land make a Feoffment in Fee of it, and then grant a Rent out of the Land; in this case the Lessor shall avoid it. And if a Lessee grant a Rent out of his Land, and then doe wast, and the Lessor recover the Land, he cannot avoid this Rent, but shall hold the Land charged with it. But if the Lessee doe wast first, and then he grant a Rent charge to a stranger out of the Land, and after the Lessor recover the place wasted; in this case he shall hold the Land discharged. And if Lessee for life make a Lease for years and after enter upon the Lessee for years, and make a Feoffment in Fee; this shall not avoid the Lease for years. Crompt. Jur. 64. 65.

And if a man make a Lease for years; rendering Rent with clause of entry for non payment and the Lessee doth make under-leases of part of this Land, and after the Rent is unpaid, and the Lessor doth enter, in this case he shall have all the Land, and avoid all the under leases.

Equity.

But if there be any covinous practise in the case, the under-tenants may have remedy in Equity Co. 10. 41.

And if a Lease be made for life, the remainder in taile on condition; in this case if the condition be broken, both the estates be avoided. Et sic de similibus.

But this generall rule doth faile in divers particulars: as if a man be seised of Land in the right of his wife, and he maketh a Feoffment in Fee by deed indented, upon condition that the Feoffee shall devise the Land to the Feoffor for life, &c. and the husband dieth, and then the condition is broken; in this case the Heir of the husband shall enter, and yet he shall not have the estate of the Feoffor, for this doth presently after his entry vanish away. Co. super Litt. 202. Perk. sect. 242. 843. 842.

So if a Tenant in speciall taile hath issue, and his wife dieth, and Tenant in taile maketh a Feoffment in Fee upon condition, the issue dieth, the condition is broken, and then the Feoffor doth reenter; in this case he shall have but an estate for life as Tenant in Taile after possibility of issue extinct.

So if a lessee for life or years make a feoffment in fee on condition, and after doth enter for the condition broken; in this case he shall not be in the same course, for now his estate is subject to entry for forfeiture though he be tenant for life still. So if a disseisor be of certain land, and he die seised thereof, and his heir is in by descent, and the disseisee enter upon the heir, and infeoffe a stranger upon condition, and the heir of the disseisor doth enter upon the feoffee, and the disseisee doth sue a writ of entry sur disseisin, against the heir of the disseisor, and doth recover and bath execution, and the feoffee on condition doth reenter, and after the condition is broken; in this case the feoffor is not in the same case, for now the disseisor cannot enter upon him as he might before. And in some cases the feoffor by his reentry shall be in his former estate, but not in respect of some collateral qualities: as if tenant by homage Ancestrell, make a feoffment of the land he doth so hold in fee, on condition, and entret for the condition broken; in this case it shall never be held in homage Ancestrel again. And so if a copyhold escheat be, and the Lord make a feoffment in fee upon condition, and entret for the condition broken; in this case the custome annexed to that land is gone. So if there be Lord and tenant by fealty and rent, and the Lord is in seisin of the rent, and granteth his Seigniorie to another and his heirs on condition, and the tenant doth attorn and payeth his rent to the grantee, the condition is broken; if the Lord distraineth for his rent, and rescous is made; in this case the former seisin shall not enable him to have an assise without new seisin. If there be Lord and tenant, and the Lord disseise the tenant of the tenancy, and thereof doth enfeoffe a stranger on condition, and after the condition is broken, and the Lord enter; and the tenant doth enter upon him; in this case the Seigniorie is not revived.

If tenant in tail make a feoffment in fee on condition, and dieth, and the issue in tail within age doth enter for the condition broken; in this case he shall be in first as tenant in fee simple, and heir to his father, and then shall be presently remitted: but if he be of full age he shall not be remitted.

If one make a feoffment of white acre and black acre, on condition &c. and that he shall enter into black acre onely; in this case upon breach of the condition, he shall enter into that part onely. Co. super Litts. 202, 203.

If the words of a condition be, That if such a thing be not done, the feoffor or lessor shall enter into the land, and take the profits thereof untill the thing be done, or to the like effect; in this case if the feoffor or lessor enter upon the breach of the condition, hee doth not avoid the estate, or get any thing by his entry, but the possession onely in the nature of a pledge, or a distresse untill the thing be done: And if the condition be for the payment of the rent, he shall hold the land untill he be paid the rent.

And if the words be (That the Feoffor, &c. shall enter and take the profits, untill thereof he be satisfied, or untill he be satisfied or paid the Rent) in the first case as soon as he is paid, either by receiving of the profits, or payment of the Rent behind, or both together; and in the last case as soon as he is paid the Rent by the Feoffee or Lessee, the Feoffee or Lessee may enter again into the land.

If a condition be possible in his creation, and after become impossible by the act of God, the condition is discharged and gone for ever, and the estate is absolute. As if a feoffment be made to me, on condition that I shall reinfeoffe the feoffor before a day, or on condition that I shall appear at Westminster in the Kings Bench such a day, or on condition that I shall go to Paris about the affairs of the feoffor before such a day, and before the day appointed it doth happen that I die; in all these cases the condition is discharged. So if the condition of a feoffment be that if the feoffor or his heirs pay ten pound to the feoffee such a day, and before the day the feoffor dieth without heirs; in this case the condition is gone. And if the condition become impossible in part onely, then it is discharged for so much onely. see Goldsb. 181. Co. super Litt. 207. 219. 15. H. 7. 13 Dier. 262.

If there be Lord and tenant, and the tenant doth enfeoffe a stranger on condition and the feoffee die without heir, so that the tenancy escheat; in this case the condition doth continue, and the Lord must hold it subject to the condition. Perk. Sect. 819.

15. When and by what means a condition shall be discharged and extinguished for ever, or suspended for a time, or not.
1. By the act of God.
Conditions impossible.

Albeit

2. By the Act of Law.

Albeit a condition cannot be divided by the act of the parties, but it will be destroyed, yet it may be divided by the act of law; and therefore if a lease for years be made of two acres of land (the one of the nature of Burrough English, and the other at the Common law) on condition, and the lessor having issue two sons dieth, in this case albeit the condition be divided, yet it is not gone, but doth continue still, and each of them may enter for the condition broken. But if one that hath a condition knit unto his reversion, grant part of his reversion to a stranger; the condition is destroyed in all, for it cannot be apportioned by the act of the parties, as it may by the act of the law, or the wrong of the lessee. Co. super Litt. 215. Co. 41. 120.

3. By the Act
of the parties.

A condition may be destroyed in the very creation of it; as if one devise lands for life with expresse words of a condition, and not words of limitation, or words that may be so taken, the remainder over to a stranger; in this case the stranger cannot enter, neither is the remainder good, nor the condition effectually. Co. 2. 59. the Lord Cromwells case, Dier. 309. Co. super Litt. 265. 379. CA. 101. 41.

Or it may be discharged by matters ex post facto: as in the examples following. If one make a feoffment in fee of land upon condition, and after and before the condition broken, he doth make an absolute feoffment, or levy a fine of all or part of the land to the feoffee, or any other; by this the condition is gone and discharged for ever. And yet if one grant a rent out of his land, upon condition, and after make a feoffment of this land, this doth not extinguish the condition. And if a fine in this case be levied in pursuance of a former agreement; as if one by Indenture bargain and sell his land to another, and in the Indenture there is a covenant that all other assurances shall be to the use of the bargainee, according to the first agreement, and the bargain and sale hath a condition annexed that the bargainee shall make a feoffment of part of the land to the bargainor, and after the bargainor doth levy a fine to the bargainee in corroboration of the first bargain; in this case the condition is not extinct, but saved by the original agreement. And if one make a feoffment in fee of land upon condition, and after and before the condition broken, he doth make a lease for years onely of the land, or part of it to the feoffee or any other; by this the condition is suspended for that time. And if the feoffor after a feoffment made of land upon condition, enter upon all or part of the land and be impleaded, and lose it; by this the condition is gone for ever. Co. 2. 59. Perk. Sett. 819, 820. 163. Litt. Bro. Sett. 212. Co. super Litt. 219.

And if he enter and hold the possession onely, by this the condition is suspended during his possession, and if he hold the possession so long that the feoffee cannot perform the condition, the condition is discharged for ever. And if one make a feoffment of land upon condition, and after and before the condition broken, the feoffee doth make a feoffment of all or part of the land to the feoffor, by this the condition is gone for ever. Co. 7. 14. 4. 52. Litt. Bro. Sett. 21. 85. Co. super Litt. 218.

And if the feoffee make a lease for life or yeares onely of part of the land; by this the condition is suspended for that time. But if the feoffee make a feoffment in fee, lease for life, or years to a stranger; this is no extinguishment nor suspension of the condition. And if the condition be to pay money, or do any such collateral thing; if in this case the feoffee make a lease to the feoffor, this doth not suspend the condition. Brownl. 2. part. 224. 225. 56.

Release.

If the feoffor or lessor release to the feoffee or lessee all conditions, or all demands in the land, or confirm the estate of the feoffee without condition &c; by either of these means the condition is destroyed and gone for ever. Perk. Sett. 823. Co. 1. 147. See Release and confirmation.

If one make a lease for life or years of land on condition, and after grant the reversion of part of this land; hereby the condition is destroyed for ever. And if he make a lease of part of it onely; by this the condition is suspended. Co. 2. 59. Perk. Sett. 163. Co. 4. 119.

A condition may be extinct or suspended by the intermarriage of the parties to the condition ; as if a Feoffment be made by a woman on condition to pay ten pound, or on condition to infeoffe her by a day certain, and before the day they two do intermarry, and the marriage doth continue untill after the day ; in this case the condition is gone. And if the condition be to reenter for not payment of Rent ; the condition shall be suspended and no Rent be paid during the coverture. Perk. fect. 763. 765. 764.

If a Lease be made for years, on condition that the Lessee or his assignes shall not alien without the licence of the Lessor, and the Lessor licence the Lessee alone to alien, or licence him to alien a part of the Land, or licence him to alien all the Land for a time, or if the lease be to three on such a condition, and the Lessor licence one of them to alien in all these cases the condition is gone for ever. Co. 4. 119. 51. 34. 2. 59. 714. Dier 309.

If one had Enfeoffed me, on condition that I should pay him ten pound at Easter, and before the time he had entred into Religion, and made me his executor, and had not been deraigned ; in this case the condition had been gone for ever. Perk. fect. 766.

If I be seised of Land in Fee, and take a Wife, and during the marriage enfeoffe a stranger on condition and die, and the Feoffee endow my wife of her third part ; in this case the condition is not destroyed, and yet the third part is freed from the condition, but the reversion of that third part is not freed from the condition. And if shee grant her estate again to the Feoffee, the condition is revived. So if there be Lord and Tenant, and the Tenant make a Feoffment in Fee upon condition, and the Feoffee is attainted of Felony, &c. so that the Tenancie doth escheate ; in this case the condition is not gone, but the tenancy is charged with it. Perk. fect. 812.

If a Feoffment, or Lease be made rendering Rent, on condition for not payment a reentry, and the Feoffor, or Lessor after the breach of the condition doth distrain or bring an assise for the Rent, or doth accept the Rent at another day ; hereby the condition is not destroyed but it is discharged for that time, so that the Feoffor or Lessor cannot take any advantage of that breach : and if the act to be done by the condition be a collateral act, as not to alien, or the like ; and the condition is broken, and the Feoffor not having notice thereof doth accept the Rent ; in this case also and by this means the condition is not discharged. Co. 3. 64. super Litt. 211.

If one disseise the Feoffee, or the heir of the Disseisor, or any other that hath Lands by a just title, and thereof enfeoffe a stranger on condition, and the Land is lawfully recovered from him by him that hath the title ; hereby the condition is destroyed for ever. And if a Disseisor make a Feoffment in Fee on condition, and after the Disseisor doth enter upon the Feoffee on condition ; this doth extinguish the condition. But if the Disseisor release to the Feoffee on condition ; this Release doth not discharge the condition. But if a Disseisor make a Lease for life, and the Lessee for life make a Feoffment in Fee on condition, and the Disseisor release to the Feoffee of the Tenant for life, by this the condition in Law is destroyed. And if the Feoffee upon condition make a Feoffment over without condition, and the Disseisor release to the second Feoffee ; by this the condition is destroyed, be the release before the condition broken or after. And if Feoffee on condition make a Lease for life, and the Feoffor release to the Feoffee on condition or Lessee for life all conditions, or all demands to the Land ; by this the condition is discharged. And if the Feoffee on condition make a Feoffment to another on condition, and after the first Feoffor doth enter for breach of the condition, hereby the second Feoffment and the condition also is gone for ever. Litt. fect. 476. 477. Co. super Litt. 277. Perk. fect. 823. 821.

4. By the Act of a stranger.

Release.

If a man seised of Land in Fee let it to a stranger for years, and one that hath no right doth oust the Lessee, and thereof die seised, and his Heir is in by descent, and he doth make a Feoffment to a stranger upon condition, upon whom the Lessee for years doth enter within the terme claiming his terme ; in this case the Lessee shall hold the land discharged of the condition. Perk. fect. 820.

CHAP. LI.

Of a Contempt, and Coopers.

Contempt,
what.

His word Contempt is used for a kind of Misdemeanor, by doing what one is forbidden, or omitting to do what one is commanded: As where a Sheriff shall not obey the command of a Court in the Return of some Writ directed to him; and the third Refusal by him herein, is esteemed a Contempt. And a special miscarriage also in the face of a Court is esteemed a Contempt. This, however it be but in the nature of a Trespass; yet it is sometimes a greater, and sometimes a lesser offence; and accordingly the punishment is greater or less, sometimes by Fine and Imprisonment both, and sometimes by one of these, Co. 8. eo. Dyr 177, 128. 2 Ed. 4. 1. 36 H. 6. 27. Bro. Contempts, throughout.

Of Coopers.

Coopers.

AS to Coopers, these things only are here to be known.

1. That Justices and Head-Officers in Corporate-Towns must set the Prices for Ale, Beer, and Sops; Stat. 8 Eliz. th. 9.

2. Coopers must make their Vessels of good Wood, and put their own Marks upon them; 23 H. 8. 4.

3. The Barrel he doth sell for Beer, must contain thirty six Gallons; the Kilderkin for Beer, eighteen Gallons; the Firkin for Beer, nine Gallons of the Kings Standard-gallon. And for Ale, the Barrel thirty two Gallons, the Kilderkin sixteen Gallons, and the Firkin eight Gallons.

Vessels.

4. No Cooper must make any Vessel of any other measure, unless he set down upon it a Mark of the certain Content of it.

5. The Cooper must also put his own Mark upon the Vessels he sells.

6. Sops makers Vessels must be according to the Content of the Statute.

7. In London, the Wardens of Coopers must search to see if their Vessels be so: And out of London, Head Officers of Corporations and Constables of Towns must search and see to it.

8. No Vessel thus made, must be after diminished.

9. An Ale-Brewer or Beer-Brewer may keep a Cooper in his house to amend his Vessels; 37. 23 H. 8. r. 4.

9. Vessels brought from beyond Sea must be gauged, if they be for Beer or Ale, 31 Eliz. 8. See 17 James Abridgment of the Statutes, Tit. Coopers.

CHAP. LII.

Of a Copibolder and a Copibold.

He Copibold-Estate is that, for which a man hath nothing to shew but the Copy of the Rolls made by the Steward of the Lords Court. For the manner is, that the Steward doth write out a Remembrance of this (amongst other things) That such a one is admitted to such an Estate; and this commonly is transcribed in Parchment, which Transcript is called the Court-Roll, the Copy whereof the Tenant hath under the Stewards hand: And this is all his Evidence, and he can make no title but by this Roll.

1. Copibold, what.

Rolls of the Court, what.

Copibolder, what.

The Copibolder is he which is admitted Tenant of any Lands within any Manor, which time out of mind by use and custom of the Manor hath been demised and demisable to such as will take the same in Fee-simple, Fee-tail for life, years, or at will (as the custom is) according to the custom of the said Manor, by Copy of Court-Roll of the said Manor, West. 1 Symb. l. 2. sect. 646. Co. 4. 25. Lit. sect. 13.

So that to make a Copibold estate, two things are requisite.

Seft. 1.

1. It must be a parcel of a Manor.
2. It must be demised or demisable time out of mind, &c. And if either of these fail, the Copibold-tenure is gone. For this cause the Tenure cannot be made at this day, unless it be made by Act of Parliament, Stat. 35 H. 8. 13. Co. 1 par. Inst. fol. 58.

These Tenants in most places are called Copibolders and Customary Tenants; but in some places they are called Tenants by the Verge, Base-tenants, or Bond-tenants, &c. and so are the Lands called Base-lands, Bond-land, &c.

Tenants by the Verge.

The Grant of this Tenant is at the Will of the Lord. So the Tenant was antiently a Bondman, and his Tenure a Base-tenure: But time hath changed both, and now he and his Estate both are so far free, that if he pay his Rent, and do his Services according to the custom of the place, the Lord cannot hurt him or his Estate, Co. 4. 29. And if he or any other evict him, he shall have relief against them. Whereof see afterwards.

If any of the Tenants will transfer or alien any of their Copibold-lands, it must be done by way of Surrender to the Lord or his Steward, or some of the Tenants according to the custom of the place, to the use of such person who is to have it for the time agreed upon between them; and then the party is to pay his Fine, and to have it from the Lord according to the Surrender, and to have it entred, and a Copy thereof according to the custom of the place: And if the Lord after surrender refuse to admit, or die, or his Estate end before admittance, he or his Successor shall be compelled to make the admittance. And by Deed or otherwise such a Tenant cannot alien his Land without committing a Forfeiture, no, not by way of Exchange with another Tenant. And if the Copibolder will devise it, he must surrender it to the use of his last Will, and declare his intent, Co. of Copibolds, f. 35.

2. How the Copibolder may grant his Land, Surrender.

Admission. Alienation. Forfeiture.

And for this the Tenant need not allege a Custom; for this is the Common-Law; so neither for a Surrender out of Court into the Lords hands. But to surrender to three of the Tenants, or to the Bailiff or Reeve out of the Court, to make this Surrender good, there must be a special Custom alleged for it, Co. 1 par. f. 59. And yet by a Deed of Release he may extinguish his Right to a Copibold whereinto another is before admitted, and hath such an Estate as upon which the Release may enure. As if a Surrender be made out of Court to the use of 7. S. and it is not duly presented according to custom, and therefore void; yet 7. S. is admitted according, and after he that hath the right doth by Dred release all his right to 7. S. this will bar him, and make good the Estate. Contra, where the Estate to pass by the Release, Custom. Release.

doth pass by way of Enlargement: As if a Copiholder by Licence lease for years, and then doth release to the Lessee for years. But I may surrender my Reversion into the Lords hands, and he may grant it to the Lessee, Co. of Copiholds, f. 300. So where no precedent Estate is by Admittance, as if one disseise the Copiholder, and the Copiholder release to the Disseisor, these Releases are void, Co. 4. 125.

One Copiholder being ousted by another, cannot release to him. If a Copiholder be ousted, and the Lord admit him that ousted him, by his Release the Copiholder may extinguish his Right, Co. c. 114. And yet if a Surrender be made out of Court upon Condition, and presented as absolute, and so the Admittance is made, the Surrenderer by Release may make it good, Co. of Copiholds, fol. 101. But if I be ousted, and the Lord admit him according to the custom, I may release to him. If a Copiholder doth bargain and sell his Copihold-land to his Lord without any Surrender, it is said this will pass it: But if his Estate be an Estate of Inheritance, contra per curiam Mich. 2 Jac. B.R.

2. Considered according to the Common-Law.

Ejectione firma.

These states are in some cases ruled according to the Common-Law, and in some cases according to the Custom. And therefore if such a Copiholder be put out of his land by his Lord or any other, heretofore he had no remedy but in the Lords Court, or in Chancery: yet at this day he may have remedy against his Lord or any other by Ejectione firma, or Trespass, or in Chancery, as a man that hath such an Estate by Deed, Co. 4. 21. 29. 22, &c. And if he make a Lease rendering Rent, he may bring Debt for it; and if one cut his Trees, he may have an Action of Trespass.

He shall be barred by a Fine and Non-claim in seven years, as another man shall be, Brownl. 1 par. 181.

If the Copiholder make a Lease for years by the Lords licence, he may after surrender the Reversion after this Lease for years; for it is the Copiholders, not the Lords Lease. And yet perhaps if the Copiholder forfeit, the Lease may be made good, Hob. Rep. pl. 159.

Señ. 2. Estates in Fee-simple, Tail, or for life.

The same words which will make Estates in Fee-simple, Fee-tail for life, &c. upon a Deed, will make Estates by Copy. And therefore if a Surrender be to the use of f. s. without limitation of any Estate, hereby f. s. shall have an Estate for his life only: And yet by custom in some places it is otherwise:

Freehold.

Descent.

Entail Custom. Descent.

Escheat.

And if a Copiholder in Fee surrender Habendum, after his decease to the use of his child in ventre sa mter, (i. e.) in the mothers womb, and the heirs of this child; and if it die before marriage or full age, then to the use of f. s. and his heirs: By this the father hath an Estate for life, and the limitation to the child is void, and so it seems is the Remainder also, Co. 4. 21, 22, &c. For a Freehold cannot commence in futuro, nor one Fee depend on another, Simpsons Case adjudged Mich. 13 Jac. B.R.

And Descents of this Land, as well as the Creation of the Estate, shall be guided by the Rules of the Common-Law; except there be any special custom in the place to the contrary, the eldest son shall inherit. Possessio fratris facit sororem esse heredem of the lands in a Fee-simple; otherwise it is the Issue of a Copiholder in tail: This land may be entailed by Custom, Co. of Copiholds, f. 136. and the Issue shall have a Formedon in Descender. If one have issue a son and daughter by one venter, and a son by another, and the eldest purchase a Copihold in Fee, and die without issue, the daughter shall have the land, Co. of Copiholds, f. 143. But a Descent of a Copihold shall not take away an Entry, March. 6. pl. 13.

If one have a Copihold-estate to the heir of the mothers side, and he die without issue, it shall go to the heirs of the mothers side, and shall rather escheat then go to the heirs of the fathers side. But if I purchase Copihold-lands, and die without issue, and have no heirs of my fathers side, it shall go to the heirs of my mothers side. If there be father, uncle and son, and the son purchase this land and die, it shall go to the uncle, not to the father. So if there be three brothers, and the middle purchase this land and die without issue, the eldest shall have it. And if there be two Partners or Tenants in common of this land, and one die having issue, his Heir shall inherit, not the Survivor. Contra of Jointenants. Co. of Copiholds, fol. 50. Calthrop, fol. 88, 89, 92, 93.

But

But in other things they differ from other Inheritances, and the Rules of the Common-Law. And therefore these Inheritances (except there be a special Custom for it in the place) have not these Collateral qualities which concern not Descent, as other Inheritances have. For such land so descended shall not be accounted Assets in the Heirs hands to charge him upon any Obligation; the Wife shall not be endowed, the Husband not Tenant by the courtlesie; Descent shall not take away Entry, Co. 4. 13. A.

A Surrender made by a Tenant in tail of this land, (admitting it may be entailed) or by a Husband of the Copihold he hath in the right of his wife, makes no Discontinuance, Co. libm of Copiholds, f. 144. Brownl. 1 par. 121. For as an Estate-tail may be created by Custom, so it may be barred or discontinued by Surrender by Custom, and so hath it been adjudged, 27 Eliz. for the Manor of North-hall in the County of Essex, Brownl. 2 par. 121.

If the Lord enter into a Statute, or take a Wife, and after the Copihold become void, and in the Lords hand by Surrender, Forfeiture or Escheat, whiles it is in his hands it is liable to this charge. But if he grant it de novo according to the Custom, the Copiholder shall hold his Estate discharged of both, Co. 8. 63. 4. 23. The true reason is, because when the Copiholder is once admitted, he is in by Custom, which is Paramount the Grant; therefore if the Lord grant a Rent-charge, and then grant the Copy, yet shall the Copiholder hold the land discharged of the Rent, as it seemeth, though then he be not his Tenant, 8 Rep. 63. b.

The Lord of a Manor where Copiholders are for life, grants a Rent-charge forth of the Manor; one Copihold escheats, and the Lord grants again the same by Copy; in this case it was judged that the Copiholder shall hold it discharged of the Rent, and so of Statutes, Recognizances, Dowers. But if the Grant were out of twenty Acres by name in the occupation of such a Copiholder, there perhaps in such a case the Copiholder may hold it charged, Brownl. 2 par. 208.

Copihold-land is not extendable upon a Statute-Statple; but upon the Statute of Bankrupts it is extendable, Brownl. 1 par. 34.

If the Feoffee of a Manor on Condition, before the Condition broken, make Copihold-Estates, they are good, Co. 4. 24. If the Copiholder acknowledg a Statute, and then surrender, the Land is not liable, Calth. f. 98.

If Tenant in tail (without a special custom) or Copiholder in the right of his wife surrender, this is no Discontinuance, Co. 4. 23. Dyer 263. So if the Lord make a Lease for years of the Manor, excepting all Woods and Underwoods, and the Lessee make Grants by Copy according to the custom; the Copiholder shall have wood in these Woods according to the custom, Co. 8. 107. So if the Copiholder be used to have Common of Pasture or Estovers in the Lords Wastes or Woods, and the Lord alien the Woods or Wastes to another in Fee, and after make a Copihold-estate according to the custom, the Copiholder will have Common there as hath been used, Co. 8. 63. The Copiholders have been used to lop for Repair and for Fire, and the Lord lease the Manor (excepting the Trees) for years; the Lessee makes an Estate according to Custom: In this case the Copiholder may cut the Trees as he hath used to do; and if the Lord cut down all the Trees, the Copiholder may have an Action of the Case. So if the Lord sell his Waste, and the Copiholder die, and the Lord grant a new Copy, this Copiholder will have Common there, Brownl. 1 par. 231. But in this case the Custom in pleading must be laid specially: Otherwise it is of a Lease for life by Deed.

As long as a Copihold of Inheritance is in the Tenants hands, it is not liable to any Estate or Charge of the Lord; as Dower, Courtlesie, Elegit, Statute, &c. But when it is in the Lords hands, it is liable, Co. 4. 22. But a Custom in this case may make it chargeable, Calth. 88, 89. 92, 93.

Diverse things are requisite to make a good Grant of a Copihold-estate. As, 1. There must of necessity be a good Manor and Court continuing: For a Copihold-estate cannot be made without a Court, and a Court cannot be without a Manor; and then there must be a Custom for the allowance thereof, and this Custom must be of and in the same Manor. A Lord to give the Copihold; a Tenant of capacity to take, and the thing to be granted, which must be grantable, and may be held according to the tenure. But for the opening of these things, it must be known touching a Manor,

1. That a Manor cannot be made at this day.

Manor destroyed.

2. Albeit it cannot be made at this day, yet it may be marred: For a Manor may be dissolved many ways. As first, if the Court-Baron (which is incident to every Manor) be destroyed; for the Court and Manor stand and fall together. And therefore if all the Freeholders but one escheat to, or be purchased by the Lord, hereby the Manor is destroyed: For there must be two Freeholders at least to support the Court-Baron, and two Copiholders at least to support the Customary Court. So if the Lord suffer all his Copiholds but one to fall in his hand, or make a Feoffment of all but one, hereby the Manor is dissolved.

Extinguishment

Courts.

But here this difference must be heeded; That there being (as we have shewed before) in every Manor where are Freeholders and Copiholders, two Courts: A Court of Freeholders, which is by Common-Law for the Trial of Actions wherein they are Judges; and a Court of Copiholders, which is for the surrendring and granting of Eittates, and making Admittances, and wherein the Lord or his Steward is Judg; that one of these may stand without the other. And therefore if the Lord sell the Reversion of all his Copiholds in Fee to one man, this man hath a Manor and a Court to this purpose, and may do all touching Copihold-estates which the Seller might have done; and he that sels may do all that belongs to the Freehold-Court, as he did before, Co. 4. 26. 6. 64. Co. 1. par. 58.

Judg.

So if the Lord make a Lease for years of all his Copihold-lands, it seems the Lessee for the time of the Lease may keep Courts, and grant Eittates. But if the Lord make a Feoffment or Lease of one, or of some of the Copiholds only, it seems this Feoffee or Lessee cannot keep Courts; and therefore the Manor, as to this parcel, is destroyed.

If the Demesns be once by the Act of the party severed from the Services in Fee-simple, or the Copiholds from the Manor, hereby the Manor is destroyed for ever, Co. 4. 26. 6. 24.

If one have a Manor, and grant the Moyety of it to another, hereby the Manor is destroyed, by Just. Jones opinion: Sed quare. So if the Lord sell away the Inheritance of all the Copiholds to several persons, hereby the Manor and Court of Copiholders are dissolved.

And if the Severance be but for an instant, and without any transmutation of Possession, yet the Manor is destroyed. But by Act of the Law a Manor may be divided: As when a Manor descends, and is divided between two Partners, that one have one part of the Demesns and Services, and another the other part; each of them have a Manor and a Court.

Franchise lost.

If one Manor held of another escheat, they are united, and continue both. And yet if a Court-Leet, Waif, Stray, Wreck, and the like be together by Prescription, albeit the Manor be destroyed, yet the Leet, Waifs, &c. continue. Calthrop fol. 13.

Suspension.

2. As a Manor may be dissolved, so it may be suspended for a time, and revived again: As if a Manor come to Parceners, and one upon the Division hath all the Services, and the other all the Demesns, and after one of them die without Issue, so that his part cometh to the other also; by this the Manor is revived again. Fortior est dispositio legis quam hominis, Co. 4. 26.

The Court must be kept on some part of that which is within the Manor; for if it be holden out of the Manor, it is void; except by Custom, he having two Manors, have time out of mind kept one Court for both. Coke upon Littleton, fol. 38.

2. In respect of the Lord of the Manor and his Estate.

The second thing required to the making of a good Grant by Copy of Copihold-Land, is, a good Lord; that is, the party that makes the Grant must be seised, that is, he must be in possession in, and have a good right or title to the Manor, of part whereof the Estate is made. For the opening whereof, these things are to be known.

That

That any person who may be a good Grantor in a Deed, may be a good Grantee of a Copihold-Estate. For this any person, man or woman, that hath a lawful Estate in a Manor for a time, may be a good Lord to grant Copiholds, take Surrenders, make Estates and Admittances according to the Custom of the Manor, notwithstanding the disability of his person, or exility of his estate. And therefore it is held, that a Lunatick or a man non compos mentis, an Infant, an Excommunicate person, a person outlawed in an Action personal; a Felon before his Attainder by Outlawry, Verdict or Confession, being Lord of a Manor, may grant Copihold-Estates for any time according to the Custom of the Manor, as another man may do, and Estates made by them are unavoidable. So a Villain Purchasor of a Manor, and Alienee in Mortmain, may make Copihold-Estates till the Lord do make his Entry, Co. of Copiholds f 89.

Disability of Infant, &c.

A Tenant in tail for life, years, in Dower, by the Courtesie, by Statute or Eligit of the Manor, may make Copihold-Estates, as well as a Tenant in Fee-simple. So may a Tenant at will of a Manor, by Copihold, or at Common-Law; and this of Copiholds in Reversion, as well as Copiholds in Possession. And therefore if a Tenant for life of a Manor grant a Copy in Reversion according to Custom, and die before the Copiholder; this is a good Copy in Reversion against all the succeeding Lords. Adjudged 29 Eliz. B. R. Sir Peter Carews Case. Brownlow, 1 par 231.

Self. 4.

If one seised of a Manor for life, wherein are Copiholds of Inheritance, and a Copiholder doth surrender to the use of a stranger in Fee, the Lord may grant and admit accordingly, and this will bind him in Reversion. But if the Copihold be only grantable for lives, it is said then, the Lord upon Surrender cannot grant more then for the life of the Grantor. But if the Lord of a Manor, for or during the Minority of a Ward, of which the Copihold is demisable for three lives successively, and not severally; if there the Copiholder dieth, the Lord may grant it being void for three lives at his pleasure, and this shall bind him in Reversion, or his Heir at full age, Calthrop Read 50. But quære of this.

If a Copiholder in Fee surrender to the use of the Lord for life, the Remainder to a stranger in Fee, or keepeth the Reversion to himself, the Lord cannot grant this in Fee by Copy. Nemo potest plus juris in alium transferre, quam ipse habet.

X
Condition.

So may a Feoffee or Lessee of a Manor on Condition, till the Condition be broken. And yet a Lease for life by Deed in this case will be avoided: And it is held by some, that if a Lease be made for life on Condition, and the Lessee after the Condition broken, and before Entry of the Lessor, make Copihold-Estates, that these are good, because this Lease is not void, but voidable at the pleasure of the Lessor, Co. of Copiholds 89.

If the Feoffor or Lessor, after the Condition broken, keep Court and make Copihold-Estates, these are good; for the keeping of the Court is an Entry in Law, Calthrop Read 94.

If a Feoffee of a Manor on Condition, enfeoff another of it, and the next day, or the same day after he hath the Manor, make Copihold-estates, they are good; for it sufficeth if he be lawful Lord for the time. But if a Tenant for life of a Manor, make a Lease for years of it and dieth, and then the Lessee for years maketh Copihold-Estates, these are voidable by the first Lessor. So if a Lessee for years of a Manor grant a Copihold in Reversion, and before the Reversion happen the Term is expired, the Grant is void; and so it is if the Lessee surrender his Term, and before the Lease should have ended, the Reversion happen, yet the Grant is not good, Co. of Copiholds 88.

A Gardein in Chivalry that hath a Manor of the Wards, may make Copihold-Estates upon it. The Husband and Wife, within a Manor he hath in right of his Wife, but not the Wife alone, may make Copihold-Estates; nor may the Husband alone (as it seems) make Estates.

Gardein.

If the Husband and Wife in free marriage make Copihold-Estates, and they be afterwards divorced, the Estates made before the Divorce are good; so if the Wife be after divorced for Infancy.

Husband and Wife.

If

Devisee.

If one seised in Fee of a Manor, by his Will in Writing devise, that his Executors shall sell or make Copihold-estates according to the Custom, for payment of his debts or the like, they may make good estates accordingly, Co. upon Lir. 58. And yet if the Lord devise that his friends shall keep Courts, or make Copiholds, and no more, this is not good, Calthrop, f. 95.

So if one die seised of a Manor, having a daughter, his wife privily with child of a son, the daughter may make Copihold-estates till the son is born.

Body Politick.

A Corporation, Bishop or Prebend seised of a Manor, may make Copihold-estates.

Parson.

If a Parson that hath a Manor after institution, and before induction, make Copihold-estates, it seems these are not good: So if after induction he had not read the Articles, and he be after removed for this. But if he be deprived after for any crime, his Grants before are good, Co. of Copiholds, f. 89, 90.

Tenant by Statute.
Tenant in
Dower.

If the Lord acknowledg a Statute, and after make a Copihold-estate, and then it is extended, this will not hurt the estate. So if the Lord take a wife, and then make Copihold-estates, and then dieth, the wives Dower will not hurt the estate, though she be endowed of the Manor. And yet if an Heir after the Lords death make Copihold-estates, and after the Manor is assigned to his wife, she may happily avoid this, Co. of Copiholds, 84.

If the Lord make a Feoffment in Fee, Lease for life or years of all his Copiholds, the Feoffee or Lessee may make Copihold-estates, take Surrenders, Admittances, &c. But if the Lord grant the Reversion of one Copihold, neither he nor the Grantee, nor both of them together are able to grant any Copihold-estate of this land.

If the Lord release all the Services of the Freeholders of the Manor, or all the Freeholds escheat, yet the Lord doth continue a good Lord, and able to make Copihold-estates of the Copihold-lands.

Disseisor.
Abator.

In all cases where the Lord may make Copihold-estates de novo, he may take Surrenders, and make Admittances. But in these cases, and these persons, a Disseisor, Abator, or Intruder in a Manor, the Heir or Feoffee of a Disseisor, Grantee of a Tenant in tail, one that holdeth after his Estate is ended as a Feoffee or Lessee upon Condition, after the Condition is broken; one that hath no Estate at all, or no good Estate, or the Copihold is destroyed; these cannot make any Copihold-estate by way of voluntary Grant, or take Surrenders and make new Grants accordingly. And yet it is thought, that a Disseisor of a Manor, or any such Lord that hath possession only of a Manor, may make Admittances upon Defeasants, or do any such like act, and that this will bind him that hath right, Co. 4. 27. 8. 63, 64. 1 par. 58. 74. Calthrop fol. 98. 94. 90. 91. Co. of Copiholds 36. 80. 87. Dyer 375.

Admittances.

And yet if the Custom be destroyed by granting away the Reversion, or where there is one Copiholder only left; in this case he cannot make Admittances, or do any thing as Lord, Co. 4. 27.

Self. 3.
3. In respect of the Steward.
Ability.

To make a good Grant of Copihold-land, there must be a good Steward of the Court wherein the Estate is granted. And as touching this point, these things are to be known.

1. Any man may be a Steward: And therefore if an Infant, Lunatick, Non compos mentis, Outlawed or Excommunicated person be made Steward, all Acts that he doth according to his Office are good.

2. He may be retained by word, as well as by Patent: Otherwise it is if it be a Stewardship of the Kings Court. And any colourable authority may be sufficient to make a man a Steward to this purpose: Yea, it is held, that a Copihold granted by an Under-Steward without any authority from the Lord or High-Steward, is good, Co. 4. 3. Of Copihold 126. 27. Calthrop f. 73.

Judg.

3. His authority is derived wholly from the Lord, whose person he doth represent; and under him in his absence he is Judg of the Court.

4. He must do all in the Lords name: As if he take Surrenders, make Grants or Admittances, or give licence to alien where he hath special power from the Lord, or is enabled by special custom so to do; he must do this in the Lords name, Co. of Copiholds 125.

5. The

5. The Steward cannot do so much as the Lord himself: For the Lord himself may make Grants or Advancements in what place he please without as well as within the Manor; but the Steward cannot do so without the Minor: And the Lord may give licence to his Tenant to alien his land by Deed; but it is doubted whether the Steward can so do or not in Court, without a special custom of the place, or a special authority from the Lord to enable him thereto, Co. of Copiholds, f. 124. Licence.
Advancement.

6. This Office may be forfeit many ways: 1. By Abuser; as if the Steward burn the Court-Rolls, or be corrupt in his Office, or the like. 2. Non-user; as when he is bound by his Patent to keep Courts at certain times in the year without request, and the Lord be prejudiced by this omission. 3. Refuser; as if he be bound to keep Court upon demand, and do not, albeit the Lord have no prejudice by it, yet it is a Forfeiture, Co. of Copiholds, f. 119. Forfeit.

7. The Steward may appoint an Under-steward. See for this, Co. of Copiholds, fol. 132. Under-steward.

Any one that may be a good Grantor in a Deed at Common-Law, may make a good Surrender or Grant of Copihold-land. And as to this point, these things are to be known.

1. Any Body-Corporate or Politick, being Lord, may make a Grant; or being Tenant, may make a Surrender of Copihold-land.

2. Grants by Lords, and Surrenders by other Tenants, as Felons before Attinder, Bastard, Hereticks, Lepers, deaf, dumb, or blind men, are good. Ability.

3. He that is not a good Grantor, cannot make a good Grant or Surrender of Copihold-land without a special Custom to enable him thereunto. And hence it is, that Surrenders made by Infants, Aliens, Idiots, such as are born-deaf, dumb, or blind, and Women covert, Wives without Husbands, are not good. And yet it is held, that a Woman-covert being Jointenant with another, may surrender her own part to the use of her Husband. But I doubt much of this. Co. 4. 26, 27. Co. 1 part. f. 42. of Copiholds f. 96. Calthrop f. 93.

4. A Woman covert cannot surrender with her Husband, but she must be first examined by the Lord or his Steward; and this cannot be by the Tenants, Calthrop 86, 87.

5. Such persons as may grant or surrender, cannot grant more then they have. And therefore if the Copiholder be a Jointenant, he cannot grant but his own part: He that is Copiholder for life only, can surrender but for this life. And yet if there be two Jointenants of a Manor, and a Copihold escheat, and one of the Lords grant this Copihold alone; this is good to bind his Companion. Co. of Copiholds, fol. 91. Jointenants.

Any one that may be a good Grantee by Deed, may be a good Grantee by Copy, and a good Copiholder. And herein these things are to be known.

1. A Surrender or Grant of Copihold-land may be made to a Lunatick, Bastard, man not of a sound memory, person attaint of Felony, Major and Commonalty, Infant, Outlawed or Excommunicate person, Bondman or Feme-covert. But a Monk or Friar cannot be a Copiholder; and it is doubted whether an Alien born may be a good Copiholder, or not. Perk. fol. 32. Co. of Copiholds 97. Calth. f. 52. 5. In respect of the person to whom, or to whose use it is made.
Ability.

2. The Surrender to the use of a Feme-covert is good, till her Husband disagree to it. Uncertainty.

3. In case of an Infant or Feme-covert, as to the Lords service; for the Infant, it must be done by the Gardein or Prochein-amy; and for the Wife, by the Husband. Infant.

4. The Lord shall retain the land of the Idiot or Lunatick, till he come to himself. So some say for the Infants lands till he be of age, Calth. f. 52. 65.

5. A Surrender may be of Copihold-land to the use of the Lord himself, and he may have a Copihold to his own use, Co. of Copiholds, f. 94. Doubted by Calthrop, fol. 92.

6. The Husband may surrender to the use of his Wife, and by a special Custom the Wife may surrender to the use of the Husband, Co. 4. 21. 30. Of Copiholds, fol. 94. Husband and Wife.

7. One

Jointenant.

7. One Jointenant may surrender to the use of another Jointenant.
 8. A Surrender may be of Copibold-land to the use of him that shall be Heir of J.S. or the next Child of J.S. or next Wife of J.S. or to him that J.S. shall name, is good; for nothing passeth till admittance. Otherwise it were of such a Grant by Deed, Co. of Copibolds, f. 97. 98. Quare. And a Surrender to the use of the right heirs of J.S. being alive, is void.
 9. A good Grantee may take by Attorney, Co. of Copibold, f. 95.
 10. A Grant of Copibold-land may be to two or more, and they shall be Joint-tenants, Kirsh, f. 11.

6. In respect of the place where it is done.

7. In respect of the thing granted and surrendered.

The Lord of a Manor himself in person may make any Grant of Copibold-land, or take a Surrender, or make any Admittance thereof, or a Surrender or Descent in any place as well without as within the Manor, and as well without as within the Court. But the Steward must do it within the Manor, and in Court, or it is not good. And yet by a special Custom of the place, a Surrender may be made to the Steward, or to some of the Tenants out of Court; and this is good.
 The thing granted or surrendered, must be at the time of the thing done, parcel of the Manor. For the opening of which point, these things are to be known.

1. A Customary Manor which hath Copibolds within it, may be held of another Manor, and be granted by Copy as other Land may be, Co. 11. 18. So may Houses, Lands, Meadows or Pastures, and whatsoever doth concern them which is of perpetuity and parcel of the Manor, as a Common, Advowson, or Fair appendant, the Vesture or Herbage of Land, Underwoods, out of a great Wood, and that without the Soil, if they have been usually demised for Copy. And if the thing granted be incertain, it may be made certain by Election, as in other cases of Grants at Common-Law, Co. 1 par. Inst. fol. 98. of Copibolds 117, 118. Co. 4 31. 37. Idem 120.

But such things as lie not in Tenure, as a Rent, Bailiwick, or Stewardship, Commons, or Advowsons in gross, which are incorporate Hereditaments, out of which no Rent can issue, are not grantable by Copy; so the Lords Demesnes never let by Copy, are not grantable by Copy. And yet if in this case the Lord grant them by Copy, he himself cannot avoid the Grant, but it will be good against him for his life. Quare how he shall plead it, as Grant by Copy, or by Lease-parcel.

Sec. 6.
Parcel of the Manor.

2. The thing granted must be at the time of the Grant made, parcel of the Manor; otherwise the Grant will not be good. And therefore if the Lord make a Lease for years of the Reversion of one of his Copibold-Tenements, this Tenement during this Term is no part of the Manor, and therefore cannot be granted by Copy in the Lords Court. (Quare 1 Inst. 325. a. Plow. Com. 103 b.) But this happily may be in time reunited to the Manor, and then grantable. But if a Feoffment be made with or without a Deed by the Lord of a Manor, of one Copibold-Tenement; by this the same is divided for ever from the Manor, and cannot be granted by Copy: And yet the Grant made before the severance, is good. So if one grant his Manor, except one Acre, and after grant this Acre by Copy; this is not good, because at the time of the Grant it was not parcel of the Manor, Co. super Lit. 324. 325. Of Copibold 81. Dyer 281.

Demised or demisable by Copy.

3. The thing granted must be demised, or demisable time out of mind by Copy; (that is) it is either let by Copy at the present, or capable of being let by Copy; having been so let, and not by Lease, time out of mind. And if when it were last let, it was let by Copy, and be now come into the Lords hands, and he never let it for many years together by Deed or otherwise, this hindereth not but that it may be let by Copy.

And in this case it matters not how it came into the Lords hands, whether by Escheat or Forfeiture, or Surrender. And yet if the Lord purchase the Copibold of the Tenant, or it escheat, some have doubted if it be not extinct, and so not grantable again. (But upon little reason, as I conceive.) Calshrop, fol. 16. 86. 91. 90. Idem 55. Co. super Lit. f. 58.

And

And if a Copiholder forfeit his Land by Waste, and a Seifure is awarded, but the Lord suffereth the Tenant to occupy the Land twenty years together, without receiving Rent, he may after grant it by Copy; but if after Seifure awarded, a stranger, enter, disseise him, and make a Feoffment in Fee, and then the Lord re- enter, and grant it by Copy; this is not good by Calthrop, fol. 25. Quere for a disseising, and Feoffment, cannot alter the nature of the Land.

If a man will overthrow a Copihold Estate, under pretence that it hath been let by Indenture, or otherwise then by Copy, he must shew it to be within the time of mans memory: For if it hath been let by Copy for fifty or sixty years, it will hardly be admitted to the contrary, Calthrop, fol. 19: 85.

The Heir of a Copiholder in Fee, hath before his Admission, such an Estate in the Land, that he may surrender it, or bring Trespass; and if he die, his Heir shall have it by descent. Dyer 292. 302. Co. of Copihold. 4. 21.

If a Copiholder surrender his Land, to the intent that a stranger may have a Rent out of it; this is not a good Copihold-Rent, by Calthrop, fol. 92.

No Copihold-Land can pass from the Lord to his Tenant, nor from one Tenant to another, but by way of Grant, or Surrender in the Court of the Mannor, according to the custom of the place; and as touching this point, these things are to be known.

1. In some Grants a Surrender is sufficient without Presentment, or Admittance; in some an Admittance without a Surrender, or Presentment; in some a Surrender and Admittance, are both necessary, and in some a Surrender Presentment, and Admittance are all necessary: As if the Copiholder Surrender to the Lords use, there needs no Admittance: And if a Lord make a voluntary Grant of a Copihold in his hands, no Surrender is needful, but Admittance onely. If the Copiholder surrender in Court to the use of a stranger; besides the Surrender, Admittance is requisite. And if the Surrender be made out of Court, to the Lord himself, which the general Custom will Warrant, or into the hands of the Bailiff, or of two of the Tenants (which by special Custom onely is warrantable.) In this case there must be, besides the Surrender, a true Presentment of the Surrender in Court, by the same persons, into whose hands the Surrender was made, and an Admittance of the Lord, according to the effect of the Surrender, and Presentment. Co. of Copihold. Sect. 38.

8. In respect of the manner, and order of the Grant, and of Grants, Surrenders.

Presentments, and Admittances.

2. A Grant may be of Copihold-Land in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life, or years, in Possession or Reversion, as the Custom expressly, or interpretatively will warrant it. Co. of Copihold. Sect. 47. But the Lord without a custom, cannot grant a Copihold in Reversion. 15 Car. B. R.

3. If the Lord having Copihold-Land in his hand, grant it by Deed, or Issue, to hold at Will, according to the Custom of the Mannor; this is not good to make a Copihold-Estate. Calthrop, fol. 47.

4. In all good Grants of Copihold-Estates, it seems the Antient-Rent must be reserved, not onely in quantity, but in all beneficial qualities: And therefore it is held, That if the Antient-Rent were in Gold, and the new be in Silver; or the old were payable at four days, and the new be payable at two days: These are not good Copihold Grants. But this it seems is to be understood of Copiholds of Inheritances, and Admittances into them. Co. of Copiholds, fol. 109, 110. Calthrop, fol. 88, 89, 81.

Ancient Rent.

A Surrender is the giving up of the Land by the Tenant to the Lord, according to the Custom: And this is entred in this manner, Ad hanc curiam venit A. de B. & sursum reddidit in eadem curia unum Mesuagium, & in manus domini ad usum C. de D. & heredum suorum (vel heredum de corpore suo exeuntium,) vel pro termino vite sue, &c. Et super hoc venit pradietus C. de D. & cepit de domino in eadem curia Mesuagium pradiitum, &c. Habendum & Tenendum sibi & heredibus suis (vel sibi & heredibus de corpore suo exeuntibus, vel sibi ad terminum vite, &c.) ad voluntatem domini secundum consuetudinem manerii, faciendo & reddendo inde redditum, servitia & consuetudines, inde prius debita, & consueta, & dat' domino pro fine, &c. & fecit domina fidelitatem, &c. Herein are many things to be known.

Sect. 7. Surrender.

T t

1. This

1. This may be Absolute, or upon Condition; and it may be rendering Rent on condition of Re-entry for non payment. Co. 4. 21, 30. And if he enter for the Condition broken, it is in him as at the first, without Admission.

Custom.

2. It may be to the Lord himself, or his Steward, or his Tenants, or his Reeve, or his Bailiff, as the custom is. And it may be to the Lord out of Court, but it cannot be to the Steward out of Court, without a special Custom to enable it. Mich. 37, 38 Eliz. Bright's case.

3. It is in some Cases necessary, and in some Cases not. See for this afterwards.

4. When it is necessary, it must be made,

First, By a Copiholder, and Admission, otherwise it will not help.

Secondly, It must be made to the Lord, that can make Copihold-Estates, or some other to his use, as the Custom is.

Thirdly, If it be out of Court, it must be presented at the next Court according to Custom.

Fourthly, The Lord must admit accordingly, or else (as some say) the Surrender is void. Kitch. 82. 60. Co. 4. 27. Co. 1 part. 61, 62. Calthrop. f. 97.

Words of Surrender.

Fifthly, This cannot well be made by any other word, but by the word Surrender, and therefore if it pass in the Court by the word, give, grant, bargain, or sell; this will not pass it, but the Heir of the Copiholder may avoid it. Co. of Copihold 103. And yet if a Copiholder come into the Court, and desire the Lord to admit his Son into his Copihold; some think this is a good Surrender to the use of his Son. Calthrop. fol. 57. But if the Tenant come to the Lord, and tell him that he is willing for his Sons preferment, that he shall have his Land presently, and desire the Lords agreement; who doth so, it is said this is no good Surrender. And yet if the Homage do after present it for a Surrender, it is more questionable. Calthrop. f. 59. If a Copiholder in the presence of other Copiholders of the Manor, say, He is content to surrender his Copihold, to the use of J. S. This is not a good Surrender. But if he say he doth surrender into the hands of the Lord, to the use of J. S. if the Lord will thereunto agree; this is a good Surrender, whether the Lord will or not. So if the Tenant resign his Interest in the Court, into the Lords hands therewithal, for him to do what he will; it seems that this is a good Surrender. If the Copiholder say in the Court, he will be no longer Tenant to the Lord, and thin be recorded; this is no Surrender. If a Copiholder for life, take a new Estate for life; this is a Surrender of his first Estate for life, but if the second be by Deed. Quere Calthrop. fol. 59.

Attorney.

5. A Surrender may be made of a Copihold, by Attorney, if there be no Custom in the place against it; it is not of necessity that the Copiholder be present in Court. But if this power be by special Custom, it cannot be done by Attorney: As if a Copiholder have a power to make a Lease for twenty years after his death; or an Infant have power to make a Lease at years of discretion, or a man may Surrender out of Court to the Tenants: These things cannot be done by Attorney. Co. of Copihold 93. 649. 76.

Infant.

6. If a Copiholder in Fee, Surrender to the use of himself for life, and after to the use of J. his Son for life, and after to the use of his last Will; this is a good Surrender, and the Estate may be made accordingly. Co. 4. 23. But a Surrender after a mans death, to the use of a mans last Will, is not good. If a Copiholder in Fee, Surrender to the intent that the Lord shall re-grant to him for his life; the Remainder to his Wife, till his Son come to one and twenty years of age, and after to his Son in Tail; this is a good Surrender, and is to be executed accordingly. Dyer 251. And if two Jointenants be, and one surrender his part out of Court, into the Lords hands to the use of his last Will, and by his Will devise his part to a stranger in Fee, and die, and at the next Court this is presented; this is a good Surrender, and by this the Joynture is severed. Co. 1 part. 39.

Jointenants.

7. If a Surrender be to the Lord generally, without saying to whose use, it is good enough. Kitch. 81.

8. If the Copiholder Surrender to the use of another, and the Lord grant it to the T^hey que use not naming the Surrender; this is good enough by Calthrop. f. 98.

9. In a Surrender it matters not, whether the Partee to whose it be, be precisely expressed, if by any circumstance he may be known: And therefore a Surrender to the Archbishop of Canterbury, Major of London, next of his Kin, or next of his Blood, his Brother, his Sister, or his Son may be good; and it may be made certain by Averment. So if it be to a mans Wife without waiting of her, or to the high Sheriff of Norfolk: But a Surrender to the use of ones Cousin or Friend, is void for incertainty; so if it be to the use of three or four of Dale, or to the use of A. B. or C. D. Co. 4. 29. of Copibold 96. Incertainly.

10. The Surrender bindes the Land immediately, so as the Lord cannot avoid, or prevent the intention, nor prejudice him, that is to have it, by any act that he can do: And yet it is rather a manifesting of the parties intention, then the passing of an Interest. For till Admittance, the Surrenderer is Tenant to the Land, and shall receive the profits to his own use, and he must perform the Services: And yet he cannot pass the Land to any other, or make it subject to any incumbrance of his; nor hath the Grantee any interest to punish Trespass, Surrender, &c. And yet he cannot be defeated of it; and he may compel the Lord to admit him, Co. 4. 26, 29. of Copibold, fol. 106. If I make a Surrender to the Lord Ea intentione, that he shall grant the Land to ? S. and the Lord refuse to grant it accordingly; in this case I may re-enter upon the Lord: But ? S. hath no remedy, as in case where the Surrender is made to the use of ? S. by Calthrop. f. 61. SeB. 8.
The operation of a Surrender.

11. A Surrender is not Countermendable by the Surrenderer; and yet if a Copibolder languishing in extremity, surrendreth his Land out of Court to the use of his Cousin, in consideration of Blood, or to the use of his Son in consideration of natural love, and after recover before Presentment; happily this may be revoked. But if it be upon good consideration, as for payment of debts, and for any sum of money paid; though it be made out of Court, yet it is as binding, as if it were made in the Court. Co. of Copibold, f. 106. Countermend.

The Presentment made out of Court, must be afterwards duly presented at the Court, according to the Custom of the Manor, in which these things are to be known. Presentment.

1. This Presentment is the Information of men, sworn to the Lord or Steward, touching some things done out of Court.

2. This is either general, viz. of all things, and by the whole homage; or it is special, viz. by some Tenants, or of one, or some things onely.

3. This by the General Custom, is to be made the next Court after the Surrender, but by the Custom of some Manors, may be the second or third Court after the Surrender; and if it be not then presented according to the Custom, it is void. Co. 1 part. 61, 62. Custom.

4. This also must be made in all things according to the Surrender, otherwise it is not good: And therefore if the Surrender be Conditional, and the Presentment absolute, all is nought; and yet if the Surrender be rightly presented, and the Entry of the Condition be omitted by the Steward; this upon proof may be holpen. Co. 1 part. 61, 62. of Copibold, f. 107.

5. No death will hurt the Presentment, and therefore if the Surrenderer die, yet the Presentment may be made after his death: And if he to whose use the Surrender is made, die before Presentment, the Presentment may be made thereof after his death; and thereupon his Heir shall be admitted. So if ? S. Surrender to the use of A. for life, the Remainder to B. and ? S. die, and A. die before the Presentment made; and after the Presentment is made; in this case he in Remainder shall be admitted. So if two Surrender to the use of two jointly, and one of them die before Presentment; in this case the other shall be admitted to the whole. So likewise if the Tenants that take this Surrender, die, the Lord may notwithstanding upon the proof of it, take in the Tenant by Admittance. Co. 4. 39. of Copibold. SeB. 40. fol. 107. Co. 4. 28, 29. And yet if a Surrender be made to the Lord in the presence of Tenants out of Court, and there the Lord doth grant it, but he dieth before this is presented, or the Tenant admitted; this it seemeth is not good. Calthrop, fol. 46.

Admittance upon Grant or Surrender.

To the Perfection of the Copiholders Estate, admission, as that without which no Estate passeth by the Surrender, is necessary; as touching which, these things are to be known.

1. This is the receiving of the Tenant into the Copihold by the Lord, or his Steward, according to the Custom of the place; and it is thus entred, Ad hanc curiam J. S. petit admitti, &c. Quem dominus per seneschallum admisit, & unde admissus est tenens. Co. of Copihold, f. 115. Calth. f. 62.

2. Some make it exprefs, and implied, (i.) by acceptance of Rent, &c. Calth. f. 62. It is also either upon a voluntary Grant or Surrender, or upon a Descent. Co. 1. 140.

3. It is a Judicial Act of the Lords, and in case of a voluntary Admittance, he is but an Instrument, and may be compelled according to the Custom to do it; for he is not esteemed as owner to any purpose, and therefore he cannot prejudice the Surrender in any case: And therefore as to this Act, the Lords Title to the Manor, whether he hath it by right or wrong, is not much considerable. Co. of Copihold, f. 110.

4. This is necessary, for upon voluntary Grants and Surrenders, the Tenant hath nothing in the Land till Admittance, and upon Descents he is not perfect Tenant till his Admittance. Co. of Copihold, f. 112, 113. Yet in this case of a Surrender to the Lords use, no Admittance is needful; and where there is an implicate Admittance, there needs no Exprefs Admittance: And where Tenant in possession is admitted, he in the Remainder on the same Copy, need not to be admitted: and yet the Heirs of a Copartner must be admitted into a moyety, Calth. f. 63, 64. And he that enters for a Condition broken, needs no Admittance. Calth. f. 61. If a Copiholder for years, die, the Executor needs not be admitted, so neither the Husband of the Wife, Copiholder for years after her death, Calth. f. 95.

5. The Steward it is said, may do it out of Court any where within the Manor, except there be any Custom against it. Kirch. 82. Co. of Copihold, f. 123.

SeB. 9.

6. The Admission must pursue the Surrender; yet in some cases albeit it do differ from it, it is good enough; and therefore if the Surrender be to the use of J. S. for life, or to the use of J. S. generally, and the Lord doth admit him in Fee; this is a good Admittance for his life only. And yet if the Surrender be on Condition, and the Lord omit the Condition, it is all void, Co. of Copihold, f. 112. So if the Surrender be to the use of J. D. alone, and the new Grant and Admittance are to J. D. and J. B. This is good for J. D. and void for J. B. Co. of Copihold, f. 111, 112. So if the Surrender be reserving ten shillings, and the Admittance be reserving twenty shillings, it is good for the ten shillings. But if the Surrender be reserving twenty shillings, and the Admittance reserving ten shillings, it is all naught; the contrary seems to be deduced from the case of Westwick, 4. Rep. 28. a. b. So if the Surrender be to the use of J. S. and the Lord admit J. G. and after admit J. S. It is said in this case J. S. and J. G. shall have the Land together. But if the Surrender be to the use of J. S. alone, and the Lord admit J. G. alone; this is all void. Co. 4. 28. of Copihold, f. 111. If the Surrender be to the use of A. for life, the Remainder to B. and A. is admitted; this is good for him in Remainder, Co. 4. 23, 24.

Rent.

7. The Admission must be according to the Custom, yet if the Custom will warrant the Womans estate durante viduitate only, and the Lord admit for life, or the Lord admit not reserving the Antient Rent in quantity or quality; this will not prejudice the Heir, but that he may avoid it. Co. of Copihold, f. 109.

8. Admittance cannot make a bad Estate good, nor change the Custom. Kirch. 82. 86. See more of this after at Fine. Numb. 9. 10.

Upon a Descend.

The Heir of a Copiholder in Fee hath such a Possession, and is such a Tenant before Admittance, that he may (paying the Lord his Fine, which may be afterwards) enter, take the profits, Surrender, or bring an Action of Trespass; and if he die, the Heir shall have the Land, and there shall be a possessio fratris upon his Entry. And yet it hath been doubted, if a Copihold descend to a Feme-Covert, and the Husband take the profits, but suffer a Court day to pass without Admittance, whether he shall be Tenant by the Courtsey, or not. Dyer 291, 292. Calth. 60. But in Admittances upon a Grant, or Surrender; as if one Surrender to the Lord to the use of J. S. and the Lord grant it accordingly, it is otherwise; for there the Tenant hath nothing till Admit-

Admittance. But the Heir of a Copiholder shall not be sworn of the Homage, nor bring a Plaint in the nature of an Assize, till Admittance. So that an Admittance in this case, is rather for the benefit of the Lord to help him to his Fine, then to strengthen the Title of the Heir: But the Heir is in most places bound, under pain of Forfeiture of his Estate, or some other great penalty to be admitted, and therefore he must be admitted. Co. 4. 23. Dyer 291. Co. of Copibold, f. 113, 114, 117. Calth. f. 62.

9. Upon every Admittance there is fealty due to the party admitting, by the party admitted; a thing inseparable to the person, which cannot be done by deputy; and yet if the Lord will accept it, or dispence with it altogether, it is willenough. Co. of Copibold, f. 95. 10. There is also a Fine due upon every Admittance: See after.

There is in most places a Ceremony used in the passing of the Lands; in some places there is the giving and taking of a Turff, and a Twig; in some places the giving and taking of a Glove; in some places the giving and taking of a Straw; in some places the giving and taking of the Hand; but in most places the Ceremony is by giving and taking of a Rod: And albeit the Grant, or Surrender may be good without this Ceremony, yet it is not safe to omit this. This the Copiholder that doth surrender, doth use to give to the Steward, or Bailiff, to deliver over to the party, to whose use the Surrender is made in the name of seising; and herein, Consuetudo loci est observanda.

1. If a Surrender be made to the Lord in general, without expressing to what use, it shall be taken to the Lords use, Kitch. 81.

How Grants and Surrenders
shall be taken.

2. The same construction (for the most part) which the Law maketh upon words in a Deed, it will make upon a Copy; and therefore it is, that a Copibold Estate made to one, and his Heirs-males, or Heirs-females, is accounted a Fee-simple, though it be otherwise in the Kings Grant, Co. 4. 29. of Copibold, f. 139. So of a Grant to one & sanguini suo hereditabili, or to a Major, or Commonalty, or other Corporation, where no estate is named. So if I Surrender to one and his Heirs, and he reciting this; doth surrender it to my use in the same manner as I surrendered to him. So if I surrender to J. S. as large an estate as he hath in the Manor of Dale; and he hath a Fee-simple in that Manor; in all these cases, the Law will construe it to be a Fee-simple, Co. 4. 29. of Copibold, f. 139.

Fee-simple.

If a Copibold be surrendered to a man & femini suo hereditabili de corpore, or to a man & heredibus ex ipso procreatis, or to a man in frank-marriage with his Wife; in the first of these cases, an Estate-Tail passeth without the word Heirs, in the second without the word Body, and in the third without either; Co. 4. 29. of Copibold, f. 139.

Fee-tail.

If a Copibold be granted to man in a Fee-simple, or to a man & sanguini suo imperpetuum, or sibi & assignatis suis imperpetuum, without the word Heirs, that is onely an Estate for life: So if such a Grant had been to an Abbot, and his Heirs; so to J. S. and his Heirs, so long as J. D. shall live. And yet if the Grant be to J. S. and his Heirs, so long as such a Tree shall grow in such a ground, this shall be a Fee-simple. Co. as before.

Set. 10.

If this Land be granted to two men & heredibus without suis; by this no Inheritance is made, and they are Joyntenants for life onely; yet if it be granted to J. S. & heredibus without suis; hereby J. S. hath a Fee-simple, and not an Estate-tail. And if it be granted to a man & liberis aut pueris suis de corpore; this is no Estate-tail for lack of the word Heirs. Co. as before.

Joyntenants.

If the Grant be to a man, and the Issues-males of his Body; by this is made an Estate for life.

If this Land be granted to three habendum successive; by this they are Joyntenants, and shall take together, unless the Custom (as in most places it doth) do otherwise construe it. Co. as before.

If there be Copiholder for life, the Remainder to another in Fee, and the Copiholder for life, doth surrender to the use of another in Fee, and the Lord admit accordingly; by this there passeth an Estate for life onely. Co. of Copibold, f. 91. So if the Surrender be to the use of a stranger for life, and the Lord grant in Fee; this is

is good for life onely, Calth. f. 61. So if the Lord grant a Copihold for life, where an Estate in Fee is warrantable; and this Grantee doth surrender in Fee, to the use of a stranger, and the Lord admit him accordingly; by this it is said the Fee doth not pass, Co. of Copihold, f. 91. If the Surrender be to the use of the last Will, and the Surrender deviseth it to two, and one of them onely is admitted according to the Will; by this both of them shall have it, Co. of Copihold, f. 98.

If one Copihold be between two Joyntenants in Fee, and one of them surrender his part out of Court to the Lord according to the Custom, to the use of his last Will, by which he doth devise it to the use of a stranger in Fee, and dieth; and this is presented at the next Court, hereby the Joynture is severed, and the Devisee must be admitted to a moyety of the Lands, Co. super Littl. 59.

Descent.

If a Copiholder surrender to the use of his Wife for life, the Remainder to the right Heirs of the Husband and Wife, the Wife dies, and the Husband doth survive; in this case, if he hath no Issue by his Wife, his Heir shall have it, by the opinion of Calthrop, f. 82. And yet if the Wife hath Issue by another Husband, it is doubted, and it is said, That the Husband and the Heirs shall have the Land; yet if the Husband had first two Sons, the Heirs of the Husband, and Heirs of the Wife, shall have the Land in Common after the decease of the Wife, Calth. f. 83.

If Land be given for life, the Remainder to two men and their Heirs; in this case they cannot have one Heir; and therefore if the Tenant of life, die before them in Remainder, they shall be Joyntenants. But if neither of them be alive when the Tenant for life dies, then the Heirs of them in Remainder, shall hold in Common. Calth. f. 84.

If a Copihold be surrendered to the use of J. S. and his Heirs, till he marry A. G. and then to the use of them two in special Tail; this is good, and shall endure accordingly. Calth. f. 22.

If a Copiholder surrender to the use of a stranger, in consideration that the stranger shall marry his Daughter before such a day; in this case, if the marriage succeeds not, the stranger shall take nothing by the Surrender. But if the consideration be that the stranger shall pay such a sum of money, at such a day; albeit the money be not paid, yet the Surrender is good. Calth. f. 37.

If the Copiholder in consideration of twenty pound to be paid by J. S. doth make a Surrender of his Land to N. R. This Surrender shall be to the use of J. S. and not to the use of N. R. But if in the Copy the use be expressed to N. R. and no consideration mentioned, the use expressed shall stand against any Consideration to be averred, Calth. f. 37.

If a Copiholder surrender his Land to the use of J. S. so that J. S. pay twenty pound at such a day, if he please; this is an absolute, not a conditional Surrender, Calth. f. 39.

9. In respect of the payment of the Fine, and of a Fine.

The payment of the Fine by the Tenant, is necessary to the continuance, but not to the creation of the Estate, for the Estate is made perfect without the Fine payment; But for the more full understanding hereof, these things are to be known.

1. A Fine is a sum of money to be paid of Common right to the Lord for an In-come into the Lands; and this is sometimes by the change, or alteration of the Lord, and sometimes by the change of the Tenant, the change of the Lord cannot produce a Fine, except it be by the act of God; but by the change of the Tenant, be it either by the act of God, or by the act of the party a Fine may be due.

2. This in some places is certain, and in other places incertain; and where it is certain, the Lord cannot increase it, and where it is incertain, yet it must be reasonable.

Custom, Admittances.

3. By general Custom this is to be paid onely upon Admittances, but it may be also by special Custom upon Licences granted to Demise by Indenture.

4. The Fine is to be paid upon Admittances, in these cases following, viz. Where the Lord after a Copihold come into his hands, and he make a voluntary Admittance; and where a Copiholder doth Surrender to the use of a stranger, and the Lord doth admit admit him, so whose use the Surrender is made, and where a Copihold of Inheritance descendeth, and the Heir is to be admitted: So where the Wife is to come in as Tenant in Dower, or the Husband as Tenant by the Courtessie: And so also, where one doth enter as a general, or special Occupant. And so also where the Copihold Lands of a Bankrupt are to be sold upon the Statute of the 13 Eliz. 1. In all these cases the Tenant is to be admitted and to pay a Fine. So also if a Copihold be surrendered to the use of one for life, the Remainder to the use of another, and the Tenant for life die, he in Remainder must pay Fine upon his Admittance; so where the habendum of the Grant is successive, and one of them die, the next must be admitted, and pay Fine.

So if two Copartners or Tenants in Common be, and one die, and the whole descend to the other, there must be Fine upon the Admittance. But if there be two Joyntennants, and one of them die, and the other come to the whole by Survivorship, or one takes a Wife, a Copiholder in Fee, or marry with the Termor of a Copiholder, or a Copiholder be disseised, or then enter upon the Disseisor, or recover by Plaint in the nature of an Assize; or a Copiholder in Fee, surrender for life, reserving the Reversion, and the Lessee for life dieth; or a Copihold be granted on Condition, and the Condition is broken, and the Granter re-entred; or the Lord enter upon a Villain that hath purchased a Copihold; or the Bailiff is by Custom so have the Wardship of an Infant: In all these cases there needs no Admittance, and therefore no Fine is to be paid.

Sess. 11.

And yet if a Copiholder die seized, and a stranger abatech, and the Heir recovereth by Plaint, in the nature of an Assize of Mort Dancer; upon this Recovery an Admittance is to be made, and therefore a Fine is to be made. Co. of Copihold, Sess. 56: in nov. The reasonableness or unreasonable of the Fine must be set down and determined by the Judges, and not by a Jury; and therefore if it be unreasonable, it must be set forth in the pleading by the Tenant, Hobbar. pl. 179.

5. The Lord must demand his Fine, as he must his Rent, at the time, or after it doth become due before any forfeiture can be, Hobbar. pl. 180.

6. If the Lord use to take for his Fine, sometimes two pence, sometimes four pence, sometimes six pence an Acre; this is so uncertain; that it shall be said to be Arbitrary, Calthrop. f. 25.

The Steward of the Court must take care to Record, and Introl all the Conveyance of Estates; for some have held, That if the Lord in open Court grant a Copihold Estate, and no Entry is made hereof in the Court Rolls; that the Grant is not good, and that no Collateral proof will make it good. Calthrop. f. 47. But if the Tenant have no Copy, or lose his Copy, the Roll of the Court is a good Evidence. And if these Rolls be lost, it is thought clearly it may be supplied by proof, Calib. f. 47.

10. In respect of Entry in the Rolls of the Court.

And yet if By-laws be made and entered on the Rolls, and the Rolls be lost, the By-laws are gone, otherwise it is of Customs and Priviledges, inrolled and lost. Idem.

By-Laws, Customs.

That the Grant made by Copy of Court Roll may be good, it must be made according to the Custom of the Mannor, and that Custom must be according to Law: but as touching Customs, those things are to be known.

11. In respect of Custom, and of Customs.

1. A Custom is a Law, or Right not written, which being established by long use, and the consent of our Ancestors hath been, and is daily practised.

Custom. What:

2. Though Customs, Prescription, Usage, and Limitation, be much of Affinity, and one of them broken breaketh another, yet they differ much: For

Prescription:

1. Custom can have no beginning since mans memory; but Prescription may.
2. Custom toucheth many men in Common; that they by continuance of time have gotten a Right; and this is alleged thus, That in such a place is such a Custom, but Prescription toucheth this or that man, when he by continuance of time hath obtained a Right against another man; and this is Personal; and alleged in the name of some person in Certein; thus. That he and his Ancestors, and those whose Estates he hath time out of mind, &c.

3. Usage

Usage.

3. Usage is the Efficient cause, or life of both, for both lose their being, if Usage fail. Calthrop. f. 17. Co. of Copihold, Sect. 33.

Limitation.

4. Limitation is where a Right may be obtained by reason of a Non-claim, by the space of a certain number of years, differing in account of time from Custom and Prescription.

1. The measure whereof is so long, as mans memory cannot remember the contrary, that is, That no man alive hath heard, or knoweth any thing to the contrary. But Limitation hath a certain time of beginning and end.

2. Customs are either general, as which is part of the Common Law used in all places alike; or particular, which are used onely in some places; as in Kent, North-Wales, Gavelkind, Burrough-English. And these again are either disallowing what general Customs do allow: As that the Copiholder shall not sell his Land to a stranger, and compel the Lord to admit him; till he hath first offered it to the next of blood, or the next of kin, or next neighbor ab oriente solis; who giving as much as the party to whom the surrender is made, shall have it: Or else they be such as do allow what general Customs do disallow. As for a Copiholder to let his Land by Deed for longer time than a year without Licence, which by the Custom of some Mannors he may do. Consuetudo ex certa causa rationabilis usitata privat Commune legem. Co. of Copihold. Sect. 33.

Sect. 12.

3. To know what Customs are good, and what not, these Rules must first be taken.

First, Customs and Prescriptions must be reasonable, 2 Ed. 4. 24.

Secondly, They must be according to Common Right, 42 Ed. 3. 4.

Thirdly, They must be upon good consideration, 5 Hen. 7. 9.

Fourthly, They must be compulsory, not voluntary, 42 Ed. 3. Avowry 66.

Fifthly, They must be certain. 13 Ed. 3. 46.

Sixthly, They must be beneficial to them that claim them, 31 Ed. 3. Prescription 40. 28.

Seventhly, It cannot help a man to that which is gained onely by matter of Record.

Eightly, It cannot extend to a thing newly created.

Ninthly, They need not be used daily and hourly, but according to time and occasion, Calthrop. f. 22. 21.

Tenthly, Non user, as if the Lord hath been used to have Work-days, and have not had them for twenty years together; this will not hurt the Custom. Calthrop. f. 25.

Eleventhly, Custom may oppose the Common Law, but not a Statute Law. Calthrop. f. 87.

Hence it is, that these following Customs are not allowed to be good, viz. That no Tenant shall use his Common by putting in of his Cattle in Campus seminatus, after severance of the Corn, till the Lord put in his Cattle; for he may chuse, if he will, to put in at all.

To have a Fine for a Trespas, or other Cause.

That if any mans Beasts be taken Damage-Fesant on the Lords Demeans, he may keep them till the owner give him such as he shall please; for this is to make him Judg in his own case: And if the Custom be, that if the Copiholder Trespas him, and it be presented at Court, that this shall be a forfeiture is good. Calthrop. fol. 29.

That every Copiholder shall pay the Lord a certain sum of money for every Court he keeps; or that he shall never keep a Court, till when it please him; for this Court being to do Justice, must be gratis. And yet such a Custom alleged to be for the keeping of an extraordinary Court, is good.

That every stranger that shall make a pound breach, shall pay one pound; and yet it is held, that a Custom laid, that every Tenant that shall make a pound breach, shall forfeit five pounds. Calthrop. f. 31.

That every one that rides through the Kings High-way, within the Mannor, must pay the Lord such a sum of money. And yet if it be, that every one that passeth over such a Bridg within the Mannor, which the Lord doth maintain; it is good enough.

That

That every Copi-holder that doth marry, or shall marry his Daughter, shall pay so much to the Lord for a Fine; and yet where the Custom doth admit the Husband Tenant by the Courtesie, and Wife to be Tenant in Dower, or to have Widows estate of the Copihold; that in these Cases they shall pay a Fine, is a good Custom.

That every Copi-holder shall hold his Land, without paying any Rent, or Service to his Lord: And yet it is held a good Custom to prescribe by Fealty, for all manner of Services is held good. Calthrop, f. 29. So a Custom may be good to exempt one Tenant from that, which all the rest of the Tenants do bear, and good. Calthrop, f. 77.

That every Copiholder shall give to the Lord, so much in the time of War, every moneth to bear his charges: And yet if it be that he shall pay so much to the Lord, for this purpose it is good; the reason of the difference is, because a payment is Compulsory, a Gift voluntary. Incertainty: 1

That when one Copiholder dieth, another of the Copiholders (and say not which) shall hold the Land for the year following: And yet if it be, that if a Copiholder die without Heir, the eldest Tenant of that name within the Manor shall have the Land; this is good. Calthrop, f. 31.

A Custom, that if any Copiholder commit Felony, and it be presented by the Homage, that the Lord may take and seise the Land, was ruled good. Brownl. 2 part. 217.

See a Custom, That a married Wife, Copiholder, might surrender to the use of her last Will, and after might devise to her Husband, was adjudged good. 24 Eliz. Skyes case. Brown. 2 part. 218.

That the Lord shall have for his Fine, two pence Rent an Acre, and when he please, four pence an Acre: And yet happily if the Lord prescribe to have two pence an Acre Rent, in time of peace, and four pence in time of War; this may be certain enough, and good. For Fine.

That a Copiholder shall cut down what Timber he pleaseth, fire, pull down, or destroy the houses, or let them fall; and yet happily a Custom, that the Tenant shall have necessary Fire-wood, &c: That he may fell Under-woods and Shrouds; may be good. To do Waste.

That every Tenant shall pay a Fine at every Alienation of the Lord: And yet if it be, that every Tenant shall pay a reasonable Fine at the Lords death; or that a Fine shall be paid at every death, or alienation of the Tenant; or that the Lord shall admit without Fine; if the Usage have been so: Calthrop, fol. 40. To pay a Fine.

That if the Copiholder do not repair, he shall be amerced, and it shall be levied by Distress, is a good Custom; but that for this, he shall distrain any mans Cattle, besides his own, upon the Land, is somewhat doubtful. March 161.

That the Copiholder may lop the Trees, growing upon his Copihold for necessary fire, and Reparations is good: And if he hath been used to do so, it is good; and he may do it without alleging a special Custom for it. Brownl. 1 part. 231. 87.

These, and the like Customs as before are allowed to be good; but these following Customs are not disallowed, viz.

That the Wife of a Copiholder shall during her life, or Widows Estate hold all the Land.

That the Tenant shall have Common in the Lords Wastes.

That if he that hath Right, claim not the Land within a year, and a day after the Ancestors death, he shall lose it; and yet this will not binde an Infant. Self. 13.

That the Lord may grant for one two or three lives in Reversion.

That a Surrender may be made to the Bailiff, or Reeve, or two or more Tenants out of Court.

That the Surrender made by the Tenant in Tail, shall bar the Issue in Tail.

That the Lord may keep his Court at another of the Manors.

That the Lords Steward, or Bailiff, may grant Copihold-Estates to the Tenants. To make Surrender.

That a Feme-Covert may grant her Copihold-Estate to her Husband by Surrender.

That an Infant of years of discretion may Surrender.

That a new Tenant shall pay a Fine to the Lord, as he can agree upon his Admittance.

That Proclamation be made three Courts one after another; and if the Heir come not, and pay his Fine for Admittance, he shall lose the Land. M. 7 Jac. B. R. Lyfords case.

That the Copiholder may let for longer time, then one year without License.

To Surrender out of Court.

That an Inheritance shall pass by Surrender in the Lords Court, without his leave, and be delivered over by the Bailiff to the Feoffee, according to the Deed to be enrolled in Court.

If the Lord prescribe, that whosoever take a Distress within his Manor, he must have him in his pound for a time; this is not good, for it is no benefit to him. But if he adde further, that the Lord is to have so much for the impounding, it is good.

To grant Copihold Estates.

A Custom to grant Copihold-Estates in Reversion, is good; for without such a Custom, it seems Copiholds are not grantable in Reversion. March 6. pl. 13.

Prescription.

The Lord may not prescribe to have Felons Goods, Fugitives Goods, Deodands, because they cannot be forfeit, till they appear of Record. But Waifs, Estrayes, Wreck, and such like things, may be gained to the Lord by Prescription; for they may be gained by Usage, without matter of Record.

That the Wife of the Copiholder shall be Tenant in Dower, Husband Tenant by the Courtessie (a querre may as well be made of this, as of Intrailling Copiholds; since this Tenant by Elegit, &c. commenced by Statute, which is within the memory of man) or a stranger Tenant, by Statute merchant (and so no Custom can be of it. Co. of Copihold Sect. 47.) or Staple of the Land in the hand of the Copiholder, are good Customs, Co. of Copihold, 136.

To make Leases.

That the Tenant may make a Lease for twenty years after his death, is a good Custom. Co. of Copihold. f. 93.

To pay Rent,

That the Tenants shall pay the Lord every fourth year, the double Rent, and every sixth year an half years Rent, is a good Custom. So that when they sow their Land, they shall pay their Rent in Corn, and when they feed it, in money, is a good Custom. Calthrop. f. 25. Goldsb. pl. 8.

It is a good Custom to Demise for longer time then a year, but without such a Custom, the Copiholder cannot let for longer time then for one year without Licence of the Lord, Brownl. 1 part. 133.

they shall be taken.
To make Estates.

All Customs, especially such as are in derogation of the Common Law, are taken strictly, but not literally. And therefore where a Custom is, that a man may grant in Fee; by this he may grant in Tail, or for life: So where the Custom is, that the Lord may grant for life, by this he may grant Durante viduitate cui licet quod maritus, non debet quod minus est non licere, sed non e converso. But where the Custom is, that the Wife of the first taker shall have her Widow-hood; by this the Wife of the second shall not have it. Co. 4. 30. of Copihold. 70. 77.

If the Custom be, that the Copihold-Land may be leased by the Lord, Vel supervisor, vel deputas supervisor, the Lord cannot by this Testament, appoint, authorise one to keep Courts, and make Estates. Ca. 4. 30. of Copihold, fol. 35.

To pay
Money.

If there be a Custom, that for every house in the Manor two shillings Fine shall be paid. If the Tenant maketh one house into two houses, or maketh a new house, no Fine shall be paid for these new houses.

Common.

So if I have Estovers Appendant to my house, and I build a new house, I shall not have Estovers to this new house. But if I onely change the Rooms, my Estovers do continue.

Proof of it.

So it is of a Water-course to a Fulling-Mill, converted to a Corn-Mill, or of a Light in an Hall, converted to a Parlor. Co. 4. 32. Little Sect. 74.

The proof of these Customs and due president, as to prove Leases, may be made for longer time then a year, to shew one Lease, is no proof of a Custom.

In Custom there is Ufer.

Loft.

1. When according to time and occasion it is used.

2. Nov. Ufer; i. When for want of time and occasion, through negligence, or forgetfulness it is not used; this will not hurt the Custom: And therefore if there be a Custom that the Tenants shall do work for the Lord yearly, and it hath not been done for divers years; yet the Custom remaineth, if any man living can remember it hath been done. And so it is, if one have a Market one day a week, and do not keep it.

3. If the Tenant use to pay the Lord when they sowe their Land, Rent-Corn, and when they seed it, money, or to pay the Lord every fourth year a double Rent, and every sixth year an half Rent; this is a good Interuser. For payment of Rent.

4. Abuser is where the Tenant doth put in other Cattle, or more Cattle in the Lords Soil than he ought; this doth not destroy the Custom, but this is finable at the Lords Court. And so it is, if the Lord hath a Fair or Market one day of the week, and he keep it another day; this is not a forfeiture of the Custom. And yet if he hath it two days, and keep it three days; this is held to be a Forfeiture. Calsh. f. 43, 44. See more to this in the next Question.

For the clearing of this point, these things are to be known.

1. The Copihold is destroyed and gone in all these cases following. i. When the Copihold is either by act of Law, or act of the Lord, or the Copiholder, or Tenant, become not demisable by Copy: As for example, If the Lord by Fine, or Feoffment, or otherwise, by Deed grant the Reversion of one, or some of the Copihold Tenements, of the Manor in Fee, or for Lease to me; by this it is gone. And in this case also it is so gone, that no Acceptance of Rent, or Admittance of the Tenant, after will revive it. But if the Lord grant the Reversion of all his Copihold Tenements; by this the Manor is not destroyed. Co. 4. 27. of Copihold, f. 176.

5. When and how a Copihold shall be said to be destroyed or suspended:

Or, if when the Copihold is come into the Lords hand, he do by Fine, Feoffment, or Recovery, pass away the Fee, or make a Lease for life, or years of the Land, or suffer it to be extended on a Statute, or Elegit of his own acknowledgment; or if after it come into the Lords hands he die, and if it be afterward assigned to his Wife in Dower; by this in these cases, the Custom is destroyed for this Land. Co. 2. 17. Calsh. 91. Goldsb. 206. pl. 246.

If one that hath a Manor of Copiholds, doth grant away one Copihold for life; it seems the Custom is gone for this Copihold, March. 206. pl. 246. So if the Lord by Deed do grant and confirm to the Copiholder, his Estate by Copy is gone, Brownl. 1 part. 220. Or if the Lord or his Lessee of the Manor, doth make Lease of the Copihold to the Copiholder, or make a Feoffment absolute or conditional to the Copiholder of the Copihold; the which he doth accept. If the Lord make a Lease for years to the Copiholder himself; this doth determine the Copihold. But if he make a Lease for years to another, and he assign it to the Copiholder, it is doubted. Goldsb. 249. March 206. pl. 246. Goldsb. 249. pl. 9. Or if the Lord make a Lease of the Manor to the Tenant for life, the Remainder to a stranger; by either of these also it is gone, Dyr. 114. Kitch. 82. Or (as some say) if the Copihold come into the Lords hand by Escheat, or the Lord purchase the Copihold; but this opinion is disallowed. Calsh. 90. 88. 91. But if the Lord grant part of the Copiholds onely, by this it is clear the Manor is gone, and Custom destroyed. Adjudged, 29 Eliz. Calsh. 90. And where the Copihold is extinguished, the Land can never be afterward granted by Copy. If there be a Lease for years of the Manor, and one of the Copiholders doth purchase the Reversion in Fee; by this the Copihold is destroyed, and the Lessee of the Manor shall out the Copiholder, and have the Land for the time. Calsh. f. 99. And yet if the Copiholder accept a Lease for years of the Manor, or marry with the Wife of the Lord; by this the Copihold is not extinct, but it is suspended. And if a Copihold be in hand, and the Lord alien by Fine, or Feoffment, or make a Lease of the Manor for years; by this it is extinct. A. was seized of a Manor in which were Copiholds, and he took to Wife M. and died seized, and she sued for Dower by the name of a hundred Mesuages, and one hundred Acres of Land, &c. and was endowed accordingly of part of the Demefins, and part of the Copihold Services; in this case it was adjudged, the Copihold was gone, at least, during her Estate, and that she could not grant Copihold Estates upon the Copihold Land: But perhaps if she had demanded and recovered by the name of a third part of a Manor, it had been otherwise, and she might have had a Manor. Goldsb. 37. pl. For the Grant of a Copihold cannot be without a Manor. And if a Copihold be granted to three for their lives, and the first of them take an Estate by Deed, with Livery of Seisin from the Lord; by this, the Copihold for that life is at least suspended. Dyer 30. Co. 4. 31. But the Copihold is neither extinct, nor suspended in these following cases: viz.

2. Self. 14.

Where the Copihold is Surrendred, Forfeited, or doth Escheat into the Lords hands, and the Lord doth keep it in his own hands, or let it at Will onely; or the Tenant having Licence from the Lord, make a Lease to a stranger according to his Licence, or without Licence make a Lease to the Lord, Co. 4. 30. So where the impediment is tortious, as if the Lord be disseised, and the Disseisor die seized; or the Land be recovered by false Verdict, or erroneous Judgment, and afterwards is recontinued. Quod contra legem fit pro infecto habetur; non valet impedimentum, quod de jure non sortitur effectum. Co. 4. 31. of Copihold, f. 178.

But in all the cases before where the Copihold is gone, by Grant of the Reverſion, it is not so gone, but that the Tenant shall hold his Estate still, and subject to Forfeiture as before; and he must still perform the same services (Suit of Court excepted) as before, and the Customs incident to the Land, as if it be Burrow-English or Gavelkinde continue still. But Fine upon Alienation and Admittance is gone, and the Tenant cannot now surrender or pass his Estate by any way, but by a Decree in Chancery; and this will binde the person onely. Co. 4. 25. of Copihold, fol. 17. 6.

6. What Acts amount to the Forfeiture of a Copihold Estate, and how.

Of Acts which amount to a Forfeiture, some are Forfeitures ipso facto, & eo instanti, that they are done, such are offences apparent, and notorious; of which the Lord by common presumption, cannot but have notice: Some are no Forfeitures, till a Presentment be made thereof. Other Acts there are which are offences, but are not such as cause a Forfeiture; yet are they Finable to the Lord.

Of the first sort are these following Acts.

1. By not coming in to take his Land. Admittance.

If by special Custom upon the descent of any Copihold of Inheritance, the Heir be bound upon three solemn Proclamations at three several Courts, to come in and be admitted into his Copihold, and he cometh not; this is a Forfeiture if he do not come, this is ipso facto a Forfeiture. Calthrop. f. 69. Co. of Copihold, f. 164. And yet if a Copiholder enter before Admittance, this is no Forfeiture without a special Custom for it.

2. By denying of Suits of Court.

So if a Copiholder being sufficiently warned to appear at the Court Baron of the Manor, and he wilfully make default, having no excuse for his absence: And this absence is greater, if he do wilfully refuse to come; or being come to be sworn of the homage, or being sworn to present; or if he depart without Presentment; as if thirteen be sworn, and twelve present, and one refuse: But if a Copiholder be hindered by sickness, waters, debts, or the like; his default is no Forfeiture, but otherwise it is ipso facto, a Forfeiture. Dyer 217. 31. Calth. f. 67. Dyer 233. 9. H. 6. 44. So if he swear in Court, he is none of the Lords Copiholders, or being required to be sworn of the Homage, refuse it for that cause: This it seems is a Forfeiture, and that without Presentment.

So if the Steward shew a Roll, whereby the Tenant is proved a Copiholder, and the Tenant say he is a Freeholder, and shew a Deed to that purpose, and tear in pieces the Court Roll; this is such a Forfeiture. And yet if there be a doubt in it, and the Copiholder do his service with a Protestation, that it may be recorded, as it shall fall out; this is no Forfeiture, nor Finable. So if he speak unreverent words of the Lord in the Court, as if he say, he doth exact and extort unreasonable Fines, and undue Services that is onely Finable: So if he say, he will devise a means to be no longer his Tenant; this is neither a Forfeiture, nor Finable.

3. By non-payment of the Fine.

Where the Fine upon Admittance is certain, if after Admittance it be upon demand denied, or not paid, or where the Fine is uncertain, and the Lord hath set a reasonable reasonable Fine, and the Tenant doth not pay it in a reasonable time after demand; Denand. in these cases, it seems there is a Forfeiture: But it is no Forfeiture in him to deny the payment, if it be set unreasonable. And of this point the Judges, not the Jewry shall be Judge; and yet of this also, some hold there must be a Presentment, before there can be a Forfeiture. Co. 4. 27. 28. Calth. f. 67. Trin. 4 Jac. B. R. But no Forfeiture can be by this, without demand, made at, or after the time of the Fine set, so also of a Rent. Hobbar, Rep. pl. 179.

If a Copiholder sue a Replevin against the Lord, distraining for his Rent, or Service; this is such a Forfeiture. Co. of Copihold. f. 163. So if the Lord bring Trespass against the Tenant, and he plead it his Freehold. 4. By bringing a Replevin.

And yet if the Copiholder doubting of the truth hereof, whether it be due or not, intreateth of the Lord, that the Jewry may enquire thereof; this is no Forfeiture. 5. By Pleading.

If a Copiholder for life suffers a recovery by Plaint in the Lords Court, as Copiholder of Inheritance; this is said to be such a Forfeiture. And yet if such a Copiholder surrender in Fee; this is no Forfeiture. 6. By suffering a Recovery.

So if Copiholders in Fee, make Partition; this is no Forfeiture: Calthrop, fol. 98.

If the Lord demand his Rent of the Copiholder, and he deny to pay it, or he delay to pay it, without the Lords Agreement; or if the Lord come upon the Land, and there continue demanding of the Rent, and it is not paid; this is such a Forfeiture: For the Copiholder knowing the time of payment, is to provide it against that time. And this also by a special Custom may be a Forfeiture before the Admittance of the Tenant. Co. of Copihold, fol. 167. Mich. 7 Jac. B. R. But to demand it after the day, can be no Forfeiture. Brownl. 1 part. fol. 143. 7. By not paying Rent.

Waste in a Copiholder is either voluntary or permissive. If a Copiholder commit voluntary Waste, as if he pluck down any ancient built House, or build a new House, and then pull it down again, or Plough up Meadow-ground, so that the ground is thereby made worse; or cut more Timber then there is need of, or being cut, doth mis-employ it, or doth not employ it in due time; or lop the Trees, and sell the loppings; or cut down any Fruit-trees for fewel, having other Wood sufficient; or behead Trees, or break the Boughs, so as the Bodies do thereby putrifie. All these things are Forfeitures, and yet the cutting and carrying away Shrouds, or Underwood is no Forfeiture, without a special Custom to make it so. 8. By doing Waste.

So if the Tenant hath a Grant of the Trees, or a Licence to cut down Trees; in this case it is no Forfeiture. But otherwise in these and such like cases without a special Custom (which ruleth much herein) to enable the Act, it is a Forfeiture. 9 H. 4. 12. Calth. fol. 68. 36, 37 Eliz. Co. B. Co. 4. 27. of Copihold, fol. 163. Calth. 98. Co. 1. 63. And these things will be a Forfeiture, when they be done by the Lessee at Will of a Copiholder, and the Copiholder shall have his Remedy over against the Tenant at Will, by Action of the Case. Self. 15.

So also it is for permissive Waste, as if the Copiholder suffer his House to decay, or fall for want of repair, or suffer his Meadows, or Lands by his ill Husbandry to be spoiled. And yet some are of another opinion in some of these cases, for they hold that many of these are no Forfeitures, till there be a Presentment of them, And herein they distinguish between voluntary and involuntary Acts, and Acts that lie in Non-feasance, which they say must be presented, and Acts that lie in Misfeasance, which needs no Presentment. Calth. f. 68. 50.

Of the next sort, whereof the Lord must have a Presentment, before he can take advantage of the Forfeiture, are these things following, viz: 9. By committing of Treason, Felony, &c.

Where the Copiholder doth commit Treason, or Felony, and be therefore attaint, or be convict for Recusancy, or be Out-lawed, or Excommunicated, or goeth about in any other Court to intitle the Lord to the Copihold.

Or if he alien his Copihold Land by Fine, Deed, or make a Lease of it without Licence of the Lord, and yet this Lease as to all others, but the Lord himself is good. 10. By making a Lease, Licence, &c. But

But in case where the Custom will warrant a Lease for a year, there it is no Forfeiture, whether it be by word, or writing; for without a Custom of Enablement, it is held, that a Copiholder by the Common Law, cannot make a Lease for a year, 35 Eliz. 21. Trin. 3 Jac. Curia. Co. 4. 27. Littl. Sect. 74. If the Copiholder having a Licence to let for ten years, and he let for twenty years; this is a Forfeiture: Yet if the Copiholder for life surrender to the Lord, to the use of another in Fee, or make a Feoffment in Fee, or Lease for life; but doth not make Livery or Seisin upon it, or not make a good Livery upon it, or doth bargain and sell the Land without enrolment of the Deed; neither of these is a Forfeiture. Trim. 36 Eliz. 2. Co. 4. 23. of Copihold. f. 169. Brownl. 1 part. 39.

So if the Copiholder have Copihold Lands, and other Lands in Dale, and he bargain and sell all his Lands in Dale, and the Deed is enrolled; by this the Free-land onely passeth, ergo, this is no Forfeiture: But if he have no Free-land, there it is a Forfeiture. And all these offences are the greater when they are willingly done.

Of the third sort of Offences, are these following, viz.

Where the Copiholder being of the Grand-Jury, doth indict the Lord, or give evidence against him; or being a Bailiff, if he arrest him, or sue him at Law (except it be in the case of a Replevin before,) neither of these acts is a Forfeiture, nor is it Finable. So neither if the Copiholder disseise the Lord of any other Land. Calib. f. 68, 91. So if the Copiholder abuse the Lord in words, or abuse the Lords Common with his Cattle, or rail upon another Copiholder in the Court, or use any such like words, or Deeds of Contempt, that do not tend to the Lords disinherittance: These things are at the most but Finable. Calthrop. f. 45.

In answer to this Question, these things are to be known.

8. Who may Forfeit, and how.
Infant.

1. A Copiholder of Non sane memorie, an Ideot, or a Lunatick, cannot forfeit his Estate.

2. An Infant under fourteen years of age, cannot forfeit: for he is till then to be in Ward to the next of Kin, or Bailiff, according to the Custom of the place: Nor can he forfeit by any negligent, or ignorant offences as non-claimed, not coming to be admitted, not repairing, nor malfeasans. Thus, if he bring a Replevin against the Lord; alien by Deed, or the like acts: But by a voluntary Waste, or obstinate denial of Rent, an Infant may commit a Forfeiture, and so he may by doing a Felony. Co. of Copihold. f. 172.

Feme-Covert.

3. A Feme-Covert cannot by any act she can do alone forfeit her Estate; but her Husband, or she with the consent of her Husband, may; yet if a stranger with the Wives consent, without the consent of her Husband, commit a Waste: This is not a Forfeiture. Co. 4. 27. of Copihold. f. 172, 173.

Guardian.

4. The Guardian of a Copiholder may forfeit his Wardship; but he cannot forfeit his Copihold. Co. of Copihold. f. 172, 173.

Cor que use.

5. Cor que use of a Copihold cannot forfeit it.

6. A Disseisor of a Copihold cannot forfeit it.

7. He that doth forfeit, can forfeit but his own part; and therefore if there be two Joyntenants, and one of them commit a Forfeiture: Lease for life, the Remainder for life, or in Fee, and the first Tenant for life commit a Forfeiture, or purchase the Manor, and extinguish the Copihold, the Remainder is not hurt. If the Husband and Wife be Joynt-Copiholders of the purchase of the Husband, during Coverture; and he is attainted of Felony, and dieth, his Wife shall have all the Land: But if the purchase were before the marriage, then a Moyety is gone. Calth. f. 92, 97. So where the Estate is made to three successors, and one of them doth commit a Forfeiture; this cannot hurt the Estate of the other two. So where a Copiholder in Fee, by Licence doth make a Lease for years by Deed, or without Licence by Copy, and either of these Lessees commit Waste: By this the Reversion is not forfeit. Co. of Copihold. f. 172.

8. If a Copihold be surrendered to the use of q. s. he cannot forfeit this before Admittance.

9. If one hath several Copies, the Forfeiture of one of them is not the Forfeiture of the other. Co. of Copihold. f. 174.

Regularly,

Regularly, None can take advantage of the Forfeiture, but he that is Lord of the Manor at the time of the Forfeiture; and therefore if the Copiholder make a Feoffment, and then the Lord doth alien the Manor; in this case, neither the Granter, nor the Grantee, can take advantage of the Forfeiture. And yet if there be Tenant for life of the Manor the Remainder in Fee, and a Copiholder commit a Forfeiture; and the Tenant for life of the Manor die before his Entry; in this case he in Remainder may enter. And he that was never Lord of the Manor, shall take advantage of the Forfeiture, as where the Lord make a Feoffment of the Copihold in Fee; in this case the Feoffee shall enter upon the Forfeiture. Co. 4. 24. of Copihold, 176.

In case where a Copihold is forfeit, and the Lord hath notice of it, if he shall do any thing afterward, whereby he shall acknowledge the Copiholder to be his Tenant, as distrain upon the Land for Rent, admit him to be Tenant, or the like: By this the Lord is concluded to take advantage of the Forfeiture. And yet if the act done by the Copiholder be such an act as doth destroy the Copihold, as if he make a Feoffment of the Copihold, or the like; in this case no subsequent act of the Lord will help. Co. of Copihold, 176.

They are expressed in these following Statutes, Rich. 3. 4. A Copiholder that hath twenty six shillings and six pence per annum, may be a Juror as well as he that hath twenty shillings per annum of Freehold Land. 1 Ed. 6. 14. About Abby Land. 2 Ed. 6. 8. About Offices found, 1 M. 12. Now expired touching the assistance of Justices of Peace to suppress a Riot. 5 Eliz. 14. About Forgery to defraud a Copiholder. 13 Eliz. 7. About the Copihold of a Bankrupt. 14 Eliz. 61. About his Copihold that doth depart the Kingdom without leave. 35 Eliz. 2. About a Recusant. When the Statute doth alter the Service-Tenure, Interest of the Land, or other thing in prejudice of the Lord, Custom, or Manor, or of the Tenant there, the general words of Tenant, or the like, extend not to Copiholders: But when the act is for the good of the Commonwealth, and no prejudice may accrew, by reason of any alteration of the Interest, Service, or Custom of the Manor, there usually Copiholders, and Copiholds are included. Co. 3. 8. March 36. Brownl. 1 part. 34. For this cause it is judged, they are not intended in these following Statutes. viz. Westm. 2. 1. of Intails. And yet by Custom such Lands may be intailed.

Westm. 1. 26. Of an Elegit. 16 R. 2. 5. Of Forfeiture of Lands by receiving Bulls, &c. 2 H. 5. 7. Of the Forfeiture of Hereticks. 27 H. 8. 10. Of Uses. 31 H. 8. 1. 32 H. 8. 31. About Partition. 32 H. 8. 28. Of Leases made by Tenant in Tail, or Husband and Wife. 17 Ed. 2. 18. Of Ideots Lands. Merton 1. Of Damages. Co. 4. 30. Westm. 2. 3. 31 H. 8. 13. And that of 32 H. 8. 9. Of Champerty. Co. 4. 26. 4 H. 7. 24. Of Fines. Co. 9. 105. See Bro. 2 part. 89, 86, 77, 78.

For the better understanding hereof, these things are to be known.

1. For any thing which doth concern his Copihold, he cannot sue, or be sued in any real Action, or Actions favoring of the reality elsewhere, but in the Lords Court. But he may bring an Action personal in any other Court, and the Lessee of a Copiholder may bring an Ejectione firme in any other Court. Co. of Copihold, 147.

2. If the Lord oust him he may have an Ejectione firme or Trespass against the Lord in any Court; but he cannot have an Assize against the Lord. Co. of Copihold, 146.

3. A Copiholder of base Tenure in Antient Demesne, cannot have a Writ of Droit Close, or Monstraverunt, but Tenants, of Frank-tenure in Antient Demesnes may. Co. of Copihold, 146.

4. If the Copiholder by Licence of the Lord make a Lease of the Land, and the Lessee cut down Timber, there being a custom that the Copiholder may cut down Timber; the Copiholder in this case must punish this in the Lords Court.

5. If a Wife dowable by custom, recover her Dower by plaint in the Lords Court, and in the Action she recover damages also, she may not sue for these damages at the Common Law. Co. of Copihold, 146.

6. If a Copiholder make a Lease by Copy for years, or by Deed, with Licence rendring Rent, an Action of Debt; for this Rent may be brought in any other Court. Co. of Copihold, 146.

9. Who shall take advantage of a Forfeiture, or not.

10. What Acts will confirm an Estate forfeit.

Sett. 16. 11. In what Statutes the Copihold and Copiholder is included, or not.

Customs.

12. How the Copiholder may sue, or be sued.

Ejectione firme.

7. If a stranger cut down the Trees growing on the Copihold, an Action of Trespass lieth against him; for this at Common Law. So if the Trees by Custom belong to the Tenant, and the Lord doth cut them down. Co. of Copihold, 147.

8. If the Copiholder Surrender to the use of the Creditor in trust to pay his Debts, and then to have the Land again, and he keep it; in this case this being proved by Examination of Witnesses upon an English Bill, the Lord may reſeize and reſtore the Land. Calthrop, f. 74.

9. If the Lord hath a great Waſte, and he grant a Rent out of it; the Grantee may diſtrain the Tenants, unleſs they can preſcribe to have Common there. Calthrop, f. 97.

10. If the Steward, Bailiff, or Tenants, into whose hands the Surrender is made, reſuſe to preſent, or admit the Tenant; in this caſe he is to ſue by Bill or Petition, to the Lord in his Court. And if the Lord there will not do him right, the Tenant may ſue him and them in Chancery, and there he ſhall have relief. Co. of Copihold, 180.

11. For the order of Proceſs in Suits in the Lords Court, inquire the Cuſtom of the place, and ſee Calthrop, f. 75. 98.

For this theſe things are to be known.

13. Of a Licence to Alien.

1. That the Lord may Licence his Tenant to let by Deed for years, if there be a Cuſtom for it. And the Entry of this in the Court Rolls is thus, Ad hanc curiam J. S. petit licentiam domini demittendi, &c. Cui dominus licentiam dat, &c. And if it be by the Steward, Cui dominus per ſeneſcallum licentiauit. Co. of Copihold, 123, 125.

Cuſtom.

2. This Licence (it ſeemeth) is not grantable by the Steward, without a ſpecial Cuſtom to enable him to do it, or a ſpecial Warrant from the Lord to give him power ſo to do, Co. of Copihold, f. 124.

3. If a Tenant for life of a Mannor, grant a Licence to a Copiholder to Alien, and the Lord die; in this caſe the Licence is good. Co. of Copihold, f. 85.

CHAR. LIII.

Of Corn, and a Corrody.

Transportation.

Or Corn theſe things are to be known.

1. None may tranſport any Corn, whatſoever, nor any Malt made thereof, nor any Beer, Butter, Cheeſe, Herring, or Wood, but for victualling of Ships, or the like, without the Kings Licence, except it be in ſome ſpecial caſes when Corn is very cheap, and from ſome Ports, and with ſome kinde of Ships onely, and by allowance, and direction of ſome great Officers.

of a Corody.

A Corody was an Allowance of money, or meat or drink, due to the King from an Abbey or House of Religion of his own founding, towards the reasonable sustenance of one of his Servants, being put to his Pension; where he thought good to bestow it. But a Pension was taken for money given to one of the Kings Chaplains for his better maintenance in his service, until he can be better provided for by a Benefice. The Corody was given to one of the Kings servants that did live in the Abbey; the Pension was given to him that did attend on the King. Terms Law, F.N.B. 230. & Stat. 33, 34 H.8. ch. 19.

CHAP. LIV.

Of Costs and Damages.

Costs are the Expences laid out in the prosecuting of any Suit in Law, which is so much as the Court will allow him that is the Plaintiff or Defendant in the Action, and is to have it at the end of the Suit.

1. Costs, what it is.

For Answer to this Question, all these things must be known.

Self. 1. Where Costs shall be recovered in Suit, or not.

1. Where a Plaintiff doth recover the thing sued for in any Personal Action, there he shall recover Costs of Suit also, Flow. 310. 9 H.6. 32.

2. Where a Plaintiff is Nonfuit after Appearance, or after Verdict given against him in an Action of Debt, Trespass, Detinue, Covenant, or upon the Case, the Defendant shall recover Costs against him, 23 H.8. 15. Dyer 32.

3. Wheresoever a man shall recover Damages by the Common-Law, or by the Statutes of 6 Ed. 1. ch. 1. or Merton. 1. there he shall recover Costs also, Co. 10. 110.

4. Where an Act of Parliament doth give increase of Costs, there some Costs were recoverable before, Stat. 2 H.4. 1. 27 H.6. 10. 14 H.6. 13. 8 Ed.4. 13. F.N.B. 148.

5. In a Mortdaucester, Aile and Besaile, and Intrusion of his own doing, the Demandant shall recover Costs, Glouc. ch. 1.

6. In an Attaint, Costs shall be recovered, 11 H. 6. 4.

7. Where the Defendant sueth a Writ of Error, the Plaintiff shall recover Costs, 11 H. 7. 10.

8. Where a Verdict is found for the Defendant, the Plaintiff must pay Costs, albeit the Declaration be insufficient. So it hath been often adjudged, as two Judges said, Pasch. 19 Jac.

9. If an Executor avow for Arrearages of Rent upon St. 32 H. 8. and recover, it seems he shall recover Costs, Trin. 22 Jac. B.R.

10. In a Suit in Chancery, if the Bill prove false, or the Plaintiff delay his Suit, the Defendant will have Costs there, Bro. Conscience, 24.

11. But he that sueth, or is sued in forma Pauperis, a Plaintiff or Defendant that is admitted so to sue, shall neither recover nor pay Costs, neither party shall pay Costs, 22 H.8. 15. Bro. 452. Pasch. 7 Jac. B.R. Eslins Case:

12. If the Suit be in the Kings name, and it be Nonsuit, or Judgment is given against the King, after Verdict no Costs shall be recovered, Stat. 23 H. 8. ch. 15. 24 H. 8. 8. 4 Jac. 3. 8 Eliz. 2. 43 Eliz. 6.

13. Where in any Suit double or treble Damages is given by any Statute, and no Damages was recoverable before, as in the case of Waste and Q. impedit, and some other Actions, there no Costs shall be recovered, Co. 10. 116. Kelw. 26. 27 H. 6. 10. 2 H. 4. 7. Curia 7 Jac. Co. B.

14. In an Action of Debt for Ingrossing, where a great Sum of money is recovered, no Costs shall be recovered, Co. 10. 110. Bro. 258.

15. In case where the Action brought doth not exceed Forty shillings, Debt or Damages, there no Costs shall be recovered in it, 43 Eliz. 6. 1 Jac. 25.

Executor or Administrator.

16. If an Executor or Administrator be Nonsuit, or Verdict pass against him in a Suit for any thing touching the Testament, he doth not pay Costs. But if he bring an Action for a thing done to himself, as for taking away Goods from himself, and the like, and he be Nonsuit, or Verdict pass against him, in this case he shall pay Costs. Experience. The Issue was, That the Plaintiff was not Executor, and the Jury found for the Defendant, and yet the Court would not give Costs to the Defendant, Brownl. Rep. 1 par. 79.

17. No Costs shall be recovered against an Executor or Administrator, upon the Statute of 8 Eliz. 2. nor upon the Statute of 4 Jac. 2. By the Court, M. 6 Jac. B. R. See more of these things in Brownl. Rep. par. 66. 79. 107. Westm. 2. 5. Marth. ch. 17. 6. 4. And see more in Damages, March. f. 57. pl. 88. f. 61. pl. 94.

For this, take these things following.

Self. 2.
What Costs
shall be recovered, and how they shall be taxed.

1. That in an Action of the Case for slanderous words, if the Jury do give under Forty shillings Damages, then the Plaintiff shall recover no more Costs than the Jury hath given him in Damage, Stat. 21 Jac. ch. 16.

2. If the Action be a Personal Action, and do not concern Land, or a Battery, and the Debt or Damages to be recovered do not come to Forty shillings, or above the Costs must be no more than the Debt or Damages is, 43 Eliz. 6. 1 Jac. 25.

3. Where Officers are sued for any thing about their Offices, and Verdict is given against the Plaintiff, or he is Nonsuit; there in some cases the Officer shall recover double, in some cases treble Costs. And for this see the several Statutes of 43 Eliz. ch. 2. 7 Jac. 5. Ordinance. March 16. 4. See more for Costs, 11 H. 6. 4. 3 H. 7. 10. 19 H. 7. 25. 23 H. 8. 15. 24 H. 8. 8. 8 Eliz. 2. 43 Eliz. 6. 4 Jac. 11. 21 Jac. 12. 3 Jac. 15. Wingates Abridgment. And in all cases the Costs are to be taxed and set down by the Court wherein the Action is, and at the end of the Suit, and not before, Co. 10. 116. 110. Dyer 291.

Where the Costs may be increased or abridged, or not..

In some cases the Court may and doth abridge, and in some cases increase the Costs given by the Jury. And this the Court doth as it seeth cause: For if the Court doth apparently see the Jury hath given excessive Costs, upon Motion made, it will abate it: And if it perceive the other to put him to excessive Costs, as if after Issue tryed the other get an Injunction to stay the Suit, and he get it dissolved; in this case upon Motion to the Court, it will increase the Costs, 21 Ed. 4. 78.

Self. 3.
3. Damages,
what.

Damages taken largely, is a recompence for a wrong: But taken strictly, it signifieth a part of that which the Jurors are to enquire of, passing for the Plaintiff or Demandant in any real or personal Action. For, after Verdict given of the principal Cause, they are then asked their consciences touching Costs and Damages, which is concerning the loss that the Plaintiff or Demandant hath suffered by means of that wrong done to him. So that Damna is either pro injuria illata, for the wrong done, or expensa litis, for the charges laid out in the Suit. And this Damages for the wrong done, is always to be recovered from the Tenant or Defendant; but Costs may be recovered against the Defendant by the Plaintiff, or against the Plaintiff by the Defendant, Co. upon Lie 257. 22 H. 6. 27.

Damna.

4. In what Action Damages shall be recovered, or not; and what Damages shall be recovered, and how taxed.

For answer to this, we are to know these things.

1. That regularly Damages are to be recovered in all Personal and in all Mixt Actions, and in such Real Actions wherein any Statute hath given Damage; otherwise not: For otherwise by the Common-Law no Damages are recoverable in any Real real Action. And for this, see Co. 10. 116. 106. 9. 74. Plow. 82. Stat. 6 Ed. 1. 1. Westm. 2. 35. 13 Ed. 1. 5. 1 Ed. 3. 6. 22 H. 8. 3. 11 H. 6. 4. Co. 4. 30. 71. Co. super Lit. 32. 33. Dyer 284. 14 H. 8. 25. 33 H. 8. 39. 18 Eliz. 5. 27 Eliz. 10. 21 H. 8. 19. 7 H. 8. 4. 3 H. 7. 18. Bra. Coss. 29.

2. In some cases single Damages only are to be given, as in Dower; and regularly in all Actions. For which see Stat. 52 H. 3. ch. 3. 20 H. 3. 1. 8 Eliz. 22. 13 Ed. 1. 36. 6 Ed. 1. 8. 6. 5 H. 4. 6. 1 H. 6. 11. 52 H. 3. 6. 3 Ed. 1. 34. 17 R. 2. 6. In some Cases and Suits double Damages are to be recovered: And for this see Stat. 2 H. 4. ch. 11. 34 Ed. 1. 22 Ed. 3. 51. 5 Eliz. 14. 2 Ed. 6. 12. 23 H. 8. 9. 28 Ed. 1. 9. 12 Ed. 2. 5. 13 Ed. 1. 26. 37 Ed. 3. 2. 1 R. 2. 9. And in some cases treble Damages are to be recovered: And for this, see Stat. 36 Ed. 3. ch. 16. 8 H. 6. 9. 8 Eliz. 2. 3 Ed. 6. 3. 2 H. 4. 25.

3. A man shall never recover more Damages then he doth declare for in his Declaration, Co. 10. 113. 13 H. 7. 16.

4. In Personal Actions, the Damages shall be only for the wrong done before the Writ brought: But in Real Actions the Plaintiff doth never count for Damages, for there he is to recover at the last for all the time, Co. 10-116.

5. How a Jury may tax Costs, and where it may divide the Costs, or not, See Co. 11. 5. 10. 130. 18 H. 8. 1.

In some cases the Court may also increase Damages; and so the Court may in some cases also abridge the Damages given by the Jury. But it must be in a case obvious to the Court; as for the Maim of a man (which is to be seen) when the Jury give small damage. And so when every man that looks upon the wrong, and damage given for the wrong, they see it to be excessive; in this case the Judges do use to keep the Plaintiff from his Judgment, until he do release the Excess of the Damages.

3. Where the Damages may be increased or abridged, or not.

Writ to enquire of Damages, what.

The Writ to enquire of Damages, is a Writ that issueth forth after a Judgment had in Trespass upon a Confession or Default, to enquire by a Jury what Damages the Plaintiff hath sustained by the Trespass: And then upon that Inquisition, the final Judgment is given for so much as the Jury shall find, and for Costs of Suit. See more for this Costs and Damages, St. 3 ac. 15. 21 ac. 16. 4 ac. 3. 43 Eliz. 6. 23 H. 8. 15. 3 H. 7. 10.

CHAP. LV.

Of Cottages.

Cottage is a little House newly built, that hath not four Acres of Land to it: And he is a Cottager, that doth dwell in such a House.

1. Cottage.

A House built since 31 Eliz. for habitation, or any Building or Housing made for other purpose, that since that time hath been or shall be converted or ordained to be used as a Cottage for habitation or dwelling, where there is not assigned and laid to the same Cottage or Building four Acres of ground at the least, to be accounted according to the Statute or Ordinance de terris mensurandis, lying neer to the said Cottage, being his or her own Freehold and Inheritance that doth enter or convert the Cottage or Building, and to be continually occupied and manured therewith so long as the same Cottage shall be inhabited; is to be accounted a Cottage within the Statute. Wherein these things are to be known.

2. What shall be said to be a Cottage, and how the parties that erect or continue it shall be punished.

1. If a man convert that Building which before this Statute was one Dwelling-house, into two Dwelling-houses; these are two Cottages punishable by this Statute.

Self. 1.

2. If one build a new House upon an old Foundation, in the same quantity that the old was; this is no Cottage within this Statute.

3. If one build two distinct Cottages together, the one upon the old foundation, the other upon the new: That which is built upon the old foundation, is no Cottage; but that which is built upon the new foundation, is a Cottage.

4. If one build a House upon an old and new foundation together, so that the entire House doth stand upon both together; this is a Cottage within this Statute.

5. If a man have a House, and one hundred Acres belonging to it, and he sell the House from the Land, or the Land from the House, or sell all the Land, and keep the House; this is now become a Cottage within this Statute: And if a man erect a House, and lay four Acres to it, and after take it away again; now this is become a Cottage within this Statute.

6. Any House ordained or erected for habitation or dwelling in any City, Town, Corporate, antient Borough or Market-town, or for the necessary and convenient habitation of any Workmen in any Mineral works, Coal-mines, Quarries, or Dells of Stone or Slate, in or about the making of Bricks, Tile, Lime, or Coals; so as the same Building be not above one mile distant from the place of the same Mineral or other Works, and be used only for the habitation of the said Workmen, shall not be accounted a Cottage within this Statute.

7. Any House made within a mile of the Sea, or upon the side of such part of any Navigable River where the Admiral ought to have jurisdiction, so long as no other person shall dwell therein but a Sailer, or man of manual occupation, to or for making or furnishing, or victualling of any Ship or Vessel used to serve on the Sea; nor made in any Forrest, Chase, Warren or Park, so long as no other person shall dwell therein but an Under-keeper or Warrener, for the keeping of the Deer or other Game of the Warren; nor any other House made, so long as no other person do dwell therein but a common Herdsman or Shepherd, for keeping the Cattel or Sheep of the Town, or a poor, lame, sick, aged or impotent person; is not to be accounted a Cottage punishable by this Statute. But no Cottage (by this Statute) made for a common Herdsman, for a common Shepherd (called a Sheep-coat) or a poor, lame, sick, or impotent person, that was not made before the Statute, is excepted by the Statute; for it was meant only of such as were then in being. Co. 2 par. Inst. 737.

8. Any Cottage that shall be by Order of the Justice of Assize at the Assizes, or Justices of the Peace at the Quarter-Sessions by their Order entred in open Assizes, or at Quarter-Sessions for any just cause upon complaint to them, be decreed to continue for habitation, for so long time only as by such Decree they are tolerated and limited, is not to be accounted a Cottage against this Statute.

9. And therefore if the Churchwardens and Overseers of a Parish, or the greater part of them, by the leave of the Lord or Lords of the Manor, whereof any Waste or Common within their Parish is or shall be parcel, and upon agreement before with him or them made in writing, under the hands and seals of the said Lord and Lords, shall set up any House in a fit place within the said Waste, at the charges of the Parish, for the habitation of the impotent Poor of the Parish, by Order of the Justices of Peace at their Quarter-Sessions, is not a Cottage against this Law.

10. Four Acres by Copy for lives, or for any number of years, will not serve to lay to it.

11. This Statute doth not extend to Cottages erected, or Houses converted to Cottages before the 29. day of March, 1589. Co. 2 par. Inst. 737.

12. The forfeiture of him that shall erect any such Cottage, or convert any House into such a Cottage, is Ten pounds: And the forfeiture of him that shall afterward willingly uphold and maintain any such House erected or converted, is Forty shillings for every moneth the same is continued; and these Forfeitures are to go to the King, Stat. 31 Eliz. chap. 7. Resolved by the Judges 8 Car. B. R. Stat. 31 Eliz. per Justice Bridgman. Stat. 43 Eliz. chap. 2. Stat. 31 Eliz. Co. 2 part of his Inst. 736.

2. Inmates or Under-tenants who they are, and how they shall be punished, redressed or tolerated.

Inmates be those that are admitted to dwell for their money, jointly within another man; though in several Rooms of his Mansion-house, passing in and out at one door, and being not able to maintain themselves, Kitch. 45. Stat. 31 Eliz. 2. chap. 7.

There must not be an Inmate, or more Families or Houſholds then one, dwelling or inhabiting in any one Cottage erected, placed or ſuffered, Kitch. 45. Wherein theſe things are to be known.

ſeſſ. 2.

1. If one demise part of his Houſe in which he doth dwell, to a Gentleman that doth not keep his Table there, but goeth to Victualling-houſes for his Victuals, and yet he hath certain Rooms in the houſe; this is not an Inmate, Kitch. 45.

2. If one keep his Daughter that is married, and her Husband, or his Son, by Covenant or otherwiſe, and he doth find them, and they have ſome Rooms in his Houſe; this is not an Inmate, Kitch. 45.

2. If one keep his Daughter that is married, and her Husband, or his Son and his Wife, by Covenant or otherwiſe, and he doth find them, and they have ſome Rooms in his Houſe; theſe are not to be accounted Inmates, neither ſhall they have Common. But if theſe live in one Cottage, and they part the Houſe between them, and diet themſelves ſeverally, it ſeems they are Inmates, Kitch. 45.

3. If one have a Houſe, and he let certain Rooms of it to another to dwell in with him, he is to be accounted an Inmate, and yet he ſhall not have Common in the Lords Waſtes and in the Fields, except he be of ability; for if he be a man of ability, he ſhall not be ſaid to be an Inmate in any caſe. But if one take one into his Houſe to Table, or ſojourn with him, and let him certain Rooms, he is not to be accounted an Inmate, neither ſhall he have Common, Kitch. 45.

4. If the Inheritor of a Houſe demise a certain parcel of his Houſe in which he doth dwell, and ſever it from the other part, ſo that there are ſeveral doors into the High-ſtreet; it is now as two Houſes, and is not to be accounted an Inmate, but he ſhall not have Common. But if there be but one door out into the ſtreet for both the Families, then he that is taken in is to be accounted an Inmate, Sr. 43 Eliz. chap. 2. But an Inmate within the meaning of this Statute muſt be one that is in a Cottage. 2. It extendeth to Cottages as well made before, as after the Statute.

3. And as well to Cottages that have four Acres of ground, or more laid to them, as thoſe that have not four Acres of ground laid to them, Co. 2 par. Inſt. 738.

5. Inmates may be placed by the Order of the Juſtices in their Quarter-Sessions, with licence of the Lord of the Manor, in any Cottage built upon the Waſte of the ſame Manor for the impotent Poor, by the Churchwardens and Overſeers; and they are not to be puniſhed that do ſo place them.

6. It ſeems the Statute of 31 Eliz. as to Inmates, doth extend to Cities, Burroughs and Market-Towns; for it is put generally, and the Exception in the Statute doth go to the erection of Cottages, and not to Inmates; and ſo is the common practice.

7. The Forfeiture of every Owner or Occupier of any ſuch Cottage, placing or willingly ſuffering any ſuch Inmate or other Family then one, is Ten ſhillings for every moneth any ſuch Inmate ſhall ſo dwell in any ſuch Cottage. And this Forfeiture is to go to the Lord of the Leet where the Cottage is. The moneth ſhall be accounted by 28 days: Co. Book of Entries. 165 b.

All the offences aforeſaid may be heard and determined by the Juſtices of the Aſſizes, and Juſtices of Peace in their open Sessions, and by Lords within the Precincts of their Leets, and none others may do it; the Sheriff cannot do it. And they may award Execution for the levying of the ſaid Forfeitures, as cauſe ſhall require. The Lord hath election to ſue in any Court for the Forfeiture, or to diſtrain and ſell the Diſtreſs, and give back the overplus. And if he bring an Action at Common-Law, when he hath Judgment, he ſhall have Execution by Fieri facias, Elegit or Capias, as the words of the Statute are, Co. 2 par. Inſt. 738. And as touching the Forfeitures for Inmates, the Lord in his Leet may take the Preſentment of the Jury thereof, and afterward levy the ſame Forfeitures by Diſtreſs and Sale of Goods to his own uſe, Sr. 31 Eliz. c. 7. Co. 2 par. Inſt. 738. 3 H. 7. 4.

CHAP. LVI.

Of a Covenant.

1 Covenant,
what.

Covenantor.
Covenantee.

2 The Kinds.

Covenant is the Agreement or Consent of two or more, by Deed in Writing sealed and delivered, whereby either or one of the parties doth promise to other, that something is done already, or shall be done afterwards. And he that makes the Covenant, is called the Covenantor; and he to whom it is made, the Covenantee. Terms of the Law. Plow. 308.

And this is either exprefs, or in Deed, i. when the Covenant is expreffed in the Deed: As when A. by Deed doth covenant with B. to serve him for a year, and B. doth covenant with A. to pay him Ten pounds for this service. Or it is implied or in Law, i. when the Deed doth not exprefs it, but the Law doth make and supply it. As when one doth make a Lease for years by the words [demise or grant] without any exprefs Covenant for quiet enjoying; in this case the Law doth intend and make such a Covenant on the part of the Lessor, which is, That the Lessee shall quietly hold and enjoy the thing demised against all persons, at least having title under the Lessor, and at least during the Lessors life and (as some think) during the whole Term. And hereupon an Action of Covenant may be brought against him in the Reversion: So that if the Heir that is in by Descent put out the Termor of his Father; the Termor may have this Action against him Terms of the Law, tit. Covenant. Co. 4. 80. 5: 17. F.N.B. 145, 146. Dyer 338. 257.

A Covenant is also either real, i. that whereby a man doth bind himself to pass a real thing, as Lands or Tenements: As a Covenant to levy a Fine of Land, in which case the Land is to be recovered; or when it doth run in the Realty so with the Land, that he that hath the one, hath or is subject to the other; and so a Warranty is called a real Covenant. Or it is personal, i. when it doth run in the Personality, and not with the Land, but some person in particular shall have benefit by it, or be charged with it: As when a man doth covenant to do any personal thing, as build or repair a house, serve him, or the like. And these also are some of them said to be inherent, i. such as are conversant about the Land, as that the thing demised shall be quietly enjoyed, shall be kept in reparations, shall not be aliened, or if it be to be sold, that the Lessor shall have the first refusal; to pay Rent, not to cut down Timber-trees, or do Waste, to fence the Copices when they be new cut, to make further Assurance, or the like. And some of them are said to be collateral, i. that are conversant about some collateral thing that doth nothing at all, or not so immediately concern the thing granted: As to pay a sum of money in gross, to build a house in another mans ground, to make a Feoffment or Lease of other Land, to give other Security to perform the Covenants, or to pay the Rent, or that the Lessor shall distrain for the Rent in some other Land then that which is demised, or the like, these are collateral Covenants. There is also a Covenant to stand seised of Land to Uses, which is now become a kind of Conveyance of Land. For which read Uses at large. Brownl. 1 par. 22, 23.

3. The use and
it.

The most frequent use of a Covenant, is to bind a man to do something in future; and therefore it is for the most part executory: And if the Covenantor do not perform it, the Covenantee may have thereupon for his Relief an Action or Writ of Covenant against the Covenantor, so often as there is any Breach of the Covenant, Co. 1. 154. Lit. Br. 309. 27 H.8.16. Plow. 308. F.N.B. 145.

A Writ or
venant what.

And this Writ of Covenant is therefore defined to be a Writ lying where a man is bound by a Covenant in a Deed, and hath broken it. And in this case commonly the party damnified shall recover Damages only for the Breach: And if he have a Judgment in an Action brought for one Breach, and after the Covenantor doth break the the Covenant again; in this case he may bring a new Action, and so for every Breach. But a Covenant doth sometimes also make a transmutation of a Property and Possession of things, as in case of a Covenant to stand seised of Land to Uses, for which see Use. And in case where one doth covenant, that another shall have a piece of Land for five years; this is a good Lease for five years, for which see Lease. And in case where one doth covenant with another, That if he pay him Ten pounds such a day, he shall have all his Castell in Dale, or his Lease for years he hath of the Manor of Dale; in this case it seems if he pay the money at the time, he shall have the Property of the Goods, and of the Lease for years. It is said therefore, that in some cases upon the Writ of Covenant, the party shall recover the Land it self out of which he hath been ejected.

A Covenant may be in the Affirmative, or in the Negative. And it may be executed, 1. that a thing is done already; or executory, i. that a thing shall be done hereafter: And these are all good. But if it be of a thing present, as if I covenant that my Horse is yours; this is void. Plow. 330. 27 H. 8. 16.

And these Covenants being made by a Deed poll, are as good and effectual as when they are made by a Deed indented, so as the party have the Deed to shew; for otherwise a common person cannot have an Action of Covenant; for it doth not lie upon a Verbal agreement, neither can it be grounded without a Writing, except it be by a special Custom as in London, F. N. B. 145. g. Co. 3. 63. Evers Case, 8 Jac.

And there needs not in this case formal and orderly words, as Covenant, Promise, and the like, to make a Covenant on which to ground an Action of Covenant. For a Covenant may be had by any other words, and upon any part of an Agreement in writing, in what words soever it be set down for any thing to be, or not to be done; the party to or with whom the Promise or Agreement is made, may have this Action upon the breach of the Agreement. Lit. Bro. fol. 430. Co. 2. Lord Cromwells Case. Dym 57. 150. 21 H. 7. 37. 40 E. 3. 5.

And therefore if these words be inserted in a Deed amongst other Covenants, [That the Lessee shall repair, Provided always that the Lessor shall allow Timber: Or that the Lessee shall scour ditches, Provided always that the Lessor do carry away the earth;] these are good Covenants on both sides. And if a Lease be made of Houses by Patent to J. S. for Twenty one years, and therein is inserted this clause, [And that the said J. S. and his Assigns shall repair the Houses when they shall be decayed;] this is a good Covenant. Adjudg. Pasch. 14 Jac. B. R. Sir Thomas Brev. vers. Guipherland's Case.

And so also it is where these or the like words be inserted amongst other Covenants, [And that the Lessee shall pay Ten shillings a year Rent, or that the Lessee shall not alien;] these shall be said to be Covenants, unless it be in such cases where there is some other means to enforce the doing of the thing; as if in case of the Rent there be a clause of Distress, Re-entry, or nomine pena. Bro. Cov. 21. 26. & Co. & Dyer ubi supra.

And in all cases regularly, where words that do begin the sentence be conditional, and have the effect of a Condition, and do give another remedy, there they shall not be construed to make a Covenant, as in the cases of Condition before. And yet if words of Condition and words of Covenant be coupled together in the same sentence, as [Provided always, and it is Covenanted, or the like;] in such cases the words may be construed to make a Covenant and a Condition both. Covenant with two severally is good, March 103. pl 176.

If a man make a Lease for life by Indenture, and therein are inserted these words; [It is provided, that if the Lessee die within sixty years, that then his Executors and Assigns shall have the Land until the sixty years be ended, to be accounted from the date of the Indenture;] this, albeit it be not a good Lease, yet it is a good Covenant. Lease.

If a man make a Lease for years, and warrant it to the Lessee, his Heirs and Assigns during the Term, or he that hath right to the Land confirm the Estate of the Lessee for years with Warranty; in these cases howbeit this be not a Warranty, nor in the nature of a Warranty, yet it shall be construed a good Covenant in Law for the quiet

Use.
Lease.
Contrad.

4. What shall be said a good Covenant in Deed, upon which an Action of Covenant may be had, and what not.

1. In respect of the manner of making it.

quiet enjoying of the thing, Bro. Covenant 38; Descent 50. 21 H. 7. 32.

If the Lord grant to his Tenant, that he will not distrain him in such a part of his Land for his Rent; this shall be taken to be a good Covenant, by this word [grant.] Perk. fess. 69.

2. In respect of the matter or substance
of it.

A Covenant to do any thing that for the substance and matter of it is lawful, or not to do any thing that for the matter of it is unlawful, is good. As if the Grantor covenant, That he is seised or possessed of a good Estate of and in the thing he doth grant, and hath power to grant it: That the Grantee shall quietly enjoy it: That it is and shall be free from Incumbrances: That he will make further Assurance, if need be. That if the Grantee be evicted, he shall pay no Rent: That the Grantee shall pay Rent: That he shall discharge all dues, and save and keep harmless the Grantor. That he shall not alien the thing granted; or if he do, that the Grantor shall have the first refusal thereof. That he shall not do Waste. That he shall have Houseboot, Hayboot. That the Grantor or Grantee shall repair the old Housing, or build new. That he shall pay and discharge all Rents and payments issuing out of the Land. That he shall not fell Trees; or if he do, that he shall pay to the Grantor so much in money for every Tree. That if he fell any Underwood, he shall fence it. That he shall make an Estate of Land. That he shall be quit of any Suit, Service, or Payment. That he shall give sufficient Security to 7. S. for an Hundred pounds he doth owe him; and all these and the like Covenants are good. See West. Symb. in his first Part 1000, & infra Plow. 308. 302. 27 H. 8. 16: Dyer 13. 324. 253. 251. Fitz. Cov. 1.

And generally where a Condition for the matter of it is good, a Covenant comprehending the same matter, is good also. See Condition, numb. 7. But if the matter required to be, or not to be done by the Covenant, be for the substance thereof unlawful, then is the Covenant void, and doth not bind. See Conditions against the Law, numb. 7. Dyer 6. And therefore if one covenant to kill, or rob a man, or the like; this Covenant is void. So if one covenant that he will maintain another in his Suits, or that he will not appear in Inquests, or that he will break the Peace, or that he will forestall Corn, or the like; these Covenants are void. So if one be Tenant in Fee-simple of Land, and he covenant that he will not alien it; this Covenant is void. So if a man be a Tradesman, and he covenant that he will not use or exercise his Trade; this Restraint, if it be absolute and continual, is void; but if it be sub modo only, as that he shall not use his Trade at one time, or in one City or Town only, this Covenant may be good. 18 Jac. B.R. Joilliff versus Broad. Pasch. 19 Jac. B.R. Tanner versus Brag.

So if a man be by Covenant restrained to sow the Land which hath been used to be sowed; and this be either absolutely, or sub modo, i. That if he sow it, he shall pay thus much an Acre for it; these Covenants have been held to be void. Sed quare how the Law is now; for it seems the Statute of 39 Eliz. ch. 2. is discontinued. If A. owe money to B. and B. owe money to C. and B. doth make a Letter of Attorney to C. to sue A. at his own charge, and B. doth covenant with C. that he will not release the Debt to A. In this case, albeit this be Maintenance in C. to sue at his own charge, yet this is a good Covenant, and not against Law. Hil. 20 Jac. Co. B. Maire versus Stapleton.

So also if a Dean and Chapter, or the like, covenant to renew a Lease, contrary to the meaning of the Statute of 18 Eliz. ch. 11. it seems this is a good Covenant, Trin. 14 Jac. Co. B. Tailors Case.

Impossible.

And if the thing to be done by a Covenant, be in the nature of it impossible, the Covenant is void, 27 H. 8. 27. 4 H. 7. 4. And therefore it is, that if a man covenant to go to Rome in three days, or the like, the Covenant is void. So if a man covenant to make a Feoffment to his wife, this Covenant is void. But if a man covenant to make a good Estate of Land to her in Fee-simple, or otherwise, or to find her Maintenance, or to give her so much by the year; these are good Covenants. And generally, where being in a Condition, will make the Condition void, because it is against Law; there it being in a Covenant, will make the Covenant void. See Condition, numb. 7. Brownl. 2 par. 281.

If

If a Lessor Covenant with his Lessee, that he shall and may have Hous-boot, Hay-boot, Plough-boot, &c. by the assignment of the Bailiff of the Lessor; this is a good Covenant: And yet it seems it doth not restrain the power that the Lessee hath by the Law, to take these things without Assignment. But if the Lessee do Covenant that he will not cut any Timber, or Fuel, without the leave, or without the Assignment of the Lessor; this is a good Covenant, and doth restrain him; for in this, and such like cases, the rule is, Modus & conventio vincunt legem. Dyer 19. 115.

If an Obligee Covenant with the Obligor, that he will not sue him upon the Obligation until Easter following; this is a good Covenant, but no Release or Suspension of the Debt. Mich. 36, 37 Eliz. Co. B. R. Adjudge Deaux versus Jefferies. Release.
21 H. 7. 23.

If there be Lord and Tenant of three Acres of Land, White-acre, and two others, and the Lord grant to the Tenant by Deed, that he will not distrain in White-acre for his Rent, or Services; this is a good Covenant, but doth not determine the Seigniorie. Perk. Sect 69.

If one man grant a Mill within his Manor, and Covenant for him and his Heirs, that there shall be no other Mill set up within the Manor; it seems this is a good Covenant. Fitz. Covenant 5.

If one make a Lease, wherein are divers Covenants to be performed on the part of the Lessee, and after the Lessee doth Covenant, that if any of the Covenants be broken, that the Lessor shall enter upon the Land demised, and hold it until the Lessee make him amends for the damage done by the breach of the Covenant; it seems this is a good Covenant, and that the Lessor may take advantage thereof accordingly. See more in Brownl. 1 part. 21. Fitz. Covenant 3.

If a man seised of Land in Fee, Covenant to stand seised of it to Uses, and no Estate doth rise by the Covenant; yet this may be good by way of Covenant, and give remedy to the Covenantee in an Action of Covenant. But with this difference. If the Covenant be future, as where one doth Covenant with another, that in consideration of a marriage, his Lands shall descend, remain, or revert to his Son and Heir Apparent, and to the Heirs of his Body; on the Body of his Wife; in this case the Covenantee may have a Writ of Covenant upon the Covenant. For if a Covenant be present, as that a man and his Heirs shall from henceforth stand and be seised to such and such uses, and the uses will not arise by the Law in the case; in this case no Action of Covenant will lie upon this Covenant, for this Action will never lie upon any Covenant, but upon such a Covenant, as is either to do a thing hereafter, or that a thing is or hath heretofore been done, and not when it is for a thing present, as when A. doth Covenant with B. that his black Horse shall be for ever after the Horse of B.; this is no good Covenant to give the Horse to B. or to give him an Action of Covenant for him, but A. may keep him still notwithstanding. Plow. 307, 308. 21 H. 7. 18. 27 H. 8. 16. Finchlesley 49.

If one Mortgage upon Condition to re-enter upon payment of an hundred pound at a day, and the Mortgagee doth Covenant that he will not take the profits of the Land, until default of payment; this is a good Covenant, and the Mortgagee therefore may not meddle with the profits, until the day of payment come. Agree, 8 Car.

If one make a Lease for years of Land; by the words [Demise or Grant,] and there is not contained in the Lease any express Covenant for the quiet enjoying of the Land; in this case the Law doth supply a Covenant for the quiet enjoying of it against the Lessor, and all that come in under him by title, during the term, and upon this the Lessee, his Executors, Administrators, or Assigns, may have an Action of Covenant if he be disturbed. But where there is an express Covenant in the Deed for the quiet enjoying of the Land, there the Law will not make this implied Covenant. Expressum facit cessare tacitum.

5. What shall be said a good Covenant in Law, upon which an Action of Covenant may be had, and what not, Warranty.

And therefore herein this is not like to the case, where a man doth make a Lease for life by the words of Dedi & concessi; or make a Lease for life by other words, Reserving Rent; (in which cases the Law doth create a Warranty against all men, during the life of the Lessor :) For if in these cases there be an Express Warranty in the Deed, yet this doth not take away nor qualify the implied Warranty, but the Lessor may make use of which of them he will, if he be ousted or evicted by one that hath an elder title. Browl. 2 part. 212, 213, 214. Co. 4. 80. 5. 17. Trin. 3 Jac. B. R. Stiles case. Pasche, 7 Jac. B. R. Winchcombs case.

6. How a Covenant in Deed or Law shall be taken and expounded, and how it shall be performed.

A Covenant in particular (being one part of a Deed) is subject to the general Rules of Exposition of all parts of Deeds in general, as to be always taken most strongly against the Covenantor, and most in advantage of the Covenantee. 2. To be taken according to the intent of the parties. 3. Ut res magis valeat, &c. 4. When no time is limited for the doing of the thing, it shall be done in reasonable time, and the like. Plew. Sess. 287. See the Exposition of Deeds before in oto.

Joynt and several.

In cases where the Covenantees have, or are to have several Interests or Estates, where when the Covenant is made to, and with the Covenantees, Et cum qualibet eorum, aut altero eorum; in this case these words make the Covenant several: As if one by Indenture Demise Black-acre to A. and White-acre to B. and Green-acre to C. and Covenant with them and either of them, or Covenant with them, and every of them, that he is lawful owner of all these Acres; in this case the Covenant is several: But if he Demise to them the three Acres together, and Covenant in this manner; the Covenant is joynt and not several. And if A. and B. do Covenant joyntly, and severally; in this case the Covenant may be joynt, or several, and the Covenantors may be sued, either the one way or the other, at the Election of the Covenantee. Co. 5. 19. Dyer 338. Bro. Covenant 49.

For quiet enjoying.

If one make a Lease of Land to another, and Covenant that he shall quietly enjoy it without the let of any person whatsoever, or without the let of any person whatsoever claiming by, or under the Lessor; in both these cases the Covenant shall be taken to extend to such persons as have title, or claim some Estate under the Lessor; for if in the first case any person that hath no title, and in the second case any person that shall claim under another, and hath title, or that shall claim under the Lessor, claim, or enter, or otherwise disturb the Lessee; this is held to be no breach of the Covenant. Sed quere of the first case; for herein some conceive a difference between a Covenant in Deed and a Covenant in Law: And that howsoever the Covenant in Law is extended onely to evictions by title, yet that the Covenant in Deed shall be extended further. And therefore that if A. make a Lease for years to B. and doth Covenant that B. shall quietly enjoy it, during the term, without the interruption of any person or persons; that if a stranger in this case, that hath no right, doth interrupt B. that he may have an Action of Covenant; as when such a promise is by word, an Action of the case will lie upon it. See Browl. 1 part. 20, 21, 22. F. N. B. 145. Dyer 318. 36 H. 8. 3. Mich. 7 Jac. B. R. Accord in Gambles case. Co. 4. 80. Dyer 318. By Furver at Lent Assize, Gloucester. 23 Car.

Action of the Case.

And if the Lessor Covenant with his Lessee, that he hath not done any act to prejudice the Lease, but that the Lessee shall enjoy it against all persons; in this case these words [Against all persons] shall refer to the first, and be limited and restrained to any acts done by him, and no breach shall be allowed, but in such an act. Curia per visum versus Psad. Mich. 40, 41 Eliz. B. R.

Executors.

The Covenant in Law upon the words Demise or Grant also for the quiet enjoying of the thing demised, is general against all persons that have title, during the term, and extendeth to the Heir after the death of the Lessor, as against himself onely, and shall charge the Executors or Administrators for any disturbance in the life of the Covenantor, but not for any disturbance afterwards; he that doth sue therefore upon this Covenant, must shew that he was molested or evicted by one that had an elder title. Co. 5. 17. 22 Hen. 6. chap. 52. Co. 4. 80. Dyer 337.

If one doth Covenant to enter into Bond for the quiet enjoying of Land, and doth not say what Bond: in this case it shall be taken to be a Bond of so much as the Land to be enjoyed is worth. Ca. 5. 78.

A Warranty in a Lease for years, shall be taken for a Covenant for quiet enjoying, Fitz. Covenant: 21. See before. 7 Eliz. 4. 6. Bro. Grant: 64.

If one Covenant with another, to acquit him of all charges issuing out of the Land, and after by Parliament the tenth part of the value, not of the Issues of all Lands are given to the King; in this case it seems the Covenant shall not extend to this. But if the Parliament had given the tenth part exinnum terra; the Covenant would have extended to this as well as to Rents, Commons, and such like things, wherewith the Land is charged. Brownl. 1 part. 19, 20, 21.

To free from Incumbrances and Charges.

If A. Covenant with B. to make such Assurance, or such further Assurance of Land as the Counsel learned in the Law of B. shall advise; in this case albeit B. be learned in the Law himself, yet he may not devise this Assurance, but some other learned in the Law must advise, otherwise A. is not bound to make it. Co. 5. 19.

To make Assurances of Land.

And if A. Covenant with B. to make such Assurance of Land by a day, as B. or his Heirs shall devise; in this case B. or his Heirs must first devise the Assurance before A. is bound to do any thing. And therefore if one sell Land for money, and the Vendee doth Covenant to make back to the Vendor and his Heirs, such Assurance of the Land, as the Counsel of the Vendor shall devise within one year, provided, That if the Vendee make default in the Assurance, then if he do not pay twenty pound to the Vendor, that then the Vendee shall stand seized to the use of him and his Heirs, and the Vendor tender no Assurance, the twenty pound is not paid; in this case the Land is in the Vendee freed from the Covenant. And therefore in these and such like cases, where a man is to make such Assurance, as A. or his Heirs, or their Counsel shall devise: A. or his Heirs must take care, that in time they have an Assurance reasonably drawn, and ready to be sealed, and to tender it to him that is to seal it, for until then there can be no breach of Covenant. But if A. be bound to make a Feoffment, Lease, or other Assurance of Land to B. by a day; in this case B. need not to demand it, or tender the Assurance, for A. at his peril must do it, otherwise he doth break his Covenant. Co. 5. 19, 20. Dyer 361. And by Justice Bridgman.

And yet if in this case B. do get the Assurance drawn, and tender it to A. it seems A. is bound to seal it, or otherwise he doth break his Covenant. Trin. 20 Jac. B.R. Steed versus Spike.

And if the case be so that A. is bound to make such Assurance to B. by a day, at the costs of B.; in this case A. must do the first act, viz. notify to B. what manner of Assurance he will make, that he may know what money to tender; and when the money is tendered, A. must see that he do make the Assurance accordingly at his peril, and if he fail in either of these, the Covenant is broken. Brownl. 2 part. 283. Co. 5. 20, 22.

If A. be bound to make such Assurance to B. as by the Counsel learned of B. upon request made, shall be devised; in this case it is sufficient if the advice be given to B. and that he do make it known to A. and it is not needful it be given to A. immediately. Co. 5. 20. And if A. Covenant with B. to make such Assurance to B. as J. S. shall devise, and J. S. doth devise a reasonable Deed of Bargain and Sale, and he tender it to A. to Seal; in this case A. is bound to Seal it presently, and he shall not have time to advise with his Counsel upon the Deed; but if he be illiterate and cannot read the Deed, he may refuse and delay to Seal it, until he can get some body to read it, which he must do as soon as he can. Dyer 338. Co. 2. 3. And if one be bound by Covenant to make an Assurance upon request; the Covenantee must request and tender an Assurance also, and he must tender such a one also as is reasonable, otherwise the Covenant will not be broken by the refusal or neglect to do it; as if one be bound to make a Feoffment to A. upon request; in this case A. must get a naked Deed of Feoffment drawn without Warranty or Covenants, and tender it. And if the Covenant be to make such a Lease as the former; in this case the second Lease must not differ from the former, & if it do, the party is not bound to Seal it. Experientia.

If one Covenant to levy a Fine at the next Assizes for thirteen years exinnum; this shall be taken from the time of the Fine levied, and not from the time of the Covenant. Curia. Hil. 7 Jac. Co. B. R.

If one bargain and sell Land to me by Deed indented, and before the Intolment of the Deed, I do Covenant with J. S. to convey all the Land, whereof I am seized, and to do this before such a day, and before the day the Deed is inrolled; in this case my Covenant shall not extend to this Land conveyed to me by this bargain and sale. Adjudge in Sir J. Bress case.

If A. Covenant with B. that in consideration of a marriage between the Son of A. and sister of B. that he at the coits of his Son, and by his sufficient Deed, will before Easter day, assure Land to his Son; and B. doth Covenant, that if A. do perform this, then he will make him a general Release; in this case albeit A. be ready, and the Son do not tender the Assurance, and the Conveyance is not made, B. is not bound to make any Release. Dyer 371.

To repair the Houses.

If one Covenant to keep and leave a house in the same, or as good plight as it was at the time of the making of the Lease; in this case the ordinary and natural decay of it, is no breach of the Covenant: But the Covenantor is hereby bound to do his best to keep it in the same plight, and therefore to keep it covered, &c. Brownl. 1 part. 23. Fitz. Covenant 4.

For the having of Houfeboot, &c.

If the words of a Covenant be [That the Lessee shall have thorns by the Assignment of the Lessor and necessary fuel also:] it seems by this, that there must be an Assignment of the fuel, as well as of the thorns. Dyer 19.

If the Lessor Covenant with his Lessee, that he shall have sufficient Hedgboot, by Assignment of the Bailiff of the Lessor; in this case, and by this the Lessee is not restrained from that liberty that the Law doth give him, and therefore that he may take without Assignment: But if the words be Negative, that he shall not take without Assignment, or that he shall take by Assignment, and not otherwise, contra. Dyer 19, 20.

To convey Lands of the value of, &c.

If A. doth Covenant with B. that where as a marriage is intended to be solemnized between A. and C. the Daughter of B. at or before the fourteenth day of August next, and where the said B. hath paid to the said A. a thousand pound for portion, &c. the said A. in consideration thereof doth Covenant with B. that he within one year of the day of the marriage, will assure Lands of the value of four hundred pound per annum; in this case, albeit the marriage be not before that day, yet the Covenant must be performed. Trin. 21 Jac. B. R. George versus Lane.

That the Lessee shall make Estates.

If one make a Lease for years of a Manor, and Covenant that the Lessee shall make estates for life or years, and that they shall be good; in this case it seems this Covenant shall not be taken to enable the Lessee to make estates for a longer time then his estate will bear. By Justice Bridgman.

That if the Lessee sell, the Lessor shall have the first refusal.

If the Lessee Covenant with the Lessor, That if the Lessee be minded to sell his estate, the Lessor shall have the first refusal; in this case when the Lessee is minded to sell, he need do no more but acquaint the Lessor with his purpose, and know his minde, and if he do not answer him presently, he may sell it to whom he will: And if the Covenant be further, that the Lessor shall give as much as another will, the Lessee must tell him what another doth offer him, and ask him whether he will give so much; and if he refuse or do not accept it presently, the Lessee may sell to whom he will. Dyer 13.

To do one thing for another.

If one Covenant to serve me a year, and I covenant to pay him ten pound for it; in this case albeit he do not serve me, yet I must pay him the ten pound. But if I Covenant with him to pay him ten pound, if he serve me a year, contra; for in this case I am not bound to pay him the money, unless he serve me a year. So if one Covenant to make new Pales, so as he may have the old; in this case it seems he is not bound to make the new Pales, unless he may have the old Pales. So if one Covenant to pay money for service, counsel, or the like, or Covenant to marry ones Daughter, or make an estate, and the Covenant is penned conditionally, and so as one thing is the cause of another, and it is not set down by mutual and reciprocal Covenants; in all these cases, if the cause or condition be not observed, the Covenant shall not be performed. Co. super Littl. 204. Dyer 371: Mich. 7 Jac. Co. B. R.

If one make a Lease for ten years, and Covenant that if the Lessee pay him ten pound within the ten years, that he shall have the Fee-simple, and the Lessee surrender his estate within the time; in this case, if the Lessee pay the money, the Lessor is bound to make the Fee-simple to him. But if the words of the Covenant be, that if he pay him ten pound within the term, he shall have Fee, and the Lessee surrender his term, and then pay the ten pound; in this case the Lessor is not bound to make the Fee-simple, for it was not paid within the term. Co. 1. 144.

That the Lessee shall have the Fee.

If one Covenant to do a thing to J. S. or his Assigns, or to J. S. and his Assigns by a day, and before the day J. S. die; in this case it must be done to his Assigns, if he before the day, name any Assignee; and if he do not, it must be done to his Executor or Administrator, which is an Assignee in Law. See more in Condition. Num. 8.

Assigns.

Obligation 7. 27 H. 8. 2.

If one be seized of Land in Fee, or possessed of a term of years, and he doth alien it, and supposing he hath a good estate, he doth Covenant that he is lawfully seized or possessed, or that he hath a good estate, or that he is able to make such an alienation, &c. And in truth he hath not, but some other hath an estate in it before; in this case the Covenant is broken, as soon as it is made. Dyer 303. Co. 9. 60.

7. When a Covenant in Deed or Law shall be said to be broken, and when not, and how.

And if I bargain and sell Land by Deed indented to B. and before the Deed is introlled, I grant the same Land to C. and Covenant that I am seized of a good estate of it in Fee, and after the Deed is introlled; in this case the Covenant is broken. Adjudge Sir Peral Brocas case. 32 Eliz.

That the Covenantor is seized of a good Estate, &c.

If A. let Land to B. and Covenant that he shall quietly enjoy it without the let of any person whatsoever, and A. himself, or any other person that hath any title to the Land, by, or under him, as if he make a Lease of it, or grant a Rent out of it to another, or any other person that hath any title to the Land, albeit it be not by, or under A. as if A. were a Disseisor, and the Disseisee do enter or disturb B.; in all these cases the Covenant is broken. And so also is the Law deemed to be by some in case of Covenant, in Deed for quiet enjoying, where a stranger or one that hath no title to the Land, doth enter or disturb B. But otherwise it is in case of Covenant in Law for quiet enjoying; for in this case, if a stranger that hath no title to the Land, doth enter or disturb the Lessee; this is no breach of the Covenant in Law. And in all cases where any person hath title, the Covenant is not broken until some Entry, or other actual disturbance be made by him upon his title. *Mich. 8 Jac. Lamb's case. Dyer 328. F. N. For quiet enjoying.

If a man make a Lease of Land, and after make a Feoffment of the same Land, and the Feoffee doth disturb the Lessee; in this case it hath been said, this is a breach of the Covenant for quiet enjoying. See quere Brownl. 1 part. 20, 21, 22, 23, 24. 78. 80, 81. 20 Jac. Bro. Covenant 7.

If a man purchase Land to him and his Wife, and his Heirs in Fee, and then make a Lease for years of it to J. S. and Covenant for him, his Executors and Assigns, that the Lessee, his Executors and Assigns, shall quietly hold and enjoy the premises, without the let of the Lessor, his Heirs or Assigns, or any other person, by or through his or their means, title or procurement, and after the Lessor doth die, and his Wife doth enter and disturb; in this case, and by this means the Covenant is broken. Hil. 20 Jac. Adjudge B. R. Butler versus Lady Swinerton.

And so it is also, if A. purchase Land of B. to have and to hold to A. for life, the Remainder to C. the son of A. in Tail, and after A. doth make a Lease of this Land to D. for years, and doth Covenant for the quiet enjoying as in the last case, and then he dieth, and then C. doth out the Lessee; in this case this was held to be no breach of the Covenant. Swans case. M. 7, 8 Eliz.

So likewise if A. be seized of White-acre in Fee, and take to Wife B. and then make a Lease of it to C. with such a Covenant as before, for the quiet enjoying, and then A. doth die, and after B. doth recover Dower; by this the Covenant is broken, and yet if the Mother of A. recover Dower, and out the Lessee, contra. So also if a Tenant in Tail doth make a Lease with such a Covenant, and his Issue doth disturb the

the Lessee; this is no breach of the Covenant. And yet if the Lessor be the cause of the Gift in Tail, or procure the disturbance, this may be a breach of the Covenant. And so also it is where a man is seised of Land in Fee, and he doth make a Lease with such a Covenant, and afterwards he doth die; and then his Heir is in Ward by reason of a Tenure, and hereby the Lessee is disturbed; it seems this is no breach of this Covenant. Dyer 42. 26 H 8. 3. *Fitz. If one Covenant that the Wife he is about to marry shall quietly enjoy all her Goods, and that the Covenantor shall take it into his possession, and the Husband doth onely take the Goods, and keep them in his possession; this is no breach of the Covenant. Curia. B. R. Pasch. 6 Car. Crowls case.

If two make a Lease, and Covenant that the Lessee shall enjoy the Land without the let of them, or any other, and one of them alone doth disturb the Lessee; this is a breach of the Covenant. Adjudge. Mich. 2 Car. B. R. Sanders case.

If a Lessee grant and assign all the Land contained in his Lease to A. and doth Covenant with him, that he hath not done any act or thing by which the Grant or Assignment might be impaired, but that the Assignee his Executors, &c. may enjoy it against all persons, and before this time the Wife of the Lessor had recovered and had execution of a third part of this Land for her Dower; in this case this is no breach of the Covenant, for the words [but that, &c.] do refer to the former, and are not absolute. Dyer 249.

If A. grant the Bailiwick of W. to B. for life, and B. assign it to C. for three years, and after to D. and C. doth Covenant with D. that he will not do or suffer to be done any act, during the said three years, by which the Grant made by A. may be forfeit, but that after the three years ended, he may enjoy it in as ample manner as C. did, or might have done without any act by C. and after the three years ended, C. doth execute a Procees there; and thereby incroach upon the Office; this is no breach of the Covenant. Adjudge. Rich. versus Row. Pasche, 13 Jac. Cur. B. R.

Incumbrances.

If A. grant Land to B. and his Heirs, tending ten pound Rent, and B. doth sell the Land to C. and his Heirs, and doth Covenant with C. that from such a day he shall enjoy it, discharged of all Incumbrances, and before that day a Common Recovery is had against C. in which A. is vouched, and this is to the use of C. and his Heirs, supposing hereby the Rent had been gone, which is not so; in this case the Covenant is broken, for this Rent is an Incumbrance. Brownl. 1 part. 20, 21. Curia, Hil. 20 Jac. Co. B. R. Greenway and Tuckfolds case.

If a Lease be made of Land for years, and the Lessee devise it to his Wife durante viduitate, and after to his Son, and he in Reversion doth sell the Fee to the Woman, during the Widowhood, and doth Covenant that the Land is discharged of all former Sales, Rights, Titles, Charges; in this case the Covenant is broken at the first by reason of the possibility of the Son. Co. 10 52.

If A. grant White-acre to B. and Covenant that B. shall enjoy it against all Incumbrances, and C. doth disturb him in the taking of Common there, and this is a Common which is against Common Right, and which he hath by Prescription; in this case it seems this is a breach of the Covenant. But if it be of a Common that is of Common Right, Contra. 9 Eliz. Co. B. R.

To make Estates and Assurances.

If A. Covenant with B. before Easter to make him a good sure Estate of Land, discharged of all former Bargains, Leases, and Incumbrances whatsoever. (Leases or Grants for life or years, reserving the ancient Rent during the term onely excepted) and A. after this, and before the estate made, doth make a Grant of all or part of the Land, reserving the old Rent; it seems this is no breach of the Covenant. Brownl. 1 part. 84. Dyer 139.

If one make a Lease to J. S. for years, and Covenant with him that upon the Surrender of that Lease, he will make him a new Lease, and the Lessor before J. S. can make any Surrender, doth sell away the Reversion, or make a Lease to another of the Land, and so disable himself; this is ipso facto a breach of the Covenant, without any Surrender made by the Lessee, which in this case is not needful. For, Lex neminem cogit ad vana & inutilia peragenda. So if one be seised of Land in Fee, and Covenant to make a Feoffment of it to T. S.; by a day upon a Request, and the Covenantor before the day doth make a Feoffment of it to another, and then doth die before any Request made to him; in this case the Covenant is broken. Co.

5. 21.

If A. Covenant with B. to make such Assurance as B. or as the Counsel learned of B. shall devise, and B. tender such an Assurance to A. to seal, and A. doth refuse or delay to seal it; this is a breach of the Covenant. Dyer 338. Co. 2. 3.

If A. doth Covenant with B. C. D. and E. to make them a Feoffment such a day, and they come to the Land at the time to take it, and A. doth not make the Feoffment; by this the Covenant is broken. And so also if B. and C. onely, or one of them doth come to the Land; for it may be made to any of them in the name of the rest. But if none of them come to the Land, albeit the Feoffor never come there, it seems the Covenant is not broken. Bro. Covenant 3.

If A. Covenant with B. before Easter next, to assure his House to him, and K. his Wife, during the life of T. S. and A. surrender his House to the use of B. and such as K. shall name at the Request of B.; in this case the Covenant is broken, for this is no performance of it. Curia, B. R.

If one Covenant to repair, sustain, and amend a House, and the House is burnt by the negligence of the Covenantor, and not repaired again; this is a breach of this Covenant. And if the Lessee Covenant for him and his Executors, to repair at his own costs (the principal Timber not hurt or in decay for lack of reparations, or otherwise in default of the Lessee or his Executors onely except) and he die, and afterwards the House is burnt in default of the Executors; in this case the Covenant is broken, and the Executors may be charged. Dyer 334.

If one Covenant to leave a Wood in the same plight he findes it, and he cut down Trees; in this case the Covenant is broken presently, for it is now become impossible to be performed by his own act: But if in this case some of the Trees be blowed down with the wind, or the like, by this the Covenant is not broken, for it is now become impossible to be done by the act of God, and in this case the Covenantor is not bound to supply it. And so likewise of a Covenant to repair Houses, or if one Covenant to sustain Houses or Sea-banks, or Covenant to leave them in as good case as one doth finde them, and the Houses be burnt, or thrown down by tempest, or the like, or the Banks be overthrown by a sudden flood, or the like accident; in this case the Covenant is not broken by this accident onely; but if the Covenantor do not repair, and make up these things again in time convenient, the Covenant will be broken. And if Houses be let to me for years, and I Covenant to leave them in as good plight as I finde them, and I throw down the Houses; this is no breach of the Covenant for I may re-edifie them, and therefore no Action will lie upon this Covenant until the end of the term. Fitz. Covenant 29. Co. 5. 15. F. N. B. 145. Co. 1. 98. Perk. Sect. 738. Dyer 33. Plow. 29. 40 Ed. 3. 5.

If one Covenant to repair a House before a day, and it happen the Plague is in the House before and until the day, and thereby it is not done; in this case the Covenant is not broken, for this will excuse, but then it must be done in convenient time afterwards, for otherwise the Covenant will be broken. Hil. 8 Jac. Curia.

If a Lessee Covenant to do all the reparations of a House Demised at his own costs and charges, and he cut Trees upon some of the Ground Demised to amend the House; it seems this is a breach of his Covenant. See March. f. 17. Dyer 198.

A man makes a Lease, and that the Lessee shall have Conueniens lignum non succidat & vendat arbores, and the Lessee cuts down Trees; this is a breach of Covenant. March 9. pl. 22.

If one Covenant to pay money at five several days, and he fail of payment the first day; by this the Covenant is broken. Co. super Litt. 292. Brownl. Rep. f. 19. 20, 22. 2 part. 176, 177, 173.

If

To leave a stock, &c.

If one take Land sowed, or a stock of Cattle in Lease for years, and the Lessee Covenant to leave it in as good plight, as he doth take it; in this case he must leave it sowed again, and if any of the Cattle die, he must make up the number, otherwise he doth break his Covenant. 40 Ed. 3. 5.

Not to take Toll.

If a Corporation do Covenant not to take Toll, and their Common Officer appointed for that purpose doth take it; this is a breach of the Covenant. 43 Ed. 3. 17.

To build a House.

If A. Covenant with B. to build a House by a day, and B. doth forbid him, and thereupon he doth forbear to do it, and doth it not; in this case the Covenant is broken, for this will not excuse him: But if he do by any actual impediment hinder him, or be the cause why the thing is not done, then the not doing of it is no breach of the Covenant. And therefore if a Lessee Covenant to cleanse one of the Ditches in the Land demised, and the Lessor enter upon the Land it self, and keep out the Lessee, and he doth not cleanse the Ditch by the time; by this the Covenant is broken: But if in this case the Lessor do by force keep the Lessee out of the Ditch or place it self, Contra. 18 Edw. 4. 8. Kelw. 34. Trin. 36. Etiz. B. R. Carrel versus Reade.

To have liberty to go in and out of a Shop.

If A. and B. be Joyntenants of a Shop, and A. Covenant with B. that he and his Assigns shall have free ingress and egress in and out of the Shop, and A. doth appoint C. his Servant to enter as Servant to him, and to occupy in Common with A. and this Servant doth expel the Servant of B.; in this case this is a breach of the Covenant. Hil. 16 Jac. B. R. Siliard versus Lee.

To come into a House.

If A. Covenant with B. that B. shall come four times a year into the house of A. without being ousted by A. and A. when he doth see B. coming, doth shut the doors and windows, and doth not suffer B. to come in; by this the Covenant is not broken. 3 H. 4. 8.

To marry another.
Make a Feoff-
ment, &c.
Tender and Refusal.

If A. Covenant with B. to marry the Daughter of B. make a Feoffment, or do any other act to C. (who is a stranger to the Covenant) and A. doth tender it and offer to do as much as doth lie in his power, but the stranger doth refuse it, and thereby it is not done; yet this doth not excuse, but the Covenant is broken: But if the Covenant be to do any such act to the Covenantee himself, and the Covenantor tender it, and the Covenantee refuse it; by this the Covenant is performed. To pay Rent. See Brownl. Rep. f. 19, 20, 22, 24. 2 parts 176, 177, 273. 33 H. 6. 16. Bro. Covenant 3. Fitz. Bar 62.

8. Who shall or may have advantage of a Covenant in Deed or Law, and bring a Writ of Covenant upon the breach of it,
or not.

Any one that is party to the Deed, to whom the Covenant is made, may take advantage of the Covenant, but not a stranger; for if A. Covenant with B. to do an act to C. who is no party to the Deed, and he doth it not, B. and not C. must sue him upon this breach.

If a Lease be made of Land to a Husband and Wife for years, and the Lessor doth enter upon the Land, and put them both out, or the one of them after the death of the other; in this case both of them while they both live, and the survivor after the death of one of them, may have this Action of Covenant upon the Covenant in Law:

So if a Wardship be granted to a Woman by Deed, and she take a Husband and die; the Husband shall have advantage of this Covenant in Law made by the word [Grant] if he be disturbed.

So if one by the words [Demise or Grant] Lease Land to a Woman sole for years, who taketh a Husband and dieth; in this case if the Husband be disturbed he shall take advantage of this Covenant in Law. Co. 5. 17. Dyer 257. 47 Ed. 3. 22.

Heir.

If a Feoffment be made in Fee, and the Feoffor doth Covenant to warrant the Land, or otherwise to the Feoffee and his Heirs; in this case the Heir of the Feoffee shall take advantage of this. As if A. Covenant with B. and his Heirs to infeoff B. and his Heirs of Land, and B. die before it be done; in this case his Heirs shall take advantage thereof.

And

And if A. B. and C. have Lands in Coparcenary, and they purchase other Lands in Fee, and they Covenant each to other his Heirs and Assigns to make such Conveyance to the Heir of him that shall die first, of a third part as he shall devise; in this case the Heir, not the Executor, shall take advantage of the Covenant. Dyer 338.

Executors and Administrators shall take advantage of Inherent Covenants, albeit they be not named. And therefore if A. Covenant to do a thing to B. and do not name his Executors or Administrators, and it be not done; it seems the Executors or Administrators of B. may have an Action of Covenant for the not doing of it. As if one Covenant with J. S. to pay him money at Michaelmas, and do not say to his Executors, &c. and he die before the time; in this case his Executor or Administrator shall take advantage of this Covenant, and may recover the money. Co. 5. 17. F.N.B. 145. Dyer 112. 271.

Grantees of Reversions shall have the like advantage against Fermors (by Action onely) for any Covenant or Agreement contained in their Lease, as the Lessors, their Heirs or Successors might. And so also shall Lessees against Grantees of Reversions (Recoveries in value except) by the Statute of 32 H. 8. 34. And herein (as in the cases of a Condition before) a difference is taken between Covenants that are inherent, and Covenants that are collateral. For the Covenants whereof Grantees by this Statute shall take advantage, are inherent Covenants, (i.) Such Covenants as do concern the thing granted, and tend to the supportation of it: As where a Lessee for life or years doth Covenant with his Lessor and his Heirs, to keep the Houses demised in good reparations, or the like, and after the Lessor doth grant away the Reversion of all, (Mich. 8 Jac. Primes case,) or part of the Houses to J. S.; in this case J. S. shall take advantage for any breach of the Covenant in his time, but not for any breach before the time the Reversion was granted. But if the Lessee doth Covenant with his Lessor and his Heirs, to pay him a sum of money, or make him a Feoffment, or the like, and then the Lessor doth grant the Reversion to J. S.; in this case J. S. shall not take advantage of this Covenant: And yet the Executors or Administrators of the Lessor shall take advantage of this Covenant. See Goldsb. 175: pl. 109. See Condition, Numb. 12. Co. 5. 18. 9 Jac. B. R. Wilborne and Befwich's case. Accord.

Regularly, every Assignee of the Land or thing Demised, shall take advantage of inherent Covenants, as if a Covenant be, to have Estovers to burn in the House Demised, or to have Timber to repair, or if the Covenant be that the Lessor or Lessee shall repair, or the like. And therefore of these Assignees in Deed and in Law Assignees of Assignees in infinitum, shall take advantage, and Assignees of Executors or Administrators, Tenants by Statute, or Elegit, or after a sale upon a Fieri Facias, a Husband in the Right of his Wife; any one of these, and any other that shall come lawfully to a term, unto which such a Covenant is incident, albeit he be not named, yet may he take advantage of it. Co. 5. 17.

If a Lease for years be made to J. S. by the words [Demise or Grant] and the Lessee assign this over to J. D.; in this case J. D. may take advantage of the Covenant in Law, and bring an Action against the Lessor, if he be disturbed. Co. 4. 80: Dyer 257. Fitz Covenant 30.

If a Lease for years be made of Land, and the Lessor doth Covenant with the Lessee and his Assigns to do, or not to do something; in this case an Assignee by word, or an Assignee by Deed, may take advantage of this Covenant. Co. 3. 63: F.N.B. 145.

If two Coparceners make Partition of Land, and the one of them doth Covenant with the other to acquite her, and her Heirs of a Suit that issued out of the Land, and the Covenantee doth alien her part to a stranger; in this case the Alienor shall have the same advantage for acquital of the Land as the Covenantee had.

So if A. be seised of the Manor of B. whereof a Chappel is parcel, and a Prior with the consent of his Covent, had covenanted with A. and his Heirs, Lords of the Manor to celebrate Divine Service in the Chappel, and after A. had sold the Manor; in this case the Vendee or Assignee of the Manor should have had the same advantage of the Covenant the Vendor had. But if the Lord had sold the Chappel, the Assignee of the Chappel should not take advantage of the Covenant. And if a Covenant be to say Divine Service in the Chappel of a stranger; in this case the Assignee of the Manor, in which the Chappel is, shall not take advantage of the Covenant. Brasyl. 2 part. 56. 207. Co. super Littl 385. Co. 5. 23. 18.

9. Who shall be bound and charged by a Covenant; and against whom a Writ of Covenant doth lie, and where, or nor, Executors, Administrators.

Regularly, all those that do seal and deliver the Deed, and are named and bound by the exprefs words of the Covenant, whether the Covenant be collateral or inherent, are bound by the Covenant contained in the Deed: And therefore if Heirs, Executors, Administrators or Assigns, be named in the Covenant, for the most part they are bound by the Covenant. And in all cases of Inherent Covenants also, where a man doth Covenant for himself onely, and doth not name his Executors and Administrators, or either of them; they are bound, and may be charged by the Covenant notwithstanding: And in some cases the Law is so also for collateral Covenants; and in most cases of Inherent Covenants that tend to the support of the thing granted, (in respect of which it is presumed, the Lessor took the less for the Land) such as have the Land, albeit they be neither Executors nor Administrators, or either of them but Assignees, &c. shall be charged by the Covenant, though they be not named; for these Covenants are said to run with the Land. Co. 5. 16, 17, 18.

If a Feoffment or Lease be made to two, or to a man and his wife, and there are divers Covenants in the Deed to be performed on the part of the Feoffees or Lessees, and one of them doth not seal, or the wife doth, or doth not seal during the Coverture, and he or she that doth not seal, doth notwithstanding accept of the Estate, and occupy the Lands conveyed or demised; in these cases, as touching all Inherent Covenants, as for payment of Rent, and the accessories thereof, as clauses of Distress, of Re-entry, of Numine panna, Reparations, and the like; they are bound by these Covenants as much as if they do seal the Deed. So if a Lease be made to A. for years or life, the Remainder to J. S. in Fee, and there is a Rent reserved, or there be divers Covenants on the part of the Grantees, and J. S. doth never seal the Deed, or Counterpart; yet if in this case he accept the estate after the death of A. he must pay the Rent, and perform all the Covenants that are Inherent. So also if there be Covenants in the Kings Patent to be performed on the part of the Patentee. As if there be this clause in the Patent [And that J. S. (the Patentee) shall repair the House which it is decayed;] in this case the Patentee is bound by this Covenant, and all such like Covenants. But quere of collateral Covenants, in the first cases, for therein it seems the Feoffee or Lessee is not bound: And yet it is said, That if an Indenture be made between A. of the one part, and B. and C. of the other part, and therein there is a Lease made by A. to B. and C. on certain Conditions, and B. and C. are bound to A. by the Indenture in twenty pound, to perform the Conditions, and B. onely doth seal the Deed, and not C; yet in this case, if C. accept of the Estate he is bound by the Covenants, and one of them cannot be sued without the other, whilst they are both living. Quis sentis commodum sentire debet & onus. Et transit terra cum onere. Co. super Littl. 231. Dyer 13. Bro. Covenant 6. Det. 80. Experientia. Pasche, 14 Jac. B. R. Bret and Cumberlands case. Co. super Littl. Sect. 231.

Heirs.

If a man Covenant for him and his Heirs, to do any thing whatsoever; hereby his Heirs are bound: But otherwise, except the Heirs be bound by the Deed by exprefs name, an Heir shall scarcely be bound or charged in any case by a Deed. And therefore it is, that if the Lessee for years be ousted by any other but the Heir himself, no Action of Covenant will lie against the Heir, unless there be an exprefs Covenant wherein and whereby the Lessor and his Heirs are bound. But if he be ousted by the Heir himself, it seems an Action of the Covenant will lie against him: And yet if he be ousted by an elder title from the Lessor, Contra; for in this case the Heir shall not be charged. Co. 5. 17. Bro. Covenant 38: 32 H. 6. 32. Dyer 257. Fitz. Covenant 31.

Executors, Administrators.

If a man do Covenant for himself onely, to pay money, build a House, for quiet enjoying, or the like, and he doth not say in the Covenant. [His Executors

Defendants]

Descent Administrators, &c.] Yet hereby his Executors and Administrators are bound, and shall be charged. And yet if a Lessee for years Covenant for himself, to repair the Houses demised, omitting other words; it seems in this case he is bound to repair onely during his life, and the Executors or Administrators are not bound. So if a Lessor Covenant for himself onely, to discharge the Lessee of all quit Rents out of the Land; it seems this Covenant is onely personal, and shall binde the Covenantor onely during his life. But if in these cases these words [during the Term] be added in the Covenant, as if a Lessee Covenant for himself to repair the Houses, during the term, or the Lessor Covenant for himself to discharge the Lessee of all quit Rents, during the term; in these cases it seems the Executors and Administrators also, will be charged after his death. 10 H7. 10. Dyer 19. 14. Bro. Covenant 50. Dyer 114.

If a Lessee be oustled by one that hath title; it seems an Action of Covenant will lie for this ouster against the Executor or Administrator upon the Covenant in Law, if he were put out in the life time of the Lessor, and not otherwise: For if there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in Fee to another, and the Tenant for life by the words [Demise or Grant] doth make a Lease for years and die, and after he in the Remainder doth enter and put out the Lessee for years; in this case he cannot upon this Covenant in Law, charge the Executors or Administrators of the Lessor: But upon an expresse Covenant for quiet enjoying he may. Dyer 157.

In some cases an Assignee shall be charged though he be not named, and in some cases shall not be charged, though he be named; and in some cases he shall be charged when he is named, as when the Covenant doth extend to a thing in esse, parcel of the Demise, there the thing to be done is Appurtenant and quodammodo annexed to the thing, and shall binde the Assignee, though he be not expressly named, as a Covenant to repair, &c. But if the Covenant be annexed to a thing not in esse before, but de novo to be erected on the thing, as to set up a new House, or the like; in this case it will not binde the Assignees, unless they be named in the Covenant. And if the Covenant be to do a thing meerly collateral; in that case it will not binde the Assignees, albeit they be named expressly. Also when a contract is personal onely, and a man doth binde himself and his Assigns, his Assigns shall not be bound hereby: As if one Demise Sheep, or other stock of Cattle, or any other personal Goods for any time, and the Lessee doth Covenant for him and his Assigns, at the end of the Term, to deliver them in as good plight, as they were at the time of the Demise, or such a price for them, and the Lessee assign them; in this case this Covenant will not binde the Assignee: But the Executors and Administrators of the first Lessee are bound hereby. So if one Demise a House and Land, with a stock or sum of money for years, rendring Rent, and the Lessee doth Covenant for him and his Assigns to deliver the money at the end of the term; in this case an Assignee shall not be bound by this Covenant, as the Executors and Administrators of the Lessee shall. See more in Brownl. 1 part. 19, 20, &c. Co. 5. 16.

Assignees or Grantees.

Executors.

If a Lessee Covenant to repair the Houses demised, or to discharge the Lessor de omnibus oneribus circa terram, or the like; in these cases, and such like, albeit Assignees be not named in the Covenant, yet Assignees and Assignees of Assignees in infinitum, and all others that shall come to the Land by the Act of Law, or by the Act of the Parties, shall be bound and charged by this Covenant. Co. 5. 17. Dyer 27. Bro. Descent 50.

If a Lessee Covenant for him and his Assigns to build a new House upon the Land demised within seven years, and the Lessee assign it over; in this case the Assignee is chargeable. But if a man Covenant for him and his Assigns to make a Feoffment, Obligation, or the like, in this case the Assignee shall not be charged, albeit he be named. And if the Lessee Covenant for himself, or for himself, his Executors and Administrators onely to build a new House upon the Land demised, and the Lessee assign over the Land; in this case the Assignee is not bound by this Covenant. See more in Conditions of Obligations. Co. 5. 17.

If a Lease be made rendring Rent, and if it be arrear that the Lessee his Executors and Assigns shall forfeit three shillings four pence nomine penna, and the Lessee assign assign the term; in this case it seems the Assignee, shall be charged with the nomine pana. Goldsb. 127. pl. 125. Thins case. versus Cholmsley. Trin. 36 Eliz. Co. B. R.

Note.

Election.

And in all the cases before where a Covenant is broken, an Action of Covenant may be brought. But herein note that howsoever, in divers of the cases before Assignees are chargeable upon a Covenant; yet the Lessee himself is not hereby discharged, but the Lessor or Grantee of the Reversion, hath Election to charge which of them he will. And therefore if a Lessee Covenant for him and his Assignees to repair, and the Lessee assign; in this case the Lessor may have his Action of Covenant against either of them. And if a Lessee Covenant for him, his Executors, Administrators, and Assigns, to repair the Houses demised; and he in Reversion doth grant away his Reversion, and the Lessee assign his estate; in this case, albeit the Grantee of the Reversion, have accepted the Rent of the Assignee of the term, yet he may still have an Action of Covenant against the Executor of the Lessee upon this Covenant. So if a Patentee Covenant for him and his Assigns to repair, and he assign, the King may have his Action against either of them. Brownl. 1 part. 120, 121. Bro. Covenant 32. Hil. 16 Jac. B. R. Curia, Bre. qu. su. Cumberland.

If A. and B. do Covenant for themselves jointly without more words; the Covenant is joyn, and one of them cannot be discharged without the other. But if they Covenant for themselves severally, the Covenant is several, and they may be sued a part. And if they Covenant jointly and severally; then the Covenant is joyn and several, and they may be sued either way at the Election of the Covenanttee. Co. 5. 23.

10. When a Covenant shall be said to be gone and discharged, and when not, and how.

Where the Deed it self wherein the Covenants are contained, or the Estate on which the Covenants are accessory to the Principal, do depend, is gone and determined, there regularly the Covenants are gone also. And therefore if a Lease for life or years, be surrendered, whereby the Estate is gone, or a Deed become void by rature, or the like, and there be Covenants contained in the Deed; by these means the Covenants are gone also. But this Surrender doth not discharge the breach of Covenant which was before the Surrender. For if a Parson Lease his Glebe for years, and after resign, whereby the Lease for years doth become void; in this case the Covenants of the Lease, as to the time before the Relinquishment shall be said to be in force still. Dyer 26. Co. 5. 23. 40 Eliz. 3. 27. Bro. Surrender 47. Covenant 42. Hil. 4 Jac. B. R. Moile versus Austen.

Where a Covenant is become impossible to be done by the act of God, as where one doth Covenant to serve another seven years, and he die before the seven years be expired; by this the Covenant is discharged. Co. 1. 98. Pl. 286.

Where there is an expresse Covenant in a Deed, for quiet enjoying, the implied Covenant is gone. Expressum facit cessare tacitum. Co. 4. 80.

Release.

By a Release of all Covenants from the Covenanttee the Covenant is discharged, so as the Release be by Deed, for a Covenant by Deed cannot be discharged by word. And therefore if A. by Deed Covenant with B. to build a House by a day, and B. doth wish him to let it alone; this is no discharge of the Covenant. 18 Ed. 4. 8.

If the Lessor accept the Rent of the Lessee or his Assignee, after a Covenant broken; this doth not discharge the breach of the Covenant, but the Lessor may sue for it notwithstanding. Pasches 6. Cur. B. R. Adjudge Bachelors case.

If the Deed wherein the Covenant is, be by consent of both parties cancelled; this discharge the Covenants in time to come, but if any were broken before, he may sue for that. Brownl. 2 part. 167.

CHAP. LVII.

Of a Countermand, or Revocation.

Countermand or Revocation, is the recalling and determining of some power or authority given, or thing before done. Or it is the commanding of some thing contrary to that which one had commanded before. And this is either in Law or in Equity. The kinds of

And so it is either general, as when a man doth revoke all former Wills; or special, as where a man doth revoke his Will made such a day. Or it may be general and special, as where a man doth revoke all former Wills, especially his Will made such a day. And in case where an Authority or Licence is revoked, it is as if it had not been given; and if he that had it, shall do any thing upon it, he may be punished for it, as if no such Authority at all had been given him. Brook. 330.

For this take these things.

1. That the King by his Prerogative might have revoked his Presentment to an Advowson before Induction, which a common person could not have done. And he may Countermand his Authority, Protection, and Commission at his pleasure. Dyer 348. 291. Register 204. 305.

2. A common person may Countermand his Licence, Power, Authority, or Command, before it be executed. And so (for the most part) he may do his Grant, if it be merely of a matter of ease, pleasure, or trust. And therefore if I Licence another to enter into my House or Ground, or to take and use my Horse for a time, or to take and deliver such a thing to J. S. or I being a Justice of Peace, make a Warrant to J. S. to arrest a man, or I command or licence one to take Deer for me, or to cut Wood for me, or the like, or I make a Letter of Attorney to make, or take Livery of Seisin for me, or to sue, or do any thing in my name; or I deliver another Goods or Money, to deliver over to another, or give to the poor, or to bestow for a few years gift, or the like, or I make another my Factor, Proctor, or Attorney, or I assign Auditors to take an account, or I Grant to another to hunt in my Park, or to keep my Court; or if I command another to do any of these things. In all these cases, before the thing be done, I may forbid the doing of it, and may recall the Power. So a man's Will is revocable at his pleasure, notwithstanding he say in it, it shall be his last Will, and not revocable, and notwithstanding it be annexed to a Feoffment, and Livery, and Seisin made upon it. So an Administration granted, may be revoked by him that makes it; so also it seems of an Attornment; and so it is said of a Surrender of Copihold-land to uses; that this in some cases is revocable. So a Submission to an Award is revocable also. Brook. Rep. 2 par. 296. Dyer 21. Co. 4. 62. Dyer 49. 5 H. 7. 18. 6 Ed. 4. 39 H. 6. 7.

3. All these things being in their own nature revocable, are still so, albeis they be made and done with irrevocable words; and though a man binde himself by Bond or Assumpfit not to revoke it, and yet he may be sued upon the Assumpfit or Bond for revoking it. But a man cannot by any act he can do, make a Power or Authority, not revocable, which by Law, and in his own nature, is revocable. Co. 8. 82. 5 Ed. 4. 3.

4. But a man cannot revoke an Interest, as if he hath made a Lease for years of his ground, or a Grant of his Horse for four days, or Grant to another the keeping of his Park for two years. Or grant one the keeping of his Court and ten pound yearly out of the Issues thereof, for a time certain, these things cannot be recalled. Dyer 348. 291. 49. 39 H. 6. 7. 18 Ed. 4. 8.

5. It

5. It is said also, That if a thing be delivered, to be given to another in satisfaction of something before done; that this is not revocable. Dyer 49. 22.

6. If one deliver a Deed to another, as an Escrow on certain Conditions performed, to take effect as his Deed; this is not countermandable. Perk. Sett. 141.

Surrender.

7. If a Copiholder, like to die, do Surrender to Tenants out of Court, according to custom, to the use of his Wife or Children; and this is without any consideration of money, &c. and he recover, it is said before the Presentment and Admittance; this is countermandable. But if it be to the use of a stranger, it is otherwise. Kitch. 82.

8. If two exchange Land by Deed, or without Deed, and neither of them enter, they may revoke or dissolve the exchange by mutual consent; but it must be dissolved by Deed. 3 H.7. 13. F.N.B. 36.

9. If I present a Clerk to an Advowson, I cannot revoke it. 14 Ed.4. 2.

10. If I grant a Reversion, I cannot before Attornment revoke it. 60 it is in Nominations and Elections. If I enfeoff such a one as J. D. shall name within a year, and he name J. D. yet before the Feoffment, and within the year, he may name another, and Countermand the first Nomination: But if I enfeoff J. S. to the use of such a one as J. D. shall name within a year, and he name J. D. and he do name within the time; this is not revocable. 14 Ed.4. 2.

For answer to this, take these cases.

3. What Ad. shall be said to be a good Revocation of a thing revocable, or not. Of a will.

Sett. 2. Woman-sole marry.

1. By the making of a latter Will of Land in writing, a former Will is revoked; and this, albeit it make no mention of the former Will. And if the former Will be only about Goods and Chattels, the latter Will, albeit it be but Verbal, will revoke a former Will made in writing. Co. 8. 90. Dyer 310. Co. 4. 60. If a Woman-sole make a Will, and then take a Husband; this is a Countermand of her Will: But if in this case she happen to out-live her Husband, and this Will continue, and no other Will is made, the Will perhaps will be revived, and good again. Co. 4. 62. If one make a Will of Land, and after he make a Feoffment of the Land, or a Bargain and Sale of it, but this Conveyance is defective for lack of Livery of Seisin or Inrolment; yet this is a Countermand of the Will. And yet if I do onely Covenant, to make an estate of it, and do make no estate of it; it seems this is no Revocation of the Will. And if I make a Devise of my Land, and after make a Lease for years of it; it seems this is no Revocation, but the Will may stand good, for the Reversion after the Lease for years ended, Dyer 74. 47. If one have a Lease for years, and give it by Will, and then Surrender it, and take a new Lease; this is a Countermand of the Devise, and if he die, the Devisee shall not have this Lease. Goldsb. Rep. 93. If a man that is of sound memory, make his Will, and after this he becomes not himself; this is no Revocation of the Will in Law, nor can he whiles he is in this case, make any express Revocation of it. Co. 4. 61.

Non compos mentis.

Of an Attornment.

2. If a Feme-sole make a Lease for life, rendring a Rent, and after she sell the Reversion, and then before the Attornment of the Tenant she marry; it is said, That by this the Attornment of the Tenant is Countermanded, and that now it cannot be made. But if she take to Husband the Grantee of the Reversion, that this is no Countermand. 2 R.2. 8.

Of a Submission to an Arbitrement.

3. If a Woman-sole submit to an Arbitrement, and after she marry, and after the marriage the Award is made; this Award is void: For by the marriage, the Submission is countermanded in Law. And let the Award be never so much to her profit, it is void. Whise against Gifford, B. R. Adjudged.

Feme covert.

4. A Woman-covert whiles her Husband lives, can make no good Countermand of any thing she did, whiles she was unmarried. Co. 4. 61.

5. The Countermand that is of force to revoke a Power regularly, must be made after the same manner was made; that is, if the Power be created by writing, it must be dissolved in the same manner; in that case therefore, the Revocation must be by writing also.

Notice.

6. And regularly where there is an express Revocation, there notice must be given of it, to him to whom the power is given, before he execute the power, otherwise it is not good: For if once the Power be executed, the Revocation comes too late; but in case of a Countermand in Law, there no notice is needful. And therefore if one make make a Feoffment with a Letter of Attorney to make Livery, and before the Livery be made the Feoffor make a Lease or Feoffment to another; this is a good Countermand without Notice. Fortior est dispositio Legis quam hominis, (i.) The Disposition of Law, is stronger then the disposition of man. Vivions case. Brownl. 2 Rep. 290.

Of Courts.

His word Court did sometimes signifie the Kings House, where he did reside and abide with his Household: It doth also signifie a Tribunal or place where Justice is administred Judicially. And of these Courts there are many Kindes. They were heretofore distinguished into Courts Ecclesiastical, Christian, or Spiritual, such as did handle Spritual Matters; and these were stiled the Convocation, the Subscription, the High Commission, the Prerogative, the Arches, the Audience, the Consistory, the Courts of Faculties, of

And Courts Civil, which were ordained and used about Civil Matters; and these were very many; and of these there are some out of use, and others that are still in Being, and of use. Those Courts and Jurisdiccions that are out of use and gone, are such as these: The Council Table, the Courts of the High Steward of England, of the Star-Chamber wherein the Great Lords of the Council and the Judges were Judges, of Redress, of Delays, of Judgments in the Kings Great Courts, wherein were Judges, such great Men as the King did appoint; a Court to enquire of, and certifie unlawful and true Accounts in the Exchequer, wherein were Judges, such as the King did appoint; the Courts of General Surveyors of divers of the Kings Lands, &c. Of Chivalry before the Constable and Marshal, of the Counting-House of the Kings Household, wherein the great Officers about the King, were Judges; of the Lord Steward, Treasurer, and Comptroller of the Kings Household, concerning Felony, &c. Of Port-moots, kept in Haven Towns or Ports; about Beacons, Light-houses, Sea-marks, &c. about Ambassadors, Leagues, and Treaties, of Justices of Trailbasson, of Court of Wards and Liveries, wherein the Master, Attorney, and Receiver General were Judges; of the Royal Franchise of Ely, of the County Palatine of Pembroke, of the Escheator and Commissioners for finding of Offices, and some others; these are in a manner quite gone.

But there are other Courts and Powers like to Courts, still in Being, more or less, as the Parliament, the Council of the Lord Protector, the Kings Bench, now called the Upper Bench, the Chancery, the Common Pleas, the Exchequer, wherein is the Exchequer Chamber, the First Fruits, Tenths, and Augmentation Courts, the Court of Admiralty, the Courts of the Justices of Assize, of the Justices of Nisi Prius, of the Justices of Oyer and Terminer of all ordinary sorts, General and Special, and of Justices of Gaol-delivery; the Courts of the Justices of the Peace, and of Justices in Eyre; the Courts of the Marshalsey, of Requests, of the Dutchy Chamber of the Cinque Ports; the Courts of the Counties Palatine, the Courts of the Citie of London, the chief whereof is called the Hustings, the Courts of Westminster

And some of these are also of Record; and so they are all or most of them, except the County Court, Hundred Court, Court Baron, and Copihold Court, which are not of Record, and therefore called Base or Inferior Courts. Of all which, you may read in Co. 4 part of his Inst. 1 part. 58. 260. 117. Cromp. Jur. of Courts throughout. 2 Parliament,
What.
The Judges.
Knights of the Shire.

The Parliament is the Supreme Court and Power of the Commonwealth, ordained by the Common Law, made up of a great Assembly, chosen by the people, called Knights, Citizens and Burgeses, who are the Judges there.

By the new Act of Government made, these things are ordained. 1. That a Parliament be called every three years. 2. That during five moneths, without their own consent, it be not adjourned, prorogued, or dissolved. 3. The numbers to be chosen for England, Scotland, and Ireland, are there set down. 4. The sending of Writs, of Summons, and manner of proceeding thereupon, and in the Election of Members is there set down. 5. That sixty of this Assembly do make a Parliament, and the Supreme Legislative Power is to rest in the Lord Protector and them. 6. If they agree upon any Bills, and present them to the Lord Protector, and he do not within twenty days agree to them, they may pass them for a Law, without his consent, if they please. The Government, 16 December. 1653.

Their Jurisdiction
and
Power.

This Assembly by the ancient Common Law of the Nation, hath an absolute Power over and above all other Courts, they are to debate and conclude Matters for the Commonwealth: This Court hath power to make, revoke, alter, or change any of Laws or Statutes of the Nation, to judge of Matters in Law, to try any one for his life, to reverse the proceedings in any other Court, and to correct and reform all other mischiefs, especially such as have no other ordinary remedy; and for which there is no Regular Redress in other Courts. And from hence there doth lie no Appeal; nor can any other Court examine anything that is done in this Court. But for this Court, the Power thereof, the Qualifications and Privileges of the Members of the Assembly, the Proceedings therein, and the Officers belonging thereunto, and other matters concerning it, See Crompt. Jur. of Courts 19. *D. & St. 55. 3. Star-Chamber,
What.

The Star-Chamber was a Court to punish Riots, Frauds, Perjuries, Forgeries, and such like offences, that had not ordinary remedy in other Courts, it was held in a Chamber at Westminster, over which were many gilded Stars; it is now put down. You may read of it, in Crompt. Jur. Co. 4. part of his Inst. It was dissolved by 16 Car. 17. And so was the Orders of the Council Board.

Chancery,
What.

The Chancery is a Court of Equity or Conscience instituted by the Common Law. But for this, see a large Treatise in my First Part of the Marrow of Law, cap. 59.

Court of Requests,
What.

The Court of Requests also, being much of the same nature with the Chancery, is a Court of Equity, instituted for the help of such Petitioners, as in cases of Conscience, did make their address by supplication to the King, wherein the Lord Privy Seal and Masters of Requests were Judges. They had to do onely in causes that were merely Equitable, or one of the Parties did belong to the King, or one of the Parties was poor and oppressed by a rich Man, or where any special Matter was sent unto them by the King, or where the thing did concern Colleges, Universities, or Hospitals. But for this see Sir Tho. Smith, de Republica. Co. 4. 9. Ainsberr, f. 104.

The

The Upper-Bench (formerly called the Kings Bench) is the most ancient Court of the Nation, instituted by the Common-Law originally for the Pleas of the Crown, as Treasons, Felonies, Misprision, and the like: But now it dealeth not only in Criminal, but in Civil matters also, as Contracts, and the like. The Judges of this Court are the Lord Chief Justice, and three, four, or five other Judges as the Lord Protector shall appoint. But anciently the King himself did usually sit in it, and therefore it followed his person; but it is now kept at Westminster-Hall. In this anciently Officers were sworn, and the Oath of Allegiance was taken. And at this day all Criminal matters are here decided, and many Common pleas also: also all Breaches of the Peace, publick Annoyances and Offences against the Lord Protector and his people are to be redressed. See for the Power and Proceedings of this Court, Crompt. Jur. 68. Plow. 320. Co. 11. 98. Co. 4 par. Inst. ch. 7.

This Court (now out of use) was instituted by the Common-Law for the deciding of matters of War, and in times of War; and herein the Lord High-Steward, Constable, or Marshal was Judge. And for this see Crompt. Jur. 82. Co. 4 par. Inst. chap. 4.

There was a Court of Chivalry for matters of War, and Titles of Honor and Place, held before the Constable of England, and Earl Marshal; now gone. Co. 4 par. 117.

The Marshalsey was the Court wherein the Marshal of the Kings house was Judge: He was to hear and determine, and punish all offences done within the Verge, and to determine all matters of difference between such as were of the Kings household, and betwixt them and others within the Verge. For this see Co. 4. 47. Crompt. Jur. Co. 4 par. Inst. ch. 18.

There is a Court of the Steward and Marshal of the Kings house; and it seems to be included within the Marshalsey, or in the same. Stat. 13 Ed. 3. ch. 3.

The Court of Common-Bench or Common-Pleas, is that Court instituted by the Common-Law for the Pleas and Controversies of common Persons, or common Pleas; and herein they are commonly heard and determined. And the Judges of this Court are the Lord Chief Justice, and three, four, or five other Judges as the Lord Protector please to appoint. In this Court are handled Suits for Land, Debts, Benefices and Contracts. And in this Court do pass Assurances of Land by Fines and Recoveries, which did formerly sometimes pass in the Upper-Bench, and before Justices in Eyre. For the power and proceeding of this Court, see Crompt. Jur. 91. Co. 4 Inst. c. 10.

The Court of the Exchequer is a Court instituted by the Common-Law, wherein all causes touching the Revenues of the Crown have been handled and decided. The Judges of this Court are the Lord Chief Baron, and three, four, or five other Barons, as the Lord Protector shall appoint: And their work and power is, to hear and decide all causes belonging to the Lord Protector's coffers, and to receive and pay all money due to and from him, which is called the Receipt of the Exchequer. They have there also a Court of Chancery before the Chancellor and Barons of the Exchequer, called the Exchequer-Chamber. For the Power and Proceeding of these Courts, see Crompt. Jur. 52. 104. Co. 4 par. Inst. ch. 11. 13. And herein now is all the power of ordering of First-fruits and Tenths exercised. For which see Co. 4 par. Inst. 14. Stat. 16 H. 8. c. 3. 2 & 3 P. & M. c. 4. 1 Eliz. 4. The Augmentation-Court seems also to be here. See Stat. 27 H. 8. c. 27. 33 H. 8. 39. 37 H. 8. 4. 1 M. 10. See Officers.

The Court of Wards and Liveries (now abolished) was a Court appointed by the Law for the ordering of the Kings Wards and their Lands. For which you may read Sir Tho. Smith de Rep. 116. Crompt. Jur. 112. Co. Inst. 4 par.

The Court of Admiralty is a Court instituted by the Common-Law for the hearing and determining of matters done upon the Sea. The Admiral is Judge here: And he is said to be an Officer whose authority is in matters done upon and beyond the Seas; all which he is to determine by the Rules of the Civil-Law. He was also to prepare and maintain the Kings Navy, and might have arrested Ships for his service. He is to suppress and chase Robbers. And his Jurisdiction reacheth into the great Rivers of the Country below the Bridges, but not within the body of any

This Officer only hath conſuſance of Floſſam; which is, where a Ship is periſhed, and the Goods that were therein float upon the Sea. Jeſſam, which is where the Goods are caſt into the Sea to ſave the Ship. And Lagan, which is where a Cork is tyed to the Goods, that it may be found again. But he hath not to do with Wreck, which is where a Ship is broken, the Paſſengers drowned, and not one of them eſcapeth to Land alive; and eſpecially if the Owner of the Goods be drowned. Co. 3. 106, 107.

What ſhall be ſaid to be Wreck, and what Floſſam, Jeſſam, and Lagan, or oors, and who ſhall have them.

For this, know theſe things.

1. Where-ever Goods ſhall be accounted Wreck, there are theſe things in the caſe. 1. There muſt be a Shipwrack; the Ship muſt be drowned. 2. The Goods muſt be caſt out upon the Land by the Sea, and not floating ſtill upon the Water; for then they are Floſſam. Nor caſt upon the Land by the Mariners for fear of a Tempeſt, or when the Ship is about to periſh. 3. All the living creatures muſt be dead; for if any Man, Dog or Cat eſcape alive to the Land, it is not Wreck. But in this caſe where Goods come ſo to Land, they muſt be laid up and preſerved, or ſold, if they be ſuch Goods as will not keep, by the Sheriff or other Officer; and the Goods, or if they be ſold, the Money made thereof, delivered to the Town to keep. And if the Owner of them come within a year and a day of the Seizure thereof, and prove them to be his own, he muſt have them again: And ſo may his Executor or Adminiſtrator after his death. But ſomething muſt be allowed to them that have ſaved and kept them.

2. Whiles Goods remain in or upon the water, they are accounted Floſſam, Jeſſam, or Lagan; but when they be caſt upon the Land, they be Wreck.

3. If the Ship periſh, and Owner be not known, and the Goods prove Floſſam, Jeſſam, or Lagan; the Lord Protector, or any that hath any Kings grant, or may preſcribe for it, may have it, and take it by ſeiſure. And ſo likewiſe it is of Goods wrecked; any Lord may claim and have them by Patent, Cuſtom, or Preſcription; and if no ſuch Title can be made by any other, they will go to the Lord Protector. *Co. 3. 106, 107. Sec. 4.
The Courts of the Juſtices of Aſſiſe, Juſtices of Niſi prius, of Gaol-delivery, of Oyer and Terminer, what. The Judges. The Power.

All theſe four Courts are held by Commiſſion from the Lord Protector, and not by authority only of the Common-Law, or of any Act of Parliament. And in theſe Courts the Commiſſioners only are the Judges.

The Juſtices of Aſſiſe are to take Aſſiſes in the Country; and theſe have the power of the ancient Juſtices in Eyre. The Juſtices of Niſi prius are to try Cauſes in the Country, or adjourn them to the next Term. The Juſtices of Gaol-delivery are to hear and determine all ſuch Cauſes as appertain to thoſe that for any offence are caſt into Gaol. The Juſtices of Oyer and Terminer are to hear and determine ſome notorious miſſemeanors in the Country.

And all theſe Courts, and the Court of the Juſtices of Peace, are commonly held at once, and by one and the ſame Commiſſion, by our Judges in their Circuits at our Meetings called the Great Aſſiſes. And theſe Commiſſions were deviſed, and are uſed for the eaſe of the People, that by this means they may have Juſtice near home. And therefore it is at this day, that there are Six Circuits in this Nation; and the Judges go over all theſe Circuits twice a year, and uſe to ſtay three or four days in a place, and in that time do hear and diſpatch all the buſineſs of the place where they be, and give notice of the day before they come. And they come commonly with five Commiſſions, Oyer and Terminer, Gaol-delivery, Aſſiſe, Niſi prius, and Juſtices of the Peace. And by theſe Commiſſions they keep all theſe Courts together, where Trials are by Niſi prius, to the great eaſe of Juries and Parties, that otherwiſe muſt go to London with their Evidences and Witneſſes. And the Courts at weſtmiſter alſo also are much eased hereby. But in matters of great weight, and where the Title is intricate, the Judges are wont to retain those Causes to be tryed at Westminster. And in these Courts the Sheriff, and all the Justices of the Peace of the County are bound to attend, or the Judges may fine them for their default; and so they may for any other misdemeanor in them. For the Power of these Courts and Judges, and their manner of Proceeding, See *Crompt. The Court of Pipowders was antiently a Court by Common-Law, incident to Fairs and Markets only, for the punishment of Disorders there, and the Trial of matters done in and about the Fair: And in this Court the Steward is Judg. But at this day they use to try matters done out of the Fair, in these Courts. See for this, Co. 4 par. Inst. 60. Dyer 133. Co. 3. 51. 10. 73. Kelw. 99. St. 17 Ed. 4. 2.

Court of Pipowders, what. Judges. Power.

The Court of the Clerk of the Market, is by the Common-Law kept by and before an antient Officer called the Clerk of the Market, whose office is to look to Weights and Measures: And to keep the Standards, (i.) the Examples thereof; whether dry, as Ells, Yards, Bushels, Pecks, &c. or moist, as Pints, Quarts, &c. and to see that all the Weights and Measures of the Country be according to this pattern, and to punish them that buy or sell by any other Weights or Measures. And for this they are to go Circuit every year all the Country over in all places, and to view and enquire by Jury, and return into the Exchequer what they find of Defaults. Court of the Coroner, what
Judg.
Power.

The Court of the Coroner, is a Court instituted by the Common-Law, and kept before an Officer so called; whose office therein is, to enquire of every man that is slain, and cometh to an untimely end, by what means he came to his end; and to enquire of every circumstance, and to enquire who they were that committed the fact; and to enquire what lands, goods and chattels the party had at the time of the fact committed, and to seise them to the use of the Lord Protector. And these Officers are also to enquire of Treasure-Trove. Mag. Charta, ch. 9. Westm. 1. ch. 10. Co. 46. 57. Stamf. lib. 1. 52. Cromp. Jur. 126. Co. 4 par. Inst. ch. 59.

Court of the
what.

The Court of the Escheator was instituted by Common-Law to be held by an Officer of that name, whose duty and office therein was, to enquire and find by Office after the death of the Kings Tenants, what had happened to him, and to return this Office into the Exchequer. But the Tenure in Capite being gone, this Office, Court, and Officer is gone with it. You may read of it, Stat. 1 H. 8. ch. 8. 3 H. 8. 2. F. N. B. 100. Co. 4 par. Inst. 43.

Of the Sheriffs Turn, Leet, Law day, and View of Frank-pledge,
what.

The Sheriffs Turn, Leet, Law-day, and view of Frank-pledge, are Courts of one nature, use and end. And for the better understanding of them, we are to know, that at first all Administration of Justice was in the King; and no Law was used, nor Justice administered, but what was before him. Afterwards when by the increase of people and causes, the burden grew too great for him; as the Kingdom was divided into Counties, so was the Administration of Justice divided into Courts, into the Kings-Bench, and other Courts; and amongst other, Powers were given and Courts granted to every Sheriff within his County, who antiently were the greatest men of the County. And this Officer for his help had two Courts: The one called the Turn, being a Court of Record instituted by the Common-Law for every County, wherein the Steward is Judge; and this is to reform publick grievances, and matters of the Crown. And to this Court all Lay-men above twelve years old, under the degree of Baron, were to appear and do service, to be sworn to the King, to serve Offices, and to hear and be instructed in the Laws, be bound to be of good abearing, and be viewed to see how they kept their Bonds. Here Breakers of the Peace were punished, and publick Anoyances redressed: Here also Inne-keepers, Victuallers, Butchers, Fishmongers, and other Tradesmen may be punished for selling by unlawful Weights or Measure, or by excessive prices. And this Court at first was taken out of the Kings-Bench.

Turn.

Judge
Power.

The other Court which the Sheriff had, was called the County-Court; and this was erected for to give remedy in Civil actions between man and man, in any matter of wrong under Forty shillings. And by these two Courts the whole County was governed at the first. After this, by reason of a greater increase of people, and so of causes, and for ease of the people, derived other Leets or Law-days out of the Sheriffs Turn, and Hundred-Courts out of his County-Court, and granted to the Lords of Manors and Liberties much of that Power the Sheriff had, as we find it at this day. And so one man hath, and may have a Leet in another mans Land or Manor.

Leet or Lawday, or View of Frank-pledge.

So that by this we see, that a Leet is, where one hath by Grant from the King all that did belong to the Sheriffs Turn within a certain Precinct, as Hundred, Manor, or the like; wherein the Steward alone is Judge, and wherein he hath the same power within that Precinct, as the Sheriff had in his Turn over all the County. So that now the Sheriff is not to meddle within that Precinct, except in case where the other Stewards of Precincts do neglect their duties there, or when the Leet is forfeit (as it may be) into the Kings hands: And if the Sheriff do so, he is a Trespassor. And if he warn to his Turn any of them that are under another Leet, they may be discharged by a special Writ for that purpose. These Courts had consuance of lesser offences and causes: The greater offences and causes were heard and determined in the Kings-Bench, Common-Pleas, by the Judges there, and by the Judges in their Circuits in their Courts there. See for this, Mag. Charta, ch. 35. Bro. Leet. Dyer 30. Finches law, f. 241. Co. 6. 67. 9. in his Epist. Inst. 4 par. ch. 54. Stat. 31 Ed. 3. 14. 1. 1 Ed. 3. 17. 4. 1 Ed. 4. 2. 28 Ed. 3. 9. 42 Ed. 3. 4. 11 H. 7. 15. 13 Ed. 1. 26. Marl. 10. Westm. 2. 32. 31 Ed. 3. 1. 19 H. 7. 24.

All these three Courts, the County-Court, the Hundred-Court, and the Court-Baron, are much of one nature, and much alike in all their Proceeding. The County-Court is for the whole County; the other for the Hundred; and the last for the Tenants of the Manor to which it is incident: For to every Manor there is a Court-Baron incident; and to every Sheriffs Office his County-Court is incident; and that so inseparably, that the King could not by his Grant have divided them, or the profits thereof from the Sheriffs, albeit the Grant were made before the Sheriff were made.

The County-Court then is a Court not of Record, incident to the Sheriffs Office, for the hearing and determining of small matters under Forty shillings, between party and party within the County. And in this Court the Sheriff is only a Register, and no Judge; but the Freeholders of the County are Judges, and called Free-suitors.

The Hundred-Court is detived out of this, and is of the same nature and extent of power within the Hundred, as the other is within the County: And in this Court also the Steward is but a Notary, the Freeholders of the Hundred are Judges.

The Court-Baron is the Court that every Lord of a Manor hath as incident to his Manor. And this is in some Manors double, i. The one is called the Copiholders Court, which is for Trial of the Titles of their Lands, and for the taking and passing of Estates, Surrenders, Admittances and Grants; and herein the Lord or his Steward is Judge. And the other Court, which is called the Freeholders Court, is only for the Trial of Actions, such as are triable in the County or Hundred Court; wherein the Freeholders of the Manor are Judges. And for this see Manor and Copihold.

To shew the Time and Place for keeping these Courts, Power and Jurisdiction thereof, and manner of Proceeding therein, by particulars, would of it self fill a Book. But for this, being for the greatest part of it done by me already, See it in my Book called the Court-keepers Guide. And see Co. 4 par. Inst. ch. 55, 56, 57, 58, 59, 60, 61, 62, 63, 64, 65, 66, 67, 68, 69, 70, 71, 72, 73, 74, 75, 76, 77, 78, 79, 80, 81, 82, 83, 84, 85, 86, 87, 88, 89, 90, 91, 92, 93, 94, 95, 96, 97, 98, 99, 100, 101, 102, 103, 104, 105, 106, 107, 108, 109, 110, 111, 112, 113, 114, 115, 116, 117, 118, 119, 120, 121, 122, 123, 124, 125, 126, 127, 128, 129, 130, 131, 132, 133, 134, 135, 136, 137, 138, 139, 140, 141, 142, 143, 144, 145, 146, 147, 148, 149, 150, 151, 152, 153, 154, 155, 156, 157, 158, 159, 160, 161, 162, 163, 164, 165, 166, 167, 168, 169, 170, 171, 172, 173, 174, 175, 176, 177, 178, 179, 180, 181, 182, 183, 184, 185, 186, 187, 188, 189, 190, 191, 192, 193, 194, 195, 196, 197, 198, 199, 200, 201, 202, 203, 204, 205, 206, 207, 208, 209, 210, 211, 212, 213, 214, 215, 216, 217, 218, 219, 220, 221, 222, 223, 224, 225, 226, 227, 228, 229, 230, 231, 232, 233, 234, 235, 236, 237, 238, 239, 240, 241, 242, 243, 244, 245, 246, 247, 248, 249, 250, 251, 252, 253, 254, 255, 256, 257, 258, 259, 260, 261, 262, 263, 264, 265, 266, 267, 268, 269, 270, 271, 272, 273, 274, 275, 276, 277, 278, 279, 280, 281, 282, 283, 284, 285, 286, 287, 288, 289, 290, 291, 292, 293, 294, 295, 296, 297, 298, 299, 300, 301, 302, 303, 304, 305, 306, 307, 308, 309, 310, 311, 312, 313, 314, 315, 316, 317, 318, 319, 320, 321, 322, 323, 324, 325, 326, 327, 328, 329, 330, 331, 332, 333, 334, 335, 336, 337, 338, 339, 340, 341, 342, 343, 344, 345, 346, 347, 348, 349, 350, 351, 352, 353, 354, 355, 356, 357, 358, 359, 360, 361, 362, 363, 364, 365, 366, 367, 368, 369, 370, 371, 372, 373, 374, 375, 376, 377, 378, 379, 380, 381, 382, 383, 384, 385, 386, 387, 388, 389, 390, 391, 392, 393, 394, 395, 396, 397, 398, 399, 400, 401, 402, 403, 404, 405, 406, 407, 408, 409, 410, 411, 412, 413, 414, 415, 416, 417, 418, 419, 420, 421, 422, 423, 424, 425, 426, 427, 428, 429, 430, 431, 432, 433, 434, 435, 436, 437, 438, 439, 440, 441, 442, 443, 444, 445, 446, 447, 448, 449, 450, 451, 452, 453, 454, 455, 456, 457, 458, 459, 460, 461, 462, 463, 464, 465, 466, 467, 468, 469, 470, 471, 472, 473, 474, 475, 476, 477, 478, 479, 480, 481, 482, 483, 484, 485, 486, 487, 488, 489, 490, 491, 492, 493, 494, 495, 496, 497, 498, 499, 500, 501, 502, 503, 504, 505, 506, 507, 508, 509, 510, 511, 512, 513, 514, 515, 516, 517, 518, 519, 520, 521, 522, 523, 524, 525, 526, 527, 528, 529, 530, 531, 532, 533, 534, 535, 536, 537, 538, 539, 540, 541, 542, 543, 544, 545, 546, 547, 548, 549, 550, 551, 552, 553, 554, 555, 556, 557, 558, 559, 560, 561, 562, 563, 564, 565, 566, 567, 568, 569, 570, 571, 572, 573, 574, 575, 576, 577, 578, 579, 580, 581, 582, 583, 584, 585, 586, 587, 588, 589, 590, 591, 592, 593, 594, 595, 596, 597, 598, 599, 600, 601, 602, 603, 604, 605, 606, 607, 608, 609, 610, 611, 612, 613, 614, 615, 616, 617, 618, 619, 620, 621, 622, 623, 624, 625, 626, 627, 628, 629, 630, 631, 632, 633, 634, 635, 636, 637, 638, 639, 640, 641, 642, 643, 644, 645, 646, 647, 648, 649, 650, 651, 652, 653, 654, 655, 656, 657, 658, 659, 660, 661, 662, 663, 664, 665, 666, 667, 668, 669, 670, 671, 672, 673, 674, 675, 676, 677, 678, 679, 680, 681, 682, 683, 684, 685, 686, 687, 688, 689, 690, 691, 692, 693, 694, 695, 696, 697, 698, 699, 700, 701, 702, 703, 704, 705, 706, 707, 708, 709, 710, 711, 712, 713, 714, 715, 716, 717, 718, 719, 720, 721, 722, 723, 724, 725, 726, 727, 728, 729, 730, 731, 732, 733, 734, 735, 736, 737, 738, 739, 740, 741, 742, 743, 744, 745, 746, 747, 748, 749, 750, 751, 752, 753, 754, 755, 756, 757, 758, 759, 760, 761, 762, 763, 764, 765, 766, 767, 768, 769, 770, 771, 772, 773, 774, 775, 776, 777, 778, 779, 780, 781, 782, 783, 784, 785, 786, 787, 788, 789, 790, 791, 792, 793, 794, 795, 796, 797, 798, 799, 800, 801, 802, 803, 804, 805, 806, 807, 808, 809, 810, 811, 812, 813, 814, 815, 816, 817, 818, 819, 820, 821, 822, 823, 824, 825, 826, 827, 828, 829, 830, 831, 832, 833, 834, 835, 836, 837, 838, 839, 840, 841, 842, 843, 844, 845, 846, 847, 848, 849, 850, 851, 852, 853, 854, 855, 856, 857, 858, 859, 860, 861, 862, 863, 864, 865, 866, 867, 868, 869, 870, 871, 872, 873, 874, 875, 876, 877, 878, 879, 880, 881, 882, 883, 884, 885, 886, 887, 888, 889, 890, 891, 892, 893, 894, 895, 896, 897, 898, 899, 900, 901, 902, 903, 904, 905, 906, 907, 908, 909, 910, 911, 912, 913, 914, 915, 916, 917, 918, 919, 920, 921, 922, 923, 924, 925, 926, 927, 928, 929, 930, 931, 932, 933, 934, 935, 936, 937, 938, 939, 940, 941, 942, 943, 944, 945, 946, 947, 948, 949, 950, 951, 952, 953, 954, 955, 956, 957, 958, 959, 960, 961, 962, 963, 964, 965, 966, 967, 968, 969, 970, 971, 972, 973, 974, 975, 976, 977, 978, 979, 980, 981, 982, 983, 984, 985, 986, 987, 988, 989, 990, 991, 992, 993, 994, 995, 996, 997, 998, 999, 1000.

A Presentment is an Information given in by a Jury in a Court, to any Officer which hath authority to punish any offences done contrary to Law. The word is also taken for a Presentation to a Church, Terms of the Law. See my Just. of Peace, 2 par. in the Judgments. Co. 9. 113.

Affecors are such as be appointed in a Court-Leet, &c. to mulct such as have committed any fault which is arbitrarily punishable, and for which no express penalty is prescribed by Statute. See for this at large in my Court-Keepers Guide, p. 22, 23. Co. 8. 40.

The Spiritual Courts, that are now taken away, were for Spiritual matters; for Tythes' Legacies, and against men for Heresies, Defamations, and the like. And in these Courts Ecclesiastical men, as Bishops, their Chancellors were Judges.

There were many of these kinds of Courts: As the Convocation of the Clergy, who were to punish Heresies, Schisms, and the like offences. The High-Commission-Court, which was the Court held by the Bishops and other Commissioners upon the Statute of 1 Eliz. ch. 1. for the ordering and reforming of some special offences appertaining to Spiritual jurisdiction, by the punishment of Fine and Imprisonment. Which is dissolved by Stat. 16 Car. 17.

The Prerogative-Court of the Archbishop of Canterbury; which was for the proving of Wills, and granting of Administrations, in the case where the party dead within his Province had bona notabilia within some other Diocese then that wherein he died; which regularly was to be the value of Five pounds, but in the Diocese of London Ten pounds by Composition. And this Power doth continue still, and is now vested in and exercised by certain Commissioners in London, who do sit in the Doffers Commons.

The Court of the Arches or Audience, which had some peculiar jurisdiction in the Spiritual causes; the which was usually kept in Bow-Church before the Dean of the Arches, Judge there.

The Court of Audience, which was used to be kept by the Archbishop in his Palace, with Confirmations of Bishops, Consecrations, Elections, Admissions, and Citation, Libel, what.

Their course of Proceeding in these Courts, was by Citation, which was the Process by which the party was called into their Courts to answer: And then by Libel, which was the original Declaration in the Suit, and delivering a Copy thereof; the which if the Defendant could not have gotten of the Ecclesiastical Judge, he might by a Writ called Copia libelli deliberanda, have forced him to it. They could not have imposed any Pecuniary mulcts, nor given Damages in any cause; nor could they have enforced subjection to their Sentences, but by Ecclesiastical censures, as by Penance, Interdiction, and Excommunication. By Penance, (i.) by ordering the Offender to do some open penance in some publick place. Interdiction, (i.) the forbidding the Administration of Divine things. Excommunication, (i.) the casting of a man out of the Church. But see these things in the places before cited: And see more in Officers, Judges, Judgment, and other Titles.

CHAP. LIX.

Of the Offences and matters heretofore called of

touching the matters heretofore called the matters of the Crown, and reduced in the Law to that Title and Head, they are the things that do concern Treason, Felony, and divers other offences, some by Common-Law, and some by Statute-Law: Of which some are greater, and some less. The first and greatest offence is High-Treason. And this heretofore might have been done many ways:

Corons.

But now by certain new Laws it is ordained and declared, That these following Acts and Words, and none other shall be adjudged Treason, (that is to say;)

Sec. 1.
High-Treason,
what it is, and how it may be committed.

1. To compass or imagine the death of the Lord Protector for the time being.
2. Maliciously or advisedly either by Writing, Printing, open Declaring, Teaching, Preaching, or otherwise publishing any of these things, That the Lord Protector and People in Parliament assembled are not the Supreme Authority of this Commonwealth: Or that the exercise of the chief Magistracie, and administration of the Government over the Countreies and Dominions of England, Scotland and Ireland, and the People thereof, is not in the Lord Protector assisted with his Council; or that the said Authority or Government is tyrannical, usurped or unlawful: Or to declare, That there is any Parliament in being, or that hath continuance, or any Law in force for continuing the same.
3. To plot, contrive, or endeavor to stir up or raise Force against the Protector or the present Government, or for the subversion or alteration of the same, and shall declare such endeavor by any open Deed.
4. If any one (not an Officer or Member of the Army) shall plot, contrive or endeavor to stir up any Mutiny in any part of the Army, or to withdraw any Soldier or Officer from their obedience to their Superiors in the Army, or from the present Government.
5. If any shall procure, invite, aid or assist any Forainers or Strangers to invade England, Scotland, or Ireland, or any the Dominions thereto belonging, or shall adhere to any Forces raised by the Enemies of this Commonwealth.
6. If any shall plot, contrive or endeavor the betraying, surrendering, or yielding up any City, Town, Fort, Magazine, Ship, Vessel, or Forces by Sea or Land belonging to this Commonwealth.
7. If any shall counterfeit the Great Seal of England, or of Scotland or Ireland for the time being, used and appointed by authority of Parliament, or the Lord Protector with the consent of the Council; or the Sign Manual, Privy Signet, or Privy Seal of the Lord Protector for the time being.
8. If any person shall proclaim, declare, publish, or any way promote any of the Issue of the late King, or any claiming by or under him or them, to be King or chief Magistrate of England, Scotland, or Ireland, or either of them, or of any of the Dominions to either of them belonging. Or shall keep or hold any Intelligence whatsoever by Letters Messages, or otherwise, to or with Charles Stuart, or James Stuart, their Mother the late Queen, or any of them.
9. If any counterfeit the Money of this Commonwealth, or bring any false Money, either counterfeit, or rather like to the Money of this Commonwealth, into this Land, (knowing it to be false) to the intent to merchandise, or otherwise: Or shall falsly forge or counterfeit any such kind of Coin either of Gold or Silver, which is not the proper Coin of this Commonwealth, and yet is or shall be current within the same: Or shall bring from beyond Sea into any of the Dominions of this Commonwealth any such false or counterfeit Coin, being current within this Commonwealth.

Common.

Commonwealth, (knowing it to be so) to the intent here to utter it by Merchandise or otherwise: Or shall impair, diminish, falsifie, clip, wash, round, file, scale, or lighten for gain any of the Monies of this Commonwealth, or any of the Dominions of it, or the Coin or Monies of any other Dominions allowed or suffered to be current here.

10. If any maintain the Popes authority here, or procure any Instrument of Absolution to the People here from their obedience, or of Reconciliation; or shall use any such Instrument to such purpose; or shall endeavor to absolve or reconcile the People by any such means from their obedience here to any other Prince, to be had or used here: Or if any shall be willingly so by any means withdrawn and reconciled, or promise obedience to any Foreign Power: Or if any Priest, Jesuite, or other Religious person both here, and having taken Orders under the Pope, shall come into, be, and remain in any of the Dominions belonging to this Commonwealth.

11. That if the Lord Chancellor or Commissioners of the Great Seal do not send abroad the Writs of Summons for Parliaments, according to the Act of Government: Or if the Sheriffs and others shall not give notice thereof, and do their duty for the Election of Knights and Burgeses. All these Offences are Treason. Ord. 19 Jan. 1643. The Act of Government, Decemb. 16. 1653.

The punishment of it.

The punishment for this offence is; That the person duly convicted and attainted thereof, is to forfeit to the Supreme Magistrate all his Lands he hath in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, for life or years; all his Goods and Chattels, and his Life. If he be a man, he is to be drawn on a Hurdle to the place of Execution; and there to hang till he be half dead; then to be cut down, his Entrails and Privy-members to be cut and taken out of and from his Body, and burnt in his sight; and his Head to be cut off, and his Body to be divided in four parts, and placed where the Lord Protector pleaseth. But if it be a woman that is the Traitor, she is to be drawn to the place of Execution, and burnt only. But for all these things, and the Trial of, and Proceeding against Traitors; you may read Stamford of the Pleas of the Crown. 6 Ed. 6. 13. Dyer 99. Bro. Corone throughout. Dyer 265. 300. Co. 3. 11. 1. 99. 7. 13. 8. 24. 5. 12.

The kinds and degrees of Felonies.

The next degree of offences, are Felonies. And these are some of them simple, and some of them relative. And some of them concern the Commonwealth, and some against it; and some more immediately against private persons. Some of these also do touch the body, some the goods, and some the body and goods together, and some the goods only. That which doth concern the body only, is either by taking away the life thereof, which is called Homicide; or by abusing it without death, as by cutting out the Tongue, Buggery, or the like.

Homicide is either of ones self, or of another. That of another is either voluntary, or involuntary. That which is voluntary, is either punishable by the Law, when it is commanded for Justice sake; or allowed or excused for other causes, which be no Felonies. Or it is punishable: And that is sometimes upon malice, which is Murder; or sudden adventure, as by a sudden falling out, and in hot blood; or without any premeditate malice, or in a mans own defence, or by a meer chance as Chancemedly. The offence of killing man is therefore greater or less, according to circumstances in these and other particulars: For if a woman kill her Husband; Child, a Parent; or Servant, a Master; these are Petit-Treason. And of all these offences a man may be guilty simply, or by relation, when a man doth participate of the offence of another man by advice, counsel, or the like. Hence we have the distinction of a Principal offender, and an Accessary thereunto.

Señ. 2. Petit-Treason, what it is.

The next offence in order, is Petit-Treason. Petit-Treason is, where any Woman killeth her Husband; Man or Maid-servant, his or her Master or Mistress; Son or Daughter, his or her Father and Mother; this is Petit-Treason. So if a Servant resolve to kill his or her Master or Mistress, and after, before it be done, he or she be out of his or her service; yet this is Petit-Treason. So if a Woman procure her Servant to kill her Husband, it is Petit-Treason against the Woman and her Servant: Otherwise it is in a stranger, if he do so.

So

So if the Servant hold the Candle, whiles another doth kill her Master, she being in the Confederacy: And if one do suffer a prisoner for High Treason to escape, it seems it is Petit-Treason in him; these offences are Petit-Treason. For the which, a man shall lose all his Fee-simple Lands, all his other Lands, Goods, and Chattels: And if it be a Man, he must be drawn and hanged; if a Woman, she must be burned. Also some rank Sodomitry and Heresie, under this offence, and Sorcery. See Finches Law, f. 119. Co. 3 part of his Institutes, chap. 2.

The punishment of it

The next sort of offences are Man-killings, or Homicides, of which there are divers kinds and degrees: These also, of which there are many kinds.

Man-killing or Homicide taken strictly, is where one man killeth another; but taken largely, it is where a man is killed by any thing else. Stamf. lib. 1. chap. 12. Co. 3 part. Inst. chap. 7, 8.

See 3.
Homicide, what it is.

To make the killing of a man Felony, two things are requisite. 1. That the party killed be in verum natura, 2. That he die within a year and a day after the wound.

Man-killing or Homicide, is either by one or more; and it is either Spiritual or Corporal: Corporal Man-killing or Homicide, is said to be either lingua by tongue, or facto by deed. Corporal Man-killing or Homicide by the tongue, is. First, Dissuasio, by dissuasion, by dissuading a man from helping to save anothers life. Secondly, Præcepto, by precept or command; by commanding one to kill another. Thirdly, Defensio vel assistens, by defending or saving the murderer; by helping to pack away the murderer, or by keeping him from his tryal. Fourthly, Consilio, by counsel, by counselling one to kill another.

The kinds of
it.

Corporal Man-killing or Homicide by fact, may be either, First, Iustitia, by Justice, which is also twofold; by Compulsive Justice, As when an Officer is commanded to execute an offender; or by Permissive Justice, as when a Felon resisteth the Officer, and will not be apprehended, and he kill the Felon. Secondly, Necessitate, by necessity, which is also two ways; either by way of offence, As when in case of War or Execution of Justice, or by way of Defence: as when one killeth another in defence of himself. Thirdly, Casa, by chance, which may be done by men, or by other animate Creatures, or by inanimate things. By men two ways, either licito, lawfully, as when one doth a lawful act, and unawares killeth a man thereby; or illicito, unlawfully, as when by doing an unlawful act, one killeth another man unawares: as when one doth strike at one, and kill another man. Fourthly, Voluntate, by will, or voluntarily, which may be also two ways; either consulto, with deliberation, as when one man doth kill another of malice prepensed; or inconsulto, without deliberation, as when one killeth another upon a sudden affray.

For all which sorts and kinds of Man-killings, some are lawful, and some not; and of those which are unlawful, some are greater, and punished with greater punishment; and some are less, and punished with less punishment: For all which, see the several examples and cases beneath.

For Answer of this Question, take these following cases.

1. If a man set upon me to rob me upon the High-way, I may kill him and justify it.

See 4.
What Man-killing is lawful, or not.

2. So if he come to rob, burn, or burglarly to break my house, I or any of my Servants may kill him and justify it.

3. So in a lawful War, a Soldier may kill as many of the enemies as he can, and justify it.

4. So a Judge by Rules of Law, may adjudge a man to death, and the Officer appointed, according to that judgment may execute him, and justify it.

5. So if a Traitor or Felon in pursuit, flee, or resist, so that he cannot be apprehended, and the party appointed to take him, kill him, he may justify it.

6. So if prisoners riotously resist the Gaoler, so that he cannot otherwise suppress them, and he kill any of them, he may justify it.

7. So where men riotously resist the Justices, and they cannot otherwise suppress them, or keep the Peace.

8. So if a man out-lawed for Felony, be brought before the Judge, he may command him to be executed.

9. So if a Forester, Parker, or Warrener, do kill any that were doing hurt in their Forest, Park, or Warren, if they will not yield after they be required, or he cannot apprehend them; in this case he may justifie it, 21 Ed. 1.

10. So if one do kill another upon tryal by Combat, it is justifiable.

11. And in all these cases a man need not sue any pardon of course for his life; as in cases of Man-killing, by defending himself, or by chance.

12. But one cannot justifie the killing of a man attainted in a Premunire, § Eliz. 1.

13. And if a man be adjudged to be hanged, and the Sheriff behead him, or execute him in any other manner; this is not justifiable by the Sheriff: So if any other that hath no Authority, will of his own head, execute such a person: this is Felony in both these cases, though it were the Judge himself that condemned him.

14. So if any man shall kill a man that is out-lawed or condemned for Felony, it is Felony in him.

15. So to kill any person attainted upon a Premunire.

16. So if one hath robbed anothers House, and after he hath done, and is gone, the true man kill the Thief, this seems to be Felony.

17. So if one man kill another in an unlawful War, which is not undertaken by Authority of the Lord Protector, 35 H. 6. 58. Co. 5. 1. 22 Aff. 55. 21 H. 7. 39. 1 Jac. 8. 1 Mar. 12. 21 Ed. 1. Dyer 327. 37 H. 6. 21. 35 H. 6. 58. § Eliz. 1.

Murder, what it is.
The punishment of it.

Murder is where one man doth kill another of malice, premeditated for gain or revenge; this is properly called Wilful murder, for which offence the murderer shall forfeit and lose all his Lands, Goods, and Chattels, and he himself must be hanged, Plow. 261. 52 H. 3. 16. Kely. 1361 Powls. de pace 120. Co. 3 part. Inst. 7. 8. For the Answer to this, take these cases.

See §. 4.
What Acts shall be said
Murder, or not, but some other offence.

1. If I bid another kill me, and he doth it, it is murder in him, Dyer 186.

2. If a Woman bid the Midwife kill the child, as soon as it is born, and she doth so; it is murder in them both, Dyer 186.

3. If one kill an Alien, if he be under the Kings Protection, it is murder.

4. If one have malice premeditated, and strike the first blow, yet it is murder in him, if he kill me, Powls. de pace 120.

5. If one do wilfully poyson another, or lay poyson for one, and another hap to take it, and be poysoned; in both these cases it is murder, 1 Ed. 6. 12. Plow. 474. Co. 11. 33.

6. If one stab or thrust another, that had then no weapon drawn, nor then first stricken the party that did stab, and herewith the party die within six months; this is of the nature of wilful murder, 1 Jac. 6.

7. If one kill a Constable, Bailiff, or any other Officer as Watchman, or the like, or their assistants, or any other in their due execution of Justice: As in arresting them upon Proces out of any Court, or by Warrant from any Justice of Peace, or in the keeping of the Kings peace, or the like; this act is murder, and so punishable, Powls. de pace. 121. Co. 9. 66. 68. 98. 4. 41.

8. If a Thief kill a true man, being about to rob him, because he would not yield him his purse, or because he resisted him, it is murder, Co. 9. 67.

9. If one kill another without any cause, the Law will presume there was malice, and therefore it is murder, Ibid.

10. If one do wilfully hold a man whiles another doth murder him, or stand by him and encourage and abet another, or commandeth another, or came with others of purpose to kill him, and stand by whiles another doth kill him; this is murder in all, Qui non sunt immunes a culpa non debant esse immunes a pena. Co. 9. 67. Plow. 98. Co. 11. 5.

11. If one bear malice against A, and be about to assault him, and B. withstand him, and he kill B. this is murder, though he did bear him no malice, Plow. 101.

12. If one that bears no malice, accept of a challenge from the other, and fight it sedo animo, and he kill the challenger, this is murder. Morgan & Egerton, 9 Jac.

13. If two fall out at Westminster by accident, and fight and be parted; and after they meet and appoint to fight the next day; and then either of them is killed, this is murder, and that notwithstanding he that doth kill, shall say before the fight, that he bears him no malice. See Man-slaughter.

14. If the Master have malice, and tell his servants of it, and that his intention is to kill him he doth malice, and they go with him, and they do kill him; this is murder in all, both Master and Servants; Plow. 100.

15. If one lie in wait to kill one man, and mistake him, and kill another; or shoot at one and miss him, and kill another, this is murder, Plow. 101. 474.

16. If one carry any man that is sick unto the cold, with intent to kill him, and he do die, this is murder, 2 Ed. 3. 18.

17. If J. S. of malice premeditated, discharge a Pistol at J. D. and miss him, and throw down his Pistol; and J. D. pursueth him to kill him, and he draw his Dagger and killeth J. D. this is murder: But if J. S. had fallen down, his Dagger drawn, and J. D. fall by haft upon his Dagger, J. D. is felo de se, and J. S. shall go quit, 44 Ed. 3. See Malb ch. 24.

18. The private making away or hiding of the Bastard child by the Mother, unless she can prove by one witness that it was born dead, is murder in her, 23 Jac. 27.

19. The killing of one in a Duel upon a challenge, is murder by the now Ordinance; June 24. 1634.

20. If one beat a Woman great with child, and the child is born alive, but one may see it to be bruised and dieth (as is conceived) by the bruises, this is murder, Goldsb. 176.

If one perswade another to kill himself, and be present, when he doth, is said to be murder, sed quare.

It is where one doth kill another man, with felonious intent, upon sudden quarrel without any premeditated malice: As if two meet together, and suddenly by accident fall out, and either at that time, or anon after, before the heat be past the one of them doth kill the other; this is Man-slaughter.

For which offence one shall forfeit and lose all that he shall lose for murder; but in this case he shall have the benefit of Clergy for his life, which if he demand before Judgment, and can read, he saveth his life and his Lands; but if he demand not the benefit of Clergy, until after Judgment, and then doth demand the benefit of the Clergy, and can read, yet he shall save his life onely. But in both cases he doth forfeit his Goods and Chattels. See Clergy, Plow. Com. 162. Straff. 1. r. ch. 9. 43 Aff. 31. 3 H. 7. 1. 21 H. 7. 31. Plow. 99. Dyer 228. Plow. 100.

If one goeth with malice to kill a man, and another seeing them fighting, taketh his part that went with malice, and kill the man: Now though this be murder in the other, yet it is but Man-slaughter in him that took his part: So if the Master go with malice, and the Servants go and know nothing, and then they joyn with him in the assault, and murder, yet this is but Man-slaughter in the Servants.

If one arrest another unlawfully, and the party arrested, kill him, this is not murder but Man-slaughter onely, unless the case be with stabbing within the Statute of 1 Jac. 6. Dyer 6. 26. Co. 9. 66.

If one that had no malice, accept a challenge from him that had malice, and fight presently, and kill him that had the malice, this is but Man-slaughter: Dyer 60. 26. 9. 16. Co. 9. 66. Morgan & Egerton, 9 Jac.

If two fall out by accident at Westminster, and they be then parted, and after they meet at Algaz; or they appoint to meet at Islington the same day, and then one of them doth kill the other, this is but Man-slaughter. Sir Thomas Lucas meris case.

If one be much wounded by another, and he go and tell, or shew unto his Father or Brother, or some near Kinsman; whereupon he goeth presently and fighteth with him that gave the wound and kill him, this is but Man-slaughter. Railles case, Hil. 9 Jac.

If there be a sudden affray, and a confused multitude, and amongst them one man is killed, and no man can tell how; this is Man-slaughter in them all.

If two be in an Inner-chamber fallen out, and together by the ears, and a Brother of one of them standing at the door, that cannot get in, cries unto his Brother to make him sure, and presently after he gives the other a mortal wound, this is Man-

Man-slaughter,
what it is.

slaughter in him that stood at the door. All the Judges in Serjeants Inn, Trin.

If one that is not an allowed Physitian, kill a man by his ignorance, and unskilfulness in giving him Physick, this is Man-slaughter, Stamf. l. 1. f. 16.

Sec. 6.
Felo de se.
The punishment of it.

A felo de se is he that killeth himself, for which offence he is to lose all his Goods and Chattels; Stamf. l. 1. c. 11. Plow. 262. Co. 9. 129. Plow. 258. But his Wife shall not lose her Dower; nor his Blood be corrupted in this case, as in some other Felonies.

In what case a man shall be said a Felo de se, or not.

If one man do strike another to the ground, and then draweth his knife to kill him; and the other lying along, draweth his knife to defend himself, and the other is so hasty to kill him, that he falleth upon the knife that was drawn, and so killeth himself; he is in this case felo de se, 44 Ed. 3. 44.

If one shoot at f. s. to kill him, and thereby kill himself, it is said, he is felo de se, de seculi ni.

If a man that is mad sometimes, and hath his lucida intervalla, whiles he is well, give himself his wound, and after become mad, yet he is felo de se. So if a man do kill himself in his drunkenness, he is felo de se. So if a villain had killed himself. Co. 19. Plow. 260, 261.

If a child of a mad man, whiles he is mad, before he cometh to himself, give himself a mortal wound, whereof he afterwards dieth, he is not felo de se, neither shall he forfeit any thing, 21 H. 7. 31. though he be of sound memory before he die, 22 Ed. 3. Corone 244. Co. 9. 19. Lib. 9. Plow. 230.

Chancemedley, or by Misadventure, what. The punishment of it.

It is when one man doth kill another, without any purpose or evil intent, by some mischance. For which offence if a man be found guilty of it, he shall forfeit his Goods not lose life nor Lands, and lie in prison till he have his pardon, which he must have of Grace and Course from the Lord Protector. And it seems there is a difference between a mere chance, and a chance mixt with the wickedness or negligence of the party; for in the last cases the offence will fall out to be more than Man-slaughter per infortunium, Gloc. ch. 9. 24 H. 8. 3. 32 H. 3. 20. Co. 5. 91. 91a. 26 H. 8. 3. 44 Aff. 17. Stamf. l. 1. 7. Martb. 13. 6 Ed. 1. 4.

What shall be said to be Chancemedley, or not but a greater offence.

If certain men set upon f. s. to kill him, and another being present doth labor to part them, and in his labor doth kill f. s. this per infortunium. See Exod. 21. 13, 14.

If one beat his child or servant moderately, and in measure, the child happen, or the servant chance to die thereby; this is but Chancemedley: But if his beating were immoderate, the offence is greater. So if a Master in beating his Scholar kill him, Kelw. 168. Poultun de pace 120.

If one kill another at Wrestling, Fence, or shooting in Bowes and Arrows at But, or at length; this shall be said per infortunium, Kelw. 108. Fitz Corone 102. 354.

If one cast a stone at a Bird or a Beast, and a Man coming by, is hit with the stone and killed by it; or one is felling a Tree, and part, or all of it falleth upon a body and killeth him; this is Chancemedley.

If one cut down any thing, or throw down any thing in or near a High-way, and when it falleth, calleth aloud to Travellers to look to themselves; or where two men do run at Tilt, Joust, or fight at Barriers together, and one kill the other; in all these and the like cases, when the thing is lawful, and this fall out upon it, it shall be said to be per infortunium, 12 H. 7. 33.

When there is a malicious minde, and unlawful act joyned with the chance, as when one intend a man, and kill another; or when one doth cast stones into a High-way, where men do usually pass, and not give warning; or shoot Arrows into a Market, or other place, where men do usually resort, or fight at Barriers, or run at Tilt or Jousts, without the Kings Command; and in these cases a man is killed, this will be an offence of an higher nature, Stamf. lib. 1. ch. 8. Bro. 335.

Se defendendo, what. The punishment of it.

This offence is in the same degree with the former; and it is when the Assailant doth make an assay or offer force to the Defendant, and doth strike him, and the Defendant doth slie so far as he can for saving of his life: So that he is come to a strait, beyond the which, he cannot slie, and the Assailant doth continue his assault;

so that he cannot escape, and thereupon the Defendant doth strike the Assailant and kill him; this is Homicide in his own defence. For which a man shall be punished in all things as in Chance-medley, see before. And how a man may have his pardon. See Fitz Corone 116. 161. F. N. B. 246. Glor. ch. 9. Fitz Corone 284, 286, 287. Poulton de pace 119. 4 H. 7. 2. 16. 16 Ed. 3. 116. 43 Aff. 3. 44 Aff. 17. Fitz Corone 305.

If one come and assault my House in the day time onely to beat me (and not to rob) and I kill him, this shall be said to be se defendendo: If one have a weapon in his hand, and run away till he can go no further, and the other run so hastily upon him, that he runneth upon the others weapon which he holdeth out for the defence of himself, and so he is killed; yet this is Man-slaughter se defendendo, Glor. ch. 9.

But in this case there must be no malice before in him that doth kill, for if so, then though there were an inevitable necessity, yet it is murder. 2. Where there is no malice precedent, there must be a necessity inevitable at the time, else it will be Man-slaughter, Co. 7. 91. Fitz Corone 387. 44. 9. 13. 4 H. 7. 2.

A man sometimes comes to his death by anothers chance, as wel as by a mans hands, or other means; as by the fall of himself, or some other things upon him, or otherwise: And in these cases there is something forfeited to the King, which is called a Deodand. Which is defined to be a thing given to God, for the pacification of his wrath, in a case of misadventure, whereby any Christian soul comes to a violent end, by unreasonable, senseless, or dead Creatures, or Deo & danda; and the King, or his Patentee must have it, and it must be gotten by seizure, and by his Amper, an Officer for the purpose. The things forfeited are to be sold, and the price given to the poor, and distributed for the appeasing of Gods wrath stirred up against the Earth and place for the shedding of innocent Blood thereupon; which seemeth to be grounded on Exod. 21. 28. Stamf. pl. Corone 1. 2. Fitz Corone 269. 340. Co. 3 part Inst. 9.

What Act shall be said to be Homicide se defendendo, or not but a greater offence,

Deodand, what,

For the Answer of this Question, take these things.

1. If a Horse strike a man that he die, the Horse is a Deodand: If a Tree fall upon a man, and kill him, the Tree is a Deodand: If a Cart, or the like, go over a man by chance and kill him, the Cart-wheel, Cart, Loading, and Horses, are all forfeit, Omnia quæ movent ad mortem sunt Deodanda; and that whether it move primarily or secondarily, as principal or accessory: So therefore if a Board press against a Wall, and that Wall fall or kill a man, the Board is forfeit also, Kelw. 68. D. & St. 175. Dyer 78. Co. 5. 110. Fitz Corone 298.

What shall be forfeit by such a Man-killing, and shall be accounted a Deodand, or not.

2. If a man be Lopping, and the Hilt or Head of his Hatchet flie, and kill a man, the Head is forfeit as a Deodand. And if a man fall from a Horse or Cart whiles it is going; the horse in the first case; Cart and Horses, and all are forfeit in the next case, Fitz Corone 389. 140. 397.

3. If one fall upon Timber, or the like, it seems that also is forfeit, yet see Fitz Corone 314.

4. If a Cart loaded, whiles the Horses stand still, fall upon a man and kill him, yet it seems they are all forfeit: So if one Horse move onely, and overthrow the Cart, and kill a man: So if one fall against the Wheel of a Cart, it seems all is forfeit, if the Cart be going, Fitz Corone 326. 407.

5. If a Bell ringing fall from a Beam, the Bell and Beam are both forfeit, Fitz Corone 405.

6. If one come under the Wheel of a Mill, and the Mill go, and he is killed, all is forfeit; but if it had stood still, the Wheel onely is forfeit, Fitz Corone 389.

7. If a Ship drown a man in fresh-water the Ship is forfeit, but contra if it were in the Sea, but nothing in the Ship, in the first case, shall be forfeit: If one fall from a Horse into the Water and be drowned, the Horse shall be forfeit, Fitz Corone 401.

8. If one fall from a Rick or Hovel, and die, the Rick or Hovel shall be forfeit, Fitz Corone 314.

9. If any Bull, or Bear, or any other Beast, kill a man; it is forfeit, Fitz Corone 298.

10. How such a Deodand shall be preserved, Fitz Corone 289.

For

What Man-killing is difpunishable.

For Answer to this, these things must be known.

1. If one lay Ratsbane for Rats, or more, without any evil intent, and one take thereof; and die; this is not punishable. So if one give his Wife a poysoned Apple, and she not knowing any thing, giveth it to her childe, and she die; this is no offence in the Mother: So if one follow me to kill me, and I fall down and having a weapon, hold him up to defend my self, and he running in haste to strike me, run upon my weapon and kill himself, this is no offence to me; and yet how near these cases come to the cases of Chancemedly, consider well. So Homicides in doing Justice, are justifiable: So killing one as would rob or kill a man in the High-way, or his own house, are not punishable, 24 H. 8. 5. Plow. 474. Co. 913. Corone 303.

2. If one kill a childe in the Mothers Womb, there is no punishment for it: So if one give a man his death wound, and he die after the year and a day, there is no punishment for this, Exod. 21. 22. 32 Ass. 44. 3 Ass. pla. Dyer 186. Fitz Corone 303.

Action of the case.

3. If one that is an allowed Physician, kill his Patient, through ignorance or mischance in the operation of his Physick, this is dispunishable. And yet if by his unfesance he hurt him, and he die not; Action of the Case will lie against him, Stamf. 16. Fitz Corone 163.

4. If an Infant under twelve years old (unless it appear that he had more then an ordinary wit at that age) or a mad-man, during his madness, kill a man, there is no punishment for this: So if a man that is both deaf and dumb, but contra it is of a drunken man; 3 H. 7. 2. Plow. 19. Co. 4. 41. 125.

5. If one compel another to kill a man, as by holding his hand, or the like; this is not punishable at all in him, whose hand was held, Plow. 8.

6. It is no Felony for Forester to kill misdoers, if they will not submit themselves, Stat. de malefactoribus, 21 Ed. 1.

7. If one hath a Beast which he doth know, doth usually hurt, and doth not look to him, but let him go abroad, and it kill a body; this is Felony in the owner, Exod. 21. 28. Fitz Corone 313.

What other Acts against the life of a man shall be accounted Felony, or not.

For Answer to this, these things are to be known.

1. If one kill a childe after birth, and before Baptism, it is Felony, Dyer 186.

2. If a Gaoler keep his prisoner more cruelly then he ought, so that he die thereby; this is Felony in the Gaoler, Stamf. 1. 16.

3. If one that is no Physician allowed, do give Physick, and kill the man through his ignorance; this is Felony, Stamf. 2. 16.

4. If one cut out any mans tongue, or put out his eyes, this is Felony, 5 H. 4. 5. if it be done maliciously.

5. If one practise Conjuraton, Inchantments, Charms, Witchcraft, Sorcery, or the like, where by any Man, Woman, or Childe, shall be killed or hurt, it is Felony, 1 Jac. 1. 1.

6. If any one that hath the Plague upon him, and is commanded by the Magistrate to keep in, do notwithstanding go abroad, it is Felony, 1 Jac. 31.

7. If any of the Kings sworn servants had conspired to kill any of the Lords of the Realm, or any of the Kings Council that were sworn as the Steward, Treasurer, or Comptroller, or the like, though they did not effect it, yet it was Felony, 3 H. 7. 14.

8. If one beat another grievously and leave him for dead, and after he recover; this is no Felony, Non assidue conatus nisi sequatur effectus, Fitz Corone 383.

9. Thus far of Felonies by Homicide; now follow Felonies by Theft.

Theft, what it is.

Furtum est fraudulenter, illegitime & Felonica tractatio rei aliena personalis & mobilis animo furandi, inviso illo cuius rei illa fuerit. It is the felonious taking away of another mans movable Goods from against his will, and with a purpose to steal them. So that to make up this offence, three things are requisite; First, Animus furandi, it must be without pretence of Title, and this must be at the time, that the party doth come to the possession of the Goods: Secondly, The thing stolen must be res aliena: Thirdly, it must be a personal thing, vide infra, Stamf. 1. 20. 4 H. 7. 5.

This

This Theft is either a persona hominis in presentia ejus, or in absentia ejus; and it is from his person ad terrorem, as Robbery or violent Theft; or else it is absque terrore, as picking the Purse. And that in his absence, is either magna, when the thing stoln is above the value of twelve pence, or parva when the thing stoln is under the value of twelve pence, which is called Pecis-Larceny, Stamf. l. 1. c. 3. 4 H. 7. 5. Co. 3 part Inst. cap. 47.

For Answer to this Question, take these things,

1. There are degrees in this.
2. The first and greatest offence of this nature, is Burglary.
3. Burglary is where one doth break and enter into the House of another, wherein some Body is, or into the Out-house or Stable, adjoining to the House, wherein people be; in the night time, with an intent to rob or kill, or do some other Felony; in which case though he carry away nothing, nor kill any Body, yet it is Felony, 22 Ass. 39. Dyer 99: 58. But all this must be understood in a time of peace. Broo. Corone 176. Co. 11. 32. 13 H. 7. 12. Stamf. 30. Dyer 99: 58. But if one break a House with intent to rob, and do not enter the House, or break the House in the day time, between Sun-rising and Sun-set, and then rob; neither of these acts are Burglary, but it will be a lesser offence, Kelw. 75. Poulton de pace 120.
4. If one with his family be upon occasion out of doors in the night, and the whiles one break, and rob his house, this is Burglary, Co. 4. 4c.
5. If a Thief finde the door open, and come in by night, and rob a House, and being frightened, break a door to escape, this is Burglary.
6. If one have two Houses, and dwell sometimes in one, and sometimes in the other, and hath servants in both; and whiles his servants be abroad, his House be broke, and he is robbed; this is Burglary. But both these cases must be understood of Mansion-houses.
7. If one of a mans own servants, let them in at the doors, or at the windows, yet it is Burglary in the Thieves, but Felony onely in the Servant. But to break a Close, with an intent to rob, and to rob, or to break a House, with an intent to beat a man, and to do it; is not this offence, but a lesser offence, Dyer 99: Co. 11: 32: 36 Stamf. 30.
8. The next is Robbery, which is, where one doth take from anothers person, feloniously and violently any money, or other thing, though it be but to the value of one penny, yet if it be in this manner, it is Robbery and Felony, Fitz Corone 115. And whether he take it, or the party deliver it upon an assault for fear, it is all one, Dyer 124: 9 Ed. 4. 16. And under this degree is the Cut-purse offence.
9. If one threaten to kill a man, if he do not deliver his Purse, and thereupon he give it to him, this is Robbery. Poulton de pace 128.
10. If one take a mans Goods, that lie before him, whether the owner will or no, or take a mans Horse or Beast before his face, the owner refusing him; this is Robbery, as well as if he took it from his person. Poulton de pace 128.
11. If two or more do threaten a man to kill him, unless he will bring them money, and he do and they take it away, or threaten to kill him if he do not swear to bring them money such a day, and he do accordingly; this is Robbery, Finch. 4: 44 Ed. 3. 14. 4 H. 4. 3. See for Robberies, see Westm. 1. 27 Eliz. 13.
12. If Thieves beset a mans house, and the owner is afraid they will enter; and thereupon cast them out money, and they go away with it, this is Robbery, 44 Ed. 3. 14.
13. If one bargain with a Carrier to carry certain Sales of Wares to a place, and he carry them to another place, and there take out the Wares, and steal them; this is Felony. So if one undertake to carry a Tun of Wine, and the Carrier open the Tun, and take out some of the Wine feloniously. So if one deliver one any Goods to carry to a place, and he carrieth them thither, and there stealeth them, this is Felony. So if one that hath the keeping of my money, or my Butler, or Horseman, carry or convey away my Money, Plate, or Horse, this is Felony. So if my Shepherd steal away my Sheep; for in these cases still it is in the Masters though they keep it, 13 Ed. 4. 9. 13 Ed. 4. 10. 33 H. 4. 14. 13 H. 7. 12. 13 Ed. 4. 9. 27 Ass. 39. But if a man deliver Goods to his servant, or a Carrier, in other cases, and he carry and keep them away from the owner, this will not be Felony, 13 Ed. 4. 9.

14. If a guest in a Tavern take away a Bowl, or any thing before him feloniously, it is felony: So if a guest take away any thing in his Chamber.

15. If I deliver mine own Goods to another to keep, and after I steal them away, it is felony in me. 7 H. 6. 45. 5 H. 7. 18. So if I confederate with another to steal my Goods from my Bailly. Goldsb. 136.

16. If one steal any of the Goods of any Church, or Chappel, or Corporation, it is felony. 7 Ed. 4. 14. 9 Ed. 4. 33. Though it be in time of Vacation of a Governor.

17. If one steal Goods stolen before, it is felony. 13 Ed. 4. 3. 4 H. 7. 5. If one take out of their Nest, in a Dove house, yong Pigeon, before they can fly: So such yong Goshawks, or Hierons in a Park or Ground, before they can fly: Fish out of a Pond or Trunk, where they may be taken out by hands without Nets; or Swans, Peacocks, Turkeys, Geese, Capons, Ducks; a Stag, Hinde, Buck, or Doe marked and tame: To kill Sheep, and take away their Skins, or to pluck them, and take away their Wool; or to take away wilde Fowl where they be dead, is Felony. But to steal wilde Savage Beasts or Fowls, as wilde Deer or Coneyes in a Warren, Pigeons, Hawks, or Doves flying abroad in a River, or the like; these acts are not Felony, 2 Ed. 3. 20. 31 H. 7. 6. 1 Ed. 3. 17. 18 Ed. 4. 8. 18 H. 3. 3. If Servants imbezle their Masters Goods at the time of his death, and afterwards being duly summoned by the Executors, will not appear, this is Felony, 31 H. 6. 1. If two, three or more of them steal Goods to the value of twelve pence; this is Felony in all of them, Fitz. Crime 404.

If any Servant above eighteen years old, that is not an Apprentice, do feloniously depart with imbezle or convert to his own use, any Goods or Chattels of his Master or Mistress, delivered to him by his Master or Mistress, or any his fellow-servants, to the value of forty shillings or above, it is Felony, 21 H. 8. 7. 5 Eliz. 10. Dyer 5. But if I deliver my Servant a Bond for forty shillings, and he receive it, and then go away; this is no Felony. So if I deliver him Wares to sell at a Fair, and he sell them, and then go away with the money, this is no Felony. Dyer 5.

If I deliver a man Goods to keep, and after take him into my service, and then he goeth away with my Goods; this is not Felony by this Statute, because he was no servant at the time, 28 H. 8. 2. So if I deliver Goods to the servant of A. S. to keep, and after die, and make A. S. my Executor; and before any new Commandment of J. S. to his servant to keep the same Goods, his servant goeth away with them; this also is out of the Statute. Sir Francis Bacon, f. 34.

If one steal any thing (besides the things excepted beneath) from another man, which the Jury upon the trial of the Thief, shall finde to be above the value of twelve pence, it is Felony, though it be stolen at several times, Fitz. Crown 459. But if the Jury finde it under twelve pence. See more of Burglary and Robbery, Co. 3 part 2. cap. 14. 17. Or not above twelve pence in value, then it is but Petit-Larcenie, and not Felony; for which the offender is to forfeit his Goods, and be punished otherwise, by whipping, binding to the Good-behaviour, Imprisonment, or the like, at the discretion of the Judge: But he is not to be punished with the loss of his life, 27 H. 8. 12. Bro. 513. Co. 3 part 1. cap. 47. For Felonies by Theft, see 39 Eliz. 19. 27 Eliz. 13. 7 Rich. 2. 4. 28 Ed. 3. 11. 5 Ed. 3. 14. Whitland's super. Chanc. 17. Stat. Westminster.

To steal Apples, or Hops on the Trees, Corn standing upon the Ground, or Wood growing, or the Lead or Tyle of a Church or House, is not Felony: But if these things be taken away out and covered from the House or Land; in these cases the taking of them away will be Felony, Co. 4. 14. 7. 18. 18 H. 3. 1. And if a Thief cut down a tree this day, and come to-morrow and fetch him away, this perhaps may be Felony.

To take away Writings, or a Ward, or Goods that are Treasure, Trove, Wreck, a Walf, or Barrey, is no Felony, 10 Ed. 4. 13. 12 Aff. 32.

If a Wife steal Goods by the Commandment or Compulsion of her Husband, this is not Felony in her. And if she and her Husband do steal Goods together; this is no Felony in her, as Principal or Accessary: But if she steal Goods without his privacy, vity, or receive stolln Goods against his minde, and without his knowledge; this is Felony in her, but none in him, 27 Ass. pl. 40. Fisz Corone 160. 383. And if the Wife take away her Husbands Goods, and give them to another; this is no Felony in the Wife that gives, nor in the other that takes them, Fisz Corone 455.

If an Infant under ten years of age, do steal my Goods, it is said this is not Felony. Infant. But it seems the course is to consider of the ripeness of wit in the Felon, and according to that, to judge him, let him be of what years he will, Co. 4. 124. 35 H. 6. 11. The same Law is of Man-killing by an Infant; and yet if an Infant beat or wound me, he may be indicted and fined for this, or I may sue him in Trespass, and recover damages, 35 H. 6. Trespass.

If an Idiot or Lunatick do steal any Goods, this is no Felony, Co. 4. 124. 35 H. 6. Lunatick. So likewise it is of an Idiot, as to the point of murder. And yet if he beat or wound another, he may sue him in Trespass, and have damage for this, 35 H. 6. Trespass.

If one steal Apes, Hounds, Grey-hounds, Popping-jays, Squirrels, or the like things of no value, this is no Felony, 18 H. 8. 2. 22 Ass. 95.

If one put his hand into anothers Pocket to take out his Purse, and the Purse doth hang still to a Key fastned to the Purse in his Pocket, this is not Felony. And yet if one steal away Goods out of one part of a House, and carry them away, and hide them in another part of the House, this is Felony: By two Justices, M. 8 Jac.

If my Goods be stolln away from me, and I take them again by force, where I finde them, or by the delivery of the Felon; this is no Felony, nor punishable at all. For any man may chuse whether he will prosecute a Felon for stealing his Goods, or not, till he be bound by Recognisance: But if I take money for my Goods, especially if I take more by a great deal, then the Goods be worth, or take money of the Felon, with agreement to conceal him, or the like; this is dangerous, and I may be fined for it; and yet it is clear, this is not Felony, by Justice Bridgman, Hil. 7 Car. But if I break the prison, wherein a Felon is, and let him out, or rescue him being apprehended, and he get away; or I have him in custody, and suffer him purposely and willingly to escape; these things are Felony, and make me liable to the same offence and punishment, as he is liable to.

If Goods be taken out of a Church or Chappel feloniously, this is a Felony, and a high degree of Felony, called Sacrilege.

Sec. 11.
Sacrilege, what.

By all which, we see that to the making up of this offence of Felony by Theft; there must go these things,

1. The taking must be of Goods or Chattels, personal and movable. For the stealing of Chattels real, as Charters of Land, an Infant in Ward, or the like, is not Felony: Nor is the taking of any thing therefore (upon this account) which is parcel of the Freehold, and unsevered, as Fruit of a Tree, Lead on a House, or the like, Felony.

2. The party from whom they are taken, must have a property and a possession in the things: And therefore is it, that the stealing of Goods, waived, wrecked, or strayed, is no Felony. And hence it is, that the stealing of things of a wilde nature, as Doves abroad, Fish in the River, or the like, is no Felony.

3. The things taken, must be things of profit. And therefore it is not Felony to take away hunting, or any Dogs, Apes, Parrots, singing Birds, and the like.

4. The case must be so, that the Goods must not come to the party that hath them by the delivery of the owner: And therefore if a servant or Carrier, take away the Goods delivered, it is not Felony; and yet if a man have the use of them onely, as Plate in a Tavern; or one deliver Goods to carry to a Carrier, to be carried to one place, and he carry them to another, or after he hath carried them to the same place, then he carry them away; this may be Felony.

5. The things stolln must be taken away and removed out of the place; and yet if one stealing my Horse be taken in the manner, with the Bridle about his head, &c. so that he cannot go away with him; it seems this is Felony.

Piracy is the robbing by Sea: And this is as penal to the offender, as the robbing by Land. See for this largely, Co. 2 part Inst. cap. 49.

Where it shall be tried, 28 H. 8. 15.

For

What other Acts, and not acts of Man-killing, or Theft, shall be said to be Felony, or in the degree of Felony, or not.

For Answer to this Question, we are to know that a man may commit Felony, and be in danger to lose his life in divers other cases, and for divers other things; as in these cases following.

1. If any man wilfully put out the Eyes, or cut out the Tongue of another man, this is Felony, 1 H. 4. 5.
2. If one above fourteen years old, counterfeit himself an Egyptian, and so continue a moneth together in England; he is a Felon, 5 Eliz. 26.
3. If one multiply Gold or Silver, it is Felony, 5 H. 4. 4.
4. If one take up a Hawk, and do not proclaim him, and deliver him, when he is demanded, but deny him, 34 Ed. 3. 22.
5. If Masons do make Congregations or Assemblies to subvert the Laws, it is Felony, 3 H. 6. 1.
6. A Soldier or Marriner may by mis-behaving himself in a wandering life, become a Felon, 39 Eliz. 17. A man may be a Felon by forging of Evidences the second time, 5 Eliz. 14.
7. To take away any Record whereby a Judgment is Reversed, is Felony, 8 H. 6. 12.
8. It is Felony for a Rogue, banished by the Justices to return again, 39 Eliz. 4.
9. Purveyors of the King in their Purveyance for him, may commit Felony in divers cases, 28 Ed. 1. 2. 20 R. 2. 5. 25 Ed. 3. 15. 5 Ed. 3. 2. and others.
10. Felony may be done by robbing Parks, 3 Ed. 1. 20. 1 H. 7. 7.
11. To imbezzle or sell the Kings Ordnance, or Armor, was Felony, 31 Eliz. 4.
12. It is Felony to cut down any part of Powdike in Marshland, 22 H. 8. 11. 2, 3 Ph. & Ma. 19.
13. It is Felony to take a man out of Cumberland, Westmerland, Northumberland, Durham, &c. prisoner, and carry him elsewhere, 43 Eliz. 13.
14. Soldiers and Marriners may divers ways commit Felony, 39 Eliz. 13. 18 H. 6. 19. 2 Ed. 6. 2. 5 Eliz. 5.
15. One may be a Felon by relieving or receiving a Jesuit, 27 Eliz. 2.
16. If any Man or Woman commit Incest, or a Woman knowing her Husband to be living, or not having been three years absent, or by common report reputed to be dead, be known by a man; this is Felony in them both. So if one lie with a Married-woman, knowing her to be so, it is Felony in them both. If any one be a Bawd and keep a Bawdy-house after one Conviction, the second offence is Felony, All. 10 May, 1645. 9 Aug. 1648.
17. If any man, nor an Attorney, shall acknowledg any Judgment against any man, not being privy or consenting to it: Or if any levy a Fine, suffer a Recovery, or acknowledg any Statute-Recognizance, or Bail, in the name of any other person, not being privy or consenting thereto; either of these Acts are Felony, 21 Jac. 7. 26.
18. If any man imbezzle, or rase any part of a Record in any of the great Courts, whereby a Judgment is reversed; or so corrected as that the Error is redressed, this is Felony, 8 H. 6. 12. 2 R. 3. 10. Bro. Corone 173. But if the Judg do so, it is Misprision onely, Co. 11. 34. 8. 160.
19. If a Jailor use his prisoner so hardly, and thereby cause or compel his prisoner to be an Approver against his will; this is Felony, 14 Ed. 3. 9.
20. If one marry a second Wife, his first Wife being living, and having been heard of within seven years, it is Felony, 1 Jac. 11.
21. If one willingly burn any dwelling-house or Barn full of Corn, or any out-house adjoyning to such dwelling-house or Barn, it is Felony, 4 Ed. 5. Co. 4. 20. 11 H. 7. 1. Stamf. 14. 9 Ed. 4. 26. 13 Ed. 1. 33. 6 R. 2. 6.
22. If any Man ravish any Woman, Widow, or Maid, it is Felony. If one carnally know any Maid under ten years of age, it is Felony. If any one take away any Wife, Widow, or Maid, against her will, which hath Lands or Goods, or is Inheriatrix, or Heir apparant, it is Felony, 13 Eliz. 6. 3 H. 7. 2. 39 Eliz. 9. 3 Ed. 1. 14. 9 Ed. 4. 22. See Exad. 21. 16. To have two Wives at one time, is Felony, 1 Jac. 11. And yet if the party have been absent seven years, and it is not known whether he or she be living, it is not Felony.
23. If any prisoner that is in prison for Felony; or any other break any prison, and

We have done now with the Simple Felonies, and Principal Felons: And now we come to Relative Felonies, and to Accessaries. For a man by Participation with, may make himself guilty of another mans offence, divers ways; we have shewed before, That the breaking of a Prison, and letting out of Felons is a Felony. So if one shall Rescue a Felon apprehended, this is a Felony: See for this Rescous in chap. So for a voluntary Escape, if one that hath a Felon in his custody, suffer him wilfully to escape or turn him going, this is Felony; and if it be in an Officer, it is the worse: But for the clearing of it, we shall handle the point of Principal and Accessary at large.

Breaking of Prison.

Rescue.
Escape.

These two words are Relative words, Principal doth signifie the chief actor of any villany, and the Accessary is he that hath his hand and consent in it before or after, but is not present at it, called sometimes an Abettor: And he is two manner of ways, either before the fact done, when he is one of the helping and moving causes of it, which may be by Provocation, Counsel, or Consent; or after, when he laboreth to hinder the execution of Justice upon the offender for the fact; in both cases the offence of the Accessary is equal in degree and quality with the offence of the Principal; and for both, he is to be punished as the Principal is, Consentientes agentes & instigantes pari poena plectuntur, 46 Aff. 23. Stamf. pl. Corone 44, 45, 46, &c. Co 7. 2. 11.

Accessary, what.
Abettor.
The kinds of
it.

Some also divide them again into Accessaries by the Common Law, and Accessaries by the Statute, (i.) Such as are made so by any Statute, are such as abet, counsel, or receive any which commit, or have committed any offence made Felony by any Statute, albeit the Statute do not mention Accessaries, Stamf. pl. Corone, 1: 45.

For Answer to this, these things are to be known.

1. In Treasons there can be no Accessaries before nor after, for all that have their hands in those offences are called and esteemed Principals.

In what offences and cases, there may be an Accessary, or not.

2. Also in Man-slaughter there can be no Accessaries before, but there may be Accessaries after; but in all other Felonies there may be Accessaries before and after.

4. In Maim, Forcible entry, Riots, Routs, and all Trespasses, there can be no Accessaries before or after; but all are esteemed Principals.

5. Also Accessaries may be in relation to offences by Statute Laws, albeit the Statute doth not mention Accessaries, Co. 4. 44. upon Littl. 57. Stamf. 1. 4. 5 H. 7. 10. Stamf. pl. Corone 45, 46, 47.

6. A man may be an Accessary to the stealing of his own Goods; as if he confederate with another to steal them from his Bailly, to the intent to charge him, Goldsb. 186. pl. 128.

If one man do command, counsel, advise, procure, abet, allow or stir up, comfort, encourage, aid, consent to, or hire another to do any Felony, and be not present himself when the other doth it, he is an Accessary before, Stamf. 1. 45. Co. 9. 112. 7. 2. 4, 5 Ph. & Ma. 4. Kelw. 67. Plow. 478.

In what case a man shall be said an Accessary before the offence, or not.

A man may be Accessary before, by provocation; and that may be, First, by incensing or allurement, of which, see examples in Scripture Job 2. 9. 1 Kings 21. 25. Prov. 1. 10. Secondly, One may be Accessary by counsel; of which read Sam. 13. 5. 16. 21. 2 Chron. 22. 3; 4. Thirdly, One may be Accessary by consent, and this may be either overt, and that may be either by word or deed, of which see Act 8. 1. 26. 10. 7. 56. Prov. 1. 14. Psal. 50. 18. Or Covert, when one is of the confederacy, and stands by; and is silent. And by all these ways a man may be Accessary by our Law. As by these following cases,

1. If one counsel a Woman to murder the childe in her body, and after the childe is born, and then she doth murder him in the absence of him that gave her the counsel, in this case he is an Accessary, Dyer 186. Plow. 475. 2. If I perswade or command one to go and beat another man onely, and he do beat him, and kill him; by this I am made Accessary, not onely to the beating, but to the murder, Stamf. 1. 45. Co. 4. 75. 4. 44. 3. If one perswade another to perswade a third person to drink such a potion, wherein is poyson, knowing it to be so, and he doth so, and thereof the party die; the first perswader is an Accessary, Co. 4. 44. Plow. 475. 476. 4. If one command or advise another to rob another, and he in robbing of him, kill him in fight; in this case the adviser or commander is Accessary to this murder also. So if one command one to beat another, and with that beating he kill him. So if one command one to burn the House of J. S. and by this means any other Houses are burnt too, he is Accessary unto all; and so in all like cases where other evil ensueth upon any evil thing, counselled or advised, Co. 4. 44. Plow. 475. 5. But if divers come to do a lawful business, and one kill a man without the consent of the rest, or one do a Felony; or if a man happen by chance into company where such a murder or Felony is committed (being not of their company, nor confederacy, and having no such purpose) and he do not let such Felony, or do not raise Hue and Cry after it is done; by these things he doth not make himself Accessary, but he may be fined for these things: So if a Sheriff command his Bailiff to take a man, and the Bailiff do take the man and rob him, the Sheriff is not Accessary to this Robbery, Plow. 475. Stamf. 1. 45. 6. If one counsel or command one to kill a man, and he kill another; or to burn one mans House, and he burn anothers; or to steal a Horse, and he steal a Cowe; or to steal a black Horse, and he steal a white Horse; or to steal a Goldsmiths Plate from him, going to such a Fair, and he go to his shop in Cheapside, and rob him there, and break open his house to do it; here in these cases the party shall not be Accessary, because this is another Felony; and yet if one command a Felony, and it be done in another fashion, time, place, or manner, then it was commanded onely; he may be Accessary to it, Plow. 475. As if one bid another to rob J. D. on Shooters-hill, and he doth it on Gads-hill, or to rob him one day, and he doth it another day, or to do it himself, and he doth it by another, or to kill him by poyson, and he doth it by a Sword; in all these cases he shall be an Accessary: But if he bid him kill J. S. and he kill J. D. it is otherwise; and it is said if one command another to rob J. S. as he goeth to Turbridge Fair, and he rob him in his house, that by this he is not Accessary, Plow. 475.

In what case a man shall be said to be an Accessary after the offence, or not.

1. If one after a Felony is committed, and he hath knowledge of it, doth notwithstanding receive and favor, aid, assist, hide, comfort, or help the Felon in his house, or elsewhere, and conceal him from them that search after him; or help convey him away by aid of money, or other assistance, or hinder or endeavor to let his apprehension, rescue him, or the like, he is Accessary after the offence, Stamf. 1. 46. 14 H. 7. 31. Plow. 476. But to know of a Felony onely, will not make a man accessary to it. 2. If one be out-lawed for Felony, or otherwise attainted by a Record, and a man do after receive him; in this case it seems he is an Accessary after, though he know not of the Felonie, because it is upon Record, especially if the out-lawry be in the same County, Fitz. Corone 377. Dyer 355. Stamf. 1. 46. 3. If one feloniously receive another that is accessary to a Felony; this receiver is an Accessary, Stamf. 1. 43. So that one may be an Accessary to an Accessary. 4. If one give one money to help shift him out of the Country, after he hath told him of the Felony he hath committed; by this he makes himself Accessary, Stamf. 1. 46. Parrams case, B. R.

M. 7 Jac.

M. 7 Jac. The Court, Fitz. Corone 447. 5. If one receive another into his house, that flieth for a Felony, and shuts the door, so as the Country not thinking him to be there, he escape whiles no man followeth him, he is Accessary, Stamf. 1. 46. 6. But if a Woman do after her Husband hath committed a Felony conceal him, live with, aid, and comfort him, or the like; this is no Felony in her, neither is she Accessary: But if she serve any other man so, she may be an Accessary, Stamf. 1. 19. Fitz. Corone 183. 7. If one know of a Felony, and do not hinder it, or pursue the Felon, but he doth not consent to it, nor is at it; this is not Felony. And if one after a Felony is committed, do help a man by his counsel, Letters, or the like, to help him out of his trouble, this will not make him an Accessary, Stamf. 1. 46. 8. If one do receive Goods which he doth know to be stoln, he is not (as it seems) by this Accessary to the Felony. But it is dangerous so to do, and especially to buy such Goods at a low rate: But if one pursue a Felon with Hue and Cry, and then take his Goods, and let him go; by this he may be made an Accessary to the offence, Stamf. 1. 46. If one receive his own Goods from the Thief, after they be stoln, if it be not with a purpose to conceal the offender, or bear with him, or to help him to escape; this is not punishable at all, Halls case, 38 Eliz. B. R. But if one take money of the Felon not to give evidence against him; by this he may be Accessary.

1. If many come together to do an unlawful act, as to rob or to do a riot, or the like, and one of them kill a man; in this case they are all Principal offenders, Bro. 237. Plow 98. Kelw. 161. 2. If one do command, incite, or perswade another to do a Felony, and be present himself at the doing of it, he shall be deemed a Principal, Co. 9. 112. 3. If one be present, and doth move others to kill (or though he incite not) yet if he come for that purpose, or to aid if need be; or hold a man while another doth kill him; or be of the confederacy or company, though he do nothing; in this case, if one offence be committed amongst them, he that so doth shall be a Principal, and in equal degree in the offence, and may be arraigned as a Principal, Stamf. 1. 45. 13 H. 7. 10. Plow. 97. 4. If one stand at the door of a room, wherein two are fighting, and he bid one of them kill the other, and he do so; if the fact by him that doth kill him, be Man-slaughter, the offence is the same in him that provoked him, and they are both Principals, Plow 97. 5. If one knowing there is poison in drink, perswade another to drink it, and do tell him, it will do him good, and after he is gone, the other doth take it, he is a Principal, Co. 4. 44.

Self. 14.
In what case a man shall be esteemed a Principal, and not an Accessary.

1. The Accessary shall not be arraigned, until the Principal be arraigned; and if there be many Principals, he shall not be arraigned till all the Principals be arraigned; and if he be found Accessary to any one of them, it is enough: But if he be charged as Accessary to one of the Principals, and the Principal be attainted by our-lawry, then the Accessary may be arraigned, Stamf. 1. 49. Plow. 98. Dyer 25. Co. 7. 2. 2. But a man may sue the Accessary till exigent, and then it must stay till the Principal be attainted, Co. 9. 117. 3 Ed. 1. 14. Dyer 120. So if he appear he shall answer, but when he hath pleaded to issue, it shall stay till the Principal be tried: But if they both appear, they must answer together immediately one after another, 21 H. 7. 31. 3 H. 7. 12. Plow. 98. 3. And if a Principal before Attainder, or after Attainder, by Verdict or Confession, and before Judgment die, or be pardoned, or hath his Clergy, the Accessary by this is discharged, 17 H. 4. 19. Co. 4. 43. 4. But after Attainder and Judgment given after Verdict, Confession, or by Out-lawry, if the Principal get his Pardon or Clergy, yet the Accessary shall be arraigned, Accessarius sequitur suum Principalem, & ubi non est Principalis ibi non est Accessarius. Stamf. 1. 50. 5. If the Attainder of the Principal be erroneous, or by Error in the Proces or Out-lawry, he being out of the Land, or the like, yet the Accessary may be attained and executed, till the first Attainder be reversed; and if the Out-lawry be reversed after the Accessary is executed, or the Principal plead, and be acquitted; the Heir of the Accessary shall have his Land again, which the Ancestor did forfeit by the Attainder, Co. 9. 116. 6. But if the Principal be acquitted onely by reason of the insufficiency of the Indictment, this doth not discharge the Accessary, Co. 4. 45. 7. If a man have been indicted as Accessary and acquitted, yet he may after be indicted, as Principal, Bro. 401.

If one be indicted for murder as Principal, and one for being Accessary before, and another after, and the Principal is convicted of Man-slaughter, or do confess it, and hath a pardon, or his Clergy before Judgment, both the Accessaries are discharged, 3 H.7.1. 7 H.4. 16. See Co. 3 part Inst. 64.

Abettors or Particeps Crimi-
nis, what?

9. An Abettor or Particeps criminis. (i.) A partaker in the crime is in divers cases: He is said to be an Abettor, that without just cause doth maliciously procure one to sue a false Appeal of Felony or Murder against another: But he is said to be an Abettor in Murder or Felony, who doth command, procure, counsel, or encourage another to the doing of a Murder, or other Felonie; this is but an Accessary: But it is said to be in some other cases.

For the manner of proceeding against, and some other things concerning Murderers, and other Felons. The state and condition of a Felon.

For the state and condition of a Felon, these things are to be known:

1. He is capable to receive by way of Gift or Grant, any thing from others, before or after Attainder, as before.

2. He cannot give or grant away any of his Lands after the offence done, but his Goods he may sell or give at any time before Attainder, and after he must live by them: But see for this, Disability, Grant, Numb. 2, 3. Fine, Numb. 6, 8. And in the next Question.

Stat. 15.
The Forfeiture and Punishment in case of Felony. And the condition of a person Attainted of Felony. An jour & Waft.

The punishment of every Felon, Principal and Accessary; for a Felony by the Common Law, is to hang between Heaven and Earth (as unworthy of both) to lose his Blood upwards, so that he cannot be Heir to another, being a Son of the Earth, to lose his Blood downwards; for his Blood is corrupted, so that none can be Heir to him, to forfeit all his Goods and Chattels, and all his Lands: The which the King is to have for a year and a day, to the end he may eject his Family, rase his Houses, subvert his Trees, and Plough up his Meadows, and after the year the Lord of whom the Land is held, is to have it for ever, ut pena ad paucos metus ad omnes perveniat: And the Wife is to lose her Dower, and so it is for Felonies by Statute Law. But that in some cases, and for some Felonies made by Statute Law, it is said by the Law, there shall be no Corruption of Blood, nor loss of Dower. The Statutes must therefore be seen; and according to this, the Judgment is given upon the trial of the Felon: But if the Felon upon his Arraignment, and upon his trial, shall not answer at all, or shall not answer directly, or shall challenge peremptorily above twenty: Or if he plead not guilty to the Indictment, and then will not put himself upon the Country; in all these cases the Judgment is, That he be pressed to death for his Contumacy; and this is called Judgment de paine fort & dure. And in this case, and by this means (except it be in the case of Treason) he saves his Land, but doth forfeit all his Goods and Chattels notwithstanding, Co. 4. 124. Stamf. 3. 33. 34. 1 Ed.6. 12. 5, 6 Ed.6. 12. 21 Jac. 6. Westm. 1. 12. How his be disposed.

But in this case, this is to be known, That the Goods of the Felon, till his Attainder, are his own, and he may give or sell them as he please, and neither the Sheriff, nor any other Officer, or other, can seize or dispose them, nor are they till his Attainder to be removed out of his House: But after once he is attainted by Verdict or Outlawry, the Township must look to, and secure the Goods, Fitz. Forf. 32. Corone 347. See Seisure. 22 Ass. 118. 31 Ed.3. 3. 1 R.3. 3. And how he may sue or be sued in this Condition, see Disability: see more for Forfeiture, the old Statutes, *Mag. Clergy, what.

But in some cases for Felony, the offender shall have (if he desire it) the benefit of the Book for his life, and this is called Clergy, which is defined to be a benefit that some offenders have in some cases of Felony, confirmed by divers Acts of Parliament. And is thus, when a man is arraigned of Felony before a Temporal Judge, and the prisoner prayeth his Clergy, viz. To have his Book; then the Judge doth command the Ordinary to try, if he can read as a Clerk in such a Book and place thereof, as the Judge shall appoint appoint; and if the Ordinary shall certify the Judge that he can read, then he is not to lose his life, but is to be burnt in the hand only, which was called Aufer in le maine. But if he could not read, and the Ordinary doth so certify to the Judge, then he must be hanged: And if he pray his Clergy before Judgment given, (as he may) he is called a Clerk Convict. If after, he is called a Clerk Attaint. And this benefit of Clergy was at first given to Clergy men only (for their scarcity to be found to be placed in Religious Houses, and was allowable to them for all offences whatsoever, except Treason, and robbing of the Churches of their Ornaments: And then only upon the request of the Ordinary. But at this day it is grantable to all persons, Laymen as well as Clergy men, and that without any delivery of them to the Ordinary, which was the ancient course, for being found guilty, they are put to read at the Bar. Terms of the Law, Co. on Littl. 2. 11.

For Answer to this Question, we are to know these things.

1. That a man cannot have his Clergy in cases of High Treason, Petit Treason, nor in cases of other Felonies, by Murder, Robbery, Sacrilege, burning of dwelling Houses, or Barns of Corn, stealing of Horses, Geldings, or Mares, Rape, taking away of Goods from the person of another privily, stabbing any person within the Statute of 1 Jac. 8. In case where a man is a Recusant, and do not abjure according to 35 Eliz. 5. In case of Conjuring and Witchcraft, against 1 Jac. 12. In case of Buggery with mankind or Beast, upon 23 H. 8. 6. 5 Eliz. 17. In case of Accessary to Petit Treason, or Murder, 45 Ph. & Ma. 4. In case of Forgery upon the second Conviction, 5 Eliz. 14. In case of a Soldier or Marriner offending against 2 Ed. 6. 2. 5 Eliz. 5. 39 Eliz. 17. In case of a Counterfeit Egyptian, 1, 2 Ph. & Ma. 4. 5 Eliz. 20. In case of taking away a Woman against her will, 39 Eliz. 9. In case of relieving a Jesuit, 27 Eliz. 2. Stamf. pl. Cor. 2. 43.

2. But in case of Accessary to stealing of Horses and Mares, for Man-slaughter only, and for ordinary Theft, and in all other Felonies not before named, this benefit is grantable.

3. This benefit is grantable but once, and therefore he that doth demand his Clergy, and hath it once, shall never have it the second time, 4 H. 7. 13. 1 Ed. 6. 12. See for this matter more, 8 Eliz. 4. 14 Eliz. 4. 6, 7. 23 Eliz. 2. 29 Eliz. 2. 31 Eliz. 12. 39 Eliz. 9. 15. 29 Ed. 3. 34. 5 H. 4. 4. 4 H. 7. 13. 12 H. 7. 7. 4 H. 8. 2. 1 Ed. 6. 12. 5, 6 Ed. 6. 4. 8 Eliz. 4. 18 Eliz. 6. 39 Eliz. 9. 1 Jac. 18. 25 H. 8. 3. Crompt. Jur. 80. 90. 126. Co. 11. 58. Kelw. 87. Finches Law 462. Co. 11. 31. Co. 3 part Inst. cap. 50.

The Corruption of Blood, which is part of the punishment for Treason, and other Felonies, is an infection of the Blood, growing to the estate of a man attainted, and his issue; so that as he cannot be Heir to any other above him, so can no other be Heir to him that is beneath him: And therefore it is that a Remainder to his right Heir can never take effect. And if the eldest son be attainted, during his fathers life, and then he over-live him, neither he nor his issue after him (if he die before) can inherit: So neither can the younger Brother, but it will rather Escheat. But if the eldest son in this case die in his Fathers life, without any issue; in this case the younger son may inherit as Heir to the Father, and the Corruption of Blood in the Brother will not hinder. By this Corruption of Blood, also the Nobleman and Gentleman doth lose his Nobility and Gentility for ever, Crompt. Jur. 20. Co. upon Littl. 391. Broo. Co. 42. Dyer 48. 22 H. 6. 38.

This punishment falls upon all Felonies by Common Law, but in cases of Felony by Statute Law, the Statute doth usually except it, and then it is prevented, it will be needful for the knowledge of this point to see the Statutes, by which the offence is made Treason, 25 H. 8. 6. 18 Eliz. 6.

Mis-prison may be either of Treason or Felony; and both these offences may be many ways. It is properly the Concealment of these offences, when one doth know of another man that hath committed the offence, and doth not disclose it to a Magistrate: This if it be of a Treason, the offender doth thereby forfeit his Goods for ever, and the profits of his Lands, during his life, and his Body is to be imprisoned, during the Kings pleasure. But if it be of a Felony only, the offender is to be fined Theftboot is where the owner of the Goods stolen, doth not onely conceal the Felony, but taketh his Goods again of the Felon, or amends for the same, to favor and maintain him, or not to prosecute him: This is worse then Concealment. See for it Co. 3 part Inst. 61.

There are divers other offences of a lower nature, as Extortion, Night-walking, Barrettry, Fornication, Quarrelling, Libelling, Spreading of false news, getting money by counterfeiting Letters, and many others which we shall say somewhat to in their proper places.

The way to bring a man in question for his life, in Treason or Felony, is by Indictment or Presentment; and for some Felonies, there is a third way by Appeal. For lesser offences also a man may be convict by Indictment or Presentment.

Appeal, what.

Appeal is a Plaint or Writ made by one man against another, of purpose to attain him of some offence committed: As if one commit a Robbery, Murther, or Maim upon my person, my Wife, or my Heir, after my death, for killing me, or my self in my life time, for robbing or maiming me, may have this Appeal within the year and day after the offence; and if the party be attainted, he must be executed, and the King cannot pardon it: But if he be acquitted, the Appellor will be fined, and imprisoned, and the party appealed, will recover damages. Indictment,
what.

Indictment is a Bill or Declaration formally made, containing an accusation of a man for some offence done, by a Jury, to be found of purpose to put the offender to answer to it. And to this the offender must plead, and thereupon shall be tried by another Jury, whether he be guilty of the thing whereof he is indicted, or not. And this differeth little from a Presentment.

Presentment,
what.

Presentment is defined to be an enquiry and finding of some offence that hath been done against the King: This sometimes called an Indictment. They both differ from an Appeal in this, That this is always at the suit of the party, and the other two are at the suit of the King: But see for these things more in my Books of Justice of Peace, Co. upon Littl. 126. D. & St. 135. Dyer 284. And in many other places, Co. 2 part Inst. 739. Co. 3 part Inst. 62.

Arraignment,
what.

Arraignment is the next step of proceeding against an offender after the Indictment is found, or Presentment made, for then must he be brought to the Bar of Justice to be tried; and this is called an Arraignment. The manner whereof see in Sir Thomas Smiths Commonwealth, f. 89. After this is the Attainder, which is the Conviction of the offender of the crime, whereof he was not before convict. And this is either before his appearance, which is by outlawry, or after appearance; and this is by Verdict or Confession. And thereupon Judgment of death followeth, except he can pray his Clergy; and then he preventeth the Judgment, and is called a Clerk Convict. His Judgment where he doth plead, is, That he shall hang by the neck till he be dead. But if upon his trial he stand mute, and will not answer at all, or not directly, or challenge above twenty peremptory; in this case the Judgment is, That he shall be pressed to death, which is called Judgment de paine fort & dure, Co. 4. 124. Stamf. 2. 33. Co. 3 part Inst. 47. For the fallifying of an Attainder, see Co. 3 part Inst. 104. And for Judgment and Execution, Co. 3 part Inst. 101.

Ignoramus,
what.

Ignoramus is a word used by the Grand Enquest, charged with the enquiry of causes criminal, and written upon the Bill, whereby any crime is offered to their consideration, when as they mislike their evidence as defective and too weak to make good the Presentment; then they use to write upon the back of the Bill, We are Ignorant, and then he is delivered without further answer; but if they do like it, then they say, A true Bill, and then cry, He stands indicted by it, and must answer to it, whether he be guilty, or not: And if he deny it, it must then be tried by another Jury, and as they finde it, so it must stand. See Indictment. Hue

Hue and Cry, it signifieth the pursuit of one that hath committed Felony by the High-way side or elsewhere: For if the party robbed, or any of the company of him that is murdered or robbed, come to the Constable of the next place, and willet him to raise Hue and Cry, and to make pursuit after the offender, and describe him, and which way he is gone, as near as he can; the Constable must call upon the Parish, and they must seek presently there for him: And if he be not to be found there, they must tell the Constable of the next Parish, and there they must search likewise, and so in every Parish, until the offender be taken or pursued to the Sea-side: And if Officers or others, be negligent herein, they may be punished. And in some cases if the offender be not taken, as in cases of Robbery, the Hundred may be charged to the party grieved, and he may recover his money lost of it. And such as raise these Hues and Cries, must take care against whom they send them; for if they do it, without cause, they may be punished for it, Co. 2 part of Inst. 173. See Arrest, Dyer 137. Westm. 1. 9. 2. 46. Winchester 1. 6. 23 Ed. 3. 11. 27 Eliz. 13. And in my First part of the Marrow of the Law, 205. Co. 3 part. Inst. 52.

Fresh-Suit is such a present and earnest pursuit, and following of an offender, as never ceaseth from the time of the offence committed, or espied, until he be apprehended. And where this is done by the party robbed, he shall have his Goods again; and when the offender is tried, the Judge before whom he is tried, may give him a Warrant to take, and have his Goods again; whereas otherwise, if he fail to make this Fresh Pursuit, the King shall have the Goods stolen as forfeit to him. See for this, Stamf. 3. 16. Co. 3. 52. 21 H. 8. 11. Winchester 1. 6. 28 Ed. 3. 11.

A Fugitive is, where one that is in question, doth flee and will not abide the Trial of Law; and this is either in Deed, when he doth actually flee, or in Law, when albeit he doth not flee, yet he doth not appear, till he be outlawed. In both these cases, whether he be guilty of the Felony, or not, he doth forfeit his Goods. See for this, Stamf. 3. 25. 3 Ed. 3. 35. 4 H. 7. 18. 5 H. 4. 32. 29 Ed. 3. 3. Co. 3 part. Inst. 84.

To Reprieve a prisoner, is to take him back from the proceeding, and execution of the Law, especially for that time.

To Abjure, is to forswear the Realm for ever, and depart into a Foreign Land: For where one had committed a Felony, and did flee to a Church, or other privileged place, before he was apprehended, he might have abjured; and so avoided the Trial of Law: And this may be for a time only, and then is called Relegation.

The Sanctuary was a privileged place, which an offender might have fled to for the safety of his life: But these places, and this Gift, are now taken away, Stamf. 2. 40. 2. 10. Co. super Litt. 133. 22 H. 8. 14. 25. Co. 3 part. Inst. 512. 7. 3. H. 11.

The Execution of the Corps, is the inflicting of the corporal punishment upon the Body of the offender, according to the sentence of the Judge. Co. 3 part. Inst. 101.

Torment is the putting of a man, that is a suspected Malefactor, to excessive pain on a Rack, or otherwise to make him confess himself or his Complices guiltiness. But this is seldom or never used amongst us.

This is the clearing of a man from a crime, whereof he was suspected, and for which he hath been once questioned: Wherein are these things to be known, First, That if a man be accused by Presentment of a Jewry, he cannot be clear, otherwise then by a Jewry. Secondly, If he be once legally acquitted, he can never afterwards be questioned again for the same offence, Fitz Cor. 44. Finch. 71. Sir Tho. Smiths Commonwealth, f. 88.

This Court was applied to the proceedings in the Spiritual Court also.

An Approver or an Appellor, is he which hath committed some Felony, which he confesseth, and now he accuseth others that they were helpers with him, in doing the same or some other Felony; which thing, he saith, he will approve, and therefore is called an Approver, Stamf. 2. 52. Fitz Corone 231. Co. 11. 30. Co. 3 part. Inst. 56.

Burning in the Hand, is the punishment to be inflicted upon a man that hath the benefit of his Clergy, and can read; for having prayed his Clergy in cases of Manslaughter, CHAP. LXI.

Of Custom and Prescription.

His word Custom is sometimes used for the Tribute or Toll that Merchants pay to the King, for the carrying in and out of their Merchandises: But here it is taken for a Law or Rite not written, which being established by long use, and the consent of our Ancestors hath been, and is daily practised, Co. 9. 75. Co. 1. 110. upon Littl. 38. 110. The word is taken in divers other senses, Co. 2. part. Inst. 58.

Señ. 1.
1. Custom, what.

Customs within this Nation are innumerable; and of these some are general, and run all the Country over, and

The kinds of it.

so they are but the Common Laws, which are but the Common Customs of the Country: And some are particular, used and applied onely to some Countries, as the Custom of Gavelkind to Kent; others, some Cities and Burroughs, as the Custom of Burton-Engliss, and the Customs of London, and other places; and others to Villages, Parishes, and Manors, Co. 1. 110. of Copiholds, 68. 69.

Prescription is, where a man claimeth any thing for that, he, his Ancestors or Predecessors, or those whose estate he hath, have had, or used any thing all the time, whereof no minde is to the contrary: And herein, the having, using, and enjoying of the thing, according to the thing, is needful to be shewed, Co. 4. 32. 9. 36. Terms of the Law. And so it is as good as a Grant; for it is Titulus ex usu & tempore substantiam capiens ab auctoritate Legis, Co. super. Littl. 113.

2. Prescription, what.

For Answer hereunto, these things are to be observed.

1. That Custom, Prescription, and Usage, are cousin-germans, and much of one nature; and therefore Regularly, what is good in a Prescription in one, is good in a Custom in many: And so on the other side, what ever thing (for Substance) many men may claim by a Custom, one man may claim and have by a Prescription: For Prescription is, where one man, time out of minde, hath right to have, and hath had something of another: But Custom is, where divers have time out of minde, a Right to have, and have had something of another.

Wherein Custom and Prescription agree, and wherein they differ. Prescription.

2. Usage is by continuance of time, the efficient cause of Custom and Prescription: both; for there are two Essential parts of Custom.

Usage:

First, Time out of minde.

Secondly, Usage, viz. a peaceable Usage without interruption, and to both long continuance is necessary.

3. But herein lieth the difference, between Custom and Prescription.

First, That is and must always be alleged to be in many persons; and so it may be claimed by Copiholders or the Inhabitants of a place: This always is one person. That he and his Ancestors, &c. And if all but one be dead, in the case of Custom the Custom is gone.

Secondly, That is always local, claimed in the Land, and within a Country, City, Parish, Manor, or Neighborhood, and goeth with it: But this is personal, and goeth always with the person.

Thirdly, That needs not by common Intendment, a lawful Commencement; but is applied to things insensible, as the Custom of Gavelkind and Burton-Engliss: But this must have a reasonable Intendment by some Grant, Act, or Agreement.

4. Prescription extends to Fee-simple for Tenant; for life, years, or in tail, cannot prescribe in what estate: But Custom doth extend to all Interests and Estates whatsoever, Brund. Rep. 198. Co. 9. 56. Brund. 453. Co. 4. 32. Dyer. 114. Co. super. Littl. 113. So that they agree in this, That both of them must have Possession, Usage, and Time, and the Possession must be long, continual, and peaceable. They must be both precisely proved by them that claim them: and they must be both of them alleged leaged as they can be proved: But a Prescription is of more force; for that as to Commons, Ways, Rents, Franchises, and the like, will give a man as good a Title, as a Grant will do, Plow. 322. Co. super Littl. 114.

For Answer to this Question, these things are to be known.

1. That a Custom may be good for Substance, and bad for the manner of claiming of it.

2. That the Customs that are good and allowable, must have these Incidents: First, They must be claimed, alleaged, and applied to some certain special Country, City, or place, as, within one County, a Hundred, Manor, Parish, City, Burrough, Hamlet, &c. For a Custom alleaged or claimed, to be all England over, is not good. Secondly, They must be of long continuance, time out of mind, for a hundred years at least: And therefore an Allegation or a Claim of any thing for any other time, is not good. Thirdly, They must be reasonable according to Common Right, viz. It must have some appearance of consideration, and lawful beginning in it; but in this the Law is not exact, for it is sufficient in case of Custom, that it be ex certa causa rationabili usitata, though it cannot be well conceived how it began. But Customs that are against Reason, are usurpations, and not to be admitted. Fourthly, They must be certain. Fifthly, They must be alleaged in the Affirmative, and not in the Negative.

3. The Customs that may be claimed, and good in one place, cannot be claimed, or good in another place; as Burrough-English cannot be claimed in Upland Towns, that are not Cities nor Burroughs: And yet such Upland Towns may alleage a Custom to have a way to their Churches, to make By-laws, or the like.

4. And being such, they have the force of Laws, and may take away the force of other Laws that oppose them. For the Rule is in this, Consuetudo pro Legge quandoque servatur in partibus ubi fuerit more utentium approbata, & vicem Legis obtinet; longue enim temporis & consuetudinis non est vitia auctoritas. Longa possessio facit jus, pariter jus possidendi, & tollit actionem veri domini. Co. super Littl. 110. 112. 6. 60. Dyer 54. 35. Hic. 25.

5. The Law doth allow for good Customs, these Customs that do follow, viz.

Common. That the Inhabitants of a Parish shall have Common in such a Waste of the Lords.

Modus decimandi. That the Inhabitants of a Parish shall pay no Tithe, but something in lieu thereof.

Surrender. That if the Tenantes of such a Manor will alien his Lands, he must do it in the Lords Court by Surrender.

Herriot. That the Lord shall have the best Beast of his Tenant upon his death or Surrender, or else that the Lord shall enter and seize his Tenants Land.

That if any Tenant of such a Manor do alien his Land by Deed or Will, that it must be presented at the next Court of the Manor, or else that it be void.

Way. That every Inhabitant of Dale shall have a way to Church, Market, &c. over such a ground.

That if the Freeholders do not pay their Rent, they shall lose their Land.

Rent. That an Infant of sixteen years old may Alien, or Devise his Land; that an Infant at any other age of discretion, under one and twenty years, may Alien or Devise his Land, so he name a certain age.

Woman Covert. That a Woman Covert and her Husband, may after examination of the Wife, by the Steward in the Lords Court make Surrender and dispose of her Land; and that this shall binde as a Fine at Common Law.

Common. That one man may Ear and Sowe Land, and then that other men shall feed upon it, and have the Pasture of it.

Fishing at Sea. That Fishers on the Sea, and great Rivers, may go over any mans ground to fish.

Officers. That Parishioners shall chuse their own Constables yearly.

Houf-boot. That all the Tenantes of a Manor, shall have and take sufficient Houf-boot in the Lords Woods.

Relief. That every Tenant of a Manor shall pay two shillings for a Relief when it happens.

Pound-breach. That if any of the Lords Tenants break the Pound, he shall pay three pounds to the Lord.

That a Jury may be amerced by another Jury, in a Leet for Concealment.

That

That if a strangers Sheep do eat up of the Pasture of the Tenants by day, such Foldage.
Tenants may Fold the same Sheep by night upon his Land.

That none of the Inhabitants of such a Village shall put in their Beasts into such Common.
a place, after the Corn is cut and carried, till Michaelmas.

That the Tenants of the Manor shall chuse their Bedle to be Collector of the Officer.
Lords Rents.

That if one be in quiet possession forty weeks, he shall not be outed, but by the Kings Writ.

That if a Tenant die that hath divers Houses, which he holdeth of the Lord, that Herriot.
then the Lord shall have the best Beast for an Herriot, and the Parson the next best Beast for a Mortuary.

That the Heir of the deceased shall have Heirlooms, and that is the best of the Heirlooms.
Ancestors goods, of every kinde some.

That if any one finde any Royal fish, that he must bring him to such a place, or Royal Fish.
else be presented and amerced.

That he that makes an Affray or Bloodshed, within such a place, shall lose 20. s. Affray.

That such as Ear Land, may turn the Plough upon the Head-Land of another.

That a Woman shall be barred of her Dower, if she receive part of the money Joynture or which was had for the Land sold. Dowers.

That the owner of the ground shall have a Land-Bird out of an Eyrie of Cignets.

That a Woman shall have all or half her Husbands Land for her life, or Widows estate for her Dowre.

That the Lord of a Manor may amerce his Tenants, for doing Trespas to him in Trespas.
his Leet or Court-Baron.

That if an Estray come into a Hundred, and any of the Resiants therein esloyn Esloyning an him, that the Lord may distrain him till he have brought it again, seems good. Estray.

That men of such a place, may not Devise their Land longer then for life; but it seems the Statutes have altered this. Sett. 3.

That the Parson of the Parish shall always keep a Bore and a Bull for the Parish, Devise of Land.
and every Parishioner that hath loss by his Nonresant, may have an Action of the Case. Parson of a Parish.

That a Copiholder for life, under a hundred pound, may name his Successor to the Copiholder.
Lord.

That every one that doth Land Goods to go by Sea, or carry Goods, and lay on Toll.
such a ground to be carried by Sea.

That every one that goeth over such a ground shall pay a certain sum of money Wharfage.
for Toll.

That all that hold Land of the Lord of the Manor that hath a Grift Mill, shall Grinde at a grinde at that Mill, and the Lord must grinde it. Mill.

That the Lord of a Manor may grant Copihold estates in Fee, tail, or for life, and Copihold Mann in Possession or Reversion. or.

That the Copiholders may have Common in the Lords, or in anothers Soil. To grant Estates.
Common.

That the Inhabitants of Dale shall have Common in a great Waste.

That such a Country or Hundred shall pay no Tithe. Tithe.

These and such like Customs as these are good, Co. 9. 58. 6. 60. 4. 55. 5. 84.

upon Littl. 139. 140. 110. 112. Hubbard. Rep. 113. 129. 122. 229. 301. 313. 370.

March. Rep. f. 3. 15. 16. 28. 54. 83. 91. Goldsb. Rep. f. 102. 103.

6. All these and such like Customs that are good for the Substance and Matter, may be yet bad for the manner, if they be uncertain, or mixed with any other Custom that is unreasonable, and so entire, that they cannot be sundred, may be bad for this, Brownl. 2 parts. f. 198.

7. The Customs of London, the Isle of Man, of Halifax, of Kent, as Gavelkind, Burrow-Eng- and of Towns, as Burrow-English, and the rest, are allowed good, Hubb. Rep. f. 158. lish.

Brownl. Rep. f. 284. 217. 8. 11. 6. 11. 3. H. 7. 9. March. Rep. f. 54. 55. Gavelkind.

8. Those Customs that are unreasonable, and against Common Right, are void and disallowed, as are these following.

That Fishers shall dig and fix stakes in other mens ground to tie their Nets. To fish.

That if one break the Pound, he shall forfeit three pound to the Lord, though he be a stranger. Pound break.
That

- Woman Covert.* That a Woman Covert may devise her Land by Will.
- Fraternity.* That one Guild or Fraternity should make another.
- Harriot.* That the Lord of such a Manor shall have the best Beast of a stranger, Levant and Couchant on his Tenants ground at his Tenants death, if the Tenants have esjoynd his best Beast.
- Sell Wood.* That the Lords Tenant may sell as much Wood as he will in the Lords Woods.
- Distress.* That a man may distress anothers Cattle, Damage fasant in his ground, and keep them till the other give him what he will have.
- Make Leases.* That the Lords Bailiffs or Steward may make Leases of Freeholds.
- Common.* That the Inhabitants of a Village shall have Common in anothers ground, Raison commorantia & residentia, in the Houses.
- To make Leases.* That all Leases, Devises, or Estates, made by him that hath the Fee-simple for above six years, are void.
- To Amerce.* So that if a Verdict in a Leet by a Petit-Jury be found false, by a Grand-Jury true, that the Petit-Jury shall be amerced.
- To beat one.* That one may beat another, that doth come upon his ground, or burn anothers House wherein his Goods are.
- To retain Rent.* That the Lessee shall retain his Rent, if the Lessor will not repair the Houses.
- To be free from the Leet.* That if men be sworn to the Constable, they shall be exempted from coming to any Leet.
- Common.* That no Commoner shall put in his Beasts into the Common, till the Lord put in his first.
- To take away a Distress.* That the Lords Bailiff may take the Beasts from the Kings Officers, distressed for the Kings debt, and put them three days in Pound, and then if the party agree, he may have them again.
- To put Beasts in the Lords Pound.* That every Tenant that doth distress any Beasts Damage fasant, shall put the Beasts in the Lords Pound, or else be amerced.
- Estray.* That if an Estray be unruly, he may be fettered.
- To take the best Beast.* That the Lord shall have the best Beast of his Tenant, except it be as a Harriot.
- To take Tithe.* That all the Cattle of the Parish shall be cast together, and the Parson shall have the Tenth of the whole.
- Copihold Manor.* That a Copiholder for life shall fell all his Trees on his Copihold, seems not good; and yet by this a Custom in a Manor, some say is good, but not good by a Prescription.
- Tithe.* That a man that dieth in one Parish, and is carried to be buried in another Parish, shall pay a certain sum to the Church-wardens of the Parish where he dies.
- That one Parish shall not pay Tithe, or any thing in lieu of it: But this Custom claimed for a Country, may be good.
- All these and such like Customs as these are void, Co. lupton Litt. 139, 140. C. 5: 84. Dyer 199. 358. 21 H. 7. 10. C. 46. Habb. Rep. 51.
- So that if any Tenant of the Manor shall marry his Daughter, without leave of the Lord, he shall pay a Fine to him, Co. upon Litt. 139.
8. It is a good Custom to alkeage, that the Church-wardens or the Clerk, may cut Grasse in the Soil of another, to straw the Church, March. Rep. f. 16.
9. That the Inhabitants of such a place, that they have a Chappel at Ease, and use to Bury at the Mother Church, and have been used to repair part of the Wall of the Church, and for this to be discharged of the repair of the rest of the Church; or that they repair the Chappel of Ease, and therefore are discharged of the repair of the Church, are good Customs, March. Rep. f. 91. 250.
10. Custom, that none shall use the Trade of a Diet in such a Town, without leave of the Lord or his Bailiff; Or to have a Fair in his Town for ten days, and none in the next Town, during that time. That none shall Bake any Bread to sell in the Lords Bake-house. That all Ships laden and unladen in such a Haven, shall be unladen in such a place. These Customs have been allowed good, Co. 8. 127. 2 H. 4. 924.

11. That the Steward of a Manor may make By-laws or Ordinances, for the well-ordering of the Common, and affels a penalty on the Breakers thereof, and distrain for it, is a good Custom, Marob. Rep. f. 28. So a Custom to make By-laws in, or out of a Court, by a Jury, or without a Jury by a Neighborhoods common consent may be good. But see for this afterwards.

To make By-laws.

12. Custom, That none shall put in his Beasts in the Common, till the Lord put in his: That none shall carry by Land but in his Coach, or by Water but in his Boat, these are not good; and yet a Custom, That the Lord shall buy first in a Market or Fair, it seems is good: But a Custom is good in many places, where a Prescription will not be good. As a Prescription, that a Copiholder of Inheritance may sell the Trees, is not good; but such a Custom amongst Copiholders, is good: So if a Tenant that is a Freeholder, prescribe to have Wind-falls, and all the Trees withered in the top; and if the Lord make them in Cole, to have so much in money; this is not good in a Prescription in one person: But being alleaged as a Custom, and to be burnt in the house, is good as Appendant, Brownl. 2 Rep. 198.

Out of all which may be collected, That no Custom can be good that hath not these Properties in it,

1. It must be somewhat reasonable and congruous, for Reason is said to be the Father, and Congruence the Mother of it.

2. There must be usage in the case, the thing claimed must be oft done before, for Custom is said to be Constitutio ex diversis actionibus saepe iteratis; hence it is, that Usage is said to be the Nurse of Custom.

3. This Usage must be time out of memory, for otherwise the other two will not serve, Brownl. 2 part. f. 198.

For Answer to this Question, these things are to be known.

1. That a Prescription may be good for the matter of it, and yet void for the manner of it.

And for this, these things are to be known.

First, A Tenant in Fee-simple may prescribe in his own name, but a Tenant for life, years, by Elegit, or the like Tenant, cannot prescribe in his own name, but must prescribe in the name of him in Reversion, Co. 6. 60.

Secondly, If a Copiholder prescribe for any Rent, or profit to be taken out of the Land of another, and not out of the Manor, he cannot do it in his own name, but must do it in the Lords name, and he cannot prescribe against the Lord: But he may alleage a Custom within the Manor, for himself, against the Lord, Dyer 70. Co. 432.

Thirdly, If one that is Lord of a Manor prescribe in his own name, and the name of his Tenants at will, it seems it is not good, Broo. Prescription 3.

Fourthly, If one prescribe for himself, and all those who had his Tenure before him, this is not good, Broo. Prescription 15.

Fifthly, If one prescribe that all the occupiers of a ground are to be charged with the fencing of it; this is not good, for it is too general: But he must say, All those whose estate he hath, and he have been used, &c. And yet such a Prescription, That all those that are occupiers for payment of money have been discharged of Tithes, M. 37, 38 Eliu. Co. B. Caria.

Sixthly, One that hath onely an office for life, it seems cannot prescribe for profits thereunto appurtenant in him, and his predecessors, Dyer 10. 40.

Seventhly, One cannot Regularly prescribe in the Negative, To pay no Toll, but he must say, They have been used to buy and sell, without payment of Toll, Broo. Prescription 17. 44.

Eighthly, When the Prescription is for such a thing as may be Appendant or Regardant to a Manor, it may be in him that doth prescribe, and those whose estate he hath: But if the Prescription be for such things, as cannot be granted without a Fine or a Deed, as a Villain in Gross, Hundred Rent, or the like, there it must be in him and his Ancestors, whose Heir he is, Broo. Incident 39. 19 H. 6. 34. 12 H. 7. 8.

Ninthly, One cannot (as it seems) prescribe for eight loads of Wood to be cut and

See 4.
What Prescriptions shall be allowed to be good, or nor, and taken as appertaining to a Messuage: But one may prescribe for Estovers to be employed upon repair of the Messuage, or to be spent in it, Brownl Rep. 1 part. f. 35.

 Tenthly, A Commoner (as it seems) may prescribe thus: That he hath Libertatem vendendi the Conneys in the Common, &c. and this is good, M. 9 Jac. B. R.
 Eleventhly, That the Lord of the Manor, for the time being, hath had and been used to have the best Beast, &c. Dyer 199
 Twelfthly, If it be for a way, through a private ground, he must say, Unde, a quo ad quem & per quem, 39 H. 6. 6. 128 H. 6. 9. 20 Aff. 18.
 Thirteenthly, If one prescribe to be discharged of Tithes in kinde, for payment of about a peny an Acre of the Land, or for payment of not above one peny an Acre of Land; these Prescriptions are void for incertainty, Allens case, M. 7 Jac. Co. B. By the Court.
 These Prescriptions that follow, are instances and examples of good and bad, and they are particular, as they follow, viz.

For the Lord of a Manor.

For the Lord of a Manor.

For a Parson of a Parish.

For the Lord Chief Justice.

For a Sheriff.

For Fishers.

For any Man.

For the Lord of a Manor, To amerce his Tenants in his Leet or Court-Baron, if they do commit Trespas against him, in the opinion of some; or to distrain for Amercements and Fines in a Leet or Court-Baron; or to have a free Warren in any of his Tenants grounds; or to have a Park belonging to his Manor, or twenty shillings Fine of all that do make an affray or bloodshed within his Manor; or to have a Fine upon the Alienation of his Tenant; or to have a certain sum of money of all the Reliants within his Manor, pro curto Leta; or so, and that he hath been used to distrain for it; or that all his Tenants must bake at his Bake-house, or grind at his Mill, and not elsewhere; or to have the folding of all the Sheep in the Village, within and without his Seignior, and that none may Fold but him; or to have a Harriot after the death of every of his Tenants of his Manor for life, or years; these may be good Customs. But the Lord of a Manor may not prescribe to have a Harriot of every one that doth die within the Manor, for a stranger may die there; this is not good. So to have three pound of any man-stranger or other that shall make a Pound breach; But to have it of his Tenants only, may be good. So to have every mans Beasts, that come within the Manor, is not good. So to deliver the Beasts that are distrained and take Bond; these and such like are not good Prescriptions.
 A Parson of the Parish may prescribe to a certain sum of money for every one Buried in the Church. And a Parson of a Parish may prescribe for Tithes out of his Parish, but he cannot prescribe for Tithes within his Parish, for that is due by the very Law without Prescription; New Book of Entries, fol. 85. See my Book of Tithes.

The Chief Justice may prescribe to dispose the Offices incident to their Offices for the life of the Officer placed by them, and good, 22 Ed. 4. 18.

The Sheriff cannot prescribe to have of every one within his Leet twelve pence, for his good will or reward, nor a sum of money for holding of his Leet in such a place.

Fishers may prescribe to draw or dry their Nets upon the grounds adjoining to the River, &c. 18 Dyer 167.

Any Man may prescribe for a Court, a Way, an Office, Rent, or sum of money, Common, Estovers, a Waif, an Effray, an Advowson Appendant to a Manor, or Land to an Office, Wreck, Treasure, Trove, Market, Fair, Warren: But one cannot prescribe to Land, or to the Goods of Felsons, Outlawed persons, or Fugitives, 24 Hen. 6. 10. 11. 12. 13. 14. 15. 16. 17. 18. 19. 20. 21. 22. 23. 24. 25. 26. 27. 28. 29. 30. 31. 32. 33. 34. 35. 36. 37. 38. 39. 40. 41. 42. 43. 44. 45. 46. 47. 48. 49. 50. 51. 52. 53. 54. 55. 56. 57. 58. 59. 60. 61. 62. 63. 64. 65. 66. 67. 68. 69. 70. 71. 72. 73. 74. 75. 76. 77. 78. 79. 80. 81. 82. 83. 84. 85. 86. 87. 88. 89. 90. 91. 92. 93. 94. 95. 96. 97. 98. 99. 100. And yet one may prescribe Tenacium placita in his own Court, and that shall be good, *Plow. 322.  Adj. judg. B. R. So that another must scoure the Ditches, and make the Mounds and Fences between him and me; Brook. Prescription 16.

So that if a mans Beasts may escape in the next ground, and be there Damage-fesant, and that they may not be taken Damage-fesant, if the stranger do make fresh pursuit after them, Bro. Prescrip. 25. So to have a Rent out of anothers Land, and to distrain for it, is a good Prescription, 19 H. 6. 34. 13 Ed. 4. 16. So to have a Leet or Court-Baron, and to distrain for Fines, Pains, and Amerciaments there, Bro. 34. So to stop or turn water, to repair his Mill or Banks, Bro. Prescrip. 44. So to fold the Sheep at night, that do feed in his ground by day, 5 H. 7. 9. That the chief Pledg within the Leet shall pay him Ten shillings for all the Pledges, and that he shall have Contribution against the rest of the Pledges, 9 H. 6. 44. So that he is Keeper of such a Wood, and that every one that hath Common there, is to pay him Twelve pence a year; and he that hath a Gate, a Hen yearly, to look to it, 11 H. 6. 10. Pr. Bro. 95. So to have a Penny of every one that doth go through his ground, 5 H. 7. 9.

But to have a sum of money for going upon the High-way, is not good, unless it be to repair a Bridge there. So to have a Fair or Market, and set up a Booth in anothers Land, Bro. Prescrip. 57, 98. So to have a sum of money for Common, and to distrain for it being behind, Bro. Pres. 1. So to have two Bushels of Corn for suffering a Water-course to come to such a Mill, Dyer 322. So to dig in a mans several ground next the Sea, to make Bulwarks against the Enemies, Dyer 60. So to pay a small sum of money in lieu of Tythes; or to be discharged of Tythes for a small Tythe in lieu of payment of part, as the Tenth Fleece of Wooll in satisfaction of the Locks of Wooll, 36, 37 Elix. Co. B. Jessops Case. So to pay a Buck and Doe for all the Tythes of a Park, or the Left-shoulder of every Deer, Mich. 4 Car. B. R. So to have an Isle, or Seats in a Church, for repairing it. New Book of Entries.

Modus decimandi.

3. These Prescriptions that follow, are particular Instances and Examples also of both kinds, but most of them bad. As, To be quit of Tythes in Dale, when every one there besides him doth pay Tythes. For a Lay-man cannot prescribe in Non decimando; but he may prescribe in Modo decimandi. Also a Spiritual person, or his Farmer, may prescribe in Non decimandi. So to prescribe to be discharged of Tythes in one place, because he doth pay Tythe in another; or for one thing, because he doth pay Tythe of another: As of Lambs, because he payeth Tythe for Wooll; or of Cattel, because he payeth Two pence for every Cow; these are not good, Co. 2. 44. Fleetwoods Case, 7 Jac. Co. B. M. 5 Jac. B. R. So to prescribe to have such a Common in anothers Soil, as to exclude the Owner of the Soil all the year long, this is not good. So for Estovers, or Fishing. And yet one may prescribe for Solum Vesturam, and exclude the Owner for part of the year. So to prescribe to Common without number, and not to say of Beasts levant and couchant, or appurtenant to such a thing, or to have Common appendant to Meadow or Pasture, or the like, it seems not good, Co. upon Lis. 122. See more in Common. Mar. Rep. 38. Brownl. Rep. 2. 45. 101. 65. Co. 4. 37.

Sec. 5. For Tythe.

So a Prescription to have a corporate or compounded thing to belong to a corporate thing, or an incorporate to an incorporate, are not good, Co. 4. 37. Plow. 168. 26 H. 8. 4. Or one thing belong to another that by Law is not appendant, as Wastes to a Leet, or Common to a Fair, or the like. Or for a thing not prescribable, or against any Law, as to have Silva cadua, or the like: Or that is malum in se, as to be drunk, or the like: Or malum prohibitum, as to make a Pound-breach, or to lay Blocks in the High-way. Or to have one thing as belonging to another time out of mind, when the thing to which it doth belong is within the time of memory, as a Fee to an Office newly erected. All these Prescriptions are naught, Co. 4. 37. 9 H. 6. 44. 14 Ed. 3. 44. Co. Super. Lit. 115. Bro. Prescrip. 2. Doll. & Stu. 24. Co. 11. 89. Dyer 29. 28.

So a Prescription or Custom, that an Infant may alien when he can measure a Yard of Cloth, is void for incertainty. So if one prescribe to sell the Beasts he doth distrain Damage-fesant, or to keep them till the Owner of the Cattel pay him Three pounds, or to keep them until the Owner make him amends; or that he shall make himself amends, or the like: These are not good Customs or Prescriptions, Dyer 276. 8 Ed. 4. 18. Co. Super. Lit. 140. 21 H. 7. So to prescribe to do a thing one may do

by

by Law, as distrain for Rent, Service, or the like, is void, Plow. 345. So if one do prescribe against that which another hath by Prescription; as to stop his Light or Way, or disturb his Leet, or the like; this is not good, Co. 9:56. Bro: Prescrip. 41. So to be discharged from service to a Leet, because he is Constable; from paying Tythe of one Land, because he doth sow, sever, and pay the Tythe of other Land, and the like, are not good Prescriptions.

And out of all these things may be collected,

1. That no Prescription can be good, that hath not these properties in it. 1. That it be reasonable for the thing to be had or taken; and in the creation, that it may be conceived how at the first it did begin. 2. That it be certain. 3. That it be lawful to be done, which is claimed.

5. How a Custom or Prescription shall be taken.

2. That which in many will be good or bad in a Custom, that regularly in one will be good or bad in a Prescription. For Customs and Prescriptions both, they are for the most part taken and expounded strictly, and must be strictly pursued: And therefore if a Custom be, that an Infant may make a Feoffment; he may not by this Custom make a Lease and Release, or declare his Will upon the Feoffment. And yet the Customs of London, and Gavelkind, are expounded favorably. Dyer 262. 196. 11 H. 4. 29. 21 Ed. 4. 24.

6. Where and how a Custom or Prescription may be destroyed and gone, or not. Custom.

For Answer to this Question, these things are to be known.

1. Where the Custom doth run with the Seignior, as that the Tenant shall pay a Fine, Heriot, or the like to the Lord, or be his Collector of his Rents, or the like; there Unity of possession in the Lord will extinguish it. But if the Custom run with the Tenants in the Land, as the Customs of Gavelkind, and the like, there it is otherwise. 14 H. 4. 2.

2. For a Custom of Common, how it may be extinct or suspended by Unity of possession or otherwise, See Brownl. Rep. 1 par. 181. 174. 130. 47. 2 par. 309, 210. 297.

3. How Copihold-Customs may be gone, See Co. of Copihold 77, 78, 79. and my Book of Copihold, fol. 148, 149. And see here Suspension and Extinguishment.

Prescription:

4. And a Prescription may be determine divers ways also. As, 1. by a Grant; as if I have a Rent, Common, or the like profit out of anothers ground, and I take a Grant from him of it; this will determine it, 21 H. 7. 3. 2. By Unity of Possession; as if I have Common out of anothers ground, and after I purchase the ground it self, the Common is gone. See Extinguishment: 3. By alteration of the state of things: As if I prescribe to Estovers to spend in the Hall of my house, and after I convert this Hall into a Kitchin or Malt-house, it seems the Prescription is gone. And yet if one have Estovers belonging to his house, and he alter any of the Rooms or Chambers, the Estovers doth continue still. And if one have a Water-course by Prescription to his Mill or Conduits, or Windows to his House; and the Tucking-Mill is turned to a Grist-Mill, or the House be fallen or turned into a Barn; yet the Prescription doth continue, Co. 4. 87. So if a Corporation that have a good Prescription, change the name of their Corporation, yet the Prescription doth continue, Dyer 270. Mich. 2 Jac. Agreed per Curiam. And if a man have been used to pay a Shoulder of a Buck for all manner of Tythes of his Park, and after it is disparked and sown to Corn, the Prescription is gone, and Tythes must be paid in kind. But if some of the Park only be sown, and the rest remain a Park still, it is otherwise. Shipdams Park, 37 Eliz. M. Brown. 1 par. 31. 4. By alteration of the payment: If there be an antient Prescription of payment, and of latter time the payment hath varied from the usage, this will not hurt. Co. upon Lit. 114. by Baron Henden at Gloucester-Assises, 17 Car. 5. By interruption in the passage; as if I have an antient Way to my house by Prescription, and for twenty years together it hath been stopped, or I have had another Way set out for me which I have used, yet my Prescription is not gone. So if one have a Modus Decimandi by Prescription, and he hath of late for divers years paid Tythe in kind; this doth not determine the Prescription. But otherwise it is when there is an Interruption of the Right, as in case of Extinguishment by Unity. Co. upon Lit. 114. See more in Tythes, Franchises, Rents, Copihold. *Brownl. By-laws

By-laws are Orders made by the common consent of a Town, Parish, or Corporation, for the good of the place, and of them that make them, to tie them further than the publick Law doth bind. Of this sort are the Ordinances of the City of London, and of other Incorporations. Co. 5. 63. Kitch. 45.

For the Answer of this, and the opening of this Learning, these things are to be known.

Self. 6.
By-laws, what.

What By-laws are good, or not; and who shall be bound by them, or not.

1. That the Inhabitants of a Village or Town, without any Custom or Prescription, may amongst themselves by common agreement, and out of, and without any Court, make any By-laws or Ordinances for the publick good, as the Repair of the High-ways, Bridges, Church, or the like. And in this case the greater part, without Custom, shall bind the rest. But if it be for their own private profit, as for the well-ordering of their Commons, or the like; there without a Custom they cannot make By-laws. And if it be in such a case, the greater part cannot bind the lesser part, without a special Custom for it. Co. 5. 63. Hob. Rep. pl. 266. 44 Ed. 3. 19. Dyer 322: 21 H. 7. 20. 40. 11 H. 7. 13. 21 Ed. 4. 54. 8 Ed. 2. iir. Affise, 413.

2. Corporations by Prescription or Patent, may without question make Ordinances or Constitutions for publick good, without any Custom or Prescription. But if it be for any thing that concerns themselves only, some say they must have Custom or Prescription for it: Others say, by the very incorporating it is included and incident, as to sue and be sued, so to make By-laws for the better government of it self. And this I take to be the Law. Hob. Rep. f. 182. Co. 5. 63. Doff. & Sin. 74.

3. If a Lord of a Leet or Court-Baron claim a power to make By-laws in, or belonging to his Court, he must claim it by Prescription, and prove the usage by the making of those By-laws, and the punishment of offenders for the breaking of them. Brownl. Rep. 2 par. 180. Goldsb. Rep. f. 79.

4. In these cases where they have power, they may make an Order for a Rate to raise money to Repair, or the like: And they may appoint a common Officer to receive it, and give him power to distrain for it; who after demand may do it. Or they may make an Order, That such a man as is bound to repair, shall do it; or upon any man to do such a thing, and put a penalty on his head if he do it not, and appoint an Officer to levy it; and all this without any special Custom for it. And it is best to give the Penalty for not repairing of High-ways, to the Lord; and for not repairing of Churches, to the Churchwardens. 44 Ed. 3. 19. 11 H. 7. 14.

5. So by the very Common-Law, the Churchwardens with consent of the major part of a Parish, may tax the Inhabitants and all others that have Land in the Parish, towards the Repair of the Church; and they may make a By-law for the levying of it; and all this without any Custom alleged for it. Co. 5. 66. 11 H. 7. 14. 21 H. 7. 20.

6. These Taxes and By-laws will not charge strangers, and those that dwell out of the Town, Village, or Precinct of the Leet, that hath not Land there; except it be in London, and some special places and cases for publick good. One Parish therefore cannot by a By-law bind another Parish. Co. 5. 63. Brownl. 2 par. 180. 22 H. 7. 40: 44 Ed. 3. 18.

7. By-laws made for a Parish, must be such as are for the common good of the Parish; or else they will not bind any body within, or without the Parish. And therefore such as are made for the good of the Lord of the Manor only, as that no man shall carry Hay on his Land; or for the good of one of the Parish only, as that no man shall break the Hedg of 7. S. or the like; it seems these are not good. Goldsb. 79. pl. 13.

8. By-laws also that are against Common reason, or the Publick good, or the Fundamental Laws, are not good, or binding to any persons within or without the place, be it in a Corporation or elsewhere. And therefore a By-Law with a Penalty of Imprisonment, is adjudged void, Co. 5. 64. The Town of Newbury made a By-law, That none should exercise any Trade there, that had not been Apprentice there for seven years, and lived five years within the Town; was adjudged void, Hil.

14 Jac. B.R. The City of London made a By-law, That none there of such a Trade should take to his Apprentice the son of an Alien; and that the Obligations and Covenants for the binding of him should be void. This will not make the Assurances void. Trin 33 Eliz. 49. Degrel vers. Powk's Case.

9. No By-law made by any Corporation against the Kings Prerogative, or the common profit of the people, is to be allowed or put in use, till it be allowed by the Lord Chancellor, Lord Treasurer, or Chief Justices of either Benches, or three of them. Stat. 9 H. 7. 7. Co. 11. 53. Co. 63, 64.

10. When it is so allowed by them, if it be unreasonable, or against Law, it may be afterwards disallowed by the Judges, Co. 11. 54. See more, Stat. 33 H. 8. 27. 28 H. 8. 5. 19 H. 7. 7. See Ordinance. Brownl. 2 par. 284.

CHAP. LXII.

Of Debet and Solet, Detainer or Retainer, and Departure out of the Realm.

Debet and Solet, what.

Debet and Solet are certain formal words used in Writs, which are not to be omitted in them, that are used according to the diversity of the case. As if one sue to recover any Right whereof his Ancestor was disseised by the Tenant or his Ancestor, then Debet is used only in the Writ: But if he sue for any thing that is now first of all denied, then he useth both these words. And so it is of Debet and Detinet. Regist. 140.

Detainer and Retainer.

Detainer or Retainer, is the keeping of a thing in the nature of a Pledg, till he satisfie a Duty. So an Inn-keeper may keep his Guests Horse, till he be paid for his own and his Horses meat: A Tailor the Garment made, till he be paid for the making of it: A Sheerman or Dyer the Cloth, till he be paid for sheering or dying, as a Pledg only, Co. 8. 147. See Action of the Case, and Desinne, in my First Part of the Marrow of the Law; and in Visitors. Brownl. 2 par.

Departure out of the Realm.

It is said by some, That if one depart out of the Realm without Licence, he doth forfeit his goods. But we find no such Law at this day, nor any Restraint herein, but that men may go and come as they please, if there be no special Prohibition by the Lord Protector. But such a Law there was, That none might go out of the Realm without the Kings leave, and some punished in the Star Chamber for going without leave; which is repealed. But it is said, if a Subject be out of the Land, and commanded home by the King, and he refuse, that he may seise his goods. See for this, Stat. 5 R. 2. cap. 2. 7 R. 2. c. 14. 13 R. 2. c. 20: 21 Jac. 18. Cromp. Jur. 31. 84. 109. Dyer 375.

CHAP. LXIII.

Of a Deed.

Deed is a Writing or Instrument written in paper or parchment, sealed and delivered; to prove and testify the Agreement of the Parties whose Deed it is, to the things contained in the Deed. Terms of the Law. Co. super Lit. 35.

A Deed, what.

All Deeds are either Indented, or Poll. The Deed indented (which is that which is called an Indenture) is, when the paper or parchment is cut and indented. And it is defined to be a Writing containing a Conveyance, Bargain, Contract, Covenant or matter of Agreement between two or more, and is indented

The kinds:
Indenture.
Deed-Poll.

in the top or side, answerable to another that likewise doth comprehend the self-same matter. And this is so called, because it is so indented; for albeit it be called an Indenture; and begin in these words, Hac Indentura, &c. yet if it be not actually indented, it is no Indenture: And of the other side, if it be not so called, or these words be omitted, yet if it be indented, it is an Indenture. And this was antiently called Charta cyrographata vel communis, because each party had his part. Terms of the Law. Co. super Lit. 229, 143. 38 H. 6. 23.

The Deed-Poll is that which is plain without any indenting, when the parchment or paper is polled or cut even: And this was antiently called Charta de una parte: And this is single, and but one; which the Feoffee, Grantee, or Lessee for the most part hath.

The Deed indented is also sometimes Bipartite, i. of two parts, when there are two parties, and two parts of the Deed. And then commonly the Feoffor, Grantor, or Lessor hath the one part, and the Feoffee, Grantee, or Lessee hath the other part. And sometimes it is Tripartite, i. when there are three parties and three parts; and then commonly each party hath a part of the Indenture. And sometimes it is Quadripartite, &c. And according to the parts, they do seal interchangeably one to another.

And amongst these parts, the part sealed by the Feoffor, Grantor, or Lessor, is said to be the Principal or Original; and the rest are called but Accessary, Counterparts or Copies; and yet all of them in Law do make up but one entire Deed. Lit. sect. 371, 372.

These Deeds also are sometimes in the First person, as, Know ye that I A. B. &c. And albeit it be an Indenture so made, yet it is good enough. And sometimes they are made in the Third person; as, This Indenture witnesseth that A. B. hath granted, &c. The Deed-Poll is usually made in the First person; but if it be made in the Third person, it is good enough. Bro. Oblig. 51. Co. super Lit. 35, 36. West. Symb. lib. 1. par. 1. sect. 46.

There are divers other distinctions of Deeds: For some are publike that do concern Countries, some of the Prince; and some are private between particular persons, and those private persons or Subjects: And these only are intended here. And of these some are absolute, and some conditional; some are inrolled, and some not inrolled; some concern the Realty, and some the Personalty; and some are mixt. And some of these also contain matter of Grant or Gift; amongst which Feoffments, Gifts, Bargains and Sale, Grants and Leases are the chief. And some of them contain matter of Discharge; as Releases, Acquittances, and Disencumbrances, and such like: And some of them contain other matter, as Confirmations, and such like. Or as others distinguish; some of them are constitutive and making, and some are remissory or liberatory.

See. 1.

And

And the first sort are some of them creating, (i.) such whereby any Estate, Property or Obligation not having essence before, is newly raised and created; as the first Grant of a Rent, Common, Way, &c. Estate tail, for life, years, &c. And some of them are conveying, (i.) such by which Estates, Properties, and the like, being already created, are conveyed to others; as Feoffments, Bargains and Sales, Grants over, or Assignments, Surrenders, and the like. Those that are of the last sort, are such as do describe and testify some precedent Contract for a duty or fact to be paid, performed or done, released or discharged: Of which sort are all Acquittances, Releases, and other such like matters of Discharge.

Note.

But here by the way two things are to be observed.

1. That there may be, and are divers other kind of Deeds besides those which are named before: For every Agreement put in writing sealed and delivered, becometh a Deed; and Attornments, Exchanges, Surrenders, Partitions, Authorities, Commissions, Licences, Revocations, and the like, are usually made given, done and granted by Deed: And there are divers other Instruments concerning Merchants, and other affairs. If therefore any of these be done by Deed, such a Deed is for the most part subject to the Rules of Deeds herein laid down. See 778.

Sym. 1 part.

2. Albeit that Feoffments, Gifts, Bargains, Leases, Attornments, Exchanges, Surrenders, and such like things, may in divers cases be as well made and done without, as with a Deed: Yet if a man will make his Claim to any thing given or granted by such Feoffment, Gift, &c. by Deed, the Deed must be such a Deed as is a good and perfect Deed by the Rules herein after laid down.

3. The parts of a Deed.

In every Deed or Writing there are two parts considerable. 1. The external or material part, i. the parchment or paper, wax and writing. 2. The internal or intellectual part, i. the sense, force, virtue and operation of the words and matter therein contained. And in the writing, context or matter contained in divers Deeds, as Feoffments, Grants, Leases, and the like, there are certain formal or orderly parts which make up the whole; of which the Law doth take special notice, Co. sup. Lis. 6. 229. 2. 3. As,

1. The Premises; the office whereof is rightly to set down the name of the Feoffor, Grantor, Lessor, &c. Feoffee, Grantee, Lessee, &c. and to comprehend the certainty of the thing granted or leased. And herein in some Deeds there is also a Recital of some things; and in some Deeds an Exception of some part of the thing granted before by the Deed.

2. The Habendum; the office whereof is to name again the Feoffee, Lessee, &c. and to set forth what Estate he shall have, and for what time he shall hold the thing given or granted.

3. There is set down and expressed upon what terms and conditions the Estate of the thing granted shall be held. And therefore there is sometimes contained therein a Tenendum, to set forth by what Tenure the Grantee shall hold the Land granted.

2. A Reservation or Reddendum, to set forth by what Rent he shall hold the Land.

3. A Condition. 4. A Warranty. 5. Covenants. 6. The Conclusion after this manner, In cuius rei testimonium, &c. Wherein is set forth the Date of the Deed, containing the day, month and year, and the stile of the King, or year of our Lord. And all these are sometimes contained under the Premises, and the Habendum.

4. The nature of a Deed indented, and a Deed-poll; with the difference that is between them.

All the parts of a Deed indented, in Judgment of Law do make up but one Deed; and every part is of as great force as all the parts together; and they are esteemed the mutual Deeds of either party, and either party may be bound by either part of the same, Plow. 134. 38 H. 6. 24, 25. Lis. fol. 370. 9 H. 6. 35. 35 H. 6. 34.

And the words of the Indenture are the words of either party. And albeit they be spoken as the words of the one party only, yet they are not his words alone, but may be applied to the other party, if they do more properly belong to him: For, every word that is doubtful, shall be applied and expounded to be spoken by him to whom they will best agree according to the intent of the parties; and they shall not be taken more more strongly against one, or beneficially for the other, as the words of a Deed-Poll shall.

If therefore A. by Indenture enfeoff B. upon Condition, and then doth enter for the Condition broken; in this case it hath been held, that A. in his pleading may shew forth the Deed that he himself sealed, and that this is sufficient. 11 H. 7. 22. per Brian. And therefore also it is thought, that an Indenture made in the First person, is as good in Law as an Indenture made in the Third person, when both parties have to this put to their Seals. For if in an Indenture made in the Third person, or in the First person, mention be made that the Grantor only hath put to his Seal, and not the Grantee; then is the Indenture only the Deed of the Grantor: But when mention is made that the Grantee also hath put his Seal to the Indenture, it shall be said to be the Deed of them both. Lis. feli. 373.

And although both parts of the Indenture are but as one part; yet the Deed of the Grantor is as the Principal, and the other is but a Counterpart. And therefore if the Lessor only seal, and not the Lessee, yet it is as good as if both had sealed: And if there be any difference between the Parts, the Counterparts shall be made to agree with the Principal, and it shall be deemed the misprision of the Clerk. Finch's Law, 109.

This Deed is the strongest kind of Deed of the two; for this worketh an Estoppel, Estoppel. i. doth bar and conclude either party to say or except any thing against any thing contained in it. For if a Lease be by Indenture, both parties are concluded to say, that the Lessor had nothing in the Land at the time of the Lease made: So that if the Lessor hap to have the Land after by purchase or descent, the Lessee may enter upon him by way of conclusion; and the Lessee by Estoppel shall be forced to pay his Rent. But it is otherwise of a Deed-Poll; for this is commonly but of one Part, which is sealed by the Feoffor, Lessor, &c. only. And this shall be expounded to be the sole Deed of the Feoffor, Lessor, &c. and the words therein contained shall be said to be his words, and shall bind him only, and be expounded altogether in advantage of the Feoffee, Lessee, &c. and against the Feoffor, Lessor, &c. and this doth not work any Estoppel against either party, Plow. 434. 431. But if a Deed be indented or poll, and there be therein reciprocal Covenants between them from one to another; albeit there be but one Part, yet if each of them seal it and deliver it the one to the other, this is good for both parties; and each of them that can get the Deed into his hand to shew or plead, may take advantage thereof against the other. And in this case the Deed is usually kept by one indifferent between them both, Trin. 38 Eliz. Co. B. per Curiam. Co. super Lis. 143.

Note here first of all, that some Deeds are void from the beginning, and do never take effect; and amongst these some are absolutely void, and void against all persons, and some are void only to some purposes and against some persons. Some also that are not void from the beginning, are notwithstanding voidable; and that sometimes by the party himself that made them, or any others; and sometimes by others, and not by himself. And some Deeds are good in their first creation, and well made at the first, but become void by some matter ex post facto. And this may be either by an Extrajudicial act, as Rasure, or the like; or by a Judicial act, i. when by the sentence of a Court a Deed is damned, and made void, which is called a Vacate of the Deed.

To the making of every good Deed containing any Agreement, these things are requisite.

1. Writing; i. That it be written in parchment or paper, and that the Agreement be legally and formally set down, and be sufficient in Law for the composition and frame of the words. And this is called the Legal part, the Judgment whereof belongeth to the Judges of the Law.

2. That there be a person able to contract, and to be contracted with; and a thing to be contracted for; and that all these be set down by sufficient names.

3. Reading; i. That if it be an illiterate man that is to seal the Deed, and he desire to hear it read, that it be truly read, or the Contents thereof truly declared to him.

4. Sealing,

Stat. 1.
5. When and where a Deed shall be said to be good and sufficient; and when and where not, but void or voidable ab initio.
A Vacate of a Deed.

Things requisite to make a Deed good.

4. Sealing, i. That the Deed so written be sealed by the party, or some other by his appointment, for a further testimony of his consent thereunto. See infra.

5. Delivery, i. That the Deed so written and sealed be delivered by the party, or some other by his appointment, as his Deed, Perk. sect. 137, &c. And these last things being matters of fact, are to be tried by Jurors. And then a Deed doth begin to take effect, when it is first delivered. And therefore if a Bond be made by 7. S. and dated while he is an Infant, but delivered when he becomes of full age, it is good, Brownl. 1 par. 30, 31.

6. That the ground, foundation, end and purpose of making the Deed, be good and not against the Law. Otherwise in most of these cases the Deed is void ab initio. Also in some cases to perfect the Contract, and make the Conveyance of the thing intended to be passed thereby good, some other ceremonies or complements are requisite, as Inrollment, Livery of Seisin, Attornment; otherwise the Deed in part at least becometh fruitless and vain. For a Deed may be void, either for that the Writing is not in parchment or paper; or being so, is not legally and formally drawn; or being so, there doth want a person able to give or make, or capable to have or take, or a thing to be contracted for: Or if so, for that it is not duly sealed and delivered; or if so, for that it is not truly read at the time of the sealing and delivery; or if so, for that it is made void by some special Law, as being made upon an Usurious contract, by Durels, or the like. Or it may at least in part lose his force afterwards by neglect of Inrollment, Livery of Seisin, or Attornment, in cases where these things are requisite.

1. In respect of the writing of it.

Every Deed well made must be written, i. The Agreement must be all written before the sealing and delivery of it: For if a man seal and deliver an empty piece of paper and parchment, albeit he do, therewithall give commandment that an Obligation or other matter shall be written in it, and this be done accordingly, yet this is no good Deed, Perk. sect. 118, Co. super. Lit. 171.

2. This Writing must be in paper or parchment: For if an Agreement be written on a piece of Wood, Linnen, the Bark of a tree, a Stone, or the like, and this be sealed and delivered; this is no good Deed, Co. super. Lit. 229. F.N.B. 112. Lit. 27 H. 6. 9. But it may be written in any language, or in any hand. And therefore it is held, that a Deed written in French or Latine, and in Text, Court, or Roman hand, is as good as a Deed written in English, and in a Secretary hand, Co. 2. 3. And albeit the writing be besides the lines, or the lines be written crooked, yet this will not hurt the Deed, Perk. sect. 123. And if there be any alteration, rasure, or interlining made in any part of the Deed before the delivery of it, this will not hurt the Deed, Perk. sect. 151. Co. super. Lit. 229. But in such cases it is policie to make a Memorandum of it upon the back of the Deed, and to give the Witnesses notice of it; for otherwise if it be in any place material, as in the name of the Grantor, Grantee, in the limiting of the Estate, or the like, and especially if it be in a Deed-poll, the Deed is greatly suspicious.

3. The matter written must be legal and orderly for manner and matter, i. There must be words sufficient to set forth the Agreement, and bind the parties; for a Deed may be void and lose its virtue in all or part, for repugnance, incertainty, and divers other matters. (whereof see in exposition of Deeds infra.) Co. super. Lit. 229. But it is not material whether the Deed be in the first, or in the third person, so as the words be aply applied, Fitz. Feud. & Feoffments, 3. Dyer 6. For if a Deed-poll be in the third person, or an Obligation be in the third person, these are good Deeds, notwithstanding the Statute of 38 E. 3. cap. 4. which is meant only of Obligations made beyond the Seas. So if the words of a Deed indented run in the first person, it is as good as if it were in the third person. Neither is it necessary that the English or Latine whereby it is made, be true or congruous; for false and incongruous Latine or English seldom or never hurteth a Deed: For the Rules are, Falsa orthographia non vitiat chartam. Falsa grammatica non vitiat concessionem. Neither is it necessary that every Deed have all the parts of a Deed before set down, as Premises, Habendum, &c. For a Deed may be good without Habendum, Warranty, Reservation, or Covenant. And a Deed is good, albeit these words in the close thereof, thereof, In witness &c. be omitted; and albeit there be no mention made in the same that the Deed was sealed and delivered, so as in truth it be duly sealed and delivered, and it can be proved. Also a Deed is good, albeit it mention no time or place of date or making, or have a false date: 1. be dated at one time, and delivered at another; and albeit it have an impossible date, as the 30. of February, or the like: For antiently until the time of E. 2. and E. 3. the Deeds had no date, because the Law was then held to be, That if a Deed were dated before the time of memory, it was not pleadable, except it were of Record; but it might have been given in evidence. But he that doth plead such a Deed without any date, or with such an impossible date, must set forth the time when it was delivered. Co. 2. 5. Dyer 19. Keln. 70. Co. 2. 5. 5. 117. Dyer 28. Perk. sect. 120. Co. super Lit. 6.

The second thing required in every well made Deed is, That the person making it be able to give, grant, make, or do the thing contained in it: That the person to whom it is made, be capable of the thing to be given, granted, made or done thereby. For if it be made by, or to any such persons as are disabled, as Infants, Aliens, Women covert, Persons attainted of Treason or Felony, Ideots, and such like, it will be void in all or part. But any person natural, male or female; or politique, as sole Corporations, or Corporations aggregate of many, Ecclesiastical or Temporal, not disabled by Law, may give or take by Deed. Also there must be some matter whereabout the Contract may be conversant: It is therefore said, that in every Grant there must be Grantor, Grantee, and a Thing to be granted; and in every Obligation an Obligor, Obligee, and Thing to which the Obligor is bound. And so of Feoffments and other Deeds. Brownl. 1 par. 120. Co. 11. 73. Plow. 555. Perk. sect. 1. 119. Feoffments infra Numb. 12. See the Titles.

A Lease was made, and the Lessee was not made or named in the Premises of the Deed, but in the Habendum only; yet it was judged to be good by the two Chief Justices, Car. Rep. f. 85. There must be a convenient Certainty in all these things, the Persons and Things; otherwise the Deed will be void. See Grant.

The third thing required in every well made Deed, is, That if the party that is to seal it be a blind or an illiterate man, and desire to hear it read, that it be so: For if such a man be to seal a Deed, and he desire to hear it, or to hear the contents of it read or declared to him first, and it be not done, and he afterwards seal and deliver it, this is no good Deed. So if upon or without any such request made by him that is to seal and deliver it, the party himself to whom it is made, or a stranger shall read the Deed, or declare the contents thereof falsely and otherwise then in truth it is, the Deed will be void, at least for so much as is so misread or misdeclared. But if the party himself that is to seal and deliver it, before the sealing and delivery thereof cause another that is a stranger covinously to read it, or to declare the contents thereof falsely to him, and otherwise then it is, of purpose to make the Deed void; this will not hurt the Deed. So if the party that is to seal the Deed can read himself, and doth not, or being an illiterate or a blind man doth not require to hear the Deed read, or the contents thereof declared; in these cases albeit the Deed be contrary to his mind, yet it is good and unavoidable. Co. 2. 9. 3. 11. 27. 14. H. 8. 26.

The fourth thing required in every well made Deed is, That it be sealed. But this sealing of Deeds in times past was not used. For the Saxons used only to subscribe their Names, and to add the sign of the Cross, and to set down a great number of Witnesses. And afterwards the Normans brought in with them the Sealing of Deeds but by degrees: For first the Kings and a few of the Nobility used it, and to seal with their Seals of Arms; afterwards all the Nobility used it, and then the Gentlemen; and about the time of E. 3. all men began to use Sealing of Deeds, which hath been continued ever since, so that now it is of necessity; inasmuch that if a Deed be never so well written before, and delivered afterwards, yet if it be not sealed between the writing and delivery, it is not a good Deed. But if a stranger seal it by the allowance or commandment precedent, or agreement subsequent of him that is to seal it before the delivery of it, it is as well as if the party to the Deed did seal it himself. Terms of the Law. Fair. Co. super Lit. 225. Co. 2. 4. 5. Perk. sect. 129. Perk. sect. 130. 131. 134.

3. In respect of the reading of it.

4. In respect of the sealing of it.

And therefore if another man seale a deed of mine, and I take it up after it is sealed and deliver it as my deed; this is said to be a good agreement to, and allowance of the sealing, and so a good deed. And if the party seale the deed with any Seale besides his own, or with a stick or any such like thing which doth make a print, it is good. And although it be a Corporation that doth make the deed, yet they may seale with any other seale besides their common Seale and the deed never the worse. And if there be 20. to seale one deed, and they seale all upon one piece of wax and with one Seale, yet if they make distinct and severall prints; this is a very sufficient sealing & the deed is good enough. Perk. Sect. 136. 137. 138. Perk. Sect. 134

2. In respect of the delivery of it. And what shall be said a good delivery or not.
3. In respect of the person that doth make it:

The fifth thing required in every well made deed is: That there be a delivery of it. And for this it must be known, that delivery is either actual, & by doing something and saying nothing, or else Verball, & by saying something and doing nothing, or it may be by both. And either of these may make a good delivery and a perfect deed. But by one or both of these it must be made, for otherwise albeit it be never so well sealed and written, yet is the deed of no force. And though the party to whom it is made take it to himself, or hap to get it into his hands, yet will it do him no good nor him that made it any hurt untill it be delivered. And a deed may be delivered by the party himselfe that doth make it, or by any other by his appointment or authority precedent or assent or agreement subsequent, for omnis ratihabitis mandato aequiparatur. Every Ratification is equivalent to a command, And when it is delivered by another that hath a good authority and doth pursue it, it is as good a deed as if it were delivered by the party himselfe: but if he do not pursue his authority when it is otherwise. And therefore if a deed or the contents thereof be read or declared to a man that is to seale him; and he (being illiterate) doth deliver him to a stranger, and bid him examine him, and if it be so as it was read to him, then to deliver him as his deed, otherwise to redeliver him to him againe that made it; in this case if the deed be in truth, otherwise then it was read; and yet notwithstanding he to whom it was delivered doth deliver him to him, to whom it is made; this delivery shall not avail, neither is the deed by this delivery become a good deed. Co. 2. 4. 5. Perk. Sect. 137. 9 H. 6. 37. Perk. Sect. 137. 9 H. 6. 37. Co. 11. 28. 3. 35. 47 E. 3. 3.

4. In respect of him to whom it is made.

And so also a deed may be delivered to the party himself to whom it is made or to any other by sufficient authority from him: or it may be delivered to any stranger for and in the behalfe, and to the use of him to whom it is made without authority. But if it be delivered to a stranger without any such declaration, intention or intimation unlesse it be in case where it is delivered as an Escrow, it seems this is not a sufficient delivery: And yet if an Obligation be made to the use of a third person expressed by the deed, and the obligor deliver it to him to whose use it is made, this is said to be a good delivery. And albeit it be delivered before or after the day of the date of it, yet it is good enough: but if it be delivered before it be sealed it is nothing worth. And where it is delivered before the date, yet in the pleading of it it must not be so set forth. Dyer. 167. Perk. Sect. 137. 8 H. 26. Co. super Lit. 36. 3. 26. 5. 119. 10. H. 16. 25. 13 H. 4. 8. Dyer. 192. Co. 2. 4. Plow. 492.

3. In respect of the time.
4. In respect of the manner and order of delivery.

Sect. 4.

If I have sealed my deed, and after I deliver it to him to whom it is made, or to some other by his appointment and say nothing, this is a good delivery. So if I take the deed in my hand and use these or the like words; Here take him, or this will serve, or I deliver this as my deed, or I deliver him you; these are deliveries. So if I make a deed of land to another, and being upon the land I deliver the deed to him in the name of Seisin of the land; this is a good delivery. So if the deed be sealed and lying in a window, or on a Table, and I use these or the like words, there he is, take it as my deed; this is a good delivery and doth perfect the deed, for as a deed may be delivered by words without deeds, so may it also be delivered by deeds without words. But if a man seale and acknowledge before a Major or other Officer appointed for that purpose a writing provided for a Statute or a recognisance this acknowledgment before such an Officer shall not amount to a delivery of the deed so as to make it a good obligation if it happen not to be a good Statute or Recognisance. Co. 9. 137. Dyer. 192. 167. Co. super Lit. 36. 49. 35. Ass. pl. 6. Adjudged Trin. 37. Eli B. R.

The

The delivery of a deed as an Escrow is said to be where one doth make and seale a deed and deliver it unto a stranger untill certaine conditions be performed, and then to be delivered to him to whom the deed is made to take effect as his deed. As an Escrow Deed.

And so a man may deliver a deed, and such a delivery is good. But in this case two cautions must be heeded. 1. That the form of words used in the delivery of a deed in this manner be apt and proper. 2. That the deed be delivered to one that is a stranger to it, and not to the party himselfe to whom it is made. The words therefore that are used in the delivery must be after this manner. I deliver this to you as an Escrow to deliver to the party as my deed; upon condition that he doe deliver you 20l. for me, or upon condition that he deliver up the old bond he hath of mine for the same money, or as the case is. Or else it must be thus. I deliver this as an Escrow to you to keep untill such a day &c. upon condition that if before this day he to whom the Escrow is made shall pay to me 10l. or give to me a horse, or infeeoffe me of the Manor of Dale, (or perform any other condition) that then you shall deliver this Escrow to him as my deed. 19. H.8. Kelm. 88. 14 H.8. 22. 14 H.6. 42. Perk. Sell. 141. 140. 142. 138. 143. 144. Fitz. Feoffments & Feit. 4. 13. 15. Co 9. 137. super Lit. 48. 36.

For if when I shall deliver the deed to the stranger, I shall use these or the like words. I deliver this to you as my deed; and that you shall deliver it to the party upon certain conditions: Or, I deliver this to you as my deed to deliver to him to whom it is made when he comes to London, in these cases the deed doth take effect presently and the party is not bound to perform any of the conditions. So it must be delivered to a stranger, for if I seale my deed and deliver it to the party himselfe to whom it is made as an Escrow upon certaine conditions &c. in this case let the form of words be what it will, the delivery is absolute, and the deed shall take effect as his deed presently, and the party is not bound to perform the conditions; for, Intraditionibus Chartarum non quod dictum sed quod factum est inspicitur. (i) the Law looks upon what is done. But in the first cases before where the deed is delivered to a stranger, and apt words are used in the delivery thereof, it is of no more force until the conditions be performed then if I had made it and layd it by me and not delivered it at all, and therefore in that case albeit the party get it into his hands before the conditions be performed, yet he can make no use of it at all, neither will it do him any good.

But when the conditions are performed, and the deed is delivered over, then the deed shall take as much effect as if it were delivered immediatly to the party to whom it is made, and no act of God or man can hinder or prevent this effect then if the party that doth make it be not at the time of making thereof disabled to make it.

He therefore that is trusted with the keeping and delivery of such a writing ought not to deliver it before the conditions be performed, and when the conditions be performed he ought not to keep it but to deliver it to the party. For it may be made a question whether the deed be perfect before he hath delivered it over to the party according to the authority given him. Howbeit it seems the delivery is good, for it is said in this case that if either of the parties to the deed dye before the conditions be performed, and the conditions be after performed, that the deed is good, for there was traditio inchoata, delivery begun in the life time of the parties, & postea consummata existens, finished by the performance of the conditions, it taketh his effect by the first delivery without any new or second delivery, and the second delivery is but the execution & consummation of the first delivery. And therefore if an Infant, or woman covert deliver a deed as an Escrow to a stranger, and before the conditions are performed the Infant is become of full age, or the woman is become sole, yet the deed in these cases is not become good. And yet if a disseisee make a deed purporting a lease for years, and deliver it to a stranger out of the land as an Escrow, and bid him enter into the land; and deliver it as his deed, and he do so, this is a good deed, and a good lease, so that to some purposes it hath relation to the time of the first delivery, and to some purposes not. Brownl. Rep. 1. part. 53. See Alts, Fitz. Feit. & Feoffment 13. Idem. Co. 3. 35. Co. 5. 84. 3. 36. Co. 3. 35, 36.

Relation.

Double Delivery.

In case where a deed is merely void and doth take no effect by his first delivery, as where a woman covert doth seale and deliver a deed, or the like, and she after being sole after her husbands death doth deliver the deed againe, in this case the deed is become good. So where a deed originally good doth become void by matter ex post facto, as by breaking the Seale or the like, if the party to the deed seale and deliver it again; by this means the deed is become good again. But regularly there may not be two deliveries of a deed, for where the first delivery doth take any effect at all, the second delivery is void. Brownl. 1. part. 104. Perk. Sess. 154. 11 H. 6. 17.

And therefore it is held that if an Infant or a man by dresse of imprisonment do make seale and deliver a deed &c. (in which cases the deed is not void but voidable) and after the Infant being of full age, or the man imprisoned being at large, doth deliver this deed again the second time; this second delivery is void: Debile fundamentum fallit opus. See Brownl. Rep. 30. But if an Infant within age doe write and seale and deliver when he is of full age this is good. So if a man be disseised and make a lease for years in writing and deliver the deed, and after deliver it upon the ground, this second delivery is void, for the first delivery made it his deed; but if he had delivered it as an Escrow to be delivered as his deed upon the ground, this had been a good second delivery. And by all this that hath been said it appeareth, that the putting to or subscribing of the parties name or mark to the deed he is to seale is not essentiall, for a deed may be good albeit the party that doth seale it doth never set his name or his mark to it, so as it be duly sealed and delivered. But it is the best and surest way notwithstanding to have the name or mark of the party subscribed, for by this means the deed may be the better proved when the witnesses are dead. Perk. Sess. 154. Co. 5. 119. Co. super Litt. 48. New Terms of the Law in Fair. 9. Jac. Scors. Case.

Subscribing of the parties name or mark not necessarie.

Note.

Note here, that albeit a writing or Escrow that is not sealed and delivered in manner as aforesaid may not be used nor pleaded as a deed; yet it may serve and be used as an evidence and prooffe of the agreement contained therein. And whatsoever may be done by word without any writing may much more and better be done by writing unsealed or sealed, though it be not delivered as aforesaid.

Sess. 5.
6. In respect of the ground & end of it.

And the last thing required in every well-made deed is, that it have a good foundation, and be to a good end, for albeit a deed have all the qualities of a good deed before required, viz. that it be well made, read, sealed, and delivered, yet it may be void or at least voidable for others causes, as when it is either unjustly gotten and obtained, or corruptly in pursuit and execution of some dishonest agreement, or to a dishonest end or purpose made. A deed therefore, whether it be a feoffment, gift, grant, lease, release, confirmation or obligation that is made or obtained by manasse, or dresse, that is forced by feare of beating or Imprisonment, or made in pursuit of an usurious contract or for that it was made fraudulently, or made against the statute 23 H. 6. it may be voyd or voidable at least. See the Titles and obligation. Co. 2. 9. Perk. Sess. 16. Dyer. 143. 45 E. 3. 6.

6. where a deed good in his creation may become void by matter ex post facto. And what will make such a deed void or not.
1. By Rasure.

If a deed that is well and sufficiently made in his Creation shall be afterwards altered by rasure, interlining, addition, drawing a line through the words (though they be still legible) or by writing new letters upon the old in any materiall place or part of it, as if it be in a deed of grant, in the name of the grantor, grantee, or in the thing granted or in the limitation of the estate, or if it be in an Obligation, when the word [Heires] shall be inserted, or the summe increased, or in the date of either, or the like; be the same either by the party himself that hath the property of the deed or any other whomsoever, except it be by him that is bound by the deed; and be the same with or without the consent of him to whom it is made or doth belong; in this case and by either of these meanes the deed hath lost his force and is become void. Co. 11. 27. 5. 11. 9. Dyer. 59. 261. Perk. Sess. 123. 135. Kelsw. 162. Fitz. Release. 27. 14 H. 8. 25. Bro. Fair. 9.

And if the alteration be made by the party himself that oweth the deed, albeit it be in a place not materiall, and that it tend to the advantage of the other party and his owne disadvantage, yet the deed is hereby become void.

But

But if the alteration be made by the party himself that is bound by the Deed in any materiall or immateriall part thereof, or a stranger without the privity or consent of the owner of the Deed shall make any such alteration in any part of a Deed not materiall; (as if it be a Deed of a grant containing a lease for years, and there be inserted between [To have and to hold] and [for 30 years] these words [from henceforth :] Or if it be an obligation and there be inserted between [Obligatus] and [per presentes] these words [Executores meos] in both which cases those words are needless and without any fruit at all ; hereby the Deed is not hurt, but it remaineth good notwithstanding. But if the alteration be before the delivery of the Deed, be it whatsoever or by whomsoever, it will not hurt the Deed. And herein it must be observed that then a rasure, &c. is most dangerous; and the Deed thereby most suspicious when it is in a Deed Poll and there is but one part of the Deed ; and when the rasure or other alteration is in any materiall part of the Deed ; and when the alteration makes to the advantage of him that doth owe the Deed, and to the disadvantage of the other that made it; and when there doth appeare some other thing to be written before, and when there is no other part of the Deed, recitall, defence, or other matter to which this may be compared, and that may make it appeare to be before the delivery ; and when there be other parts of the Deed or other matters whereunto this being compared doth not agree in that part wherein the alteration is, and when the Deed hath been in the smoke, or any such like means hath been used to cover the alteration. And in these cases the matter was anciently used to be tried by the Judges upon the view of the Deed; but it is now used to be tried by Jurors, whether the rasure, or other alteration were before the delivery of the Deed or not. Perk. siff. 123. 124. Bro. Fait 6. Perk. 129. 127. 128. Co. super Litt. 225.

And if after the sealing, delivery and perfection of a Deed, the seale thereof happen to be broken off, or to be utterly defaced, so that no signe or print thereof can be seen, or it appeareth to have been broken off and it is glued, or the wax new heat and set on again; or the labell of the Deed hath been broken off from the Deed and is sewed on again; or the Deed is new sealed with oser wax, be the same by whatsoever means, or whomsoever, unless it be by him and his means that is bound by the deed; in these cases and by either of these means the deed is become void. If A. B. and C. be bound joyntlie and severally in a Bond, and the Seales of A. and B. are eaten off with Mice and Rats, it seems by this the Deed is become void as to all 3 of them. March 127. Pl. 204. But if any piece of the seale remain fixed to the Deed, and there be any print left upon that peece, the Deed doth continue good. And if after the seale of a Deed be broken off the party that sealed it doe seale and deliver it de novo; by this means it seems the Deed is become good again. Dier. 59. Co. 11. 28. 5, 23. Dier. 112. Perk. siff. 135. 136. Bro. Oblig. 83.

And if a Deed be delivered up to the party that is bound by it to be cancelled and it be so: or if he that hath the Deed doth by agreement between him and the other cancell the Deed; by either of these means the Deed is become void. But if an Obligee deliver up an Obligation to be cancelled, and the obligor doe not afterwards cancell him, but the obligee happen to get him again into his hands, and sue the obligor upon him, the obligor hath not any plea to avoid him, for the Deed remains still in force. Trin. 38 El. Co. B. Dier 112.

And if an Obligation be delivered as an Escrow to a stranger to be delivered to the obligee on certain conditions, or to a stranger to the use of the Obligee, and when this is after tendered to the Obligee he doth refuse it and disagree to it; or if an Obligation be made to a feme covert, and her husband disagree to it, in all these cases the Deed is become void. And like Law is of other Deeds in divers such like cases, but the party bound by the Deed may not in these cases plead non est factum to the Deed. And in these cases when the party hath once by his agreement made the Deed good, he cannot afterwards by his disagreement make it void: and when once by refusal and disagreement he hath made the Deed void, he cannot by agreement on acceptance afterwards make it good. Co. 3. 26. 5. 119. Dier 167.

2. By breaking or defacing of the Seale.

3 By redelivery or cancelling of it.

4 By disagreement.

5. By Judgment of a Court.
Vacat of a Deed.

7. When and where a Deed may be good in part and void in part. Or good against one person and void against another. Or not.

A Deed also good in his Original Creation may be afterwards damned or avoided by sentence and order of a Court, and this is usually done in the Starr-Chamber and in the Chancery, and it is when it appeareth that the Deed was obtained by some fraud, force, circumvention or such like practise, or when it doth appear to be forged, or the like, or otherwise; see Brownlow Rep. 1 part. 45. 51. Crim. Jur. 29. 40. Bre. Fait. 38.

For the answer of this question these differences must be observed: 1. When a Deed is void ab initio, and when it doth become void by matter ex post facto. 2. When the Deed which is void in part from the beginning is entire, and when it doth consist of severall clauses: and when it doth consist of severall cluses when the severall clauses are absolute and distinct, and when they are severall and yet the one hath dependency upon the other. For if any of the Covenants of an Indenture, or the conditons of an Obligation be against Law, and the rest of the Covenants or conditions be good and Lawfull; in this case those that are against Law and the Deed as to that part are void ab initio, and the rest and the Deed as for that part are good ab initio. So if three distinct Obligations are written upon a peece of parchments, and the one of them only, read to the Obligor, and he being an illiterate man seale and deliver the Deed, in this case this is a good Deed for that which was read; and void for the rest ab initio. But if an Obligation be for 20 l. and it be read to the Obligor an Obligation of 20 s. this is void for the whole ab initio. Co. 11. 27. 14 H. 8. 27. 28. 29.

If a Deed be read as containing the grant or gift of an estate taile, and a Letter of Attorney to give Livery of Seisin, and in that sence the party doth seale it, and in truth it is a Feoffment and conveyance of an estate in Fee-simple; in this case albeit the Letter of Attorney were truly read, yet because it hath dependence on the estate, it is void for all. Co. 11. 27. Kew. 703 E. 30. 31.

If a man be indebted to me 20 l. on a Contract, and 100 l. on an Obligation, and he pay me this 20 l. and I am to make a release for it, and the intendment of the release is no more, and it is read to me being an illiterate man, but in truth it is a general release, in this case it seems it is good for so much as it is intended, and was declared void for the rest. Co. 11. 28. Fitz. Feoffments & Faits. 57. 47 E. 3. 3.

If the condition of an obligation be altered by rasure, &c. the Obligation also is hereby become void, because the condition and obligation are one Deed, but if the rasure, &c. be in the defeasance of an Obligation, this will not make the Obligation void. Dier. 27.

If a Deed containe divers distinct and absolute Covenants, and any of these Covenants be altered by Addition, Interlineation, Rasure or the like, by this means the whole Deed and not that part only is become void. 14 H. 8. 25. 26. Co. 11. 28.

If there be divers Grantors, Obligors, &c. named in a Deed and one of them only doe seale the Deed, this is a good Deed as against him that doth seale and void as to all the rest that doe not seale. And if divers enter into Covenants by a Deed severally, and the seale of one of them is broken from the Deed; in this case the Deed is good still as to all the rest, but void as to him. But if an Obligation, or the Covenants of a Deed be joynt and not severall, or joint and severall, and the seale of one of the Obligors or Covenantors is broken, or the Obligation or Covenants be altered by rasure or the like, hereby the whole Deed is become void. Co. 5. 23. 11. 28. 14 H. 7. 5.

And it is a Rule that if an Obligee by his Act or his own Lachesse discharge one of the Obligors, where they are ioyntlie and severally bound, this doth discharge them all. March 126. pl. 206.

If I be bound in an Obligation to a Monk and I. S. this Deed is void as to the Monk, but good as to I. S. So if a Monk and I be bound to another; this is good as against me, but void as against the Monk. And so it is in case of a Grant. 14 H. 8. 29. Perk. f. 2.

By a power of revocation or a condition a Deed may be made void in part and continue in his force for another part. And therefore it seems in the usuall case where a Deed is made upon condition that if such a thing be, or be not done, that the the Deed shall be void, or that these presents shall be void; that in these cases the whole Deed and all the Covenants therein contained are void; But if the frame of the condition be, that upon such a thing to be or not to be done, it shall be lawful for the Feoffor, Lessor, &c. to re-enter, or that the demise shall be void, without more words; in these cases the estate only and those Covenants that are incident thereunto, as for quier enjoying and the like, and the Deed as to that part only is void: and for other Covenants that are Collaterall and have no dependence upon the estate that the Deed doth remain in force and is good still, for a man may grant two acres upon condition to re-enter into one of them. If it be intended that the whole Deed shall be void, the best way is to use these words [then these presents and every thing therein contained shall be utterly void.] Co. 1. 173. Dier. 127. See in Leake's Numb. 13.

All Deeds doe take effect from, and therefore have relation to the time not of their date but of their delivery: and this is alwayes presumed to be the time of their date unless the contrary doe appear. And hence it is, That if a Statute be acknowledged the 26. day of May, and the Conusee make a release of all demands dated the 25. day and deliver it the 27 day; that by this release the Statute is discharged.

And if the defeasance of a Statute doe bear date before, and the delivery of it be after the Statute; that the conusor may shew this and take advantage of it in avoidance of the Statute. And that if a writing be dated in the minority of an Infant and be sealed and delivered by him when he is of full age, that this is a good Deed and will bind him: And that if a release be supposed to be made by a husband to barr a duty due to the Wife, and it be dated during the Coverture but in truth it is sealed and delivered by the Husband before the Coverture; that this shall not barr the Wife: the time therefore of delivery of a Deed is materiall in all these and the like cases, and this is alwayes to be tried by a Jury. And hence it is also, That if the next presentation to a Church be granted to two severall persons by severall Deeds of severall dates, and the Deed that beareth the last date be first delivered; in this case he to whom this Deed is made shall have the Presentation, and not the other whose Deed albeit it be dated first yet is delivered last. And hence it is also that if a Lease be made for years, to begin from henceforth, or à confessions presentium, or à die confessionis; that this lease shall be said to begin from the time of the first delivery and not from the time of the date. Co. 2. 4. 5. 5 H. 7. 26. Plow. 491. Dier. 307. 315. Fitz. Feoffments & saiss. 87. 63. 95. Fitz. Feoffments & Faiss. Barro 147. Co. 5. 1.

And where Deeds have a kind of double delivery, as in Case of a delivery as an Escrow, there they shall take effect from, and have relation to the time of the first delivery or not; ut res valeat, for if relation may hurt and for some cause make void the Deed (as in some cases it may) there it shall not relate. But if Relation may helpe it, as in case where a feme sole deliver an Escrow and before the second delivery she is married or dieth, in this case if there were not a relation the Deed would be void, and therefore in this case it shall relate. And yet in Goldsb. 163. Gawdie Fenner and Popham Judges doubted of a Deed delivered by an Infant, and after the condition is performed in the time of his full age. And they affirme that a Deed delivered by a woman that hath a Husband as an Escrow to be delivered as her Deed, when her Husband is Dead and he die, and then it is delivered as her Deed, this is not good, for in both these cases they say the first Act is void. So if one disseise me of two acres of Land in D. and I release to him all my right in my Lands in D. and deliver it to an estranger as an Escrow, &c. untill a time and before that time he disseise me of another acre there; in this case this release shall not by relation extend to this other acre to barr me of that also. But as to collaterall acts there shall be no relation at all in this case. And therefore if the Obligee release before the second delivery the release is void and will not barr the party Obligee of the fruit of his Obligation. Co. 2. 35. 36. 1 H. 8. 2. 27 H. 6. 7. Plow. 244.

It is further to be observed that Deeds for the most part consist of these things. The exposition of Deeds. viz. the Premises, Habendum, Tenendum, Reddendum, or Reservation, Condition, Warranty, & Covenant. And in the Premises there is sometimes a Retitall, & sometimes times an Exception contained. But all these are not essential parts of a Deed; for a Deed may be good, albeit it it have not all these parts, or it be not so formal and orderly drawn and made.

1. Premises,
what.

The Premises of a Deed, is all the forepart, of the Deed before the Habendum. And yet this word is sometimes taken for the thing demised or granted by the Deed. And the office of this part of the Deed is rightly to name the Grantor and Grantee, and to comprehend the certainty of the thing granted, either by express words, or by that which by reference may be reduced to a certainty; and the Exception, or thing to be excepted, if there be any. And in this part of the Deed is the Recital (if there be any in the Deed) for the most part contained. And herein also is sometimes (though improperly) set down the Estate. Co. sup. Lit. 6. 7. 12. 51. 2. 53. Pl. 196.

2. Habendum,
what.

The Habendum of a Deed, is that part of a Deed which doth begin with, To have and to hold: And this doth properly succeed the Premises. And the office hereof is to set down again the name of the Grantee, the Estate that is to be made and limited, or the time that the Grantee shall have in the thing granted or demised, and to what use. And herein also is sometimes, though needlessly, set down again the thing granted. Co. super. Lit. 6. 7. 10. 107.

the Premises or Habendum.

But the Deed that doth usually consist of all these parts, may be good, notwithstanding some of them be omitted, and it be not so formally made. For an Estate may be made by a Deed, without any Habendum at all: As if one give or grant Land to another and his Heirs, without any more words in the Deed: Or if one give or grant Land to another, and limit no Estate, without any Habendum in the Deed, and seal and deliver this Deed, and make Livery accordingly; in both these cases the Deed is good; and in the first case an Estate in Fee-simple is made, and in the last case an Estate for life is made. And if the name of the Grantee be not contained in the Premises, yet if it be in the Habendum, it may be good enough: As if one give or grant Land Habendum to B. and his Heirs, and he is not named in the Premises, yet this is a good Deed to make an Estate in Fee-simple. Butlers Case, 22 Eliz. per two Chief Justices, accord. Car. Rep. 85. And yet if the thing granted be only in the Habendum, and not in the Premises of the Deed, the Deed will not pass it. And therefore if a man grant Black-acre only in the Premises of a Deed, Habendum Black-acre and White-acre; White-acre will not pass by this Deed, Pl. 152. Dyer 96. Perk. 352. But if the thing newly added be implied in the thing granted by the Premises of the Deed, as being an Incident thereunto or otherwise; or it be the same thing, and expressed in other words only; in these cases the Premises and the Habendum may stand together. As if one grant a Manor, Habendum the Manor with the Advowson appendant to the Manor; or if one grant a Reversion of Land by the name of a Reversion in the Premises, Habendum the Land it self; in both these cases the Deed is good, and the Advowson and Reversion will pass. So also if Livery of Seisin be made of the thing newly added, in this case perhaps it may pass by the Livery. And if the thing granted be left out in all, or part in the Habendum, yet the Grant is good. And therefore if one grant Land to A. Habendum to A. his Heirs &c. or if one grant White-acre and Black-acre to A. Habendum Wh-acre, and omit Bl-acre; yet these Deeds are good, and all that is contained in the Premises of the Deed doth pass in both cases. And if a Feoffment be made to one, Habendum to him and his heirs, without the word Assigns; this is a good Feoffment, and the Estate thereby made is assignable: As where a Lease is made to one, his Executors and Administrators, without the word Assigns, this is a good Lease and assignable. So if one grant Land to A. Habendum to him for 100 years, or Habendum to him and his Assigns for 100 years; these are as good Leases as the Lease that is made by these words, Habendum to A. his Executors, Administrators and Assigns for 100 years. So if a Lease of Land be made to A. Habendum the Land to him and his Heirs for 100 years; this is a good Habendum, and the word [Heirs] is void, and it shall go to his Executors, &c. As also where Land is granted to A. Habendum to him and his Successors for 100 years; this is a good Lease, and the word [Successors] void, for it shall go to Executors, &c. And if a Lease be made Habendum for years, and say not how many years; this is a good Habendum, and a Lease for two years. Lit. 1. Co. super. Lit. 46. Co. 6. 35. New Terms of the Law, iii. Assigns.

A Recital is the setting down or report of something done before.

When a man is to take any new estate from the King of a thing, whereof there is any estate in being, there the former estate if it be good and of record must be rehearsed and recited in the deed, or else the second grant will not be good: but in case of a common Person there needs no such recital, neither when a man is to derive an estate out of a former, or assigne over a terme of years, is it needfull there should be any recital of the former estate in being: Co 1. 45. Dier: 77.

If one recite or rehearse an estate made for terme of years, and then after grant over that terme to another, and mistake in the recital; this mistake may make all void. As if a Fieri facias come to a Sheriffe to levy a debt, and he by writing recite that the defendant hath a terme of years, and doth suppose it to begin 1. Massi, 2. Jaci when in truth it doth begin the 20. of August, and then sell the same terme; in this case this sale is void. But if he adde withall these words in the deed [And al the interest that the defendant had in the land] or if he make sale of it for a certain number of years only; this grant may be good notwithstanding the misrecital: Co. 4. 74.

If one recite a former lease to be made such a day to I S and then make a new lease to begin after the end of the former lease, and mistake the date of the old lease; in this case the deed is good notwithstanding this mistake: Dier: 93. 160.

If one grant a reversion, and in reciting the lease in possession mistake the date of it only and recite all the rest truly; this will not hurt the grant: No more then where a man doth recite that the lease came to him by forfeiture; and then doth grant it by fine: for in this case albeit it did not come to him by forfeiture but by surrender, yet this mistake will not hurt. And yet in case of the King such a misrecital may make the grant void. 8 H. 7. 3. Fitz. Grant.

If I grant to I S all the lands in Dale which I purchased from I D or which came unto me by descent from I D, or I give all my goods to I S which I have as executor to I D, and in truth I have no such lands or goods, but I had them by some other meanes or of some other; in these cases and by this mistake the deed is void. But if I grant to I S all my lands in Dale by name, as white acre, which I purchased of I D and in truth I did purchase them of another; in this case this mistake will not hurt the deed. So if I grant 20. load of wood in Dale in the great wood which I had of the grant of my father, and in truth I had not of the grant of my father, but of the grant of another; in this case the grant is good. But of this matter see more in Grant, Numb: 4. part. 5. Dier. 50. 87. 376.

An Exception is a clause of a deed whereby the feoffor, donor, grantor, lessor, &c. doth except somewhat out of that which he had granted before by the deed: And this doth most commonly and properly succede the setting down of the things granted, and is made by one of these words Except, Preter, Salvo, Si non, or such like. And hereby the thing excepted is exempted and doth not passe by the grant, neither is it parcell of the thing granted: as if a manor be granted excepting one acre thereof, hereby in Judgement of Law that acre is severed from the manor: But this may be in any part of the deed and so hath it bin resolved. Hil. 17. Car. Pl. 361. 195:

In every good Exception these things must alwaies concur, 1. This Exception must be by apt words. 2. It must be of part of the thing granted and not of some other thing: 3. It must be of part of the thing only, and not of all, the greater part, or the effect of the thing granted. 4. It must be of such a thing as is severable from the thing which is granted, and not of an inseparable incident: 5. It must be of such a thing as he that doth except may have and doth properly belong to him. 6. It must be of a particular thing out of a generall, and not of a particular thing out of a particular thing or of a part of a certainty. 7. It must be certainly described and set downe. B R Fregunns Case. Perk sett. 62. & c. Plow: 19. Co super List. 47.

As for examples. If a man grant all his lands in Essex saving, besides, or except his lands in Dale, or all his lands in Dale excepting one house, or one acre in certain; or one house excepting one chamber in certain; these and such like Exceptions are good. Plow. 195: Perk sett. 641.

And if one grant a manor excepting one Tenement (parcell of the manor) or excepting the services of I S (who doth hold of the manor) or excepting one Close

3. Recital. Quid
4. Where it is needfull; or not

Sett. 8
5. Where misrecital will hurt a deed; or not.

6. Exception, Quid.

7. what shall be said a good exception; or not.

or excepting one acre, or excepting the advowson appendant, or excepting the woods, or excepting twenty acres of wood or excepting all the groffe trees; these are good exceptions. Brownl. 1 part. 141. Dier. 103. Plow. 104. 361. 67. Co. 8. 63. 11. 47. 5. 11. Perk. Sett. 642. 3 H. 6. 35.

And if one grant a messuage and houses thereunto belonging excepting the bayne or excepting the dove-house; it seemes this is a good exception, for they may passe by the grant of a messuage &c. And if one grant land excepting the Timber trees thereupon, or excepting the trees thereupon; or if a man sell a wood excepting 20 of the best oakes, and shew which in certain; these are good exceptions: So if one have a manor wherein is a wood called the great wood, and he grant his manor excepting all the woods and underwoods that grow in the great wood and all the trees that grow elsewhere, this is a good exception. 14 H. 8. 1. Co. 8. 63. 5. 23. In the case of Haward & Fulcher. Hil. 3. Car. B. R. Co. 11. 64.

And if one grant a messuage and all the lands and tenements thereunto belonging excepting one cottage; this is a good exception: And if one grant a reversion excepting the rent; this is a good exception of the rent and doth keep it from passing by the grant: So if a man have a rent charge out of land and he release his right in the land except the rent; So if the Lord release to his Tenant Salvo domino suo &c. these are good exceptions. And if one grant all his horses except his white horse; this is a good exception of the white horse: Per. Sett. 113. 644. Dier. 571. Plow. 361.

And if a man be seised of a manor, and lease it by deed indented for life excepting & reserving quod bene liceat to the lessor succidere, dare, & vendere omnes grossos arboris in dicto manerio crescentes &c. it seems this is a good exception of the woods: But if the exception be of another thing then the thing granted. As if one grant a manor or land excepting 12 d or excepting the Tithes, or excepting one acre of ground which is no partell of the manor or of the land before granted; or if one grant the land descended to him of the part of his father excepting the land descended to him of the part of his mother; these exceptions are void. Or if the exception be such as it is repugnant to the grant and doth utterly subvert it and take away the fruit of it, as if one grant a manor or land to another excepting the profits thereof; or makes feoffment of a close of meadow or pasture, reserving or excepting the grasse of it; or grant a manor excepting the services; these are void exceptions. 2 H. 6. 45. Perk. Sett. 643. Perk. Sett. 639. Dier. 59. Plow. 361. 57. 370. Dier. 97. 264. Co. super Lit. 47. Plow. 153. 103. 104. 14 H. 8. 1. Doff. & stud. 98. Dier. 59. 263.

So if one grant his house, chambers, cellars, and shops, excepting his shops; it is said this is no good exception. And by the like reason if one grant his meadow and pasture grounds except his meadow grounds, this exception is not good no more then if one grant two manors or two acres excepting one of them. And of this opinion was the Chief Justice in B. R. Hil. 3. Car. in the case of Haward and Fulcher.

And yet if a man make a lease for yeares of a Mill excepting the profits thereof during the life of the lessor; it is said, this hath been adjudged a good exception.

But I doubt of this case, for the exception of the profits of a thing is the exception of the thing it selfe. And a man cannot grant an estate and reserve a part of the estate as make a feoffment in fee and reserve a lease for life, or grant an Advowson and reserve the Presentation for his life. Or if the exception be of an inseparable incident and a thing that cannot be granted by it selfe and from another, as if a manor be granted excepting the Court Baron, or land be granted excepting the common appendant thereunto belonging; these exceptions are void. But exceptions of severable incidents are good. Plow. 524. Dier. 264. Br. grant. 60. 38 H. 6. 38. Co. super Lit. 150. Co. 5. 12. Hil. 9. Jac. B. R. per Curiam.

Or if the exception be of such a thing as the grantor cannot have nor doth belong to him by law; as if a lessee for yeares assigne over all his terme in the land excepting the Timber trees, earth or clay; this exception is not good. This difference hath been agreed.

But if lessee for life make a lease for years, or lessee for 21. years make a lease for 20. years; or tenant by the countess or in dower grant over their estate excepting the Timber trees; these are good exceptions. And if a lessee for life or years open a Cole-mine and then assigne over his estate excepting the mine or the profits thereof; these are void exceptions. Or if the exception be of a particular thing out of a particular thing, as if one grant white acre and black acre excepting white acre or grant 20. acres of land by particular names excepting one acre of them; these exceptions are void.

Or if the exception be set downe incertainly, as if one grant a house excepting one chamber; or grant a manor excepting one acre, but doth not set forth which chamber or which acre it shall be; these exceptions are void. Co. super Litt. 47. Plow. 3. Perk. Sect. 643. 641.

A Tenendum is a clause of the deed whereby the tenure was heretofore created. And this doth most commonly and properly succeed the Habendum, and was made by this word Tenendum per servitium &c. But sithence the Statute of Quia emptores terrarum when the fee simple doth passe the tenure is alwaies of the chiefe Lord and is thus set forth, Tenendum de capitalibus dominis &c. And this clause at this day is for the most part omitted altogether. Co. super Litt. 6 & Co. 9. 130.

A Reservation is a clause of a deed whereby the feoffor, donor, lessor, grantor &c. doth reserve some new thing to himselfe out of that which he granted before. And this doth most commonly and properly succeed the Tenendum, and is made by one or more of these words Reddend^o, reservand^o, solvend^o, faciend^o, inveniend^o, or such like. This doth differ from an exception which is ever of part of the thing granted and of a thing in esse at the time, but this is of a thing newly created or reserved out of a thing demised that was not in esse before; so that this doth alwaies reserve that which was not before or abridge the tenure of that which was before. Co. 10:107. Plow. 132. Co. super Litt. 47. Perk. Sect. 625.

In every good reservation these things must alwaies concur:

1. It must be by apt words. 2. It must be of some other thing issuing or coming out of the thing granted and not a part of the thing it selfe nor of some thing issuing out of another thing. 3. It must be of such a thing whereunto the grantor may have resort to distraine. 4. It must be made to one of the grantors and not to a stranger to the deed. As for examples, If a man grant land yeelding and paying money or some such like thing yearly, this is a good reservation. But if the grantee covenant to pay such a summe of money, or to doe such a thing yearly; this is no good reservation; but a covenant to pay a summe of money in grosse and not as a rent. If a lease be made for years rendering a rent to the lessor or his heirs, in the disjunctive; or rendering a rent to the lessor, without saying [and his heirs &c.] or rendering a rent during the said term; and doth not say to whom; or rendering 10 l. to the lessor and 5 l. to his heirs; all these reservations are good. But if a lease be made rendering rent to the heirs of the lessor; this reservation is void because the rent is not reserved to himselfe first. Plow. 132. Perk. Sect. 626. Co. 8. 71. Plow. 132. Co. 5. 121. 8. 71. super Litt. 214. 213. 99.

If one grant land, yeelding for rent, money, corne, a horse, spurs, a rose, or any such like things; this is a good reservation: but if the reservation be of the grasse, or of the vesture of the land, or of a Common or other profit to be taken out of the land; these reservations are void. If one grant a manor, mesuage, land, meadow, or pasture, or the vesture or herbage of land, meadow or pasture, rendering a rent; this is a good reservation. Co. super Litt. 142. Co. super Litt. 47. Co. 5. 3. Perk. Sect. 626.

But if one grant Tithes, rents, commons, advowsons, offices, a corody, mulcture of a Mill; a Faire, market, priviledge, or liberty, reserving a rent; this reservation is void: And yet such a reservation also in case of the King is good. And in case of a Subject also, if a lease be made by deed in writing of any such thing for a terme of years reserving a rent; this may be good by way of contract to produce an action of debt, though not as a rent to be distrained for: And thus by apt words an apt rent out of manors and such like memorable things, or divers rents may be reserved upon one grant: Co. 5:55. Dier: 308. Co. super Litt. 47:164, 213:

As if one grant the Manors of A. B. and C. rendering for A. 20s. for B. 20s. and for C. 20s. these are good Rents and severall. So if one grant the manors of A. B. and C. rendering 3 l. viz. for A. 20 s. for B. 20 s. and for C. 20 s. this is a good reservation, but in this case the rent is intire. Also one may reserve one Rent one year and another Rent another year; as 10 s. one year, and 20 s. another year, or one may reserve a Rent to be paid every second or third year, and no Rent the other years; or one may reserve one kinde of rent one year, and another kinde of rent another year; and these reservations are good. Co. super Lit. 225. 8 H. 7. 9. Bro. Fine 36. Reservation 4.

And these reservations may be by Fine as well as by Deed, or it may be in case where the Lessor hath a reversion of the land, or upon a partition to make an equality without any deed at all. But if it be upon an exchange to make an equality, it is not good except it be by deed. If two Joint tenants joine in the grant of their land by deed indented, and the rent is reserved to one of them; this is a good reservation and shall goe to him alone. But if it be by word or by deed Poll that the lease is made the rent shall goe to them both. And if a man possessed of a Terme joine his wife with him, and they both assign over this Terme by indenture rendering a rent to them two and the survivor of them, and shee doth not seale the deed; in this case the reservation as to the wife is void. And if the reservation be of the rent to a stranger that is no party to the deed and to him only, this reservation is void. And therefore if the father and his son and heire apparant by indenture lease his land for years to beginne after the fathers death rendering rent to the son, it is void. See Brownl. 1. part. 30; 31. 39. 80. Co. super Lit. 214. 143. 47. Dier. 222. Adjudge Mich 8. Cases in Blands case. Hobarts Rep. 274. Oates & Fish Co. 3.

10. Condition, what.

A Condition is a clause of restraint in a deed or a bridle annexed and joyned to an estate staying and suspending the same and making it incertain whether it shall take effect or no.

11. Warranty, what.

A Warranty is a clause or covenant made in a deed by the one party unto the other, whereby the feoffor, donor or lessor doth for him and his heires grant to warrant and secure land granted to the feoffee, donee or lessee and his heires during the estate.

12. Covenant, what.

A Covenant is a clause of agreement contained in a deed whereby either party is bound to doe, performe or give something to the other. And of all these see at large afterwards.

Self. 10
13. How & to what purpose a deed of grant in grosse shall enure and be construed and taken.

In the Constrution of deeds it must be considered, 1. How a deed in the grosse shall be taken and enure. 2. How it shall be taken and expounded in the severall parts and pieces of it. And for the first these Rules are to be known. 1. If divers joine in a deed and some are able to make such a deed and some are not, this shall be said to be his deed alone that is able, as if divers joine in the grant of a thing by deed & one alone hath all the estate and the rest have nothing in the thing granted; it shall be said to be his grant alone that hath the estate. And so et converso. If a deed be made to one that is incapable and to others that are capable, in this case it shall enure only to him that is capable. 2. A deed that is intended and made to one purpose may enure to another, for if it will not take effect that way it is intended it may take effect another way. And therefore a deed made and intended for a release may amount to a grant of a Reversion, an Attinment, or a Surrender, or et converso. Co. super Lit. 302. Perk. Self. 66. Dier. 251. Co. 2: 35: & super Litt. 49:

And if a man have two ways to passe lands by the common law and he intendeth to passe them one way, and they will not passe that way; in this case ut res valent it may passe the other way. As if a man be seised of two acres of land in fee, and letteth one of them for years, and after intending to passe them both by feoffment maketh a Charter of feoffment and maketh livery in the acre in possession in the name of both the acres; in this case the acre in possession only doth passe: but if the lessee of the other acre attayne then the reversion of that acre wil passe also. But where a man may passe lands by the Common law or by raising of a use and seeling it by the Statute therein many cases it is otherwise.

As if the father make a Charter of Feoffment to his son, and a letter of Astutney to to make livery, and no livery is made; in this case no use shall arise to the son. So if a man in consideration of marriage make a Feoffment with a letter of Attorney to give livery, and no livery is made; in this case no use will arise. And so was it held by Ch. Justice Popham B. R. for the intention of the parties doth work much in the raising and direction of uses. And therefore it is said that when a man doth intend to pass land one way it shall never pass another way contrary to his intent: as if one covenant for good considerations to levy a fine of Land to the use of I. S. and his Heirs, if no fine be levied, no use shall arise upon the covenant. If one by words of Bargain sell, give and grant, make a Feoffment of his house for money, and intending to pass it by way of Bargaine and sale and Inrolment the Deed being made there being a Master of the Chancery in the house whereof the Feoffment is made, he doth acknowledge and deliver the Deed before him, in this case if the Deed be not inrolled the conveyance is void and that delivery shall not amount to a livery of seisin. Dier 96. 19. Eliz. Thorold & Gordons case. Experientia.

And yet when the intent is apparent to pass it one way or another there it may be good either way, as where one doth make a Feoffment in Fee with a Letter of Attorney to make livery, and in the same Deed doth covenant in case livery of seisin be not had to perfect the Deed to stand seised to the uses of the Feoffment, in this case albeit no livery of seisin be made or attornment had to perfect the Feoffment or grant, yet if it be in such a case where there is a consideration sufficient to raise the uses by the covenant, the uses will arise by the covenant. 3. When a Deed may enure to divers purposes, he to whom the Deed is made shall have election which way to take it and he may take it that way as shall be most for his advantage. As if a Deed of grant be made by the words Dedi & concessi; this in Law may amount to a Grant, Feoffment, Gift, Lease, Release, Confirmation or surrender, and it is in the choice of the Grantee to plead or use it the one way or the other. So if a lease for years be made to me of Land for money by the words Demise, Grant, bargain and sell; I may take and use this by way of bargain and sale, or by way of demise at my pleasure. So if one have a Rent out of Land whereof I and my wife are jointly seised, and he doth by his Deed release, give and grant this Rent to me, in this case I may use this as a release to extinguish the Rent, or as a grant of the Rent as it may make most for my advantage. Et sic de similibus. But where any inconvenience may grow by such an election, there the Grantee shall not have an election but it shall enure as it may, as where a man may pass Land by the common Law or by raising of use and settling it by the Statute there sometimes it is so. And therefore if in the same case before, a Father make a Charter of Feoffment to his son and a Letter of Attorney to make livery, and no livery is made; hereby no use will arise to the son as it will in case of a covenant. And if a lease for years be made of a Manor by the words bargain, sell, demise and grant, and this is to begin at a day to come; in this case it must pass entirely as a demise at the common Law or entirely as a bargain and sale, and the Lessee hath not election to take or use it otherwise or to use it for part one way and for part another way. Co. super Litt. 301, Dier. 241. Ca. 2. 36. Dier 30. 302. Dier 109. 319. Ca. 2. 35. 36.

4. It shall enure as much as may be according to the apparent intent of the parties. And therefore it is that if a Feoffment be made of a Manor with an advowson appendant; or a bargain and sale of Land in possession and Land in reversion together be made and the Feoffment is not well executed for want of livery of seisin or Attornment, or the Deed of bargain and sale is not inrolled; in these cases albeit the advowson may pass without livery or Attornment and the reversion without inrolment, yet because the intent doth appeare to be that all shall pass together, therefore neither the advowson nor the reversion will pass by this Deed. Finches law. 58.

5. When a Deed is made it shall enure as it may, and so as it may have and take the most and best effect that may be according to reason, as if Tenant for life or years and he in remainder or reversion in fee joine in a Feoffment by Deed; this shall enure in the first case as the lease of the Tenant for life and the confirmation of him in the remainder or reversion, and in the last case as the Feoffment of him in the reversion; &c. and the surrender of the Lessee for years to the Feoffee and no forfeiture of the estate in the Lessee for life. But

Forfeiture,

But if in this case the Feoffment be by word, it seems it shall enure first as a surrender of the estate of the Tenant for life and then the Feoffment of him in reversion ut res valeat. And if A. be Tenant for life the remainder to B. for life the remainder to D. in taile the remainder to the right Heirs of B. and A. and B. joine in a Feoffment by Deed, in this case this is the Feoffment of A. and confirmation of B. but a forfeiture of both their estates whereof the Tenant in taile may take present advantage. If Tenant for life grant a rent charge to him in reversion in Fee, and he by his Deed doth grant this rent over to another and his Heirs; this is a good grant and confirmation also to make the rent pass to the second Grantee in Fee simple. So if a Disseisor make a Lease for life the remainder to the Dissee and the Dissee doth grant the remainder over; this is a good grant and confirmation also. If A. doe bargain and sell his Land to B. by indenture, and before inrolment they doe both grant a rent charge to C. by Deed and after the indenture is inrolled; in this case after the Inrolment this shall be said to be the grant of B. and the confirmation of A. and if the Deed be not inrolled it shall be said to be the grant of A. and confirmation of B. If one make a Charter of Feoffment of one acre of Land to A. and his Heirs, and another Deed of the same acre to A. and the Heirs of his body, and deliver seisin according to the forme and effect of both Deeds; it seemes this shall enure by moities, viz. he shall have an estate taile in the one moiety with the Fee-simple expectant and a Fee-simple in the other moiety.

Estoppel:

If two severall Tenants of severall Land joine in a lease for years by Deed indented; these be severall leases and severall confirmations from each of them from whom no interest passeth and doth not worke by way of Estoppel. If B. Tenant for life of C. and he in remainder or reversion in Fee of the same Land joine in a Lease for life or years by Deed indented; this shall enure during the life of C. as the Lease of B. and the confirmation of him in reversion or remainder, and after the Death of C. as the lease of him in reversion or remainder and the confirmation of B. without any Estoppel. Plow. 140. 59. Co. super Litt. 302. Co. 5. 15. Co. super Litt. 147. Cor super Litt. 21. Co. super Litt. 45.

If Tenant in taile and he in reversion grant a rent charge in Fee, it shall be taken the grant of the Tenant in taile and the confirmation of him in reversion, but when the Tenant in taile dieth without issue, it shall be taken the sole grant of him in reversion. If two Jointenants bee in Fee of an acre of Land and they lease it to a stranger for life, and the Lessee grant his estate to one of the Lessors; in this case it seemes it shall enure for a moiety by way of grant, and for the other moiety by way of Surrender: see Brownl. 1. part 141. 2. part 51. 52. 291. Perk. selt. 80.

Selt. 11.

If there be Lord and Tenant, and the Lord grant his Seigniorie to his Tenant and to a stranger; this shall enure for a Moitie to the Tenant by way of Extinguishment, and for the other moitie to the stranger by way of grant. If Tenant for life of the grant of a woman sole grant his estate to the husband of the wife, this shall enure for the whole by way of grant, Perk. selt. 81. Dier 140. Perk. selt. 82. 83.

If a Lease be made for life the remainder for life to a stranger and the Lessee grant his estate to his Lessor; this shall enure by way of grant. If there be Lord and two joint-tenants in Fee, and the Lord grant his Seigniorie to one of his Tenants in Fee, it seems this shall take effect for the whole by way of extinguishment, if there be Lessee for life and the reversion descend to two coparceners, and one of them take a husband and the Lessee grant his estate to the husband and wife; this shall enure by way of grant for the whole. If the Dissee and the heire of the Disseisor (being in by descent) make a Feoffment by one Deed and livery of seisin thereupon; this is the Feoffment of the heire only and the confirmation of the Dissee. Co. super Litt. 372. Co. 7. 14. 1. 147. 148. 5 E. 4. 2.

6. If one have divers estates in Land and he make any charge or grant upon or out of it; this shall issue out of all his estate. And if one have a possession and an ancient right, and grant a rent charge out of the Land, or make a Lease of the Land; this shall issue out of both the estates and it shall enure from him having severall estates as it shall enure from severall persons having the same estates, Per. f. 392.

6. If one that hath a rent charge out of a manor by grant reciting his grant, grant grant the same rent to a Lessee for life of the manor out of which the rent doth issue to have and pertain to him and his Heirs, and surrender to him the Deed; this shall not enure to extinguish the Rent but by way of grant, of which the Heir of the Lessee for life may take advantage if he do not by granting away the rent, purchasing the reversion of the manor or making a Feoffment of the manor and thereby committing a forfeiture, or by some such like means prejudice himself, for by these means the rent will be extinct and determined. If a Disseisor grant a Rent to the Dissee, and he by his Deed doth grant it over to another; or the Dissee make a Lease for life or gift in tail the remainder to the Dissee, and the Dissee doth grant over this remainder, and the Tenant accorne; these grants of the Dissee shall be taken for a grant and a confirmation also in respect. If there be Lord and Tenant of white acre and two other acres, and the Lord grant by Deed to his Tenant that he will not distrain his Tenant in white acre for his service; this grant shall not enure to determine the Seignior in any part, but as a covenant, so that if he doe distrain in white acre, the Tenant may have an action of Covenant. If a man have a wood of 200 acres, and he grant it to another for life or years, and that he shall cut therein 4 or 5 acres every year; in this case albeit the wood be granted and the grant shall enure to pass it, yet the Grantee can cut no more but 4 or 5 acres by the year. And yet the Grantor as this case is, cannot himself cut any of the wood during the time, as in case where a man doth grant to another that he shall cut every year 4 or 5 acres in such a wood; for in this case the grantor may notwithstanding cut as much as he will. And here note that in all the cases before according to the construction that the Law makes of the Deed so must the party that is to use it, set it forth and plead it, as when it shall enure as a lease then it must be pleaded as a Lease, &c. See more in Release Numb. 9. Surrender Numb. 7 Confirmation Numb. 7. Co. super Litt. 382. Perk. fell. 69. Mich. 37 & 38. Fitz. B. R. Ch. 14.

In the construction of Deeds it must be observed that there are some general rules that are applicable to all the parts of all kinds of Deeds, and some that are applicable only to some kind of Deeds and to some part of the Deed only. In the construction therefore of all parts of all kinds of Deeds these rules are universally observed: Co. super Litt. 313. Litt. fell. 563. Plow. 160. 154.

1. That the construction be favourable and agree to the minds and apparent intents of the parties as possibly it may be and law will permit. The interpretation of Deeds must be favourable for the simplicities of lay men. And the words must follow the intent, and not the intent; the words, as if there be Lord and Tenant and the Tenant grant the Tenements to one man for Terme of his life the remainder to another in Fee, and the Lord grant the Services to the Tenant for life in Fee; in this case howbeit a grant may enure by way of release, and a release to the Tenant for life shall enure to him in remainder and is an extinguishment, yet because this is contrary to the intent, it shall be taken for a suspension only of the services during the life of the Tenant for life, and the services shall goe afterwards to his Heire. But if the intent of the parties be apparently against law then the construction shall not apply the Deed to their intent, as if one give land to another and his Heirs for 20 years; in this case the executor, and not the Heir, shall have this land after the death of him to whom it is given. So if one by Deed intending to give land to another, and his Heirs give the Land to him To have and to hold to him, or to him and his assigns for ever, without these words, [and his Heirs] this is but an estate for life at the most. Doff. & Stud. 39 Litt. cap. 2. Plow. 161. 16 H. 8. 10. Dier. 15. Fitz. Barr. 237. Bro. Don. 14. 17 E. 3. 7. 46 E. 3. 17.

2. That the construction be reasonable and according to an indifferent and equall understanding, and therefore if I grant to another Common in all my Manor, this shall be expounded to extend to commonable places only, and not in my Gardens, Orchards, &c. And if I grant to one Estovers out of my Manor; he may not by this cut down my fruit-trees. And if one grant me (a Barrister) a Fee pro consilio; this shall be taken for counsell in Law only. And so in case of a Physitian. And if one grant to me to dig in all his Lands for tione; I may not by this grant dig under his house. And if one grant me Common for all my beasts; this shall be taken for for all my commonable beasts, and not for goats and the like. And if one grant me all his trees in his manor, by this I shall not have his apple trees. And if one lease to me his house and Land to the end that I may make profit thereof in the best manner: by this grant I may not prostrate the house or make wast:

3. That too much regard be not had to the native and proper definition, significations and acceptance of words and sentences to pervert the simple intentions of the parties; for a manor may pass by the name of a messuage, or a Knights Fee, if it be used so to be called, et sic e converso, on the other side a messuage by the name of a manor a remainder may be granted by the name of a Reverter, a Reversion by the name of a Remainder: for the Law is not nice in grants, and therefore it doth oftentimes transpose words contrary to their order to bring them to the intention of the parties: neither false Latine nor false English will make a Deed void when the intent of the parties doth plainly appear. It is therefore held that two negatives doe not make an affirmative when the apparent intent is contrary. Plow. 154. 170.

134. Dix. 46. Co. super Litt. 223. 146. 217. Co. 9. 48. 10. 143.

4. That the construction be made upon the entire Deed, and that one part of it doth help to expound another, and that every word (if it may be) may take effect and none may be rejected, and that all the parts doe agree together and there be no discordance therein. If a man make a Feoffment of all his Land in D. with Common in omnibus terris suis; this Common shall be intended in the Lands granted in D. only, and not elsewhere, for it must be understood secundum subjectam materiam. The best exposition is from the Coherence, and by that which doth goe before and follow after. It is an ill exposition that doth corrupt the Text, according to the subject matter. Plow 160. 161.

5. That the construction be such as the whole Deed and every part of it may take effect and as much effect as may be to that purpose for which it is made, so as when the Deed cannot take effect according to the letter it be construed so as it may take some effect or other; words must be understood with effect, and that the matter intended may have force. And therefore if an Annuity be granted pro confilio impendendo, or a Feoffment made ad erudiendum filium, or ad solvendum 10s. these shall be construed conditionall grants without any words of condition, for otherwise the party will be without remedy. Lit. selt. 283. Fines Ley. 60 Plow. 160. 154.

6. That all the words of the Deed in construction be taken most strongly against him that doth speake them and most in advantage of the other party, the words of Deeds are taken most strongly against the speaker. Co. super Litt. 183. Fines Ley. 6.

Seff. 12.
Forfeiture.

And therefore if one seised of Land in Fee grant it to another, and say not for what time, this shall be taken an estate for life. But this is to be understood with this limitation, that no wrong be thereby done, for it is a Maxime in Law. Quod legis constructio non facit injuriam. The Law doth injurie to none. And therefore if Tenant for life grant the Land he doth hold for life to another, and doth not say for what time; this shall be taken an estate for his owne life, and not the life of the Grantee, for then it would be a forfeiture. So if one be seised of some Lands in Fee, and possessed of other Lands for years, all in one parish, and he grant all his Lands in that parish (without naming them) in Fee simple. or for life; by this grant shall pass no more but the Lands he hath in Fee simple. So if a man have a house wherewith there hath been Copyhold Land and other Land usually occupied; and and he let this house and all his Land thereunto belonging; in this case and by this demise the Copy hold land doth not pass; for in both these cases then there would be a Forfeiture. But otherwise by these words all the Lands in both cases would pass. Co. super Litt. 112.

7. That if there be two clauses or parts of the Deed repugnant the one to the other, the first part shall be received, and the latter rejected, except there be some speciall reason to the contrary, and therefore herein a Deed doth differ from a Will, for if there be two repugnant clauses in a will, the first shall be rejected, and the latter received.

8. That that which is generally spoken be generally understood, unless it be qualified by some speciall subsequent words, as it may be; for if one be seised of a manor

9. That if the words may have a double intendment and the one standeth with law, and the other is against law, that it be taken in that sence which is agreeable to law: and therefore if tenant in taile make a lease of land to B for term of life, and doe not mention for whose life it shall be; this shall be taken for the life of the lessor and not for the life of the lessee, as it shall be if such a lease be made by tenant in fee simple: 9 Ed 4: 4.

10. That things doubtfully set down be applied to him to whom they doe properly belong. As if I S make a feoffment to one of his own name, and there is a covenant in the deed that I S shall deliver the deeds, this shall be taken of I S the feoffor and not of S the feoffee: Co 9: 48 10: 143.

11. That such a construction be made of abbreviations as the deed may not lose his force, as if one grant tot' ill' Maner' de D & C, if it be but one manor, the words shall be taken for totum illud Manerium, if two manors, then it shall be taken for tota illa maneria. And here note that most of all these rules run through all the cases of exposition hereafter following. Fin. Grant. 41: Plow. 317. Co. 5. 12. 22. aff. Pl. 61. Perk: Stff. 110.

Touching things granted these rules are first to be known.

1. When any thing is granted all the means to attaine it and all the fruits and effects of it are granted also and shall passe inclusive together with the thing by the grant of the thing it selfe without the words cum pertinentiis, or any such like words.

As by the grant of Conuſance of pleas is granted the Ordinary proceſſe to bring causes to judgment. By the grant of a ground is granted away to it. By the grant of Trees is granted withall power to cut them down and take them away, by the grant of Mines is granted power to digge them; and by the grant of fish in a mans pond is granted power to come upon the banks and fish for them.

2 The incident, accessory, appendant, and regardant shall in most cases passe by the grant of the principall without the words cum pertinentiis, but not à converso, for the principall doth not passe by the grant of the incident &c: Co. super Litt: 152: Litt. Stff: 72. 229: Co. 4. 86, 87: 8 H. 7. 4: Bro: Grant: 86. 144. 43 Ed: 3. 22. Co. 10 64: super Litt. 307.

And therefore by the grant of a reversion without naming the rent the reversion after an estate taile, for life, or years and the rent reserved upon the estate will passe; so as the tenant attorne to the grant: but by the grant of the rent the reversion will not passe. So by the grant of a manor, the Court Baron thereunto belonging will passe. by the grant of a house or ground, the wayes thereunto belonging doe passe, by the grant of errable land: the common appendant thereunto will passe; by the grant of Mills, the waters, flood-gates, and the like that are of necessary use to the Mills do passe; by the grant of a house, the estovers appendant thereunto will passe; by the grant of a manor, the advowsons appendant and villaines regardant thereunto passe; by the grant of a Faire, the Court of Pipowders will passe; by the grant of homage or rent, the fealty will passe; and by the grant of Escuage, homage and fealty will passe. But divers things that by continuall enjoyment with other things are only appendant to others, as warrens, leetes, waifes, estraines, and the like, these will not passe by the grant of those other things; and therefore if one have a Warren in his land, and grant the land, by this the warren doth not passe. And yet if in these cases he grant the land cum pertinentiis, or with all the profits, privileges &c. thereunto belonging; by this grant perhaps these things may passe. And here know that a reversion may be parcell or appendant to a thing in possession, and passe by the grant of it, but a possession cannot be parcell or appendant to a thing in reversion. And therefore if one make a lease for life of a manor excepting 20 acres of it, and after grant the reversion of the manor; by this grant the 20 acres will not passe. 38 H. 6. 38. Co. 11. 47: 50. Plow. 103. Bro: Grant: 60. 129, Co. 1: 7 28.

So if one be disseised of an acre parcell of a manor, or of common appendant to the manor. and before an entry or recontinuance of the acre or common he grant the manor to a stranger; by this the acre of land or common will not passe: But otherwise it is in case where a lease for years only is made of parcell of a manor.

And

The exposition of the severall parts of the deeds of grant. And how the words and sentences therein shall be taken.

1. In the premisses, and what doth pass by the grant of a thing.

And if a lease be made for life of 20 acres parcell of a manor, and after the manor it selfe is granted; by this the reversion of the 20 acres is granted and will passe also. See Brownlo: 1 part. 184. 185. 2 part. 193.

And if a man make a feoffment in fee of an acre of land parcell of a manor, and after repurchase it, and then grant the manor, this acre will not passe by this grant, for it is not united by the new purchase: But it is otherwise of trees, for if a man make a lease for life of a manor or other land excepting the trees, and after grant the reversion of the manor or land to another; hereby the trees doe passe. And if a man make a feoffment in fee of a manor excepting the trees, and after the feoffee buy the trees, in this case the trees are united againe, so that if the feoffee sell the manor, the trees shall passe with it. If I lease an acre of land to which an advowson is appendant for terme of life reserving the advowson, and after doe grant the reversion of that acre with the appurtenances; hereby the advowson doth not passe. But if I grant the advowson for terme of life reserving the acre, and after grant the acre with the advowson cum pertinentiis; by this the advowson doth passe. If land be appendant to an office, there by grant of the office with the appurtenances the land will passe without livery of seisin. And if an office be appendant to land, there by the grant of the one the other will passe. 3. That which is parcell or of the essence of a thing albeit at the time of the grant it be actually severed from it, doth passe by the grant of the thing it selfe. And therefore by the grant of a Mill, the millstone doth passe albeit at the time of the grant it be actually severed from the Mill. So by the grant of a house, the dores, windows, locks, and keyes, doe passe as parcell of it, albeit at the time of the grant they be actually severed from the house. 4. By the grant of the land, or ground it selfe, all that is supra, as houses, trees, and the like is granted, also all that is infra, as Mines, earth, clay, quarres, and the like. And by the grant of a house, the ground whereon it doth stand doth passe. 5. When any matter of interest or profit is granted, the grant shall be taken largely. But when any matter of ease or pleasure only is granted, as a walk, or the like, the grant shall be taken strictly. 6. When a man doth grant all his lands, or all his goods; by this grant doth passe not only what he is sole seised or possessed of, but also what he is joyntly seised or possessed of with another. And so è converso. If two men joyn together and grant all their lands, or all their goods; hereby doe passe not only all they have joyntly and together, but all those they have sole and apart. 7. Some words in deeds are large and have a generall extent, and some have a proper and particular application; the former sort may containe the latter, as Dedi, or Concessi, may amount to a grant, a feoffment, a gift, a lease, a release, a confirmation, a surrender: and it is in the election of the party to whom the deed is made, to use it to which of these purposes he will. And hence it is that if a Lord by the words of dedi & concessi grant to his tenant that doth hold of him his rent; or one that hath a rent charge out of land doth grant it to the tenant of the land; that in these cases the rent is extinguished albeit it be by way of grant. But a release, surrender, confirmation &c. cannot amount to a grant &c. nor a surrender to a confirmation or a release &c. because these be proper and peculiar manner of conveyances and are destinato to a speciall end. 14 H. 8. 25. Co. 11 50. 14 H. 8. 1. Co. super Litt. 4. 12 H. 7. 25. Plow. 289. 19 H. 6. 4. Co. super Litt. 301. Litt. 543. 544.

See 13
The terms whereby things are granted, expounded.

Amongst words whereby things doe passe some are collective, compound, or generall comprehending many things, as hereditaments, lands, tenements, honors, Isles, villages and the like including lands of severall sorts and qualities. And some words are simple or particular, as Meadow, Pasture, Wood, Moore and the like. Co. super Litt. 5. 6. Co. 4. 88.

Hereditament.

The word [Hereditament] is of as large extent as any word, for whatsoever may be inherited, be it corporeall or incorporeall, reall, personall or mixt, is an hereditament. By the grant therefore of all hereditaments do passe honors, Isles, Castles, Seigniories, Manors, Mesuages, Lands, Meadows, Pastures, Woods, Moores, Marishes, Furfes, Hesths, Reversions, Commons, Rents, Vicarages, Advowsons in grosse, and the like things which the grantor hath in fee simple at the time of the grant, whether he hath it by purchase or descent. And

And the word [Tenement] is of large extent also, and it seemes doth comprehend as much as the former. And therefore by the grant of all Tenements will passe as much as by the grant of all Hereditaments. Co. super Litt. 6. 16. Perk. sect. 114. 115. 11 H. 6. 22. Bro. Grant. 143 Co. super Litt. 6. Perk. sect. 411.

The word [Land] strictly doth signifie nothing but errable land, but in a larger sense it doth comprehend any ground, soile, or earth whatsoever. And therefore by the grant of all Lands, doth passe errable lands, meadowes, pastures, woods, moores, waters, marishes, furses, heath, and such like, and the Castles, houses, and buildings thereupon, but not rents, advowsons, and such like things. Also by grant of any land in possession the reversion thereof will passe. And yet by the grant of a reversion of land the land in possession will not passe. Co. super Litt. 4 Co. 4. 891. Perk. sect. 114. Co. 11. 47. 30. 10. 107.

But here it must be observed that in cases of grants and gifts of all hereditaments, tenements, or lands, consideration is had of the estate of the grantor, for if a man be seised of some lands in fee, and have other lands for life, or years only, and all these are lying within one parish, and he grant all his lands, tenements, or hereditaments in this parish to another in fee simple, fee taile, or for life, and give livery of seisin in the lands whereof he is seised in fee, in the name of all the rest; by this doth passe no more but his lands whereof he is seised in fee, for otherwise it would be a forfeiture for those lands. But if the livery of seisin be made in any part of the lands he hath for life or yeares, then that part wherein the livery is made will passe and no more. And if the conveyance be by bargain and sale and deed inrolled, then the lands whereof he is seised in fee simple and for life shall passe, and not the land he hath for a terme of years. And yet if in this case the grant be for yeares, then all the lands will passe, for then there will be no forfeiture in the case. Howbeit it is said in Bro. Done 48. pro lege. That if a man give or grant all his lands and tenements in B, that by this leases for yeares doe not passe, and that these words doe intend franktenements at the least: Edw. case Mich 9. Jac. curia 9. H. 7. 25. Bro. Grant. 87. 11. H. 6. 22.

These words [Honor, Isle, and Commote] are compound words and of large extent. And therefore by the grant of them may passe one or more seigniories, manors and divers other lands. Also a Castell may containe one or more manors. And therefore by the grant of a Castell may passe one or more manors. And so sometimes decurse a Castle may passe by the grant of a manor. But by a Castle most commonly is signified no more but the house or building and the parcell of ground inclosed wherein it doth stand: Co. super Litt. 5. Plow. 169.

This word [Village or Towne] is of large extent also. And by the grant of it a manor, land, meadow, and pasture, and divers such like things may passe. Co. super Litt. 5. Plow. 168.

This word [Manor] is a word of large extent and may comprehend many things: And therefore by the grant of a manor without the words of Cum pertinentiis doe passe damages, rents, and services, lands, meadowes, pastures, woods, commons, advowsons appendant, villaines regardant, Courts Baron and perquisites thereof that are in truth at the time of the grant parcell of the manor. Co. super Litt. 5. 58. Perk. sect. 116. Co. 5. 11. Plow. 168. Dier. 233. 14 H. 8. 1. 9. Jac. B R. Dyer. 30. 8 H. 7. 4. Baintons case. M. 9.

But nothing that in truth is not parcell of the manor, albeit it bee so reputed, will passe by the grant of the manor, and therefore if one have a manor, and after purchase the lawday or a warren to it, and then he grant away the manor, hereby the lawday or warren will not passe. And yet if by union time out of mind they have gotten a reputation of appendancy, perhaps by the grant of the manor cum pertinentiis these things may passe: By the grant of a manor also divers townes may passe:

An Honour also may passe by this name: And so also may a Castle or a hundred: And one manor also that is parcell of another manor may passe by the grant of that manor whereof it is parcell: Brownlo. 1. part. 155. Co. super Litt. 5. 26. Aff. Plow. 54. 2 H. 7. 36.

The word [Knights-fee] is a compound word also and may comprehend many things. And therefore by the grant of this may passe land, meadow, and pasture as parcell of it. And sometimes by this doth passe so much land as to make a Knights fee. And some say it doth containe eight hides of land. And it seems also that a manor may passe by this name if it be usually called so. Co. super Litt. 5. Plow. 168. 17 E. 3.

Grange.

The word [Grange] is a compound word also, and by the grant of a Grange will passe a house or edifice: not only where corne is stored up like as in barns but necessary places for husbandry also, as stables for hay, and horses, and stables and sties for other cattle and a curtilage and the Close wherein it standeth at the least. And where land, meadow and pasture &c. belonging to such houses are called all together by the name of a grange, there perhaps by this word the whole may passe. Co. super Litt. 5. Plow. 167.

Farme.

The word [Farme or Ferme] called in Latine firma is also a compound word and doth comprehend many things And therefore by the grant of a Ferme will passe a messuage and much land, meadow, pasture, wood &c. thereunto belonging or therewith used, for this word doth properly signifie a capitall or principall messuage and a great quantity of demesnes thereunto appertaining. Also by the grant of all Farmes or all Fermis it seems leases for years doe passe. Co. super Litt. 5. Plow. 195. Bro. Grants 155

Oxgange of
land.
Halfe a Plow
land.

This word is a collective word also, for by the grant of unam bovatarum terre, or of one, or of an oxgange of Land may passe land, meadow and pasture, and it doth properly intend as much as an Oxe can till. And jugum terre, or halfe a Plow land is as much as two Oxen can till, and by the grant of halfe a plow land may passe meadow, and pasture Co. super Litt. 5.

A Plow land or a Hide of land.

The words [Plow land, and a Hide of Land] are Synonyma and are collective words also. And therefore by the grant of Carnatarum or Hidarum terre, or of a Plow land, or of a hide of land may passe 100 acres of land, meadow and pasture, and the houses thereupon, but it doth properly intend as much land as one plow can till in a year. Co. super Litt. 5. Plow. 167.

A yard of land
Halfe a yard
land.

This word [A yard-land] is also collective and doth comprehend many things, but it is not certaine. for in some Countries it doth containe 20 acres, and in some Countries 24 acres, and in some Countries 30 acres, by the grant therefore of virgatarum terre, or a yard land will passe that quantity of land meadow and pasture that is called by this name. And so by the grant of halfe a yard, or a quarter of a yard land. Co. super Litt. 5.

Fold course.

The word [Fold course] is also compound, for by the grant of a fold course lands and tenements may passe: Et sic de similibus. And finally by the grant of any such compound thing as before for the most part there doth passe thereby so much as in common reputation is accounted part of that thing and is usually called by that name. Co. super Litt. 6. Plow. 167.

Parsonage
Rectorie,
Vicarage.

By the grant of a Rectory or Parsonage will passe the house, the glebe, the tithes and offerings belonging to it. And by the grant of a Vicarage will passe as much as doth belong unto it, as the Vicarage house &c. 8 H. 7. 1. Bro. Grant. 86.

Messuage.
Curtilage,
House.

By the grant of a messuage, or a messuage with the appurtenances doth passe no more but the dwelling house, barne, dove-house, and buildings adjoining, orchard, garden, and curtilage. A little garden, yard, field, or peece of void ground lying neer and belonging to the messuage; and houses adjoining to the dwelling house, and the close upon which the dwelling house is built at the most. Plow. 85. 13 171. 178. 569. Litt. Bro. Sess. 31. 185. Co. super Litt. 5. Co. 10. 65. Kely. 57. 27 H. 6: 2.

And so much also may passe by the grant of a house; so that the quantity of an acre of ground or thereabouts in Orchard, Garden, and out-let may passe by either of these names, but more then this will not passe by the grant that is made in either of these words, albeit more have been occupied with it, and albeit more be intended to be passed by the grant. And therefore if there be a messuage or dwelling house and divers acres of land thereunto belonging called all together by the name of Hedge:

And

And a grant is made by these words; of all that mesuage with the appurtenances commonly called by the name of Hedges; by this grant nothing shall pass but the mesuage, Garden, and curtilage.

And yet if a manor or farme be commonly called by the name of a mesuage, thereby the grant of a mesuage the whole manor or ferme may pass. And by the grant of a mesuage or house and all the Lands thereunto appertaining will pass all the Land usually occupied therewith. Also by the name of a mesuage a Chappell or a Hospitall may be granted. Brownl. 2 part. 53. See before: Litt. Br. fess. 185. 160. Br. Leases 55. Plow. 170. 13 Aff. Pl. 2. Co super Litt. 4.

By the grant of a Cottage doth pass a little dwelling house that hath no land belonging to it.

By the grant of all a mans errable land there doth pass no more but that kind of land. And by the grant of all a mans meadow ground, or all a mans meadows, doth pass no more but that kind of ground: And by the grant of all a mans pastures doth pass no more but the Land or ground it selfe imployed to the feeding of beasts, and also such pastures and feedings as he hath in another mans soile.

If a man have divers acres or peeces of Wood, and grant to another omnes boscos suos, or all his woods, or all his woods growing in such a place; by this grant doth pass all the high-wood and under-wood, and not only the wood growing upon the land or soile, but the land or soile it selfe wherein it doth grow.

But in this case if the grantor have in the same place divers peeces of wood and divers closes wherein there are divers trees growing in the hedges; it seems in this case these trees in the hedges shall not pass by this grant in these words, especially if the case be so that the cutting of them will be a wast: And yet if the grantor have no peeces or groves of wood in the place, nor trees but what are growing in the hedges and grounds, in this case it seems all the trees except the apple trees doe pass, but not his hedges and hedg rowes. And in case where the trees only doe pass, as where the grant is of all a mans trees, there shall pass no more of the soile but so much as shall serve for the Nutriment of the trees, and the owner of the soile shall have the grass growing thereupon also.

If a man grant to another all his salable underwoods within his manor which have been usually sold by the owners of the manor with free entrie, egress and regress for felling, making and carrying the same away at all times convenient; in this case it seems the soile doth not pass, but the wood only. And yet if those words with free entrie. &c. be omitted, contra. 14 H. 8. 1. Perk. fess. 116. Co. 3 11. Br. Done 14. Co. 5. 11. 11. 50. Curia. Hill. 16. Jac. B. R. Pinchcombe case.

If one devise, grant and to Terme let a farme with all maner of timber, wood, underwood land hedg rowes except the great oakes in such a close, to have and to hold the Farme for 21 years, in this case albeit there be the word Grant, and that the trees be not named againe in the Habendum, yet the other trees doe not pass by this grant otherwise then in other leases, and if the Lessee cut any Timber to sell, it is wast in him. Dier 374. Co. 11. 48.

A Toft is a place where a mesuage hath stood; and by this name in a grant such a thing will pass.

Bruera is a heath or heathy ground. Frassetum is a wood or peece of ground that is woody. Alnetum is a wood of Elders, or place where Elders grow. Salicetum a wood of willows or place where willows grow. Selda, a wood of fallowes, willowes or withies, or place where such things grow. Filicetum is a brake ground or place where such things grow. Fraxinetum, a wood of ashes, or place where Ashes grow. Lupulicetum, a hopyard or place where hops doe grow. Arundinetum, a place where reeds grow. Runcaria or Runcaria a place full of bryars or brambles. Iuncaria or Iuncaria or Iampna (which are all one) a place where rushes doe grow. Ruscaria a place where kneeholme or butchers prickles or broom doth grow. Mariscus a fenne or marish ground. Mora, a more barren and unprofitable ground then a marsh.

Vacaria. Porcaria Stagnum. Gurgis.

And by grant of these and such like things, or of 20 acres of such ground, these particular kinds only or so many acres thereof doe pass. Vacaria, is a Dairie-house. Porcaria, a Swinestie. Bercaria a Tann-house: and by these names these things will pass. By the name of Stagnum or Pool, or Gurgis a gulf, the water, Land, and fish in the water will pass. Co. super Litt. 4. 5: Co. super Litt. 5.

Stadium. Ferlingus. Quarantena terra. Selio terra. Acre of Land, Rood of Land.

By the grant of Stadium, Ferlingus, or Quarantena terra doth pass a furlong or furrow long, which anciently was the 8 part of a mile. By the name of Selio or perca terre doth pass a ridge of land which is sometimes longer and sometimes shorter. By the grant of an acre of Land doth pass so much as in an acre by measure in that Country by the Ordinary account and measure of the Country. By the grant of a Rood of Land doth pass 10 pearches the 4 part of an acre. And by the grant of 6 foot in length and two foot in breadth, so much only doth pass. And by these and such like names land may be granted: Co. Idem.

Mines.

By the grant of Mineras or Fodinas plumbi &c. or Mines of Lead, &c. the Land it selfe will pass if livery of seisin be made thereof, but otherwise it seems not, and then the Grantee hath by the grant a power to dig only granted unto him. Co. super Litt. 6. Co. 5. 12.

Trench.

If one grant to me to dig a Trench in his ground from such a place to such a place to convey water by a lead pipe, or otherwise; hereby also inclusive is granted a liberty at any time after to dig to amend it as occasion shall be. Park. sect. 111.

Turks.

If one grant to me to dig turfs in his land or soile and to carry them away at my will and pleasure; by this is not granted the land it selfe, the houses or trees thereupon or mines therein. Co. super Litt. 4.

Common.

If one grant to another Common for all his beasts in his Land; hereby is not granted Common for Goates, Pigges, and such like beasts and cattell that are not commonable. But if the grant be of common for all manner of beasts contra. And if one grant to another common without number in his Land, the grantor is not hereby excluded to common there with the Grantee. Brownl. 1 part 53. Co. super Litt. 4. Park. sect. 108. 109: Brownlows rep. 1 part in toto. 2. part. 53.

And if one grant to me common of pasture for 10 King in his Lands in Dale; by this grant I shall have common in his commonable grounds and lands only and not in any other lands. And if a man grant common of pasture to me for my beasts whicunque averia sua ierint, and he occupie 100 acres of Land with his beasts, and after he keep no beasts yet by this grant I may keep my beasts in those 100 acres. But if he grant to me Common, of pasture for my beasts wherefoever his Cattle shall goe &c. by this grant I shall have no common but when the Grantor doth use his common with his Cattell, &c.

Estovers.

By the grant of Estovers will pass house-boot, hay-boot, and plow-boot; But if a man grant to me Estovers out of his manor, I may not by this grant cut down any of the fruit trees within his manor. Park. sect. 116.

Way.

If Land be granted to me; hereby also implicitly is a way thereunto granted to me also. So that if one have 20 acres of Land and grant me one acre in the middle of it, hereby inclusive there is granted me a way to it. And yet if a man have two Closes and he use to goe over one of them for his ease to the other Close by a new way; and after he grant the further Close cum pertinentiis; by this grant the new way doth not pass. *14 H. 8. Forest, Park, Chase, Warren.

If a man have a Forest, Park, Chase, Vivarie, and Warren in his own ground, and he grant this Forest, Park, Chase, Vivarie or Warren; hereby not only the priviledge but the Land it self doth pass. But if the ground be anothers; or if it be his own and the grant be onely of the game, &c. in these cases the Land or soile it self will not pass. Co. super Litt. 5. Rice & Wiseman's case. Mic. 9. Jac.

Fishing.

If a man be seised of a river, and by his Deed doth grant separatam piscariam, or agnam suam in the same, and maketh Livery secundum formam carte; by this grant doth pass only a liberty to fish within the water, and not the soile nor the water it selfe: and therefore the grantor may take water still, and if it be drie he may take the soile also. Co. super Litt. 4. Fitz. Barr. 237.

And

And if one grant all his fish in his pond; by this is granted a power to come and fish for them, but the Grantee may not hereby dig a trench, and let out the water to take the fish, albeit they may not be otherwise taken.

If one be seised of 20 acres of land, and he grant to another and his heirs the vesture, or the herbage of it, and maketh livery of seisin in it secundum formam cartę; by this grant doth pass the corn, grass, underwood, sweepage, and the like; and for these things the Grantee may have an action of trespass for any wrong done to him in them. But hereby the land it self, the houses, and great trees thereupon, and mines therein doe not pass. And if one grant the herbage or vesture of a wood; hereby is granted the grass and underwood onely, and not the timber or great trees. But if a man so seised of 20 acres of land, grant to another the profits of this land to have and to hold to him and his heirs, and maketh livery secundum formam cartę; hereby the vesture, herbage, trees, mines, and all whatsoever parcell of that land doth pass. *Co. super Litt. 4. If one grant to another all his Deeds, or all his muniments; hereby will pass all his charters, Feoffments, Leases, Releases, Confirmations, Letters of Attorney and the like. 35 H. 6. 37.

Deeds.

If one give or grant to another Omnia bona, or all his goods; by this doth pass all his moveable and immoveable, personall and reall goods, as horses and other beasts, plate, jewels, and household stuff, bowes, weapons, and such like; and his money, and his corn growing on the ground, also all the obligations and bills that are made to him, and in his own name doe pass by this, but not the debts due by such obligations and bills. *Co. super Litt. 118: 39 H. 6. 35. And some say that leases and termes of years of Houses, Lands, Rents, Commons, &c. Rents charge for years, Wardships of Tenants in Capite, and by Knights service, and the interests that a man hath by Statute Staple, Statute Merchant, or Elegit, doe pass by this grant, but of this others doubt. And if a man give or grant to another omnia catalla sua, or all his chattels; hereby doth pass as much as by the grant of all his goods, and by this without question leases for years, &c. doe pass. But by neither of the grants doe pass those goods or chattels which the grantor hath by delivery in keeping for another, or the like. Neither doth any estate of inheritance or freehold, or the charters concerning any freehold pass under these words. Neither doth any thing in action, as debts or the like, nor hawkes, hounds popinjays, or the like pass by this grant. And yet if an Executor grant omnia bona & catalla sua, all his goods, hereby the goods and chattels he hath as Executor as well as his other goods and chattels will pass. And if one grant all his leases for years which he hath by any conveyances; hereby the leases for years which he hath as Executor as well as other leases for years will pass. *Perch. Just. B. If one grant to another all his Utensils; hereby will pass all his household stuffe, but not his plate, jewels, or any such like thing. Dier 59.

Utensils,

If a man be seised of land in Fee-simple or for life, and have an estate in it for years by Statute Merchant, Staple, Elegit, or the like: and he grant all his estate, or all his right, or all his title, or all his interest of and in the land; by this grant all his estate, and as much as he is able to grant doth pass. And if Tenant for life of land, the remainder to the stranger in taile, the remainder to the right heirs of the Tenant for life doe grant by these words; hereby both his estates do pass. And if a Tenant in tail grant all his estate in the land, hereby doth pass as much as he can grant. And all these words also do cary and pass reversions as well as possessions. And if a man have a terme of years of Land, and he grant his term, hereby doth pass the term of years, and all his estate and interest of the Land. *Co. super Litt. 545. Litt. sett. 613. Plow. 161. If one grant his Manor of Dale in Dale, which in truth doth extend into Dale and Sale; in this case no part of the Manor that doth lye in Sale shall pass. But if I grant ten Acres of Wood in Dale, where I have 100 Acres, this is made good and perfect by my Election which 10 Acres I will have, and so it is perfected. The Exception is always taken most in favour of the lessor, lessor &c. and against the lessor. And yet it is a rule, That what will passe by words in a grant, will be excepted by the same words in an exception. And it is another rule, that when any thing is excepted, all things that are depending on it, and necessary for the obtaining of it, are excepted also: as if a lessor except the trees, he may bring his chimpars to view them if hee desire to sell them, and he or the Vendee may cut them and take them away. If one be seised of a Manor and make a lease of it *cum pertinet una cum columbaris ac redditibus decimis garbarum finibus, heriot perquisitis Cur. & aliis omnibus praſentibus, Advocat. If one grant in fee excepting the trees, or any other thing, to the grantee without saying [and to his heires,] by this exception the thing excepted is severed only for the life of the grantor, and then it shall passe with the rest of the things granted. Dier. 264.

But if the thing be excepted indefinitely without saying for the life of the grantor &c.] nor how long; this shall be taken to be an exception during the estate. Dyer 264.

The Habendum as all other parts of a deed for the most part, shall be taken most strongly against the grantor and most in advantage of the grantee; yet so as withall it shall be construed as near the intent of the parties as may be; as in all the cases following doth appear.

In the Habendum or limitation of the estate, and how that shall be taken.

Fee simple. Self 16.

If land be given or granted to one habendum to have and to hold to him and his heirs so long as he pay 10l yearly to I S and his heirs, or so long as such a tree doth stand, or the like, this is a kind of fee-simple, but it is limited and qualified and determinable upon this contingent. And yet this may become a pure fee-simple, for if land be granted to one and his heirs until I S pay 100l and I S die before he pay it, in this case the estate is become a pure fee-simple. Flow 357.

If lands be given or granted to a man to have and to hold to him and his heirs, this is a fee-simple, pure, absolute and perpetual; and this is made by these words [his heirs] for it is a general rule that these words [his heirs] only make an estate in fee-simple in all feoffments and grants. But this rule hath many exceptions, for if feoffment of land be made to I S & heridibus, without the word [Sui] this is a fee-simple. Co. super Litt 8. 9. Lit 1. 27. H. 8. 5; Perk. Self 239. 240. 241. 239. H. 8. 38; Flow 28; Brev. Estant 4. 11. H. 7. 12; Co. super Litt 15.

And yet if the grant be to I S and I D & heridibus without this word [Sui] contra, for this is only an estate for their lives. And if lands be given to a Bishop, Parson or the like, To have and to hold to him and his successors, this is a fee-simple. And lands be given to a Mayor and Commonalty or other Corporation aggregate generally without the word Successors, or any other word, or if lands be given to such a Corporation for their lives, this is a fee-simple. But if lands be given to a Parson, or the like, To have and to hold to him, without saying how long, or to have and to hold to him for life; by this he hath no more but an estate for life. And if lands be given to the King generally without any other words; this is a fee-simple. So if one grant do & velis de D; it is said this is a fee-simple in the Parson of D. So also of a grant de velis de D; per Thirus Inst. So if a grant had bene to the Mother of such a house, it had been a fee-simple in the house. Co. 6. 27; super Litt 9. 15. Ed 4. 13. 9. H. 7. 11; H. 8. 9; H. 4. 84; 35; H. 6. 20; Co. super Litt. Aff. Pl 12. Phy 1. 10. 14. H. 4. 13.

And in like manner it is in other cases; As if one saies that B hath enfeoffed him of white acre To have and to hold to him and his heirs, and then he saith further, that as fully as B hath given white acre to him and his heirs he doth grant the same to C. by this C the grantee hath the fee-simple of this acre. And if one grant 2 acres to A and B to have and to hold the one to A and his heirs, and the other to B in forma predile; by this B hath a fee-simple in this other acre, for an estate in fee-simple, fee-tail, or for life, may be made by such words of reference. Also if a rent be granted betwene Parteners for to make an equalitie of partition, and it be granted generally and without any words of heirs, yet this is a fee-simple. So where lands are given in Frankalmorie. And so also it is in the cases of a release of right, a fine, and a recovery. See more in Bracton. Rep 1. pars. 32. 369.

If one give or grant land to another, To have and to hold to him and his heirs makes, or to him and his heirs females, in both these cases there is a fee-simple made, but otherwise it is when these words are in a Will, for then it is but an estate in tail only. 27 H. 8. 27. Lit. Self 31. Co. 11. 46.

If one grant land to one, to have and to hold to him and his right heirs; by this he hath a fee-simple. And so it shall be taken if it be by Doe. So if one grant land to I S for life, the remainder to the heirs, or to the right heirs of I S, this is a fee-simple. So if one make a feoffment in fee to the use of himselfe for life, and after his death to the use of his heirs; this is a fee-simple. H. 6. 5; Co. super Litt 22. Co. 1. 9. 66.

If one grant land to I S. To have and to hold to him and the heirs of I S, this is a fee-simple, and all one with a grant to I S and his heirs.

If one grant land to another to have and to hold to him for 20 years, and that after the 20 years the grantee shall have it to him and his heirs by aol. rent, and give livery of seisin; by this the grantee shall have the fee-simple: 20 H. 6. 35: Co. super Lit. 217.

If one grant land to the Wife of I S to have and to hold to her for life, and after to I S in taile, and after to the right heirs of I S; by this I S hath a fee-simple. And if one grant land to A for life, the remainder to B for life, the remainder to the right heirs of A; by this A hath a fee-simple: Co. 2. 91. Dyer. 156. Co. super Lit. 22.

If land be granted to a man and his wife, to have and to hold to them and the heirs issuing of them, it seemes this is a fee-simple and not a fee-taile: Bro. Estates: 86.

If land bee granted to one and his heirs by the premisses of a deed to have and to hold to him for life; by this he hath a fee-simple: So if by the premisses of a deed land bee granted to one and the heirs of his body to have and to hold to him and his heirs; by this he hath an estate taile and a fee simple expectant. And so via versa. Brownlow. Rep. 1. part. 45. accord. 169. If by the premisses of the deed the grant be to him and his heirs to have and to hold to him and the heirs of his body; by this also he hath an estate taile and a fee-simple expectant: Co. 2. 21. 24 super Lit. 21. 21 H. 6. 7:

If lands be given or granted to a man to have and to hold to him and to the [or his] heirs of his body, or the [or his] heirs males of his body, or the [or his] heirs females of his body; by this the grantee hath an estate taile: So if lands be given to a man, to have and to hold to him and the heirs males, or to him and the heirs females of his body begotten; in both these cases it is an estate taile. Brownlow. rep. 1. part. 2. 1. 1. part. Terms of law, tit. taile. Lit. tis Fee to so, & in Co. super Lit. 26.

If lands be given to a man and his wife, to have and to hold to them and the heirs males, or to them and the heirs females of their two bodies begotten; by this they both have an estate taile. And if lands be given to them and the heirs males, or heirs females of the body of the husband begotten on the wife; by this he hath an estate taile and his wife an estate for life only. And if lands be given to A to have & to hold to him and his heirs on the body of B begotten; by this A hath an estate taile and B hath nothing. So if lands be given to a man and his wife, to have and to hold unto them and the heirs he shall beget on her body; by this they have an estate taile in them both. If lands be given to a man and his wife and the heirs of the body of the husband, by this the husband hath an estate in general taile, and the wife but an estate for life. If lands be given to him to have and to hold to him and his heirs he shall beget on the body of his wife; by this he hath an estate taile and she no estate at all. Lit. idem Co. 1. 140: Co. super Lit. 20. Co. 7. 41.

If one give his land to his daughter or Cousin in Frankmarriage, by this they have each of them an estate taile without any word of [heires, or heires of body] &c. Lit. Stat. 17.

If one give lands to B and his heirs, to have and to hold to B and his heirs, if B have heirs of his body and if he die without heirs of his body that it shall revert to the donor, by this B hath an estate taile. So if one give lands to B and his heirs if he have issue of his body; by this he hath an estate taile: So if lands be given to B to have and to hold to him and his heirs, provided that if he die without heire of his body that the land shall revert. So if lands be given to A & B ut vultus & heredes eorum & alius heredes ipsius A sicut heredes de dictis A & B ex eunt obierunt sine herede de se &c. by this they have an estate taile. And so in all such like cases where after a limitation of a fee-simple these or such like words are added, viz. that if he die without heirs of his body the land shall revert, for in all these cases the habendum is construed to be a limitation or declaration what heirs are meant before. If lands be given to A and B (a young man and maid unmarried) to have and to hold to them and the heirs of their two bodies; by this each of them hath an estate taile; and if they marry their heirs may inherit it. Co. super Lit. 26: Plow. 135.

If lands be given to the son to have and to hold to him and his heirs of the body of his Father; by this the son hath a fee-simple. But if the words bee to have and to hold to him and the heires of the body of the Father engendred; by this it is an estate taile in a deed as it is in a Will. And if the Father be dead the Law is so also, but it seems the son shall have by this only an estate for life except he be issue in taile to his father per formam doni. So if there be grandfather, father and son, and the father dieth, and lands be given to the son to have and to hold to him and the heires of the body of the grandfather; this is an estate taile in the son: but neither the father nor the grandfather have either of them any estate in these cases. If lands be given to I S and the heires of the body of his wife (being dead) begotten by this I S hath an estate taile. Co. super Litt. 7: Co. 8. 87. Aff: Pl. 47. 5 Aff: 14: 12 H. 4. 1.

Sel. 17.

If one grant lands to I S, to have and to hold to him and the heires of his body issuing, the remainder to I D and his heires in forma predicta; by this I S and I D after him have each of them an estate taile. Co. super Litt. 385.

If one grant lands to A to have and to hold to him for life the remainder to the first son of A, and the heires males of the body of that first son; by this the first son hath an estate in taile, and A his father but an estate for life only. But if lands be granted to A for life the remainder to the heires of the body of A, by this A hath an estate taile in him. And if lands be given to a man and his wife to have and to hold to them and one heire of their bodies lawfully begotten and to one heire of the body of that heire; by this there is an estate taile made, yet so as it shall last only during the lives of those two heires: Co. 2, 91. super Litt. 12: 39. Aff: Plow: 20.

If one grant lands to another to have and to hold to him and to his heires of t^e body of such a woman lawfully begotten; by this he shall have an estate taile, for begotten shall be intended by the donee on that woman. Co. super Litt. 26:

If there be husband and wife and they have issue a son and daughter, and lands are given to the wife to have and to hold to her and the heires of her late husband on her body begotten; by this the wife hath an estate for life and the son an estate in taile, and if he die without issue it shall goe to his daughter per formam doni. Co. super Litt. 26.

If lands be granted to the husband of A and wife of B, to have and to hold to them and the heires of their two bodies; by this they have each of them an estate in taile in them, for there is a possibility that one husband and wife may dye, and then the other husband and wife may intermarry. Co. super Litt. 20.

If there be father and son, and lands are given to the father to have and to hold to him and the heires of the body of his son; by this the son hath an estate taile, but the father as it seemes, but an estate for life. 12 H. 4. 3. Dyer 247.

If lands be given to the mother for life the remainder to her son and the heires of the body of his father on her begotten (the father being dead) by this the son hath an estate taile. Lit. Sect. 352.

If lands be granted to I S, to have and to hold to him and the heires he shall happen to have of his wife; by this he hath but an estate taile and no fee simple, and his wife hath no estate at all. 12 H. 4.

If lands be granted to I S and the heires that the said I S shall lawfully beget of of his first wife, and he hath no wife at the time of the grant, by this he hath an estate taile. Co. super Litt. 20.

If A have issue by B his wife C a son and D a daughter, and A die, and lands are granted to B to have and to hold to her and to the heires of A her late husband on her body begotten; in this case and by this deed C hath an estate taile and the woman hath only an estate for life, and if C die without issue, D his Sister shall have the land per formam doni. But if one grant lands to A late wife of I S, to have and to hold to the said A and the heires of I S on the body of the said A begotten; in this case the son and heire shall take no estate by the grant. And the same construction shall be upon the same words in his Will. Co. super Litt. 26.

If Lands be granted to Husband and Wife, to have and to hold to him and the Heirs of the body of the Husband, the remainder to the Husband and Wife and the Heirs of their two bodies begotten, this remainder is void, and therefore by this the Husband hath an estate in taile and the Wife a joint estate for life with her Husband and no more. Co. super Litt. 28.

If Lands be granted to I. S. and his Heirs of the body of Jane a Noke begotten; by this I. S. hath an estate taile and no more. Co. 1. 140.

If Lands be granted to I. S. & heredibus de corpore procreatis; by this the Heires that shall be begotten afterwards shall take. And if Lands be granted to *I. Señ. 18.

If one grant to I. S. that if he and the Heirs of his body be not yearly paid 40 l. that he or they shall distraine in the Lands of the grantor; by this the Grantee hath an estate in taile in the Rent, as if he grant to I. S. that if he and his Heirs be not paid &c. that he or they shall, &c. he hath a Fee-simple in the Rent. Co. super Litt. 146.

If one give or grant Land to another to have and to hold to him, or to him and his assignes, and say not for what time; and the grantor make livery of seisin according to the Deed; by this the Grantee hath an estate for his own life. But no livery of seisin be made no estate at all but an estate at will doth pass by this Deed. And if he that doth grant the Land be but a Lessee for years of the Land and he make no livery of seisin upon the grant; by this his terme of years and that estate which he hath is granted. But if he make livery of seisin upon the grant then an estate for the life of the Grantee will pass, and it is a forfeiture of the estate of the Lessee for years of which he in reversion may take present advantage. And if one grant to another Common in his Land when he doth put in his own beasts, or estovers in his Manor when he cometh there, and say no more, by this it seems the Grantee hath an estate for life. Brownl. 1 part. 153. 175. *Litt. For life.

Forfeiture.

If one grant Land to I. S. to have and to hold to him or his Heirs, in the disjunctive; this is but an estate for life and no more. So if one grant Lands to I. S. to have and to hold to him and his Heire, in the singular number; by this I. S. hath only an estate for life and no Fee-simple. Co. 5. 112. super Lit. 8.

If one bargain and sell Land to another for money, and limit no time and express no estate, by this the bargainee shall have only an estate for life. But otherwise it was before the Statute of Uses, for then it had been a Fee-simple. Co. 1. 87. 130 Plow. 5. 9.

If Lands be granted to I. S. for life, and after to the next Heir male of I. S. and the Heirs males of the body of such next Heir male; by this I. S. hath but an estate for life. But if it be to the next Heirs males of I. S. it is an intaile. Co. 1. 66.

If one grant Land to I. S. to have and to hold to him in Fee-simple, or in Fee-taile, without saying [to him and his Heirs, or to him and his Heirs males or the like] this is but an estate for life and no more. So if one grant Land to I. S. to have and to hold to him and his seed, or to him and his issues, generally without more words; by this is made only an estate for life. But in the construction of a Will the law is otherwise in most of these cases. 20 H. 6. 33. Co. super Lit. 8. 20.

Will.

If Lands be granted to two & heredibus without this word [Suis], by this they have an estate for their lives and no longer. 20 H. 6. 35.

If one grant Lands to I. S. to have and to hold to him and his Heirs for his own life, or for the life of I. D. by this I. S. hath an estate for life and no more. Co. 5. 112. 1. 140.

If one grant Lands to A. and B. Habendum sibi & suis omitting all other words, or to have and to hold to them and their assignes; by this they have an estate for life only. So if Lands be granted to any naturall person to have and to hold to him and his successors; by this he hath only an estate for his life. Co. 4. 29. super Litt. 1. 8.

If one grant his lands to I. S. to pay his debts to have and to hold to him generally without limiting any estate; in this case I. S. hath an estate for life only. Co. 8. 96.

If Lands be granted to A. and B. to have and to hold to them for their lives to the use of C. for his life; by this C. hath an estate for his life if A. and B. live so long. Dier 186.

If a Tenant in taile grant totum statum suum; by this the grantee hath an estate for the life of the grantor and no longer. And if a Lessee for life grant all his estate; hereby his estate for life doth pass, for this is as much as he can lawfully grant. Witt. sect. 613. Co. 1. 53. super Litt. 345. Plow. 562. 162.

If a man have a Son and a Daughter and die, and Lands be granted to the Daughter and the Heirs Females of the body of the Father; it seemes by this she hath only an estate for life. Co. super Litt. 24.

If one grant Land to another to have and to hold to her whiles she shall live sole, or during her widowhood, or so long as she shall behave her self well, or so long as she shall dwell in such a house, or so long as she pay 10 l. yearly, or so long as the coverture between her and her husband shall continue; or one grant lands to a man to have and to hold unto him untill he shall be promoted to a Benefice, or the like; in all these cases if livery of seisin be made according to the Deed, or if the grant be of such a thing whereof no livery is requisite; the Grantee hath an estate for his life and no more, and that determinable also. Co. super Litt. 42. 234. 235.

If one grant Lands to I. S. to have and to hold to him for life, and doth not say for whose life; this regularly shall be taken for the life of I. S. the Lessee, and not for the life of the Lessor. But if the Lessor himself have but an estate for life in the Lands granted, then the Lease shall be construed to be and endure during that life only by which the Lessor did hold to prevent a forfeiture. And if he that doth make the Lease be Tenant in taile of the Land, this shall be taken to be a Lease for the life of the Lessor. And if a Tenant for life of Land make a Lease for years of it and then grant his reversion by the name of a reversion to another, To have and to hold to him and his Heirs; by this he hath only an estate for life of the Grantor and no more. So if Tenant in taile of Land grant it to one for years, and after grant his reversion to another, To have and to hold to him and his Heirs, this shall be construed to be an estate for the life of the Tenant in taile and no longer, and the attornment of the Tenants in these cases will not alter the cases. And so it is in case of a Release also, as if Tenant in taile doth release to B. (being Lessee for years of the Land) all his right to the Land, this shall be taken to enure but for the life of the Tenant in taile and no longer, as if a man receive a servant, and say not how long; this shall be taken for a year. *Constructio legis non facit injuriam. If one grant to I. S. that if he be not paid yearly for his life 40 s. that he shall distraise in the Land of the Grantor for it; by this I. S. hath an estate for life in the rent. And if a man by his Deed grant a rent of 10 l. issuing out of all his Land quarterly at the usual feasts, this is an estate for life of the Grantee. Co. super Litt. 147. Co. 8. 86.

If one grant Lands to I. S. and I. D. To have and to hold to them during their lives, omitting these words [and the longest liver of them] by this notwithstanding they shall hold it during the life of the longest liver of them. And if Lands be granted to A. to have and to hold to him during the lives of B. C. and D. without any more words; by this A. hath an estate during all their lives and during the life of the longest liver of them. Co. 5. 9. 12. 3. But if a Lease be made to *T. And if a Lease be made to B. only to have and to hold to him and C. for their lives; by this B. hath an estate for his own life only and no more; and C. hath nothing at all. Adjudged B. R. 3 Edw. Hobart & Westminster 1491.

When no time is set down for the beginning of an estate, then it shall begin presently, otherwise it shall begin at the time expressed if it may stand with Law. If a Lease for years be made bearing date the 26 day of May, To have and to hold for 21 years from the date, or from the day of the date; in these cases the Lease shall begin on the 27 day of May. But if the words be To have and to hold from henceforth, or from the making hereof, in these cases the Lease shall begin on the day in which it is delivered. And if it be to begin 2 die messuagii, then it shall begin the next day after the delivery. And if it be To have and to hold for 21 years, without mentioning when it shall begin, it shall begin from the delivery if there be no former Lease in being, and if there be, then it shall begin from the time of the ending of that Lease. If the Deed have a date which is void or impossible, as the 30 of February, or 40 of March, and the terme be limited to begin from the date, then it shall begin from the delivery. So if a man by his Deed recite a Lease which is not, or which is void, or misrecite a Lease that is in effect in point material, and then say, To have and to hold from the end of the former Lease; this Lease shall begin in course of time at the time of the delivery of the Deed. C. 1. 154. Plow. 198. Co. 2. 1. 1. Dier 286. 307.

For years: when such a Lease shall begin and how long it shall continue.

Stat. 19.

If one make a Lease of Land to A. for 20 years, and then grant it to B. To have and to hold to him from the end of the first terme, &c. in this case the second Lease shall begin as soon as the first Lease by what means soever shall end. But if the words of the second Lease be To have and to hold to him from the end of the 20 years, in this case the second Lease shall not begin until the 20 years be expired. And if one make a Lease of white acre to A. for 10 years, and of black acre to B. for 20 years, and then reciting both the Leases doth make a Lease to C. to begin after the former Leases; this shall be taken respective, and shall begin for white acre after the end of the 10 years, and for black acre after the end of 20 years. And if one make a Lease to two for 60 years, provided that if the Lessee shall die within the term, that then presently after the decease of the last of them longest living the Lessor shall reenter, and one of them die, and after the Lessor doth make a Lease to another Habendum, &c. cum post five per mortem suam vel per mortem unius of the first surviving Lessee acciderit vacare for 40 years; in this case this second Lease shall begin after the death of the Lessee surviving, recently of the Lessor, or the effluxion of time of the first Lease which of them shall first happen, and the Lessee cannot at his election make it to begin at any other time. C. 1. 154. Plow. 198. Co. 6. 36.

If a man make a Lease for 30 years, and 4 years after make another Lease, to another man in these words. Novimus, &c. me A. de B. prediis 30 Annis finis dedisse & concessisse B. de C. &c. Habendum a die consecrationis presentium terminis predictis finis usque finem; Annorum: by this the second terme shall begin at the end of the 30 years. And if one make a Lease to A. for 20 years, and after make a Lease to B. to have and to hold to him from the end of the first terme for 20 years to be accounted from the date of the last Deed; in this case the second Lease shall begin at the end of the first Lease, and these words [to be accounted, &c.] shall be rejected Dier 281. Cradock's case pasc. 7. 9. Co. B.

If one make a Lease of Land to A. for 10 years, and after by indenture grant it to B. to have and to hold to him from Michaelmas next for 10 years, and after the first Lessee doth purchase the reversion by which his terme is drowned; in this case the second Lease shall begin presently when Michaelmas is come. Dier. 112.

If two Jointenants be, and one of them grants the Land to T. S. to have and to hold to him for 20 years, if the Lessor and his companion so long live; by this the Lease shall continue no longer then they both live together, and when either of them is dead the Lease is determined. And if one grant his Land to J. S. to have and to hold to him, his Executors, &c. for the terme of 100 years if A. B. and C. live so long; and leave out the words [for either of them] in this case it is either of them die the Lease is determined. But if the words be To have and to hold for 100 years if A. B. or C. [omitting or either of them] shall live so long, &c. If a Lease be made of Land to the husband and wife to have and to hold to them for 21 years if the husband and wife or any child between them shall so long live; this is a good lease and shall continue for all their lives and for the life of the longest liver of them after the first word in the copulative.

If a man make a Lease for years to A. B. if they live so long; in this case if one of them dye, the Lease does not end. If a Lease be made to A. and B. his wife for 21 years if he and she or any child between them lawfully begotten shall so long live and after marriage she dwelleth with him, in this case the lease doth continue notwithstanding her death. Provan. 1. part. 180. 2. part. 292. Mich. 13 Jac. 2.

If one grant of Land for a Terme of years grant the same to another, To have and to hold to him, his Executors and administrators, or to him and his assigns, or to him, without any more words; for if a man that is possessed of a terme grant his Lease to another, and doth not say for what time; it seemes in these cases the whole terme is reserved, albeit no livery of seisin be made. And in the first case if livery of seisin be made, then it seems there doth pass an estate for the life of the Grantee, and therefore that this is a forfeiture of the estate of the Lessee for years whereof he is in the reversion may take advantage presently. And if a Lessee for years of Land grants a portion of the Land generally without any limitation; this shall be construed to enure for a part of the rent so long as the estate of the Grantor doth continue. But if he grants a rent by express words for the life of the Grantee, by this the Grantee shall have it for all the terme, if he live so long. Dier 307. 69. Plow. 529. 529. 825. 423. 424. 67. 7. 23.

If one grant Land to J. S. To have and to hold to him for life reserving the first seven years a rent, &c. if he will hold the Land over that he shall pay a rent in money and no livery of seisin is made, by this it seems in certayne it made a Lease for seven years until the condition be performed, and then also it seems it is a Lease for no longer time. And so perhaps it will be if livery of seisin be made. Co. super Litt. 218.

If one grant a rent of 5 l. per annum unto J. S. To have and to hold to him, &c. until he shall receive 20 l. in this case he shall have a Lease for four years of this rent. But if Lands be granted to J. S. To have and to hold, &c. until he shall receive 20 l. out of the profits of it, in this case if livery of seisin be made the Grantee hath an estate determinable upon the levying of the money, and if no livery be made he hath no estate at all but at will. Co. super Litt. 431. Plow. 273.

If one make a Lease for life and say, that if the Lessee within one year pay not 20 s. that he shall have but a term for 2 years; by this if he doth not pay the money he hath only a lease for 2 years, albeit livery of seisin be made upon it. Co. super Litt. 218.

If one make a Lease to J. S. To have and to hold to him, his Executors, &c. for 10 years if J. D. shall live so long, and J. D. is dead at the time when the lease is made; in this case J. S. hath an absolute lease for 10 years. Co. 9. 63. 60.

If one grant Land to J. S. To have and to hold to him, his Executors, &c. for 3 years and so from 3 years to 3 years during the life of J. S. or from 3 years to 3 years during the life of the lessee, by this it seemes J. S. hath a lease for 6 years and no more. And if one grant Land to J. S. To hold for 3 years and after the end of those 3 years for 3 other years, and after the end of those 3 years for 3 other years during the life of the lessor; by this it seems J. S. hath a lease for 9 years and no more. And yet if in this and such like cases where a lease is made from so many years to so many for the life of any person livery of seisin be made upon this deed secundum formam charte; this perhaps may be an estate for life. Plow. 273. Co. super Litt. 45. Dier 24.

For years

2. R. 1. 2.

If a Lease be made to a widow for 40 years under this condition, that if she shall be so long sole and dwell in the house, and she lived sole and in the house all her life: it was agreed that the lease did continue after her death, Gouldsb. 179.

If Lands be granted To have and to hold from our Lady day pro termino unius Anni, & sic de uno Anno in unum Annum quamdiu ambabus partibus placuerit; by this the Grantee hath a Lease for 3 years only in certain, and afterwards a lease at will: And if lands be granted to have and to hold from the Nativity of Christ next pro termino unius Anni, et si in fine dicti unius Anni amba partes placerent, quod eadem praesens dimissio foret renovata, tunc habend' promissa to the lessee, &c. ab & post dictum festum Nativitatis Domini usque terminum trium Annorum extunc prox' sequen'; by this the Grantee hath a Lease in certain but for one year only; and if the parties agree again, a lease for 3 years. 14. H. 8. 10. Co. 6. 35. 19, 106.

If one make a lease to I. S. To have and to hold to him for years, and say not how many years; by this the lessee hath a lease for 2 years and no more: Co. 6: 35. 21 H. 7: 38.

If one grant his land to I. S. To have and to hold to him untill I. D. shall come to 21 years of age; in this case if I. D. die before that time, the lease is ended: Co. 3. 19.

If a man possessed of a terme of years of land doth grant the land to another and his Heirs, this by construction will amount to a good grant of his interest. Co. 1: 44. 7 H. 4. 42.

If lands be granted to husband and wife, and to I. S. To have and to hold to them and to the Heirs of the husband and I. S.; by this the wife hath only an estate for life in a moiety with her husband, and the husband and I. S. have the fee-simple in Jointenancy to them and their heirs. Dyer 263.

Limitation of estates to divers persons.

If lands be granted to two brothers, or two sisters, or to a brother or sister, or to a father and son or any others, To have and to hold to them and the heirs of their bodies begotten: by this they have joint estates for their lives, so that the survivor of them will have the whole for his life, and severall inheritances .i. estates in general taile by moieties in common one with another. And if lands be granted to two men and their wives and the heirs of their bodies begotten: in this case they have joint estates for life, and afterwards the one husband and wife shall have the one moiety, and the other the other moiety in common. And if lands be granted to a man and two women To have and to hold to them and the heirs of their bodies; by this they have each of them an estate taile in common with the other. Co. 8. 87. 10. 50. super Litt. 25: Dier 145.

If lands be granted to husband and wife To have and to hold to them and their heirs of their bodies issuing, or in any such like manner, by this the wife hath an estate taile as far forth as the husband. But if it be granted to them To have and to hold to them and the heirs of the body of the husband, or to the husband and wife and the heirs of the husband which he shall have by his wife, or in any such like manner: by this the wife hath only an estate for life, and the whole estate taile is in the husband. So via versa, if lands be granted to husband and wife, and the heirs of the wife upon her body begotten by the husband: by this he hath an estate for his life only, and his wife the whole estate taile. And if lands be granted to the husband To have and to hold to him and the heirs of his body on the body of his wife begotten, or to have and to hold to him and the heirs of his body begotten on the wife he shall first marry, or to have and to hold to him and his wife he shall first marry, and the heirs of their bodies begotten: in these cases the husbands have the whole estate, and the wives nothing at all. But otherwise it is it seems, when the estate is limited by way of use to a man and his wife that he shall afterwards marry, for by this it seems the wife shall take also. Lit. sett. 27. 28. 29. Co. super Lit. 26. Dier 340. Co. 1. 100.

Use.

If Lands be granted to A a married man, and to S a married wife and to the heirs of their bodies engendered: by this they have each of them an estate taile presently executed, and whiles the wife of the husband and the husband of the wife live they shall hold it for their lives, and if they happen to die, and these to intermarry and have issues, their issues shall have it according to the intaile: 15 H. 7. 10.

When the Habendum shall be said to be repugnant and void. And when not, but shall controul, divide or expound the premises.

If Lands be granted to A and B To have and to hold to A for life the remainder to B in Fee: by this A shall have the whole for his Life and B the Fee-simple afterwards. Dier 126. 56

As touching this matter these differences are to be taken. Between things that are granted and between the estates, When the things that are granted are such as lye in grant and take effect by the delivery of the Deed only without any ceremony, or take effect by the same ceremonie, and when not but another ceremony is required to the perfection of the grant and estate. Co. 2. 23. 8. 56. Perk. fess. 181. 14 H. 8. 14. Co. super Litt. 183.

And when there is an expresse estate made by the Deed in the Premises thereof, and when but an implied estate only, as for examples. If one grant Land, Rent common, or any such like thing to one and his Heirs by the Premises of the Deed To have and to hold to him for life, or To have and to hold to him and to his assignes, without more words; in this case the Habendum is repugnant and void, and by this the Grantee shall have an estate in Fee-simple if livery of seisin and attornment, as the case doth requite be duly made, for otherwise no estate at all but at will, will pass. So if a man grant a Rent, or any such like thing that lieth in grant to one and his Heirs, To have and to hold to him for years; this is a void Habendum, and the Grantee shall have the Fee-simple. But if a man grant Land to another and his Heirs. To have and to hold, to him for a certain number of years; in this case whether he may make livery of seisin or not it is a good Habendum; and by this the Grantee shall have an estate for so many years and no more. So if one grant Land, Rent, Common, or any such like thing to one in the Premises of the Deed without limitation of estate (which in judgement of Law is an implied estate for life) To have and to hold to him for a certain number of years, or at will; this Habendum is good and shall stand with the Premises and qualifie it; and by this the Grantee shall have but a Lease for years, or at will, as the Habendum is. And if one grant Land by the Premises of a Deed to one and his Heirs of his body To have and to hold to him and his Heirs; this Habendum shall stand, and this shall be taken an estate taile and a Fee-simple expectant. So vice versa, If Land be granted to one and his Heirs To have and to hold to him and his Heirs of his body, this shall be construed an estate taile and a Fee-simple expectant and so both shall stand together. Co. 8. 154. 21 H. 6. 7. Co. super Litt. 20. Dier 126. & per curiam in Thurman's case. Pasc. 16. fac. B. R. 21 H. 6. 7. If Lands be given to B and his Heirs To have and to hold to B and his Heirs, and if he die without Heirs of his body that it shall revert to the Donor, it seems this is a Fee-taile only and no Fee-simple expectant, Voluntas donatoris in charta doni sui manifeste expressa observanda est. Co. super Litt. 21.

If a Lease for years be made of Land, and then the Lessor by the premises of the Deed granteth the Land to another To have and to hold the reversion of the Land to him, &c. for life; this Habendum shall stand. So if by the Premises of the Deed the reversion be granted To have and to hold the Land it self, this is good and both shall stand together, but nothing is granted in either case, but the reversion Co. 10. 107. 108.

If the next Advowson of a Church be granted to three to have and to hold to them and either of them jointly and severally; this is joint, and the Habendum is void. And yet if one grant Land to two by the premises of the Deed To have and to hold to one of them for life, the remainder to the other for life, this is not repugnant, but shall stand together and make the estates severall and in remainder one after another. So if a Lease be made to two To have and to hold the one moiety to the one, and the other moiety to the other; by this they have severall estates, Expressum facit semper cessare tacitum. Dier 304. Co. 5. 19. Co. 2. 55. super Litt. 183. Dier 106. If a man have a Lease for years of Land, and he reciting this, by the Premises of the Deed doth grant all his estate in the Land, To have and to hold the Land or the term after his death, or for part of the time only; in this case the Habendum is void and the whole estate doth pass immediately by the premises. Dier 272. Plow. 520. If a Tenant for life surrender a moiety of his Land and the Lessor grant it all to a stranger To have and to hold the one moiety for life and the other moiety for 40 years, after the death of the tenant for life; this Habendum shall stand and enure according to the grant. Dier. 256. If

If a man seised of land in fee make a lease for life of it to one, and after grant the reversion of it to another to have and to hold the reversion and the tenements aforesaid cum post mortem forisfacti &c. vacare acciderit; in this case the Habendum and premisses may stand together: It is usuall in the Habendum of a deed to set down to what use the party to whom the deed is made shall have the thing granted. But touching this and the matters that doe concern uses see Vse infra at large. And see also more for the Exposition of Deeds in Testaments Numb. 8. Grant Numb. 4. Leases cap. 14. Numb. 4. And here note that parol-agreements & conveyances have the same construction for the most part made upon them as are made before upon deeds. And therefore if a man by word of mouth without any writing grant all his lands in dale to I S to have and to hold to him for life, but doth not say for whose life, this shall have the same construction as such a grant made in writing hath. Curia pas: 7 Jac: Co. B.

Note.

This is alwaies taken most in advantage of the feoffee, grantee, lessee, &c. and against the feoffor, grantor, lessor, &c.: and yet so as the rent be paid during the time. Co. 5. 111. 10: 106. 8. 71. Co. super Litt. 47: 213, 214. Goldsb. 148.

And therefore if the reservation be only to the feoffor, grantor, &c. and the deed doe not say also [to his heires, executors &c.] this reservation shall continue only for the life time of the grantor and shall determine with his death. And so also it is where the reservation is to the feoffor or his heires, in the disjunctive, for in this case the rent shall continue only during the life of the grantor. And yet if one make a lease for years rendring yearly during the said terme to the lessor or his heirs or executors; this is a good reservation during all the terme, by reason of these words [during the terme.] So if the feoffor, or lessor be seised in fee, and make a feoffment in fee, or lease for life or years, rendring rent to the feoffor or lessor or his executors or assignes; in this case the rent shall continue only for the life of the Lessor. Plow. 171. 21 H. 7. 25. 27 H. 8. 19. Dier 45.

In the reservation of Rent. And how that shall be taken. Sett. 21.

But if the reservation be to the Feoffor, or Lessor, his Heirs and assignes, in the copulative, or in the disjunctive to him or his Heirs, or to him and his successors (if it be the lease of a Corporation) during the terme; then all the assignes of the reversion shall enjoy it. And if the reservation be thus, yeelding and paying so much rent (without any more words,) this shall be taken for all the time of the estate and shall goe to him in reversion accordingly. And if the reservation be rendring so much rent during the said terme, and doth not say to whom; in this case it shall be construed to be to him that hath the reversion, and accordingly it shall be paid and shall continue during the term: So held in the case of Bland M. 8. Car. B. R.

But if A be seised of Land in Fee, and make a Lease for years of it rendring rent to A [without saying To his Heirs, &c.] during the said terme, this rent shall continue only during the life of A and no longer. And yet if A be possessed of a terme only, and make an under-lease or assignement with such a reservation: Quere.

If the reservation be thus, Yeelding and paying 20 s. during the said terme, omitting the word [yearly] this shall be taken to be not once only but yearly during the terme, and accordingly it must be paid. And if a Lease be made for years, rendring in every middle of the yeare, quolibet medio Anni 20 l. this shall be paid during the terme. 27 H. 8. 19. Pas. 21. Jac. Hudson & Brent B. R.

If one by Deed indented grant Lands to A, To have and to hold to him for life, the remainder to B, and the Heirs of his body, and for default of such issue to remaine to D, in taile, or for life, yeelding therefore yearly, &c. in this case the reservation shall extend to all the estates. Co. 10. 107.

If a Lease be made the 10 day of August, rendring rent at our Lady day and Michaelmas; in this case albeit our Lady day be first named, yet the first payment shall be at Michaelmas next after the making of the Deed. Dier 130. Co. 5. 111. super Litt. 217.

If the reservation be at Michaelmas or within 20 daies after: in this case the 20 day shall be taken exclusive. But if the rent be to be paid at Michaelmas or by the space of 20 daies after, in this case the 20 day shall be taken inclusive: Per Williams & Telverton Inst. Ch. Inst. contra 9 Jac. B. R.

If a lease be made in December, from the Nativity of Christ next for one year with this addition, Et si in fine dicti Anni amba partes agreeant quod eadem dimissio foret renovata tunc habenda & tenenda premissa dicto 1 S (the lessee) ab & post dictum festum tunc proximum sequens usque finem trium Annorum. Reddendo inde Annuatim durante dicto termino dicti 1 S. &c. in this case the reservation shall relate to both the terms, and the rent shall be paid the first year although they do not agree to renew the lease. Co. 10. 106.

If two Jointenants by deed poll, or by word make a lease for life, reserving a rent to one of them, this shall goe to them both. So if one of them be tenant for life and the other in fee, and they joine in a lease for life, or gift in taile reserving a rent; the rent shall enure to them both. But if tenant for life and be in reversion joine in a lease for life, or gift in taile by deed reserving a rent, the rent shall enure to the tenant for life only during his life and after to him in reversion. Co. super Litt. 214.

If two tenants in common make a lease of their land rendring 20 s. rent; this shall be but one 20s and not two 20 s. So if the lease be rendring a Hawke or a Horse; by this they shall have but one Hawke, and one Horse, and not two Hawkes or two Horses, as it shall be in cases where they do joine in the grant of such things out of their land. Plow. 171. 289. Co. 10. 106.

If one make a gift in taile of two acres of land, the one at the common law, and the other in Burrow English rendring an ox to him and his heires, and the donee having two sons die, and the eldest son doth inherite the one acre, and the youngest son doth inherite the other; in this case the donor and his heires shall have but one ox &c. Co. 10. 106.

If one make a lease of land for years if the lessee live so long, and after the lessor by his deed indented doth grant the land to another to have and to hold the reversion to the grantee for his life cum post mortem &c. unt ut si uter acciderit vacare reddenda inde Annuatim to the grantor and his heires cum reverso predicta acciderit 91. 4d. per Annum; in this case this reservation of rent shall not begin before the reversion happen in possession. Co. 10. 107. 108.

In other respects.

If rent be reserved to be paid at two terms, and it is not said by equal portions; yet it shall be so taken and it must be so paid. See more in Brownlow. 1 part. 19. 39. 63. 87. 105. 108. 2. part. 21. 1273.

Devise.

If one be possessed of a terme of years of land, and grant it by deed to 1 S for his life, and after his death to 1 D; in this case the whole terme is granted to 1 S, and his executors, administrators and assignes shall have it and not 1 D. But if a terme were so devised by Will contra. And if one give or grant to another his horse, or his books for his life, and that after his death they shall remaine to another, the remainder is void, and the first shall have it for ever, for the gift or grant of such a thing for an houre is a gift of it for ever. If I grant you that if you pay me 20 pound at Easter, that then you shall have an Annuite of 40 pound to you and your heirs and you die before Easter, in this case the heire can never have it. Goldsb. 64. Pliz.

CHAP. LXIV.

Of an Action of Debt.

His word Debt is sometimes taken for a sum of money, or other thing which is owing or due from one man to another, whether by writing or otherwise; And sometimes it is taken for the mean it self to recover this thing, and then it is said to be an Action given, or a Writ lying where any sum of money or other thing is due to a man, upon, or by reason of a Judgement or Recovery in Law, Obligation, or other Especialty, Account, Loan or Contract to be paid at a certain day, at which day he payeth it not, then he to whom it is due shall have this writ to recover it. New terms of the Law. F. N. B. 119. § Ed. 4. 1. In this place it is taken sometimes in the one, and sometimes in the other signification and considered as the Debt of a Common person and as the Debt of the Lord Protector.

What it is.

Sec. 1.

The Action of Debt (wherever it lyeth) is sometimes grounded on matter of record, as either on an act of Parliament, or a Judgement, Statute, or Recognizance, or the like. And sometimes it is grounded on matter in fait: And that either in writing, as an Obligation, Bill, Covenant, or other especialty, or else without writing, as an Arbitrement, Escape, Receipt, Paroll-contract, or the like. This Action may be had and brought in any of the common Law Courts as the upper Bench, or Common pleas, or other Courts that have Jurisdiction. But if the Debt be under 40 s. the proper places to sue for it is in the County, or Hundred-Court, or a Court-Baron. And if the Debt be under 40 s. and owing by one that doth live within the City of London, or the liberties thereof, unto such a one also, and be not grounded on a reall contract, the party is bound by a speciall Law to sue for it in the Court of Requests for the City of London, for if he sue for such a petty debt in any other Court, he shall pay the Defendant Costs, and yet shall recover, no costs in his suit against the Defendant, F. N. B. 119. 3. Jac. ch. 15.

No Action of Debt or Trespas or other personall Action may be brought in the Common-pleas, where the Debt or Damages doth not amount to 40 s. or upwards. Gloss. cap. 18. N. B. 61. But by joyning two Debts together for divers contracts together in one writ, the force of this Statute is avoided, See Crompt. Jur. 101.

The party himself to whom the Debt is originally due, whilst he doth live, must bring the Action for it in his own name, and after his death his Executors or Administrators may and must have the Action where there is cause. And if the Executor be under age, the Administrator durante minori aetate. And if there be divers Executors who have taken upon them the Executorship, after the death of some or one of them, the survivor or survivors must have the Action: And when they are all dead, the Executor of the last survivor: And so when there is but one Executor, and he doth accept and die, the Executor of the Executor, and so in infinitum shall have the Action. And if an Executor die intestate, there must be an Administrator made de bonis non administratis of the first Testator, and he must have the Action; But the Ordinary or Administrator of the goods of an Executor may not have this Action for a Debt due to the first Testator, unless withall he have an Administration de bonis non administratis of the Testator which is usuall, Dyer 24. 20. Ed. 4. 20. Co. 3. 9. Dyer 471. Brownl. 2 part. 207.

2 By whom this Action may and must be brought, and who may bring it, and who not.
Sec. 2.
Executor.

An Heir may not nor must have this Action for a Debt due to his Ancestor, nay not albeit it be due upon an Especialty made to him and his Heirs, but the Executors must have the Debt and sue the Action, F. N. B. 120.

Heir.

The Executors or Administrators, not the successors of a Bishop, Parson, Vicar, Master of Hospitall, or the like, must bring this Action for the Debt due to the predecessor.

But

Executor.

But if a Debt be due to a Corporation aggregate, as Mayor and Commonalty, Dean and Chapter, or the like, in their politic capacity, there the Successor [not the Executor] must sue for it. If there be divers Executors, and one of them sell some of the goods (as he may if he will) in this case he alone may sue in his own name for this. If one grant to me a Rent in Fee, and if it be arrear, to forfeit 40 s. to me and my Heirs, nomine pane, and I die; my Heir, not my Executor must have the Action for the penalty paid, Co. 4. 65. Old, N. B. 62. 34 Ed. 2. 9. F. 7. B. 120.

Heir.

Against whom it may or must be brought or not.

Sec. 3.
Executor.

This Action may and must be brought against the party himself that doth originally owe the Debt, whilst he is living. And after his death it may and must be brought against his Executor if he make any, and the Executor made do take on him the Executorship; otherwise against the Administrator appointed by the Ordinary, or if he appoint none, against the Ordinary himself. And if the Ordinary die possessed of the goods against the Executor of the Ordinary. And if the Executor die after he hath accepted the administration, then the Action must be brought against the Executor of the Executor; and so in infinitum if any such Executor be made. But if none such be made, then against the Administrator de bonis non administratis. And if the Administrator of the first intestate die intestate, also it may be brought against the Administrator of that Administrator, being Administrator de bonis non administratis. But it doth not lie against the Executor of an Administrator for the Debt of the intestate, F. N. B. 120. Dyer 271. 160. 174. 112. Co. 5. 9. Westm. 2 Cap. 19. Brownl. 2 part 97.

Heir.

It lieth and may be had against an Heir upon an Especialty made by his Ancestor; if thereby he hath bound himself and his Heirs, otherwise not.

Husband and Wife.

It lieth and must be brought against the Husband and Wife, for the Debt of the Wife, during the Coverture.

It lieth and may be had in some cases upon a contract against an Infant: For which see Contract.

Heir.

If one grant me a Rent-charge out of his Land, and the Rent is behind, and after the Grantor make a Feoffment of his Land to another, and then the Rent is behind again, and then the Feoffee makes a Feoffment of it to another, or makes a gift in tail, Lease for life, or years, or at will, or makes a gift in tail with the Remainder over in Fee, and then more Rent is behind. In these cases if I or my Executor sue for this Rent, I must bring my Action against every one of them for the Rent due in the time of his occupation of the Land only. So if the Land charged descend to the Heir of the Grantor, and from him to his Heir; in this case every Heir shall be charged for the Rent due to his time, Qui sentit commodum sentire debet & onus Co. 7. 34. Stat. 32 H. 8. 37. Co. 4. 50. If I make a Lease for years to A and B rendering Rent: and A assign his part of the term to C and B die; in this case I may have one Action of Debt against C and the Executors of B, and I am not bound to have severall Actions, Curia Co. B. M. 4: Jac. Bayly & Burgesss de Ipswicks Case. An Action of Debt lieth not against the Heir of a Conusor upon a Statute, nor against the Terre-Tenant, as it doth against the Conusor himself, Co. 3. 15.

Heir.

Executors.

It lieth not against the Executors or Administrators of a Lessee for years, for a Rent reserved on the Lease, where the Lessee in his life time, or his Executors or Administrators after his death, have assigned over their whole term, Co. 3. 13.

where in the Detinet.

tinet.

be had for pa-

Sec. 5.

If a Purveyor, Taker or Clerk of the King, had contracted with me for any thing for the Kings house, in this case if he had been paid and allowed it from the King, I may sue him, otherwise I must have sued to the King for it, Broo. Det. 62.

Where this Action is brought for money due to a man in his own right, there he shall bring his Action in the Debet, i. the Writ shall run in this form; it shall have both these words Debet & Detinet contained in it. But where the Action is brought for Rent, Corn, Cattel or Hens, or the like, reserved on a Lease for years, or the Action is brought by or against Executors, there it shall be in the Detinet only i. it shall have this word only, and not Debet in the Writ. See for these matters 50. Ed. 3. 16. 11 H. 7. 5. 10 H. 7. 5. 19 H. 8. 8. Co. 5. 31. Brownl. 1 part 50. 56, 2 part 203. 204.

If one bind himself to me in a single obligation, or by a verball Contract, to pay me money at severall daies, as quarterly or otherwise; or I make a Lease of personall personall things, rendring Rent at severall daies; in these cases I may not bring this Action for any part of this Debt, untill all the daies be incurred, and then I may bring it for all together: And therefore if one bind himself so by bill to pay me xx l. a year during my life, in this case no Action may be brought for this untill I am Dead, and then my Executors may recover it all. So if I sell another a Horse to pay me five pounds a year, untill a 100 l. be paid, this Action will not lie untill all the money be due but (it seemes) I may have an Action of the Case upon every failer. But if one be bound to pay me money after this manner, by Recognisance, the Condition of an Obligation, a Covenant, or the reservation of Rent upon a Lease made of a reall thing; in all these cases I may have this Action upon every failer of payment, *F. Action of the Case.

If an Act of Parliament give a Penalty or Forfeiture to any person, and this Action to recover it, there this Writ lieth, and the party may have it accordingly. As a Parson may have this Action upon the Statute of 2 Ed. 6 against a Parochian for not setting out of his Tythes. So any man that is grieved by the false return of a Sheriff for a Knight of the Parliament, may have this Action and shall recover 100 l. upon the Statute of 8 H. 6. cap. 7. 1 H. 5. cap. 1. But where the Statute doth limit a time within which this Action must be brought, the Action cannot be had after that time, Plow. 78. 200. 113. 15. Ed. 4. 19. *Bro. Upon an Act of Parliament. Upon a Judgment or other Record.

If I have a Judgement in any Court to recover any Debt, Damages or Costs in any Action, Reall or Personall, against another man; before Execution be done, or the money paid, I may have this Action of Debt for the things so recovered, or so much of it as is unpaid and not levied by Execution, and recover it by that means, and refuse to proceed or take my remedy on the Judgement. But then these three things must be in the case. Co. 5. 31. Dyer 21. 5. H. 7. 21. F. N. B. 122. 1 It must be a year after the Judgement be had, ere the Action be brought, 5 Ed. 4. 1. 20. H. 6. 11. 2 The Judgement must be of a thing certain; for if the demand be of a thing uncertain, as if one have a Judgement in an Action of Trespass, or any such like Action, before the damages be certain, no Action of Debt will lie for them, Comper vers. Longworth. Hill. 40. Eliz. B. R. 3 The Judgement must continue in force, for after it is actually reversed, no Action will lie upon it; but untill then, albeit there be manifest error in it, I may have this Action well enough. But if a Woman the Wife of a Copyholder, recover her Dower by custom of a Manor in the Lords Court of the Mannor and recover damages also; she may not have this Action of Debt to recover these damages, Co. 4. inter le Copyhold Cases. f. 30. 6. Brownl. 1 part. 72.

If a man enter into a Statute Merchant or Statute Staple, or Recognizance to me, after it is certified by Mistimus, I may have a Writ of Debt upon it, and recover the Debt by this means, and refuse to proceed upon the Statute or Recognizance by any other means: or I may sue Execution upon the Statute at my pleasure. But if I once sue Execution upon the Record, I cannot after have this Action of Debt, Co. 3. 15. Dyer 219. F. N. B. 222. Dyer 300. p. 34.

If I recover an Annuity in Fee against another, and after sue a Scire facias upon this Judgement, and thereupon have Judgement to recover it with damages; in this case I may have this Action of Debt to recover these arrearsages and damages, and wave my proceeding upon the Judgement. F. N. B. 122. Litt. Bro. ject. 25.

If in account before Auditors the Bayliff be found indebted to his Lord, the Lord may have this Action against him for this Debt, and wave his proceedings in the Account, and then it seems the Bailiff must not be committed to Prison, Dyer 21. 21 H. 6. 8.

If the Kings by their Patent had granted to me a sum of money out of the Custom of London, yearly for life or years, and hereupon I have a Writ of Liberate to the Customer to pay it, and this be delivered to him, and he have Assets at that time in his hands: if he refuse to pay it me, I may have this Action to recover it: So if I had had a Taile out of the Exchequer to the Kings Collector, to receive a Debt due to me from the King, and I shew it to him, and he hath Assets at that time in his hands, and yet doth not pay me, I may have this Action to recover it, F. N. B. 121. 27 H. 6. 9. Bro. Taile de Exchequer 3.

If

Upon a contract by specialty, either in writing or otherwise.

If one doe by Obligation, Bill, Covenant, or other Writing, undertake or bind himself to pay me money or deliver me Corn or the like by a day, and do not perform it accordingly, I may have this Action against him, his Heirs or Executors, as the case is. And if it be by Covenant, I may at my choise have this Action, or an Action of Covenant to recover the thing F. N. B. 120. New Book of entries: 191. Plow. 439. Curia Hil: 7. 7a. Co. B.

For a penalty.

If one grant a Rent to me and my Heirs in Fee, and grant moreover that if it be unpaid a certain time, that he will forfeit, and pay to me and my Heirs 40s. Nomine pena; in this case if he fail to pay the Rent at the day, I or my Heirs after my death, may have this Action to recover this penalty, F. N. B. 120. Dyer 24.

If a man by his Deed bind himself to do and perform divers things by severall Covenants, and by the same Deed binds himself in twenty pounds Nomine pena to performe the same Covenants; in this case if he break any one of them, I may have this Action for the 20 l. 22. H. 6. 5. If one borrow my Horse untill such a day, and do promise me to restore him that day, or else pay me ten Pounds for him; in this case if he do not restore the Horse, I may have this Action for the 10 l. F. N. B. 121. But if A Covenant that his Executor shall within a year or such a time after his death, pay 10 l. to B; in this case no Action of Debt will lie against the Executor, because it did not lie against A himself, but an Action of Covenant will lie. So if the Covenant be conditionall, as that if E do not pay to B 10 l, A will pay it: So if it be in the disjunctive to do such an Act, or pay 10 l: if it be not done, an Action of Covenant lieth, not of debt; but if both be to be done by the Covenantor (viz.) 10 l. if not 5 l. such a day, Contra. See Penon Case. Co. Pasch: 33. Eliz. Anstons case. C. B.

Executor.

Covenant.

For Rent.

If I being seised in Fee-simple, Fee-tayle, or for life, of land, or of any incorporeall inheritance, as Common Advowson, Fairs, Markets or the like, make a lease for years of this to another, rendring Rent, and the Rent be unpaid at the time of payment; in this case I during my life, and my Executors or Administrators after my death, may have this Action for these Arrearages against the Lessee, or if he be dead, against his Executors or Administrators: and so also may my Heir or Executor, as the case is, after my death, have this Action for the Rent to come.

Executor.

Heir.

And albeit the lease be on condition to re-enter for non-payment of Rent, and I do re-enter by force of the same condition, yet I may have this Action for the Arrearages due before; and albeit the lessee surrender his Estate to me, and I do accept it, yet I may have this Action for the Arrearages due before the surrender; and albeit the Lessee for years assign over his Estate to a stranger; yet I that am the lessor may have this Action for the rent to come against the lessee, while he doth live, or the Assignee, at my choice: but if after the Assignment I grant away the reversion, or die, or the Lessee die; in all these cases neither I nor the Grantee of this reversion shall have this Action: and yet if in this case the Assignment had been but of part of the land, or of all the land, but for a part of the time only; here the Grantee of the reversion may have this Action for the rent past or to come against the first lessee, and after his death against his Executors or Administrators: And if I grant the reversion to a stranger, and the lessee or Tenant at term, the Grantee of the reversion shall have this Action for the rent that shall grow due after the grant, Co. 10. 127: 20. Ed. 4. 9. Co. super Litt. 47. F. N. B. 120. Co. 3. 23. 65: F. N. B. 121. 5. H. 6. 32. A man makes a lease for years to I. S. and after grants away the reversion to I. D. and after I. S. assign over his whole interest, and after assignement rent is behind; in this case the Grantee of the reversion cannot bring Debt against I. S. Goldsb. 182.

And if I be possessed of a Term of years only, and make a lease for all or part of my time to another rendring rent, I may bring an Action of Debt for this Rent upon this Contract. So also if I make a Lease to another of my Land, to hold at will only rendring Rent; I may have this Action for the Rent, and in all these cases it is not material whether the Lease be in writing or no, unless it be in case of the demise of incorporeall things, as Commons, Advowsons or the like, which will not pass without Deed, Litt. sect. 72.

But

But if I have a Rent-service, Rent-charge, or Rent-seck in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, or for life; as if one make a Feoffment in Fee, Gift in Tail, or Lease for mine own or anothers life to me, rendring Rent; or one grant a Rent in Fee-simple, Fee-tail, or for life to me: In all these cases, so long as this Rent doth continue, and I have any other remedy for it, I may not have this Action to recover the Arrearages by the Common-Law, unless it be in some special cases; But if the Estate on which the Rent depended, or if the Rent it self be ended, or the Land out of which it doth issue be come into another hand, so that all remedy doth now fail; in these cases this Action will lie. See for this divers Examples afterwards, and the Statute of 32 H. 8. c. 37. which is, That the Executor or Administrator of him that hath Rent or Fee-farm, in Fee, in Tail, or for life, shall have this Action for this Rent against him that ought to pay it. So that now if one make a Lease for life rendring Rent, and the Rent is Arrear, and the Lessor dieth, the Executors may have this Action during the life of the Tenant for life, Dyer 13. p. 60. Lit. 203. Co. super Lit. 47. Co. 4. 50. 7. 20. Co. 7. 78. 79. So if a Rent be granted to a man for his life, Habendum after the death of his wife, and he enter into a Statute to me, who after have an Extent, and the Rent delivered to me by a Liberate; in this case I may not have this Action for the Rent against the Terre-tenant so long as the Extent doth continue, but afterwards I may, Brownl. 1. par. 103. So if there be Lord and Tenant, and the Lord demise his Manor or Seignior to me for years, and the Rent of the Tenants is behind; I, that am the Lessee of the Seignior, cannot have this Action for the Rent during the Lease, but afterwards I may. So if Lessee for life be of a Manor, and the Rents be Arrear, and the Tenant surrender his Estate, he shall have an Action of Debt for the Arrearages. So if the Tenant die, his Executors or Administrators shall have this Action, 9 H. 7. 17. Co. 7. 79. F.N.B. 121.

If a Feme be endowed of a Rent, or a Rent be granted for life, and the Tenant attorn to this Grant, and after the Rent is Arrear, and then the Tenant in Dower die, or Grantee die, or surrender his Estate; in these cases the Executors of the Tenant in Dower, or Grantee for life, may have this Action for the Arrearages incurred before the death or surrender, Co. 4. 49. 9 H. 7. 17. 34 H. 6. 20. If one have an Annuity or a Rent-charge for years, and it be behind during the Lease, and after it is ended; he may have this Action for it during the Lease, and after it is ended. Per three Justices, Pasch. 10. Car. at Serjeants Inn. If a Parson or Prebend, &c. have an Annuity, and the Annuity is behind, and the Parson or Prebend resign or die: In the first case he himself, and in the last case his Executors or Administrators shall have this Action for the Arrearages before. But as long as this Annuity, and the thing to which it belongs did continue, this Action will not lie for it, Co. 4. 48, 49. F.N.B. 120, 121.

If the son be Lord, and the father Tenant by a certain Rent, and the Rent is Arrear, and the Tenant die, and the Tenancie descend to the son, so that the Rent is extinct; yet it seems the son may have this Action for the Arrearages by the Statute, Co. 4. 49. Quare. If my father grant a Rent-charge out of his Land to me his son in Fee, and the Rent is Arrear, and my father dieth, and the Land doth descend to me, (whereby the Rent is extinct:) In this case, if my father did not make his Election in his life-time by Distress and Avowry for this Rent, I may have this Action of Debt for the Arrearages incurred in his life-time against the Executors of my father, Co. 4. 49. 45 Ed. 3. tit. Executors, 71.

If one grant a Rent-charge to me out of his Land for his life, provided that it shall not charge his person, and then he die, so that this Land cannot now be charged because the Estate is ended; in this case I may have this Action against the Executors or Administrators of this Grantor, notwithstanding the Condition, Dyer 227. Co. super Lit. 146. 39. If the Husband be seised of any Estate in any Rent or Farm in the right of his Wife, and he die, his Executors may have this Action for the Rent by the Statute of 32 H. 8. cap. 37.

If a Woman have a Rent for her life, and it is unpaid while she is sole, and after she is married, and then it is Arrear again; in this case the Husband may have this Action for all these Arrearages before and after marriage, after the death of his wife. Co. 4. 51. F.N.B. 12.

If I make a Lease to a Feme-covert for life, rendring Rent, and the Rent is Arrear, and she die; in this case I may have this Action against the husband for the Rent during the coverture, and after his death against his Executors. So if a man grant a Rent-charge to me for life out of his Land, and the Rent is Arrear, and the Grantor make a Feoffment of this Land to another, and after the Feoffee make a Feoffment to another, and there is Rent behind again in both their times, and then I die; in this case I in my life-time, and after my death my Executor may have this Action for these Arrearages: But we must sue every one severally for the Rent due in his time, F.N.B. 101. 26 E. 3. 64. Co. 7. 39. Co. 4. 50. 11 H. 4. fol. ult. Vid supra. But if Tenant in Tail make a Feoffment in Fee, and the Discontinuee charge the Land with a Rent in Fee, and after infeof the Issue in Tail within age, so that he is remitted; in this case no Action lieth against the Issue for this Rent. So in all cases where he that comes to the Land, comes not to it by, but above him that granted the Rent; Co. 4. 30.

If a Partition be made between me and another, and he promise or grant to me a certain sum of money yearly to make the Partition equal; in this case I may have this Action yearly to recover it, F.N.B. 112.

But if I have a Rent-service or Rent charge in Fee or for life, and the Rent is Arrear, and after I grant over the Rent to another, and the Tenant attorn, and then I die, in this case my Executors shall not recover this Rent by Stat. 32 H. 8. Co. 4. 10.

If a man seised of Land jure uxoris, make a Lease for years rendring Rent, and the wife die, and had never any issue by the husband, and the Lessee take the profits of the Land after the death of the wife; in this case so long as he take the profits, it seems the husband may have this Action and recover the Rent, 9 H. 6. 43. See more, Brownl. 1 par. 20. 34. 51. 55. Goldsb. 110. pl. 6.

Upon Accounts.

If there be Reckonings and Accounts between another and me, or another hath received my money to Account, and upon the casting of our Accounts it doth appear he is indebted to me Ten pounds, I may have this Action for this debt. And it is sufficient in this Action to say pro diversis mercimoniis, without reciting particulars, March, fol. 162. pl. 175. fol. 125. pl. 182.

Upon a Loan.

If in the Account before Auditors it appear the Lord is indebted to the Bailiff, the Bailiff may have this Action to recover it against his Lord, F.N.B. 121. Dyer 31. Mar. Rep. f. 101. pl. 175. If I lend another money to be paid me again upon demand, or upon a day certain, and he do not pay me; I may have this Action for the money, but I may not sue for it before the day, Co. Super Lit. 209. If I lend another money, and after he mortgage Land to me for the security of it, upon condition to have the Land again upon repayment of the money, and at the day of payment he doth tender me the money, and I refuse it, and thereupon he doth re-enter upon his Land (as he may) in this case notwithstanding this refusal, I may recover the money, and have this Action for it upon the Loan. But if the Mortgage had been without any such Loan preceding for the payment of money, as a Gratuity, there by this refusal I am become restituere for this money, Co. Super Lit. 209.

Upon other Contracts.

If a man come into my house who am an Inholder and Taverner, and there call for meat or drink for himself or his horse; in this case I may have this Action for the money, Co. 8. 147. But if J. S. owe me money, and another come to me and intreat me to take him Debtor for this money, and promise to pay me at Michaelmas, I cannot have this Action upon this Contract, 9 H. 5. 14. 44 Ed. 3. 11. If a man promise me Twenty pounds to marry his daughter, and I do marry her, I may have this Action for this Debt, F.N.B. 120. See Brownl. 1 par. 20. 74. 34. See Contracts.

If I buy twenty Quarters of Corn of another, or make a Lease of years rendring unto me a Quarter of Wheat weekly; in these and such like cases I may have this Action for this Debt. And in divers other cases where a Contract that is Executory is good, and there is a good Consideration for it, this Action will lie upon it, F.N.B. 149. Dyer 22. 9 H. 7. 5. See for this more in Contract and Assumpsit.

Upon a Retainer.

If another retain me to do any lawful work or service for him, and I do it accordingly, and he refuse to pay me for it, I may recover it by this Action. And if we do agree for a sum in certain, or the Law do set down the certain wages for that work; as for a Serjeant his Fee for pleading, or an Attorney his Fee for prosecuting of a cause, or the like; in such cases I must bring the Action for that certain sum. But in other cases where our Agreement is not so certain, as where I put my Cloth to a Tailor to make a garment, or the like; in these cases I must bring my Action generally, and I shall recover as much as a Jury will give me, F.N.B. 120. Old N.B. 622 F.N.B. 121. Co. 7. 10. 8. 147. 12 Ed. 4. 9. A Barrester cannot have this Action for any other for his Fees for giving of Counsel, as a Serjeant or Attorney may; and therefore he is not bound to give Advice before he have his Fees. So was the opinion of Mr. Justice Bridgman: & Curia in le Marches de Wales, 7 Car. Also in Trim. 2. Car. B.R. That a Solicitor cannot have an Action for monies laid out upon any Suit, without an express Retainer to lay out monies for him in such a Suit, and an express Promise to pay such sums, Brownl. 1 par. 73. 2 par. 99.

If a Sheriff, Gaoler, or other Officer that hath a man in Execution at my Suit for Debt or Damages, do after suffer him wilfully or negligently to escape, and do not take him again before I commence my Action; in this case I may have this Action against him that did suffer this Escape, and thereby shall recover as much of him as the Debt or Damage was. So if the Suit were for Trespass, or for Debt upon a Deed, and the party deny his Deed, so that he is fined, and afterwards taken by a Capias pro fine within the year at the suit of the Keepers of the Liberty; if the parties that have taken him suffer him to escape, I may have this Action. But if the Arrest be on a mean Process, as Latitat, Capias, and the like; there this Action will not lie for the Debt of the Suit whereupon the Process came, but an Action of the Case will lie: And if it be after Execution, yet it doth not lie for this Escape against the Executors or Administrators of him that suffered it, Plow. 35. Co. 3. 52. Dyer 278. F.N.B. 121. Dyer 27. 21 H. 7. 23. Brownl. 1 par. 84. 119.

Upon an Escape.

Action of the Case.

If a Sheriff levy money upon a Fieri facias of another mans goods at my suit, I may bring this Action against him; or if he die, against his Executors for it. March f. 13. pl. 33.

See for Remedy against the Warden of the Fleet, if he take Bail of a Prisoner in by Judgment, or let him go at large. Sac. 1 R. 2. 12.

If one receive money of another to my use, for to deliver to me, or from me, to deliver to another, or to bestow for me, and he doth not dispose it accordingly; in all these cases I may have this Action for the money, or I may have a Writ of Account, Dyer 21. 42 Ed. 3. 9. Bro. Condition 6. 38 H. 6. 9. If the Lord levy Aid of his Tenants to make his Son Knight, or to marry his Daughter, and die before his Son or Daughter have received it; in this case the Son or Daughter may have this Action against the Executor of the Lord for it, and if he have not Assets, it lieth against his Heir, Brownl. 1 part 58. 82.

Upon a Receipt.

If a Fine or Amercement be imposed on a man in a Court Leet after any offence; or one do forfeit a sum of money by the breach of a By-law; in these cases and for this money, the Lord may have this Action of Debt, Co. 8. 123. But a Lord of a Manor cannot have this Action for a Relief or Escuage due to him, but if he die his Executors may have this Action, for they have no other remedy; and it is as a flower fallen from the stock; neither may the Lord have this Action for Aid to make his Son Knight, or marry his Daughter, nor for a sum of money upon a pretence of an unreasonable custom, as to have thirty pound of every one that shall break the pound within his Lordship, or the like, Co. super Litt. 47. 83. 7 H. 6. 13. Littl. Broo. Sess. 176. 21 H. 7. 40.

For a Fine or Amercement.

For a Relief.

If another and I do refer any differences between us to Arbitrement, and the Arbitrators Award the other to pay me ten pound, I may recover this money by this Action; But if we did enter into Obligation each to other, to stand to their Award, I cannot have this Action for the ten pound, and sue him upon the Obligation also, F.N.B. 121. 33 H. 6. 2. But for the further opening of this, we must know this, Brownl. 1 part 55. 134.

Upon an Award.

And as to this thing, these things are further to be known.

1. That Freemen of London, for Debts under forty shillings, have a special way to recover the same in the Court of Requests, St. 3 Jac. 15.

Self. 8.
What shall be
said a good Plea or Bar to this Action,
and what nor.

It is a good Plea to this Action grounded upon a Statute or Judgment, That the Plaintiff hath sued out and made Execution upon the Judgment or Statute. But regularly no matter in fact, as Payment or the like, is a good plea to this Action grounded on a Record, Dyer 299. p. 34. 22 Ed. 4. 6. 6 H. 4. 6.

If the Action be grounded on a Real Contract, as if it be for Rent on a Lease of years, it is a good Plea in bar to the Action to plead any of the matters following, viz.

1. That the Lessee was ejected out of the Land by a stranger that had tide paramount, that entred and kept him out.

2. That the Lessor entred upon all or part of the Land demised before the day of payment of the Rent, and doth keep out the Lessee always, so that he cannot take the profits; for if the Lessee re-enter, this is no Plea.

3. That the Lessor had nothing to do with the Land demised at the time of the making of the Lease; but if the Lease be by Deed indented, then this is no Plea.

4. That the Rent was paid at the day, and that there is nothing Arrear; and though the Lease be by Indenture, yet Payment is a good Plea.

5. Or that the Plaintiff hath distrained for it, and recovered the money by that means, and so levy by Distress.

6. But it is no good Plea to say, That the Houses demised were so ruinous, that the Lessee could not dwell in them, and that the Lessor by Covenant or Custom ought to repair them, Dyer 299. p. 34. 22 Ed. 4. 6. 6 H. 4. 6. Dyer 83. Co. super Lit. f. 47. Dyer 212. p. 37. Ca. 3. 22. 10. 127. 37 H. 6. 10. Dyer 28. 27 H. 6. 10. Dyer 20. 6.

If the Action be grounded on a Personal Contract in Writing, as upon an Obligation or other Especialty, if it be single, or with Condition to pay money at a day; it is a good Plea to say he paid or tendred, and the other refused the money at the day of payment: Or that he hath performed the Condition of the Obligation; or that the Plaintiff sued the same Obligation once before, supposing the Condition was broken, and was barred therein. But in case of a single Bill, Payment is no good plea, Co. 5. 43. Dyer 256. 51. 1 H. 7. 14. So neither for a single sum in a Bill penal, 1 H. 5. 7. otherwise to the double sum in a penal Bill, for there payment of the single sum is a good Plea. And regularly no matter, unless it be in Writing, is a good Plea to an Action grounded on an Especialty; as that the money was paid after the day, and the Obligation delivered up, and the Plaintiff came by him actually again. So Arbitrement or Accord with satisfaction, is no Plea, 21 Ed. 4. 41. Lit. sect. 338. Co. 1. 113. Lit. Bro. sect. 106. 8 H. 7. 3. Co. 5. 43. Dyer 31. 1 H. 7. 17.

If it be a Debt on a Contract without Especialty, in which Action wager of Law doth lie; it is a good Plea, That before this time the Plaintiff brought another Action for the same Debt, and the Defendant waged his Law and barred the Plaintiff therein: Or that the Plaintiff brought an Action of the Case for the same Debt before, and recovered the same therein; or that he oweth nothing, but hath paid the Plaintiff, Co. 4. 94. But in this case upon a Parol-Contract without Especialty, it is no good Bar to say, That there is a Decree in Chancery, that the Plaintiff shall release the Debt, and take no advantage of it: Or if it be for Goods sold, That the same were taken from the Buyer by one that had right before the day of payment, or that the Plaintiff agreed that the Defendant shall keep it for another Debt the Plaintiff did owe to him, or that a stranger hath made an Obligation to the Debtee for the same Debt, Fitz. Bar 75. Co. 3. 12. 28 H. 6. 4. And whether the Debt be grounded on an Especialty or not, generally a good Release of the Debt from the party to whom it is owing, his Executor or Administrator; or that the Defendant did give, and the Plaintiff accept something else in recompence thereof, it is a good Plea in Bar. But to say that the Plaintiff upon a Justicies had a Judgment for the same same Debt in the County Court, it seems is no good Plea, unless Execution be done upon it. Or in an Action for Rent, or a Lease, to say, That he hath bestowed it in Reparations by the commandment of the Lessor, is no good Plea. Or to any Action of Debt, That he did grant the Debtee that he should levy it upon his Land, Co. 6. 49. o Ed. 4. 50. 34 H. 6. 17. Bro. Det. 29. Brownl. 1 par. 70, 71:

If the Debtor make the Debtee his Executor, and he accept it; or if the Debtor take the Debtee to husband or wife; or if two or more be bound in an Obligation to a Feme-sole, and she take one of them to husband; in all these cases the Debt is gone and discharged, Co. 8. 136. Pl. 364. 11 H. 7. 4. 21 H. 7. 29. Brownl. 1 p. 71. 76. 109.

If a Judgment be had on an Especialty, the Debt upon the Especialty is gone: And if a Debt be upon a Contract, or Arrearages of Account, and after the Debtee take an Obligation from the Debtor for the money; in this case the Debt upon the Contract is gone; (But if the Obligation be made by a stranger, contra.) For so long as the Judgment is in force, or the Obligation in being, the Creditor cannot sue upon the Obligation in the first case, or the Contract or Account in the last, F. N. B. 120. M. Dyer 21. Co. 6. 45. 28 H. 6. 4. See Extinguishment, Release, Apportionment. But if one promise to a woman, That if she will marry him, he will leave her worth an Hundred pounds at his death, if she overlive him: In this case their subsequent marriage will not determine this Debt, but that after his death she may recover it of his Executor, Smith vers. Stafford, Pasch. 17 Jac. Co. B.

If a Debt be due to me on an Obligation, and I take a Statute for this Debt from the Obligor; this doth not determine the Debt due by the Obligation, but I may sue upon either of them at my election; and if I sue upon the Obligation, it is no good Bar to plead the Statute, Co. 6. 45. Brownl. 1 par. 71, 72, &c. For Debt against a Hundred on a Robbery, see it in Chap. 3. So much for the Debt of a Common person.

Now as touching the Debts due to the Lord Protector, these things are to be known. 1. That his Debts arise commonly by Rents, Recognisances, Fines, Issues or Amerciaments, and as Issues upon Jurors, and Accompts of Officers. 2. These are all called in by, and brought in to the Exchequer; for they are sent from all other Courts, and certified in thither, and by authority thence called and fetch'd in. 3. This is done for the most part by the Sheriff and his Under-Officers. 4. It is done sometimes by Distress only, sometimes by Distress and Sale of Goods, sometimes by Seizure of Lands and Goods, and sometimes by Sale of Goods and Lands. 5. The Lord Protector hath a large remedy to recover his Debts, (See for this Prerogative.) 6. Yet the Sheriff and his Officers have many charges upon them in this. For, 1. They are not to levy any Debt of his upon Lands or Rents, so long as the Debtor hath Goods and Chattels to satisfy. 2. They are not to meddle with the Surety, so long as the Principal is sufficient. 3. They are not to sell the Distress taken for his Debt, within fifteen days. 4. If the party distrained can shew a Tally, and will give Security for his appearance in the Exchequer upon the next Accompt, they are to deliver the Distress. 5. They may not take any mans Cattel without good authority and Order from some Court. 6. Nor take such Distresses as are forbidden, nor abuse them after they are taken. See for this Distress. 7. The Sheriff having received any Debt, must upon demand of the Debtor, and without Fee, shew his Process for the levying of it, and give a Tally to the Debtor thereof. 8. He must answer that any of his Servants employed by him do receive. 9. He having received any Debt, must see that upon his next Accompt he do discharge the Debtor thereof. See for these things Mag. Charta 8. 18. Westm. 1. 19. Articuli super chartas, 12. Stat. 13 Eliz. 4. 14 Eliz. 7. 27 Eliz. 3. Co. 2 par. Inst. 18. And for Accompts and Publick Debts, Ad 708. 1653. Ad 708. 1654.

CHAP. LXV.

Of Disability.

Disability and Nobility,
what.
The kinds.

Infant.
Woman-covert.
Idiot.

Disability (as we take it largely) is an incapacity, incapability, or impotencie of some persons for some causes to have and enjoy some benefit, or do some act, that another may have or do: As to give or convey Lands or Goods; to make a Will, and appoint an Executor; to have Land by descent, or to have and enjoy a Legacie, or any other Testamentary benefit; or to sue and bring Actions, or to have or enjoy dignities and honor. And this sometimes is absolute, as of an Infant, Monk, or other Religious person, or man attainted of Treason or Felony, who cannot by any means make any Conveyance or Gift of their Lands or Goods, but it will be avoidable. So the Heir of one attainted of Treason or Felony, is disabled to be Heir to his Ancestor. And sometimes this Disability is only secundum quid; as of a woman Covert, or man of Non-sane memory, who cannot convey or grant by Deed, nor be bound thereby: But if they do it by Fine or Recovery, (as they may) it is not avoidable. So the King cannot grant, nor take any thing but by matter of Record. A Bishop could not grant but for his life, without the Dean and Chapters Confirmation; nor the Parson or Vicar, without the Confirmation of the Patron and Ordinary, and the like. A man that hath one Benefice eight pounds in the Kings books, is incapable of another, unless he be first qualified according to the Statute.

And this is sometimes personal or temporal only: As when by Act of Parliament one is disabled to have his dignity, or some other thing for his life only; or where a Monk is disabled to have lands or goods; in this case it reacheth not to any other. And sometimes it is perpetual, and shall extend and reach to the prejudice of others: As where one is attainted of Treason or Felony, this is an absolute and perpetual disability to any of his posterity to claim any Hereditament in Fee-simple, either as Heir to him, or to any other Ancestor paramount him, because the blood is corrupt by the Attainder. See more of this in Wills and Testaments, who may make an Execution, or give his Goods, and who may take, except, and enjoy it. And some men are disabled in some particular things; as men that have no skill, to take upon them Offices they cannot execute: And no man is therefore capable of the Grant of a Judicial Office in Reversion, Co. lib. Inst. fol. 13. 1 par.

But Disability (as it is taken strictly and most properly) is an Exception taken against a Plaintiff by the Defendant in some Action. That the Plaintiff is not able to sue any Action against him, and for that he demandeth the Judgment of the Court whether he shall answer or no, and prayeth that the Writ may abate. And this Exception (for the most part) must be taken at the very first, before the Defendant have answered or delayed it by imparlance, or else it comes too late. And this Disability also is sometimes absolute, as of an Outlawed man that cannot sue by any means; or secundum quid, as of a woman Covert, who may sue, but it must be with her husband, for otherwise she is disabled to sue. See Husband and Wife, 16 H. 8. 1. 3 H. 6. 26. 44 Ed. 3. 17. 16 Ed. 4. 4.

Wife.

What are causes to disable a man to sue, or not.

Person outlawed.

If a man be condemned in a Præmunire, outlawed, excommunicated, or professed in Religion in any Abbey, Priory, or Friery; he can bring no Action real or personal in his own right, or as for himself; neither can he sue in any other Court of Equity, (but as Executor to another he may) so long as he remains so. But after the impediment removed, (i.) Pardon in the Præmunire or Outlawry, or Reversal of the Outlawry, Absolution in the Excommunication, or Dearthment in case of Religious profession, he may bring any Action as before. See Co. upon Lit. fol. 128, 129, 130.

So a Villain in his own right could not sue his Lord; but as Executor to another he might have sued him, Co. super Lit. 21 H. 6 30. Executor.

So an Alienee cannot bring any real or mixt Action against any person; and an Alien-enemy cannot bring any Action real or personal at all: For which see Alien at large. Co. super Lit. fol. 129. Alien.

A man attainted of Treason or Felony cannot sue, Co. super Lit. f. Nor can a person that is a convict Recusant, sue while he is so. Person attains. Recusant convicted.

But there are divers Exceptions out of these general Rules: For every one of these in some Special cases may sue; and in some cases the Disability is but for the time they are so, but in some it is perpetual. In some cases the Writ doth abate, and the cause of Action is gone: As if he sue for Debt on a Specialty, and is outlawed, then it is the King's. In others the Writ doth not abate. See for this Co. super Lit. 129. But if a man be outlawed, and bring a Writ of Error to reverse that Outlawry, or any other Outlawry; these Outlawries in this case are no disability to him: So in an Audita Querela brought by a Defendant in Prison upon an Outlawry, that Outlawry is no disability to him to sue in this case; nor in a Writ of Error to reverse the Outlawry. It is no disability to the Mayor and Commonalty, that the Mayor is outlawed. An Outlawry in Cheshire or Durham is no disability. Ideots, Mad-men, and such as be deaf and dumb, be not disabled to sue: And when an Ideot doth sue or defend, he must do it in person; but an Infant or Minor shall sue by a Prochein-Amy, (i. e.) next Friend, and defend by Gardein, 29 Aff. 47. 7 H. 4. 39. Co. super Lit. f. 128.

Many are not disabled to purchase, that are disabled to hold; as Aliens, and men that have committed Felony or Treason: But after Attainder in the last case, and Office forfeited in the first, the King will have it from the Alien, the Lord from the Felon: And if he were attainted, yet he may purchase; but in that case the King will have it until he be pardoned, and after pardon he is capable: So of Corporations that purchase in Mortmain, 49 Aff. pl. 2. 49 Ed. 3. 11.

A Monster born within lawful matrimony, that hath not humane shape, cannot purchase, much less retain any thing: So neither can they that are civiliter mortui, as Monks, and the like. Monster.

An Hermaphrodite may purchase according to the sex which prevaieth: So may persons deformed having humane shape, Ideots, Mad-men, Lepers, Deaf, Dumb, and Blind men, Minors, and all other reasonable creatures, are able to purchase and retain Lands or Tenements. See more in Grants; and there also what persons are disabled to make Peoffments or Grants, Co. lib. Inst. 1 par. f. 42. Hermaphrodite.

See more Capacity, and Stat. Articuli Cleri, chap. 13. 25 Ed. 3. Stat. 2 de nativitate ultra maris. 42 Ed. 3. 10. 31 H. 8 6: 33 H. 8. 29. 5 & 6 Ed. 6. 13. Fine, Num. 6. 8. Recovery, Num. 5. Grants, Num. 2, 3. Testaments, Num. 4.

CHAP. LXVI.

Of Discontinuance of Lands.

1. Discontinuance, what.

The kind of it.

Sett. 1.

2. The fruit of it.

3. What shall be said a Discontinuance to take away and bar Entry, or not. By Tenant in Tail.

Sett. 2.

pa

Discontinuance is either of a Process, or of a Possession. Of a Process or Suit; where by some negligence or default, or the like, a Plaintiff hath lost his time in his Action, and for that cause his Suit is dismissed the Court, and put without day; and then the party hath no remedy, but to begin his Suit again. Or of a Possession; which may be either of Demesne, or of Copihold-lands, Tenements, Rents, Commons, Advowsons, &c. And that is, when the party that is present Owner of the Land doth grant some larger or greater Estate then he hath, and thereby doth divest the Inheritance or Estate which should or ought to have come to another: As when Tenant in Tail, for life or in fee, in the right of his wife, or Church, or house, do alien their Lands or Tenements they do so hold, for longer time then the Law doth enable them; this is called a Discontinuance. And in this last sense it is here taken; and it is properly where he in Reversion is so out, as he cannot enter. But it is taken for the displacing of a Reversion, where the Entry is not gone, Lit. 140. Co. upon Lit. 325. Ney, ch. 27.

The fruits and operations of this are divers and contrary: For sometimes by this the Entry of him that hath right is gone, and he is put to his Action: Sometimes an Entry and Action are given, and may be had presently after the Discontinuance: And sometimes the Entry and Action both are gone, and the party whose Estate is divested is perpetually estopped and debarred to require the same, as in the Examples subscribed may appear, Co. 1. 84. Co. 10. 96.

If a Tenant in tail make a Feoffment in fee, Gift in tail, or Lease for any other life then his own, (not warranted by the Statute of 32 H. 8. c. 28. ut infra) before or after he hath issue; this is a Discontinuance of the Estate-tail, and takes away Entry; and puts the Issue, if it be to go to him after the death of the Tenant in tail, to his Writ of Formedon in Descender; and if it be to go to him in Remainder, it puts him to his Formedon in Remainder; and if it be to revert, it puts him to his Formedon in Reverter. Co. 1. 84. Plow. 137. Dyer 12. Lit. fol. 140. See Co. 3. 89.

If there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in tail, and the Tenant for life levy a Fine to his own use, and after the Tenant for life and he in Remainder join in a Feoffment by Letter of Attorney; this is Discontinuance of the Estate-tail, and the Fee. Dyer 324.

If a Tenant in tail lease for years, and after make a Feoffment with Letter of Attorney, and the Attorney come to the house in the absence of the Lessee, and command the Servant of the Lessee to come forth of the house, and he doth so, and the Lessee doth after agree to it; this is a Discontinuance. Dyer 363.

If the Tenant in tail be disseised, and after release with Warranty to the Disseisee, this is a Discontinuance. So if one release or confirm to the Tenant for life, Lit. 135. Co. 144. 3 H. 4. 9.

If a Tenant in tail make a Lease for the life of the Lessee, and after grant the Reversion, and the Lessee attorn, and after the Lessee for life die during the life of the Tenant in tail, and then the Grantee of the Reversion enter; this is a Discontinuance. So in this case, if the Tenant for life after Attornment had aliened in Fee, and the Grantee of the Reversion had entred for a Forfeiture, Lit. f. 134. 139.

If a man be Tenant in tail of an Advowson in grosse, and another present by usurpation, and the six moneths do pass, and then the Usurper do grant the Advowson stranger in Fee, this is a Discontinuance quodammodo: For a Release with Warranty to the Grantee, will bar the Issue, 21 H. 7. 40.

If

If there be Tenant in tail, the Remainder in tail, the Remainder in fee, and the Tenant in tail make a Feoffment to him in Remainder in fee; this is a Discontinuance of the middle Remainder in tail, Co. 1. Ghudleighs Case.

If there be Tenant in tail, the Remainder in fee, and the Tenant in tail make a Lease for life, and after grant the Reversion in fee to another, and the Lessee attorn, and after the Grantee of the Reversion die without heir, and the Reversion escheat, and after the Tenant for life die, so that the Reversion is executed; this is a Discontinuance, Co. 1.

If a Tenant in tail endow his Mother, and she grant the Land to A. and B. for lives, and die, and after the Tenant in tail confirm their Estates with Warranty; it seems this is a Discontinuance, 3 H. 4. 9.

If a Tenant in tail of a Rent or Advowson in gross grant it away in fee, and a Collateral Ancestor release with Warranty to the Grantee; this is a Discontinuance, Finches leg. 193.

If one that holdeth Lands in the right of his Wife, alien them for longer time than his own, and his Wives lives together; this is a Discontinuance, and by the Common-Law she was driven to her Writ of Cui in vita. But now she may enter after her Husbands death, by the Statute of 32 H. 8.

By the Husband in right of his Wife.

If the Husband and Wife be Joint-purchasers, and he make a Feoffment with Livery of the Land; this is a Discontinuance, though the Wife do stand upon the Land and disagree to it, 21 Aff. p. 125.

If any Spiritual persons, as Bishops, Deans and Chapters, Masters of Hospital, or the like, that have Lands in the right of their Churches or Houses in fee, alien such Lands for longer time than their own lives; this is a Discontinuance, and their Successors are put to their Action to recover the Land, 21 Ed. 4. 76. 4 H. 7. 24. 32 H. 8. Lit. 146. 145. 144.

By a Spiritual person.

All Fines and Recoveries levied and suffered by the Tenant in tail to bar the Estate tail, are Discontinuances; in which a man shall have no remedy, unless it be in case where the Reversion is in the King. And for this see Fines and Recoveries, Co. 10. 96.

See 3.
4. What shall be said a Discontinuance that taketh away Entry and Action also, or not?

All Leases also for lives or years made by Tenant in tail, or in fee in the right of their Wives, or Churches, or Houses warranted by the Statute of 32 H. 8. c. 28. are Discontinuances for the time, for the avoiding of which there is no remedy by Entry or Action. See Leases. But no Fine, Feoffment, or other Act by the Husband only of any Land being the Inheritance or Freehold of the Wife, shall be a Discontinuance, or prejudicial to the Wife, or such as have interest after her death, (Leases within the compass of 32 H. 3. c. 28. excepted before mentioned in the Statute) within which Law a Common-Recovery is: See Co. super Lit. 326. Stat. 32 H. 8. ch. 28.

If Lands be given to Husband and Wife, and to the Heirs of their two bodies, and the Husband maketh a Feoffment in fee and dieth, the Wife is holpen and her issue by this Statute. So if a Woman Tenant in tail take a Husband, and the Husband make the Feoffment, and the Wife before entry die without issue, he in Reversion or Remainder may enter.

An Estate is in tail to the Husband, the Remainder in tail to the Wife, the Husband maketh a Feoffment; now in this case the Wife may enter. See more in Co. upon Lit. 326. Woman's Law. f. 144.

For the most part, such Conveyances as are without Livery of Seisin, and do contain no Warranty, shall not make any Discontinuance, Brook 313.

If a Tenant in tail make a Lease for life of the Lessee, and after grant the Reversion, and the Lessee for life attorn, and then the Tenant in tail die before the death of the Tenant for life, and after the Tenant for life die; this is no Discontinuance, but the Issue or he that hath right may enter upon the Grantee of the Reversion, Co. super Lit. 173. Lit. fol. 139.

5. What shall not be said a Discontinuance to take away and bar Entry.
By Tenant in tail.

If a Tenant in tail bargain and sell his Lands by Deed indented and inrolled; this is no Discontinuance. And if the Tenant in tail do after levy a Fine with Proclamation and Warranty to the Bargainee: yet this is no Discontinuance. And if after the Conusee in the Fine make a Feoffment in Fee, yet this is no Discontinuance, but he in Remainder or Reversion may enter, Co. 10. 96. Co. 146. 48.

If a Tenant in tail grant totum Statum suum to one, and the Grantee make a Feoffment in Fee, this is no Discontinuance, Co. 10. 96.

Sec. 4.

If a Tenant in tail grant any thing out of Land, as Common, Rent, or the like; this is no Discontinuance. So if a Tenant in tail of a Rent, Common, Advowson, or the like, grant it in Fee without Warranty, this is no Discontinuance; and if it be with Warranty, it is at the pleasure of the Issue, Lit. fol. 138. Finches Ley. 193.

If a Tenant in tail within age make a Feoffment in Fee, it seems this is no Discontinuance during his minority, because it is avoidable, Lit. f. 149.

If one make a Lease for life, the Remainder in tail, and he in Remainder grant his Remainder by Deed, and the Tenant for life attorn; this is no Discontinuance, Lit. 138.

If a Tenant in tail make a Release or Confirmation without Warranty, to a Disseisor, Lessee for life or years, or make another Conveyance which doth not pass the Land, this is no Discontinuance. Lit. fol. 398. 3006. 309. Co. 3. 85. Pleu. 336. 13 H. 7. 10.

If a Tenant in tail make a Feoffment to his Donor, and there be no Remainder between; this is no Discontinuance, Dyer 13. Lit. f. 140.

If a Feoffment be made by the first Tenant in tail, to him in the next Remainder in tail, this is no Discontinuance.

If a man have issue a son by one wife, and after have another wife, and have a son by her, and Lands are given to him and his second wife in tail, and after the wife die, and the husband is disseised, and he release with Warranty; this is no Discontinuance to the younger son, but he may enter notwithstanding, Lit. f. 136.

If a Tenant in tail make a Feoffment in fee upon Condition, and the Condition is broken; the Issue may enter notwithstanding this Discontinuance, Lit. fol. 632. chap. 632.

If a Lease be made for life, the Remainder in tail, and he in the Remainder in tail disseise the Tenant for life, and maketh a Feoffment in fee, and die without issue, and then the Tenant for life dieth; this is no Discontinuance to him in Reversion, Lit. f. 146. See in Brownl. Rep. 1 par. 36.

If a Tenant in tail grant all his Estate to another, and give Livery of Seisin, this is no Discontinuance. So if he grant totum Statum suum to one, that doth afterwards make a Feoffment in fee; this is no Discontinuance to take away the Entry of him in Remainder or Reversion, Lit. f. 143. 137. Co. 146. 10. 97.

Sec. 5.

If a Tenant in tail give the Land to one in tail, the Remainder in fee, and the Tenant in tail make a Lease for life, and after grant the Reversion to one in fee, and the Tenant for life attorn, and after the Grantee of the Reversion die without heir, and the Reversion come to the Lord as Escheat; if the Tenant for life die, and the Lord enter in the life of the Tenant in tail, and after the Tenant in tail die; this is no Discontinuance to the Issue in tail, Lit. fol. 143.

If a Tenant in tail have issue two Sons, and the elder disseise his Father, and make a Feoffment in fee without clause of Warranty, and die without issue, and then the Father die; this is no Discontinuance to the younger Son.

So if a Grandfather be Tenant in tail, and he be disseised by the Father, who makes a Feoffment and dies, and after the Grandfather dies; this is no Discontinuance, Lit. f. 142:

If

If Tenant in tail make a Lease for life, and the Tenant in tail have Issue and die, and the Reversion descend to his Issue, and after the Issue grant his Reversion in Fee, and the Tenant for life attorn and die, and the Grantee of the Reversion enter during the life of the Issue, after the Issue die, and hath Issue; this is no discontinuance, Lit. fol. 142.

If Tenant in tail make a Lease for his life and give Livery, or a Lease for years, and after release to the Lessee for life or years all his estate and right in the Land; this is no Discontinuance. So if he confirm to such a Lessee, Lit. 138.

If a Tenant in tail lease for years, and after grant the Reversion to one and his Heirs, and the Lessee for years attorn; this is no Discontinuance to him in Remainder or Reversion, or to the Issue, if any be. Co. l. 144. Lit. f. 136.

If a Tenant in tail devise his Land by Will, this is no discontinuance. See for this the Statute for Wills, Co. 10. 96. 27 H. 8. 20. Dyer.

If there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in tail, the Remainder in tail, and the Tenant for life and he in the first Remainder levy a Fine; this is no Discontinuance of the second Remainder. So if they two join in a Feoffment, 13 H. 7. 14. Co. l. 76.

If there be a Tenant in tail, the Reversion or Remainder in the King, and the Tenant in tail make a Feoffment or suffer a Recovery, this is no Discontinuance. Stat. 34 H. 8. c. 20.

If the Husband alone levy a Fine, make a Feoffment, Release, or Confirmation with Warranty or any other Conveyances of the Land of his Wife, other then such as are warranted by the Statutes; this is no such Discontinuance, but that the Wife, or he that hath the next right after the Husbands death, may enter. Stat. 32 H. 8. ch. 28. Co. sup. Lit. 326. See there the Exposition of this Statute. Lit. 136. Bro. 122: 15 Ed. 4. 5. Stat. 6. By the Husband in right of his Wife.

If the Husband and Wife have Land in Fee or Fee-tail jointly, and the Husband alone convey it away; in this case the Wife, her Heirs, or he that hath the next right after the death of the Husband may enter, and this Discontinuance may not hinder, per les Stat. 32 H. 8. 28. Co. 8. 72.

If the Husband and Wife purchase Land in Fee and make a Lease, and after the Husband alone release to the Lessee and his heirs; this doth not make a Discontinuance. So for any other act of the Husband alone, or of him and her together by Deed, Co. super Lit. 326. Bro. Release 81. But by a Fine, and five years after the Husbands death, the Wife is barred. By a Spiritual person.

If a Parson or Vicar alien in Fee, this is no Discontinuance to the Successor, but he may enter. Lit. 143.

If a Spiritual person be disseised, and he release to the Disseisor with Warranty, this is no Discontinuance to the Successor.

If a Spiritual person grant a Reversion, Rent, or Common, or the like thing that lieth in Grant; this is no Discontinuance.

If a Dean alone had aliened the Land he hath in the right of him and his Chapter, this is no Discontinuance, Lit. f. 145; 146.

If any Woman that hath any Estate in tail, for life, or in dower, by the purchase-money or means of her deceased Husband or any of his Ancestors, made to her before or after her marriage, do after his death whiles she is sole, or with any other Husband after taken, alien such Land by Fine, Feoffment, Recovery, Release, or Confirmation with Warranty, and so discontinue the course intended; this is not good. And the Heir, or life to whom the next right is to come after the Woman, may enter presently to the Land, as for a Forfeiture, by the Statute of 11 H. 7: chap. 20. 6. What shall be said such a Discontinuance as to make a Forfeiture, or not.

If there be Tenant for life, the Remainder for life, the Remainder in tail, and the two Tenants for life alien in Fee by Feoffment, or the second Tenant join in the Livery of Seisin; this is a Discontinuance causing a Forfeiture. See more in Forfeiture, Co. l. 76. 77. Dyer 339.

If there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in tail to the King, the Remainder in tail to another, and the Tenant for life makes a Feoffment in Fee; this is a Forfeiture, and to that purpose is a Discontinuance. But these acts are void only as to the Heir, &c. but are good against the parties and all others, Co. l. 76. 3. 59.

Forfeiture.

If there be Tenant for life, the Remainder in Tail, the Remainder in Fee, and the Tenant for life makes a Feoffment to him in Remainder in Fee; this is such a Discontinuance of the Estate-tail, as produceth a Forfeiture, Co. 3. 59.

Husband and Wife.

If two Joint-tenants in Fee of a Manor intermarry, and after levy a Fine of it to a stranger, which doth render it to them in tail, and they have issue three daughters; the husband die, the wife take a second husband, and they levy a Fine and take back an Estate in special tail, and the wife die without issue by the second husband: This first Estate-tail is within the Statute of 11 H. 7. for one moyetie, but not for the other. Curia, Langhter vers. Humphry, Mich. 3. Elix. Co. B. See more in Ca. 3. 51.

If a man seised in right of his wife, and his wife levy a Fine, and the Conuey grant and render to the husband and wife in special tail, the Remainder to the right heirs of the wife; they have issue, and the husband dieth; she taketh another husband, and they two levy a Fine, and die: This is not a Forfeiture within the Statute of 11 H. 7. Co. sup. Lit. 365.

For Discontinuance of Process, see Statutes, 11 H. 6. 6. 1 Ed. 6. 7.

CHAP. LXVII.

Of Disseisin, Abatement, Intrusion and Deforcement, Redisseisin.

Disseisin, what.
Disseisor,
Disseesee.

Affise.

Disseisin is, where a man entreth into the Lands or Tenements of another, and putteth him out where his Entry is not lawful; this is a Disseisin, and he that doth so is called a Disseisor, and he to whom it is done is called a Disseesee; and for his relief he may have an Affise: But by this Entry he getteth the Freehold, and may hold it against all men but him that hath right and his heirs, Co. super Lit. 154.

Abatement,
what.

Abatement into Lands or Tenements, is, where a man dieth seised of Lands or Tenements, and one that hath no right entreth into the same before the Heir maketh his Entry; this is called an Abatement, and he is called an Abator that doth so enter; and then is he lawful Owner against all men but the right Heir. Terms of the Law.

Intrusion or Extrusion, what.

Intrusion is an unlawful Entry into Lands or Tenements by one that hath no right, whilst it is void of a Possessor, after an Estate for life or years is ended. Terms of the Law. It is sometimes taken for a Writ brought against an Intruder.

Deforcement,
what.
Deforceors.

Deforcement is the putting and holding out of a man from Land that hath right to it by descent or purchase, by the putting it by Intrusion, Abatement or Disseisin, Co. super Lit. 277. And he that so doth, is a Deforceor.

For these things, this only is to be known.

1. That if an Abator or Disseisor have quiet possession for five years next after the Disseisin, and so live and die in the possession, and the Land descend to his Heir, he hath gained the right of possession to the Land against him that hath right, till he recover it by a fit real Action at the Common-Law.

2. If he sue not this Action within threescore years after the Disseisin or Abatement, the right Owner hath lost his right by that negligence.

3. If it be a Formedon he is to bring, he must bring it within twenty years of his right to the Action accrued, if there be no impediment of Infancy; Real 16 ff, then within twenty years of the Impediment removed.

4. If one have divers Children, and the elder being a Ballard doth enter into the Land and enjoyeth it quietly during his life, and dieth thereof so seized, his Heirs shall hold the Land against all the lawful Children and their Issues, See 20 Jac. 1 Str. 10.

Rediffession, is a Writ lying where one is disseised and recovereth in an Affise, and after is disseised again by the same Disseisor; then he may have this Writ to the Sheriff, and if this be found against the Disseisor, he is to be sent to Gaol. See 100 101 102 103 104 105 106 107 108 109 110 111 112 113 114 115 116 117 118 119 120 121 122 123 CHAP. LXVIII.

Of a Distress.

Distress is either finite, which is where it is limited by Law, how oft it shall be made to bring the party to Trial, once, or twice: Or infinite, which is without limitation, which is until the party appear: Also it is the great Distress, which is of all the Goods and Chattels one hath in the County, which it seems is the infinite Distress: Or it is an ordinary Distress: Old N.B. 43. 113. F.N.B. 126. Beke's

1. Distress,
what it is.

ch. 6. 52. 2 H. 3. ch. 7. 9. 13. Old N.B. 71.

It is also said to be Real, i. when Land is distrained upon a grand Cape, or petit Cape. And sometimes (and most commonly) it is said to be Personal; and tharia where any moveable things are distrained: And of this kind of Distress is this following discourse.

A Distress then thus taken, is, where one doth take and distrain the Beasts, Cattel, or other things of another man in some ground or place, for Debt, Rent, or other duty behind, or for wrong or damage done. Which thing so taken, is by the Taker to be kept in Pound, until the party that distrained be satisfied his Debt, Rent, or Duty, or it be fetched forth by an Order of Law.

So that the end of this taking of the Distress, is, that by this means the party distrained may be enforced either to pay or perform the Debt, Rent or Duty, or else to answer the party distraining in a course of Law: For after the Distress is put in Pound, the Proprietor hath no means lawfully to come by it, but by agreement with the party, or by a Replevin, by which means the thing will come in question. (And in some special cases also, the things distrained may be sold for the payment of the Debt, and satisfaction of the party.)

it.

And after the Distress is in Pound, it is said then to be in Custodia Legis; so that now the Owner of it hath no absolute propriety in it: And therefore he cannot give, sell or forfeit it, neither can it be taken in Execution; but it must lie as a Pledge to be a means to help the party to his Debt or Duty, and cannot be took away to other purpose. And therefore if the party commit Felony after, or suffer Execution against him, the Goods shall not be forfeit nor took by the King, or upon the Execution, unless the King or Plaintiff will satisfy the Duty to the Distrainer, Ca. sup. Lis. 196. Fines Law, 135.

The nature of
it.

The power to distrain, is sometimes incident to the duty, and of common right; as to a Rent. Service, or an Amerciament in a Lect, sometimes is by Prescription, and sometimes by agreement of parties. Sed quacunque via, it is to the end, and in the nature aforesaid.

See. 1.

Note that all that is here said after, must be understood of the Distress of a common person; for the King hath a Prerogative above all other men. Which see in Prerogative.

For

3. What shall be said a lawful Distress, and lawfully taken, or not. In respect of the person distraining.

For this, these things are to be known.

1. If one seised of Land in Fee, demise it to one on Condition to pay to his Wife Three pounds Rent yearly, and if it be behind, that she shall distress for it; it seems by this Will she is enabled to distress, Dyer 34. 8.

2. If one make any Estate of Land in Fee, in Tail for life or years, rendering Rent; or grant, and reserve by the Deed, by apt words, a power to distress upon Non-payment; there he may distress by that power, Bro. Distress 70. 11 H. 6.

3. Where a man hath power to distress, he may appoint his Servant or Bailiff to do it, and he may do it by vertue thereof, Co. 48.

4. If there be Lord and Tenant by Fealty and Three pence rent, and the Lord die, and his Wife be endowed of the Thirds of the Seignior; here she may strain for one Penny, and the Heir for Two pence notwithstanding. So if a Rent be divided amongst Partners, each of them may distress for his part, Bro. 45.

5. If there be many Joint-tenants, and one only take the Beasts of a stranger Damage-fesant upon the ground, it seems good, Bro. Charge 39. 11 H. 6. 33.

6. Any Commoner may distress the Beasts of a stranger Damage-fesant upon the Common. See Common, F.N.B. 128. Co. 9. 112. 8. 78.

7. If a Lord that hath a great Common-Moor, enfeof another of part of it, and the Feoffee do not inclose it, but suffer his Beasts to come into the rest of the Moor, the Lord may distress them, Dyer 372.

8. He that hath but a Possession, and no Title, may justifie the taking of a Distress Damage-fesant, Plow. 431. 546.

9. But if one make a Lease for years rendering Rent, and the Term is expired, the Rent being behind, and the Lessor distress after for it, this Distress is unlawful: For regularly one may not distress for a Rent, after the Estate is ended upon which it is reserved; but he must have another remedy, 14 H. 4. 31. Doff. & Sir. lib. 1.

10. If one have three Daughters, and grant a Rent-charge in Fee to one of his Daughters, and after she die, and it descend to her Child, and after descend amongst the two Daughters and this Child, (as it must equally) she cannot distress for any part till partition, nor after partition but for a third part, 34 Ass. 15. 22 H. 6. 58.

11. None but known and sworn Bailiffs may distress for the King, Westm. 2. 36. See more for this, Rent, Debt, and Westm. 2. 37. Brownl. 1 par. 82. 187.

For answer to this, take these Cases.

See 2. In respect of the person distrained.

1. If a Rent be demised by Will out of Land to B. for the life of C. and the Devisor die, and after his Heir make a Lease of the Land to B. for life, the Remainder to C. in Fee, and the Rent is behind in the life of B. and he dieth: Now he may be distrained for this Rent and all the Arrearages, Co. 5. 118.

2. If one put his Beasts to Pasture for Twelve pence by the week with another man, and after he gives him notice that he will not tack there any longer; then may the Owner of the Ground distress them Damage-fesant: And he may be distrained in this case, though he be not a Tenant, and his Cattel were in lawfully at first, 43 Ed. 3. 21.

3. So where a Lessee holds in possession after his Estate ended, Kelw. 96.

4. A Commoner may be distrained by one of his Fellow-Commoners for Sur-charger, or the like, Co. 7. 23.

5. If one have the sixth part of a Ground in common with another, and grant a Rent-charge out of it, and after he and the other levy a Fine of the whole to a stranger: Now it seems the Grantee may distress the strangers Cattel for all the Rent before and after the Fine; and yet before the Fine levied, he could only have distrained the Beasts of the Grantor, and not of the other Tenant in Common, M. 18 ac. B.R.

6. If A. and B. be Tenants in Common, and A. lease his moyetie to C. for years rendering Rent, and C. lease it to B. and the Rent is behind; here A. may distress the Cattel of B. his fellow in Common, Co. 7. 23. M. 18 ac. B.R. Sir H. Snelgar's Case.

7. The Executor or Administrator of him which had Rent or Fee-farm for life, in Fee-simple or Fee-tail, may distrain the Tenant that should pay it. So may the Husband after the death of his Wife, his Executor or Administrator. So may he that hath Rent for anothers life, Stat. 32 H. 8.

None may distrain one that is out of his Fee and Jurisdiction, to come to his Court, Marl. chap. 2.

9. If one seised of Land in fee takes a wife, and after grant a Rent-charge in fee and die; the Grantor cannot distrain upon that Land the Wife hath in Dower, F.N.B. 150. Bro. Distress 71.

10. If the King be entitled to Lands by Office that be charged with a Rent, yet the thing cannot be distrained for the same, though the Rent is not lost, Stat. 2 & 3 Ed. 6. ch. 8. 13 Ed. 4. 5.

11. If one grant a Reversion rendering Rent, the Grantee cannot be distrained during the particular Estates, neither can the particular Tenant be charged with this Rent; but after the present Estate determined, the Grantee may distrain for all the Arrearages, 10 Ed. 4. 4.

12. If one Joint-tenant make a Gift in tail of the Land rendering Rent, and the Rent be Arrear, he cannot distrain the Beasts of the other Joint-tenant for this Rent, 33 H. 6. 35.

13. So if one Joint-tenant grant a Rent-charge out of the Land, the Cattel of his Companion cannot be distrained by the Grantee, 35 H. 6. 39.

14. Tenant in Dower shall not be distrained for Debt due to the King by the Husband in his life-time, in the Lands which she holdeth in Dower, Co. lib. Inst. 3 par. 51.

15. None may distrain a Forreigner in any City, Town, Market, or Fair, for any Debt whereof he is not Debtor or Pledge; and if he do, he shall deliver the Distress under pain of grievous Amercement, Westm. 2. 13.

For answer to this, take these Cases.

1. One may distrain without clause of Distress for Rent-service, be it Money, Homage, Eleauge, Fealty, Bail of Court, Reliefs, Hofs, Rose, or the like, Co. sup. Lit. 150.

Self. 3.
In respect of the cause of the Distress.

2. If any Freeholder refuse to pay his Rent, the Lord may distrain. Co. of Copholds.

3. One may distrain for a Rent reserved on a Lease for life or years, or at will, so long as he have the Reversion in him. The Lessor or Donor may distrain of common right, without any clause of Distress in the Deed, D. & S. f. 21.

Rent.

4. One may distrain for an Amercement in a Hundred-Court, or Court-Baron, if one have a special Custom for it, Nov. 31. F.N.B. 100.

5. One may distrain for an Amercement or Fine in a Pleet, or the Penalty of a By-law, of common right, 11 H. 7. 151. Dyer 322. Co. 11. 44. 21 H. 7. 40. B.R. 183.

6. One may distrain for Damage-ferant, where the Goods of another man be upon his ground cumbering the ground, or the Cattel of another man, without lawful authority or licence of the Owner of the ground, and there do feed, tread, or otherwise spoil the Corn, Grass, Wood, or other things; here the Owner of the ground may distrain them and put them in Pound as soon as ever they do come in; if he will, and that though the Owner do pursue them presently to fetch them out. And this is called a Distraint for Damage-ferant, Termes ley 119. 7 H. 7. 1. Dyer 304. 399. Knt. 96. 23 H. 6. 37. Bro. 11.

Damage-ferant,
what.
